

The Indian Penal Code (PB), 36th ed

Ratanlal & Dhirajlal: Indian Penal Code (PB) / THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

Currency Date: 28 April 2020

© 2020 LexisNexis

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

(ACT XLV OF 1860)

[Received the assent of the Governor-General on October 6, 1860.]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

The Indian Penal Code was drafted by the First Indian Law Commission presided over by Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay. The draft underwent further revision at the hands of well-known jurists, like Sir Barnes Peacock, and was completed in 1850. The Indian Penal Code was passed by the then Legislature on 6 October 1860 and was enacted as Act No. XLV of 1860.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general
Penal Code for India; It is enacted as follows:—

COMMENT.—The Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) exhaustively codifies the law relating to offences with which it deals and the rules of the common law cannot be resorted to for inventing exemptions which are not expressly enacted.¹ It is not necessary and indeed not permissible to construe the IPC, 1860 at the present day in accordance with the notions of criminal jurisdiction prevailing at the time when the Code was enacted. The notions relating to this matter have very considerably changed between then and now during nearly a century that has elapsed. It is legitimate to construe the Code with reference to the modern needs, wherever this is permissible, unless there is anything in the Code or in any particular section to indicate the contrary.²

[s 1] Title and extent of operation of the Code.

This Act shall be called the Indian Penal Code, and shall ³[extend to the whole of India ⁴[except the State of Jammu and Kashmir].]

COMMENT—

Before 1860, the English criminal law, as modified by several Acts,⁵ was administered in the Presidency towns of Bombay, Calcutta and Madras. But in the mofussil, the Courts were principally guided by the Mohammedan criminal law, the glaring defects of which were partly removed by Regulations of the local Governments. In 1827, the judicial system of Bombay was thoroughly revised and from that time the law which the criminal Courts administered was set forth in a Regulation⁶ defining offences and specifying punishments. But in the Bengal and Madras Presidencies the Mohammedan criminal law was in force till the Indian Penal Code came into operation.

[s 1.1] Trial of offences under IPC, 1860.—

All offences under IPC, 1860 shall be investigated, inquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\).⁷

[s 1.2] Overlapping Offences.—

Where there is some overlapping between offences contained in IPC, 1860 and other enactments, the Supreme Court has held that it would not mean that the offender could not be tried under IPC, 1860. The Court concerned can pronounce on such issues on the basis of evidence produced before it. There may be some overlapping of facts in the cases under section 420 IPC, 1860 and section 138 of the Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881 but ingredients of offences are entirely different. Thus, the subsequent case is not barred.⁸ A "terrorist act" and an act of "waging war against the Government of India" may have some overlapping features, but a terrorist act may not always be an act of waging war against the Government of India, and vice versa. The provisions of Chapter IV of the Unlawful Activities \(Prevention\) Act, 1967 and those of Chapter VI of the IPC, 1860 including section 121, basically cover different areas.⁹ The mere fact that the offence in question was covered by the Customs Act, 1962 did not mean that it could not be tried under IPC, 1860 if it also falls under it.¹⁰

1. MC Verghese v Ponnaiyan, [AIR 1970 SC 1876 \[LNIND 1968 SC 339\]](#) : (1969) 1 SCC 37 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : 1970 Cr LJ 1651 .
2. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, [AIR 1957 SC 857 \[LNIND 1957 SC 81\]](#) : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC).
3. The original words have successively been amended by Act 12 of 1891, section 2 and Sch I, the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948 and the A.O. 1950 to read as above.
4. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for "except Part B States" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
5. 9 Geo. IV, section 74; Acts VII and XIX of 1837; Act XXXI of 1838; Acts XXII and XXXI of 1839; Acts VII and X of 1844; Act XVI of 1852. See Pramod Kumar, Perspectives of the New Bill on Indian Penal Code and Reflections on the Joint Select Committee Report—Some Comments, (1980) 22 JILI 307.
6. XIV of 1827.
7. Section 4\(1\) Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973. Also see commentary under section 3 of IPC infra.
8. Sangeetaben Mahendrabhai Patel v State of Gujarat, [AIR 2012 SC 2844 \[LNIND 2012 SC 1473\]](#) : (2012) 7 SCC 621 [LNIND 2012 SC 1473] .
9. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : AIR 2012 \(SCW\) 4942 : [AIR 2012 SC 3565 \[LNIND 2012 SC 1215\]](#) : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : [JT 2012 \(8\) SC 4 \[LNIND 2012 SC 1215\]](#) : 2012 (7) Scale 553 [[relied on State \(NCT of Delhi\) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 \[LNIND 2005 SC 580\]](#) : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715]
10. Natarajan v State, (2008) 8 SCC 413 [LNIND 2008 SC 1093] : (2008) 3 SCC (Cr) 507.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

The Indian Penal Code was drafted by the First Indian Law Commission presided over by Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay. The draft underwent further revision at the hands of well-known jurists, like Sir Barnes Peacock, and was completed in 1850. The Indian Penal Code was passed by the then Legislature on 6 October 1860 and was enacted as Act No. XLV of 1860.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for India; It is enacted as follows:—

COMMENT.—The Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) exhaustively codifies the law relating to offences with which it deals and the rules of the common law cannot be resorted to for inventing exemptions which are not expressly enacted.¹ It is not necessary and indeed not permissible to construe the IPC, 1860 at the present day in accordance with the notions of criminal jurisdiction prevailing at the time when the Code was enacted. The notions relating to this matter have very considerably changed between then and now during nearly a century that has elapsed. It is legitimate to construe the Code with reference to the modern needs, wherever this is permissible, unless there is anything in the Code or in any particular section to indicate the contrary.²

[s 2] Punishment of offences committed within India.

Every person ¹ shall be liable to punishment under this Code and not otherwise for every act or omission contrary to the provisions thereof, of which he shall be guilty within ¹¹.[\[India\]](#) ¹².[\[\]](#). ²

COMMENT—

This section deals with the intraterritorial operation of the Code. It makes the Code universal in its application to every person in any part of India for every act or omission contrary to the provisions of the Code.

Section 2 read with section 4 of the IPC, 1860 makes the provisions of the Code applicable to the offences committed "in any place without and beyond" the territory of India; (1) by a citizen of India or (2) on any ship or aircraft registered in India, irrespective of its location, by any person not necessarily a citizen. Such a declaration was made as long back as in 1898. By an amendment in 2009 to the said section, the Code is extended to any person in any place "without and beyond the territory of India", committing an offence targeting a computer resource located in India.¹³

1. 'Every person'.—Every person is made liable to punishment, without distinction of nation, rank, caste or creed, provided the offence with which he is charged has been committed in some part of India. A foreigner who enters the Indian territories and thus, accepts the protection of Indian laws virtually gives an assurance of his fidelity and obedience to them and submits himself to their operation. It is no defence on behalf of a foreigner that he did not know he was doing wrong, the act not being an offence in his own country. A foreigner who commits an offence within India is guilty and can be punished as such without any limitation as to his corporal presence in India at the time.¹⁴ Indian Courts have jurisdiction against foreigners residing in foreign countries but their acts connected with transaction or part of transaction arising in India.¹⁵

[s 2.1] Corporate Criminal Liability

A company is liable to be prosecuted and punished for criminal offences. Although there are earlier authorities to the fact that the corporation cannot commit a crime, the generally accepted modern rule is that a corporation may be subject to indictment and other criminal process although the criminal act may be committed through its agent. The majority in the Constitution bench held that there is no immunity to the companies from prosecution merely because the prosecution is in respect of offences for which the punishment is mandatory imprisonment and fine.¹⁶ When imprisonment and fine is prescribed as punishment the Court can impose the punishment of fine which could be enforced against the company.¹⁷

In CBI v Blue Sky Tie-up Pvt Ltd,¹⁸ the question again came up for consideration before the Supreme Court and it was held that since the majority of the Constitution Bench ruled in Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement [supra] that the company can be prosecuted even in a case where the Court can impose substantive sentence as also fine, and in such case only fine can be imposed on the corporate body, the contrary view taken by the learned single Judge cannot be approved.

[s 2.2] Vicarious Liability.—

Indian Penal Code, save and except some matters does not contemplate any vicarious liability on the part of a person. Commission of an offence by raising a legal fiction or by creating a vicarious liability in terms of the provisions of a statute must be expressly stated. The Managing Director or the Directors of the Company, thus, cannot be said to have committed an offence only because they are holders of offices.¹⁹ Vicarious liability of the Managing Director and Director would arise provided any provision exists in that behalf in the statute. Statutes indisputably must contain provision fixing such vicarious liabilities. Even for the said purpose, it is obligatory on the part of the complainant to make requisite allegations which would attract the provisions constituting vicarious liability.²⁰ The provisions of the Essential Commodities Act, 1955, Negotiable Instruments Act, 1881, Employees' Provident Fund \(Miscellaneous Provision\) Act, 1952, etc., have created such vicarious liability. It is interesting to note that section 14A of the 1952 Act specifically creates an offence of criminal breach of trust in respect of the amount deducted from the employees by the company. In terms of the explanations appended to section 405 of the IPC, 1860 a legal fiction has been created to the effect that the employer shall be deemed to have committed an offence of criminal breach of trust. Whereas a person in charge of the affairs of the company and in control thereof has been made vicariously liable for the offence committed by the company along with the company but even in a case falling under section 406 of the IPC, 1860 vicarious liability has been held to be not extendable to the Directors or officers of the company.²¹

There is no exception in favour of anyone in the Penal Code, but the following persons are exempted from the jurisdiction of criminal Courts of every country:—

(a) Foreign Sovereigns.—The real principle on which the exemption, of every sovereign from the jurisdiction of every Court, has been deduced is that the exercise of such jurisdiction would be incompatible with his regal dignity—that is to say, with his absolute independence of every superior authority.²²

(b) Diplomats.—United Nations Privileges and Immunities Act, 1947, and the Diplomatic Relations \(Vienna Convention\) Act, 1972, gave certain diplomats, missions and their member's diplomatic immunity even from criminal jurisdiction. The Diplomatic Relations \(Vienna Convention\) Act had been enacted to give effect to the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, 1961. The effect of section 2 of the Act is to give the force of law in India to certain provisions set out in the Schedule to the Act.

A diplomatic agent shall enjoy immunity from the criminal jurisdiction of the receiving State. He shall also enjoy immunity from its civil and administrative jurisdiction except in the case of:

- (i) A real action relating to private immovable property situated in the territory of the receiving State, unless he holds it on behalf of the sending State for the purposes of the mission;
- (ii) An action relating to succession in which the diplomatic agent is involved as executor, administrator, heir or legatee as a private person and not on behalf of the sending State;
- (iii) An action relating to any professional or commercial activity exercised by the diplomatic agent in the receiving State outside his official functions.²³ A diplomatic agent is not obliged to give evidence as a witness.²⁴ Privileges and immunities are conferred on United Nations and its Representatives as well as on other international organisations and their representatives by the United Nations (Privileges and Immunities) Act, 1947.²⁵

(c) Alien enemies.—In respect of acts of war alien enemies cannot be tried by criminal Courts. If an alien enemy commits a crime unconnected with war, e.g., theft, he would be triable by ordinary criminal Courts.

(d) Foreign army.—When armies of one State are by consent on the soil of a foreign State they are exempted from the jurisdiction of the State on whose soil they are.

(e) Warships.—Men-of-war of a State in foreign waters are exempt from the jurisdiction of the State within whose territorial jurisdiction they are. The domestic Courts, in accordance with principles of international law, will accord to the ship and its crew and its contents certain immunities. The immunities can, in any case, be waived by the nation to which the public ship belongs.²⁶

(f) President and Governors.—Under Article 361 of the Indian Constitution, the President and Governors are exempt from the jurisdiction of Courts.

2. 'Within India'.—If the offence is committed outside India it is not punishable under the Penal Code, unless it has been made so by means of special provisions such as sections 3, 4, 108A, etc., of the Code. Under section 179 of the Cr PC, 1973 even the place(s) wherein the consequence (of the criminal act) "ensues" would be relevant to determine the Court of competent jurisdiction. Therefore, even the Courts within whose local jurisdiction, the repercussion/effect of the criminal act occurs, would have jurisdiction in the matter. When the consequence of an act committed by a foreigner outside India if ensued in India, he can be tried in India.²⁷ Normally crime carries the person. The commission of a crime gives the Court of the place where it is committed jurisdiction over the person of the offender.²⁸

[s 2.3] Territorial jurisdiction.—

The territory of India is defined under Article 1 of the Constitution of India. Article 1 of the Constitution of India deals only with the geographical territory while Article 297 deals with 'maritime territory'.

Article 297\(3\) authorises the Parliament to specify from time to time the limits of various maritime zones such as, territorial waters, continental shelf, etc. Clauses (1) and (2) of the said Article make a declaration that all lands, minerals and other things of value and all other resources shall vest in the Union of India.²⁹ Section 18 of the IPC, 1860 defines India as the territory of India excluding the state of Jammu and Kashmir. These territorial limits would include the territorial waters of India.³⁰ Under the General Clauses Act, 1897, India is defined to mean all territories for the time being comprised in the territory of India as defined in the Constitution of India. Under the provisions of Article 297 of the Constitution of India, all lands, minerals and other things of value underlying the ocean within the territorial waters or the continental shelf or the exclusive economic zone of India vest in the Union. The Constitution of India does not itself define the terms territorial waters, continental shelf, and exclusive economic zone. Clause (3) of Article 297 states that their limits shall be such as may be specified by Parliament. In 1976, Parliament implemented the amendments to the Constitution of India by passing the Maritime Zones Act, 1976.³¹ Insofar the Republic of India is concerned, the limit of the territorial waters was initially understood to be three nautical miles. It had been extended subsequently; up to six nautical miles by a Presidential proclamation dated 22 March 1952 and to 12 nautical miles by another proclamation dated 30 September 1967. By The Territorial Waters, Continental Shelf, Exclusive Economic Zone and Other Maritime Zones Act, 80 of 1976, it was statutorily fixed at 12 nautical miles. Section 3 of the Act stipulates that the sovereignty of India extends to the territorial waters, the limit of which is 12 nautical miles. Section 5 of the Territorial Waters Act, 1976 defines the contiguous zone of India as an area beyond and adjacent to territorial waters to a distance of 24 nautical miles from the nearest point of the baseline. Section 7 of the Act defines the Exclusive economic zone of India as an area beyond and adjacent to territorial waters up to a limit of 200 nautical miles.³²

[s 2.4] Jurisdiction beyond Territorial Waters

In the case of British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd v Shanmughavilas Cashew Industries,³³ the Supreme Court examined the effective operation of the statutes of a country in relation to foreigners and foreign ships.

In general, a statute extends territorially, unless the contrary is stated, throughout the country and will extend to the territorial waters, and such places as intention to that effect is shown. A statute extends to all persons within the country if that intention is shown. The Indian Parliament, therefore, has no authority to legislate for foreign vessels or foreigners in them on the high seas. Thus a foreign ship on the high seas, or her foreign owners or their agents in a foreign country, are not deprived of rights by our statutory enactment expressed in general terms unless it provides that a foreign ship entering an Indian port or territorial waters and thus coming within the territorial jurisdiction is to be covered. Without anything more Indian statutes are ineffective against foreign property and foreigners outside the jurisdiction.

It is this principle which is reflected in section 2\(2\) of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958.³⁴

Earlier in Aban Loyd Chiles Offshore Ltd v UOI,³⁵ it was held that India has been given only certain limited sovereign rights and such limited sovereign rights conferred on India in respect of continental shelf and exclusive economic zone cannot be equated to extending the sovereignty of India over the continental shelf and exclusive economic zone as in the case of territorial waters.

1. MC Verghese v Ponnaiyan, AIR 1970 SC 1876 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : (1969) 1 SCC 37 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : 1970 Cr LJ 1651 .
2. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC).
11. The original words "the said territories" have successively been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 3-4-1951), to read as above.
12. The words and figures "on or after the said first day of May, 1861" rep. by Act 12 of 1891, section 2 and Sch I.
13. Republic of Italy through Ambassador v UOI, (2013) 4 SCC 721 : 2013 (1) Scale 462 [LNINDORD 2013 SC 9114] .
14. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC). See also State of Maharashtra v Mayer Hans George, 1965 (1) SCR 123 [LNIND 1964 SC 415] : AIR 1965 SC 722 [LNIND 1964 SC 208] : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 641 .
15. Lee Kun Hee v State of UP, (2012) 3 SCC 132 [LNIND 2012 SC 89] : AIR 2012 SC 1007 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 443] : 2012 Cr LJ 1551 .
16. Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, (2005) 4 SCC 530 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : AIR 2005 SC 2622 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 961; Asstt Commr v Velliappa Textiles Ltd, 2003 (11) SCC 405 [LNIND 2003 SC 794] : 2004 SCC (Cr) 1214 Overruled.
17. Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2006 SC 1301 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] : (2006) 4 SCC 278 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] : (2006) 2 SCC (Cr) 221. See also CBI v Blue Sky Tie-up Pvt Ltd, (2011) 6 Scale 436 : AIR 2012 (SCW) 1098 : 2012 Cr LJ 1216 . Also see Aneeta Hada v Godfather Travels & Tours, (2012) 5 SCC 66 : 2012 Cr LJ 2525 : AIR 2012 SC 2795 [LNIND 2012 SC 260] .
18. CBI v Blue Sky Tie-up Pvt Ltd, (2011) 6 Scale 436 : AIR 2012 (SCW) 1098 : 2012 Cr LJ 1216 . Also see Aneeta Hada v Godfather Travels & Tours, (2012) 5 SCC 66 : 2012 Cr LJ 2525 : AIR 2012 SC 2795 [LNIND 2012 SC 260] in which it is held that directors cannot be prosecuted without the Company being arraigned as an accused—138 NI Act.
19. Keki Hormusji Gharda v Mehervan Rustom Irani, (2009) 6 SCC 475 [LNIND 2009 SC 1276] : 2009 Cr LJ 3733 : AIR 2009 SC 2594 [LNIND 2009 SC 1276] .
20. Maksud Saiyed v State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668 [LNIND 2007 SC 1090] : JT 2007 (11) SC 276 [LNIND 2007 SC 1090] : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 692.
21. SK Alagh v State of UP, AIR 2008 SC 1731 [LNIND 2008 SC 368] : (2008) 5 SCC 662 [LNIND 2008 SC 368] : 2008 Cr LJ 2256 : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 686.
22. Per Brett, LJ in The Parlement Belge, (1880) 5 PD 197 , 207.
23. Article 31 (1) of Diplomatic Relations (Vienna Convention) Act, 1972.
24. Article 31 (1) of Diplomatic Relations (Vienna Convention) Act, 1972.
25. United Nations (Privileges and Immunities) Act, Act No. XLV of 1947.
26. Chung Chi Cheung, (1939) AC 160 .
27. Lee Kun Hee v State of UP, (2012) 3 SCC 132 [LNIND 2012 SC 89] : AIR 2012 SC 1007 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 443] : 2012 Cr LJ 1551 ; Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC) : 1958 SCR 328 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] .

28. Kubic Dariusz v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 605 [LNIND 1990 SC 25] : (1990) 1 SCC 568 [LNIND 1990 SC 25] : 1990 Cr LJ 796 .
29. Republic of Italy through Ambassador v UOI, (2013) 4 SCC 721 : 2013 (1) Scale 462 [LNINDORD 2013 SC 9114] .
30. BK Wadeyar v Daulatram Rameshwarlal, AIR 1961 SC 311 [LNIND 1960 SC 493] : 1961 (1) SCR 924 [LNIND 1960 SC 493] .
31. Aban Loyd Chiles Offshore Ltd v UOI, JT 2008 (5) SC 256 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : 2008 (6) Scale 128 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : (2008) 11 SCC 439 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] .
32. UOI Republic of Italy through Ambassador v UOI, (2013) 4 SCC 721 : 2013 (1) Scale 462 [LNINDORD 2013 SC 9114] .
33. British India Steam Navigation Co Ltd v Shanmughavilas Cashew Industries, 1990 (3) SCC 481 [LNIND 1990 SC 150] : JT 1990 (1) SC 528 [LNIND 1990 SC 150] : 1990 (1) SCR 884 .
34. World Tanker Carrier Corp v SNP Shipping Services Pvt Ltd, AIR 1998 SC 2330 [LNIND 1998 SC 461] : 1998 (5) SCC 310 [LNIND 1998 SC 461] .
35. Aban Loyd Chiles Offshore Ltd v UOI, (2008) 11 SCC 439 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : JT 2008 (5) SC 256 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : 2008 (6) Scale 128 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

The Indian Penal Code was drafted by the First Indian Law Commission presided over by Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay. The draft underwent further revision at the hands of well-known jurists, like Sir Barnes Peacock, and was completed in 1850. The Indian Penal Code was passed by the then Legislature on 6 October 1860 and was enacted as Act No. XLV of 1860.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for India; It is enacted as follows:—

COMMENT.—The Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) exhaustively codifies the law relating to offences with which it deals and the rules of the common law cannot be resorted to for inventing exemptions which are not expressly enacted.¹ It is not necessary and indeed not permissible to construe the IPC, 1860 at the present day in accordance with the notions of criminal jurisdiction prevailing at the time when the Code was enacted. The notions relating to this matter have very considerably changed between then and now during nearly a century that has elapsed. It is legitimate to construe the Code with reference to the modern needs, wherever this is permissible, unless there is anything in the Code or in any particular section to indicate the contrary.²

[s 3] Punishment of offences committed beyond, but which by law may be tried within India.

Any person liable, by any ³⁶[Indian law], to be tried for an offence committed beyond ³⁷[India] shall be dealt with according to the provisions of this Code for any act committed beyond India in the same manner as if such act had been committed within ³⁸[India].

COMMENT—

This section and section 4 relate to the extraterritorial operation of the Code. The words of this section postulate the existence of a law that an act constituting an offence in India shall also be an offence when committed outside India. Thus, taking part in a marriage which is prohibited by the Child Marriage Restraint Act, 1929 by a citizen of India beyond India is not an offence which can be punished in India.³⁹ This section only applies to the case of a person who at the time of committing the offence charged was amenable to an Indian Court.⁴⁰ Thus, an Indian citizen who committed an offence outside India which was not an offence according to the laws of that country would still be liable to be tried in India if it was an offence under the Indian law.⁴¹ An Indian citizen was murdered by another Indian citizen in a foreign country and the police refused to register an FIR on the ground that the offence was committed outside India. The Court held that the refusal was illegal and directed the police to register the crime and proceed with investigation in accordance with the law. The Court observed that section 3 of the IPC, 1860 helps the authorities in India to proceed by treating the offence as one committed within India. No doubt it is by a fiction that such an assumption is made. But such an assumption was necessary for practical purposes.⁴²

In a series of cases⁴³, it was also held that an offence committed outside India by a citizen of India can be investigated by the local police even without prior sanction of the Central Government. Where both husband and wife are Indians residing at USA, a complaint against the husband alleging cruelty is maintainable.⁴⁴

The operation of the section is restricted to the cases specified in the Extradition Act, 1962 and the Cr PC, 1973, sections 188 and 189.

1. MC Verghese v Ponnai, [AIR 1970 SC 1876 \[LNIND 1968 SC 339\]](#) : (1969) 1 SCC 37 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : 1970 Cr LJ 1651 .
2. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, [AIR 1957 SC 857 \[LNIND 1957 SC 81\]](#) : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC).
36. Subs. by the A.O. 1937 for "law passed by the Governor General of India in Council".
37. The original words "the limits of the said territories" have successively been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 3 April 1951), to read as above.
38. The original words "the said territories" have successively been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, (w.e.f. 3-4-1951) to read as above.
39. Sheikh Haidar v Syed Issa, (1939) Ngp 241.
40. Pirtai, (1873) 10 BHC (Cr C) 356.
41. Pheroze v State of Maharashtra, 1964 \(2\) Cr LJ 533 (Bom).
42. Remia v Sub-Inspector of Police, Tanur, 1993 Cr LJ 1098 (Ker). The court referred to State of WB v Jugal Kishore, [AIR 1969 SC 1171 \[LNIND 1969 SC 8\]](#) : 1969 Cr LJ 1559 .
43. Souda Beevi v Sub Inspector of Police, 2012 Cr LJ 58 (NOC) : 2011 \(4\) Ker LT 52 ; Muhammad Rafi v State of Kerala, 2010 Cr LJ 592 : 2009 \(1\) Ker LT 943 ; Vijaya Saradhi Vajja v Devi Sriroopa Madapati, 2007 Cr LJ 636 (AP); Samarudeen v Asst. Director of Enforcement, [\(1999 \(2\) Ker LT 794 \[FB\]\)](#); S Clara v State of TN, 2008 Cr LJ 2477 (Mad).
44. Harihar Narasimha Iyer v State of TN, 2013 Cr LJ 378 ; Rajesh Gupta v State of AP, 2011 Cr LJ 3506 : 2011 \(3\) Crimes 236 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

The Indian Penal Code was drafted by the First Indian Law Commission presided over by Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay. The draft underwent further revision at the hands of well-known jurists, like Sir Barnes Peacock, and was completed in 1850. The Indian Penal Code was passed by the then Legislature on 6 October 1860 and was enacted as Act No. XLV of 1860.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for India; It is enacted as follows:—

COMMENT.—The Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) exhaustively codifies the law relating to offences with which it deals and the rules of the common law cannot be resorted to for inventing exemptions which are not expressly enacted.¹ It is not necessary and indeed not permissible to construe the IPC, 1860 at the present day in accordance with the notions of criminal jurisdiction prevailing at the time when the Code was enacted. The notions relating to this matter have very considerably changed between then and now during nearly a century that has elapsed. It is legitimate to construe the Code with reference to the modern needs, wherever this is permissible, unless there is anything in the Code or in any particular section to indicate the contrary.²

45. [s 4] Extension of Code to extraterritorial offences.

The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

46. [(1) any citizen of India in any place without and beyond India;

(2) any person on any ship or aircraft registered in India wherever it may be;]

47. [(3) any person in any place without and beyond India committing offence targeting a computer resource located in India.]

48. [Explanation.—In this section—

(a) the word "offence" includes every act committed outside India which, if committed in India, would be punishable under this Code;

(b) the expression "computer resource" shall have the meaning assigned to it in clause (k) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Information Technology Act, 2000 \(21 of 2000\).]

49. [ILLUSTRATION]

50. [*] A, 51. [who is a 52. [citizen of India]], commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in 53. [India] in which he may be found.

54. [*]

COMMENT—

This section shows the extent to which the Code applies to offences committed outside India. The Code applies to any offence committed by—

- (1) any citizen of India in any place, wherever he may be;
- (2) any person on any ship or aircraft registered in India wherever it may be; and
- (3) any person, whether or not a citizen of India, who commits any offence, from anywhere in the world, targeting a computer resource located in India.

Hence, except for the case of an offence committed against a computer resource located in India, to extend the scope of operation of IPC, 1860 against persons, either the offender must be a citizen of India or he must have committed the offence on any ship or aircraft registered in India.

[s 4.1] Crimes committed outside India.—

Where an offence is committed beyond the limits of India but the offender is found within its limits, then

- (I) he may be given up for trial in the country where the offence was committed (extradition) or
- (II) he may be tried in India (extraterritorial jurisdiction).

Where an offence was committed by an Indian citizen outside India, it was held that the offence was punishable under the IPC, 1860. An investigation of such an offence would not require sanction of the Central Government under the proviso to section 188, Cr PC, 1973. But an enquiry as contemplated by section 202, Cr PC, 1973 could only be with the sanction of the Central Government.⁵⁵

(I) Extradition.—Extradition is the surrender by one State to another of a person desired to be dealt with for crimes of which he has been accused or convicted and which are justiciable in the Courts of the other State. Surrender of a person within the State to another State—whether a citizen or an alien—is a political act done in pursuance of a treaty or an arrangement ad hoc.⁵⁶ Though extradition is granted in implementation of the international commitment of the State, the procedure to be followed by the Courts in deciding, whether extradition should be granted and on what terms, is determined by the municipal law of the land. Extradition is founded on the broad principle that it is in the interest of civilised communities that criminals should not go unpunished and on that account, it is recognised as a part of the comity of nations that one State should ordinarily afford to another State assistance towards bringing offenders to justice.⁵⁷ The procedure for securing the extradition from India is laid down in the Extradition Act, 1962.

(II) Extraterritorial jurisdiction.—Indian Courts are empowered to try offences committed out of India on (A) land, (B) high seas or (C) aircraft.

(A) Land.—By virtue of sections 3 and 4 of the Penal Code, and section 188 of the Cr PC, 1973 local Courts can take cognizance of offences committed beyond the territories of India. Where the Court is dealing with an act committed outside India by a citizen of India which would be an offence punishable under the Penal Code if it had been committed in India, section 4 constitutes the act an offence and it can be dealt with under section 188 of the Cr PC, 1973.⁵⁸ If, however, at the time of commission of the offence the accused person is not a citizen of India, the provisions of section 4 of the Penal Code and section 188 of the Cr PC, 1973 have no application.⁵⁹

Section 188 of the Cr PC, 1973, provides that when an offence is committed outside India—

- (a) by a citizen of India, whether on high seas or elsewhere; or
- (b) by any person not being such citizen on any ship or aircraft registered in India, he may be dealt with in respect of such offence as if it had been committed at any place within India at which he may be found.

The word 'found' in section 188, Cr PC, 1973 means not where a person is discovered but where he is actually present.⁶⁰ A man brought to a place against his will can be said to be found there.⁶¹ When a man is in the country and is charged before a Magistrate with an offence under the Penal Code, it will not avail him to say that he was brought there illegally from a foreign country. The Bombay High Court has laid down this principle, following English precedents, in Savarkar's case.⁶² The accused Savarkar had escaped at Marseilles from the custody of police officers charged with the duty of bringing him from London to Bombay, but was re-arrested there and brought to Bombay and committed for trial by the Special Magistrate at Nasik. The High Court held that the trial and committal were valid.⁶³ The provisions of the IPC, 1860 have been extended to offences committed by any citizen of India in any place within and beyond India by virtue of section 4 thereof. Accordingly, offences committed in Botswana by an Indian citizen would also be amenable to the provisions of the IPC, 1860 subject to the limitation imposed under the proviso to section 188 Cr PC, 1973.⁶⁴ Section 4 gives extraterritorial jurisdiction but as the Explanation says the acts committed must amount to an offence under the Penal Code.⁶⁵

[s 4.2] Acts done within Indian as well as foreign territory.—

A person who is a citizen of India is liable to be tried by the Courts of this country for acts done by him, partly within and partly without the Indian territories, provided the acts amount together to an offence under the Code.⁶⁶

(B) Admiralty jurisdiction.—The jurisdiction to try offences committed on the high seas is known as the admiralty jurisdiction. It is founded on the principle that a ship on the high seas is a floating island belonging to the nation whose flag she is flying.

Admiralty jurisdiction extends over—

- (1) Offences committed on Indian ships on the high seas.
- (2) Offences committed on foreign ships in Indian territorial waters.
- (3) Piracy.

Power to enforce claims against foreign ships is an essential attribute of admiralty jurisdiction and it is assumed over such ships while they are within the jurisdiction of the High Court by arresting and detaining them. Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Courts in India has been historically traced to the Charters of 1774 and 1728, as subsequently expanded and clarified by the Letters Patent of 1823, 1862 and 1865 read with the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890, and the Colonial Court of Admiralty (India) Act, 1891 and preserved by section 106 of the Government of India Act, 1915, section 223 of the Government of India Act, 1935 and Article 225 of the Constitution of India. The pre-Constitution enactments have continued to remain in force in India as existing laws.^{67.}

The High Court as a Court of Admiralty is treated as a separate entity exercising a distinct and specific or prescribed or limited jurisdiction. This reasoning is based on the assumption that the continuance in force of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1890 as an existing law carves out a distinct jurisdiction of the High Court limited in ambit and efficacy to what has been granted by the Admiralty Court Act 1861, and that jurisdiction has remained stultified ever since. This restrictive construction is not warranted by the provisions of the Constitution. Accordingly, a foreign ship falls within the jurisdiction of the High Court where the vessel happens to be at the relevant time, i.e., at the time when the jurisdiction of the High Court is invoked, or, where the cause of action wholly or in part arises. The Merchant Shipping Act empowers the concerned High Court to arrest a ship in respect of a substantive right. This jurisdiction can be assumed by the concerned High Court, whether or not the defendant resides or carries on business, or the cause of action arose wholly or in part, within the local limits of its jurisdiction. Once a foreign ship is arrested within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court, and the owner of the ship has entered appearance and furnished security to the satisfaction of the High Court for the release of the ship, the proceedings continue as a personal action. The conclusion is that all the High Courts in India have inherent admiralty jurisdiction and can invoke the same for the enforcement of a maritime claim.^{68.}

Even while exercising extraordinary powers available under the Constitution the jurisdiction of the High Court is primarily circumscribed by its territorial limits, viz., the jurisdiction has to be in context of the territorial jurisdiction available to the High Court. If the overall scheme of IPC, 1860 (section 4), Cr PC, 1973 (section 188), The Merchant Shipping Act, 1958 (section 437) and the Territorial Waters Act, 1976 (section 13) are taken into consideration read with sections 2(2) and 3(15) of the Merchant Shipping Act, it is apparent that for a Court, including High Court, to be vested with jurisdiction, an offender or offending vessel have to be found within local territorial limits of such Court.^{69.}

[s 4.3] Piracy

Piracy consists of any of the following acts:

- (a) any illegal acts of violence or detention, or any act of depredation, committed for private ends by the crew or the passengers of a private ship or a private aircraft, and directed:
 - (i) on the high seas, against another ship or aircraft, or against persons or property on board such ship or aircraft;
 - (ii) against a ship, aircraft, persons or property in a place outside the jurisdiction of any State;
- (b) any act of voluntary participation in the operation of a ship or of an aircraft with knowledge of facts making it a pirate ship or aircraft;
- (c) any act of inciting or of intentionally facilitating an act described in subparagraph (a) or (b).^{70.}

The Convention on the Law of Sea known as United National Convention on the Law of Sea, 1982 (UNCLOS) sets out the legal framework applicable to combating piracy and armed robbery at sea, as well as other ocean activities. UNCLOS, 1982 is a comprehensive code on the international law of sea. It codifies and consolidates the traditional law within a single, unificatory legal framework. It has changed the legal concept of continental shelf and also introduced a new maritime zone known as exclusive economic zone. Exclusive economic zone is a new concept having several new features.⁷¹ The UNCLOS signed by India in 1982 and ratified on 29 June 1995, encapsulates the law of the sea and is supplemented by several subsequent resolutions adopted by the Security Council of the United Nations.

Before UNCLOS came into existence, the law relating to the seas which was in operation in India, was the Territorial Waters, Continental Shelf, Exclusive Economic Zone and Other Maritime Zones Act, 1976, which spelt out the jurisdiction of the Central Government over the Territorial Waters, the Contiguous Zones and the Exclusive Economic Zone. The provisions of the UNCLOS are in harmony with and not in conflict with the provisions of the Maritime Zones Act, 1976, in this regard. Article 33 of the Convention recognises and describes the Contiguous Zone of a nation to extend to 24 nautical miles from the baseline from which the breadth of the territorial sea is measured. Similarly, Articles 56 and 57 describe the rights, jurisdiction and duties of the coastal State in the Exclusive Economic Zone and the breadth thereof extending to 20 nautical miles from the baseline from which the breadth of the territorial sea is measured. This provision is also in consonance with the provisions of the 1976 Act. The area of difference between the provisions of the Maritime Zones Act, 1976, and the Convention occurs in Article 97 of the Convention which relates to the penal jurisdiction in matters of collision or any other incident of navigation.⁷²

[s 4.4] Jurisdiction of Indian High Courts.—

In view of the declaration of law made by the Supreme Court in M V Elisabeth v Harwan Investment and Trading,⁷³ the High Courts in India have inherent admiralty jurisdiction.

The offences which come within the admiralty jurisdiction are now defined by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1958.

(C) Aircraft.—The provisions of the Code are made applicable to any offence committed by any person on any aircraft registered in India, wherever it may be.

[s 4.5] Liability of foreigners in India for offences committed outside its limits.

—

The acts of a foreigner committed by him in territory beyond the limits of India do not constitute an offence against the Penal Code, and, consequently, a foreigner cannot be held criminally responsible under that Code by the tribunals of India for acts committed by him beyond its territorial limits. Thus, when it is sought to punish a person, who is not an Indian subject, as an offender in respect of a certain act, the question is not 'where was the act committed,' but 'was that person at the time, when the act was done, within the territory of India'. For, if he was not, the act is not an offence, the doer of it is not liable to be punished as an offender, and he is, therefore, not subject to the jurisdiction of criminal Courts.⁷⁴ But if a foreigner in a foreign territory initiates an offence which is completed within Indian territory, he is, if found within Indian territory, liable to be tried by the Indian Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was completed.⁷⁵

[s 4.6] Section 4 IPC and section 188 of Cr PC.—

Section 188 Cr PC, 1973 and section 4 of the IPC, 1860 spell out that if the person committing the offence at that point of time is a citizen of India, then, even if the offence is committed beyond the contours of India, he will be subject to the jurisdiction of the Courts in India. The rule enunciated under the two sections rests on the principle that qua citizens the jurisdiction of Courts is not lost by reason of the venue of the offence. However, section 188 of the Code places an interdiction in the enquiry or trial over offences committed outside India by a citizen of India insisting for sanction from the Central Government to do so.⁷⁶

1. MC Verghese v Ponnai, AIR 1970 SC 1876 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : (1969) 1 SCC 37 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : 1970 Cr LJ 1651 .
2. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC).
45. Subs. by Act 4 of 1898, section 2, for section 4.
46. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for clauses (1) to (4).
47. Ins. by the Information Technology (Amendment) Act, 2008 (10 of 2009), section 51(a)(i) (w.e.f. 27-10-2009).
48. Subs. by the Information Technology (Amendment) Act, 2008 (10 of 2009), section 51(a)(ii), for Explanation (w.e.f. 27-10-2009). Explanation, before substitution, stood as under: "Explanation.—In this section the word "offence" includes every act committed outside India which, if committed in India, would be punishable under this Code."
49. Subs. by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch II, for "Illustrations" (w.e.f. 17-9-1957).
50. The brackets and letter "(a)" omitted by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch II (w.e.f. 17-9-1957).
51. Subs. by the A.O. 1948, for "a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject".
52. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "a British subject of Indian domicile".
53. The words "British India" have been successively amended by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.
54. Illustrations (b), (c) and (d) omitted by the A.O. 1950.
55. Muhammad Rafi v State of Kerala, 2010 Cr LJ 592 Ker DB.
56. State of WB v Jugal Kishore More, (1969) 3 SCR 320 [LNIND 1969 SC 8] : 1969 Cr LJ 1559 : AIR 1969 SC 1171 [LNIND 1969 SC 8] .
57. Abu Salem Abdul Qayoom Ansari v State of Maharashtra, JT 2010 (10) SC 202 [LNIND 2010 SC 858] : 2010 (9) Scale 460 : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 125 : (2011) 11 SCC 214 [LNIND 2010 SC 858] .
58. Ajay Aggarwal v UOI, 1993 (3) SCC 609 [LNIND 1993 SC 431] : AIR 1993 SC 1637 [LNIND 1993 SC 431] : 1993 Cr LJ 2516 .
59. Central Bank of India Ltd v Ram Narain, (1955) 1 SCR 697 [LNIND 1954 SC 126] : 1955 Cr LJ 152 : AIR 1955 SC 36 [LNIND 1954 SC 126] .
60. Maganlal v State, (1882) 6 Bom 622.
61. Lopez and Sattler, (1858) 27 LJ (MC) 48.
62. Vinayak D Savarkar, (1910) 13 Bom LR 296 , 35 Bom 225.

63. Supra. Also see Om Hemrajani v State of UP, (2005) 1 SCC 617 [LNIND 2004 SC 1181] : AIR 2005 SC 392 [LNIND 2004 SC 1181] .
64. Thota Venkateswarlu v State of AP, AIR 2011 SC 2900 [LNIND 2011 SC 850] : (2011) 9 SCC 527 [LNIND 2011 SC 850] : 2011 Cr LJ 4925 : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 772.
65. Rambharthi, (1923) 25 Bom LR 772 [LNIND 1923 BOM 115] : 47 Bom 907; Sheikh Haidar v Syed Issa, (1939) Nag 241.
66. Moulvie Ahmudoollah, (1865) 2 WR (Cr) 60.
67. See Kamalakar Mahadev Bhagat v Scindia Steam Navigation Co Ltd, AIR 1961 Bom 186 [LNIND 1960 BOM 71] : (1960) 62 Bom LR 995 ; Sahida Ismail v Petko R Salvejkov, AIR 1973 Bom 18 [LNIND 1971 BOM 74] : (1972) 74 Bom LR 514 ; Jayaswal Shipping Co v SS Leelavati, AIR 1954 Cal 415 [LNIND 1953 CAL 202] ; Reena Padhi v 'Jagdhir', AIR 1982 Ori 57 [LNIND 1981 ORI 93] .
68. M V Elisabeth v Harwan Investment and Trading, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 433 : AIR 1993 SC 1014 [LNIND 1992 SC 194] ; MV Al Quamar v Tsavliris Salvage (International) Ltd, AIR 2000 SC 2826 [LNIND 2000 SC 1119] : (2000) 8 SCC 278 [LNIND 2000 SC 1119] : 2000 (5) Scale 618 [LNIND 2000 SC 1119] ; MV Free Neptune v DLF Southern Towns Private, 2011 (1) Ker LT 904 : 2011 (1) KHC 628 .
69. MG Forests Pte Ltd v "MV Project Workship", Gujarat High Court Judgement dated 24 February 2004.
70. Article 100. United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS), 1982.
71. Aban Loyd Chiles Offshore Ltd v UOI, JT 2008 (5) SC 256 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : 2008 (6) Scale 128 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] : (2008) 11 SCC 439 [LNIND 2008 SC 897] .
72. Republic of Italy through Ambassador v UOI, (2013) 4 SCC 721 : 2013 (1) Scale 462 [LNINDORD 2013 SC 9114] .
73. M V Elisabeth v Harwan Investment and Trading, 1993 Supp (2) SCC 433 : AIR 1993 SC 1014 [LNIND 1992 SC 194] .
74. Musst. Kishen Kour, (1878) PR No. 20 of 1878; Jameson, (1896) 2 QB 425 .
75. Chhotalal, (1912) 14 Bom LR 147 [LNIND 1912 BOM 26] .
76. P T Abdul Rahiman v State of Kerala, 2013 Cr LJ 893 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER I INTRODUCTION

The Indian Penal Code was drafted by the First Indian Law Commission presided over by Lord Thomas Babington Macaulay. The draft underwent further revision at the hands of well-known jurists, like Sir Barnes Peacock, and was completed in 1850. The Indian Penal Code was passed by the then Legislature on 6 October 1860 and was enacted as Act No. XLV of 1860.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for India; It is enacted as follows:—

COMMENT.—The Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) exhaustively codifies the law relating to offences with which it deals and the rules of the common law cannot be resorted to for inventing exemptions which are not expressly enacted.^{1.} It is not necessary and indeed not permissible to construe the IPC, 1860 at the present day in accordance with the notions of criminal jurisdiction prevailing at the time when the Code was enacted. The notions relating to this matter have very considerably changed between then and now during nearly a century that has elapsed. It is legitimate to construe the Code with reference to the modern needs, wherever this is permissible, unless there is anything in the Code or in any particular section to indicate the contrary.^{2.}

77. [[s 5] Certain laws not to be affected by this Act.

Nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers, soldiers, sailors or airmen in the service of the Government of India or the provisions of any special or local law¹ .]

COMMENT—

This section is a saving clause to section 2. Though the Code was intended to be a general one, it was not thought desirable to make it exhaustive, and hence, offences defined by local and special laws were left out of the Code, and merely declared to be punishable as theretofore.^{78.} Thus, the personnel of the Army, Navy and Airforce are governed by the provisions of the Army Act, 1950, The Navy Act, 1957, and The Indian Air Force Act, 1950 in regard to offences of mutiny and desertion committed by them.^{79.}

1. 'Special or local law'.—A special law is a law relating to a particular subject;^{80.} whereas a local law is a law which applies only to a particular part of the country.^{81.} The distinction between a statute creating a new offence with a particular penalty and a statute enlarging the ambit of an existing offence by including new acts within it with a particular penalty is well settled. In the former case the new offence is punishable by the new penalty only; in the latter it is punishable also by all such penalties as were applicable before the Act to the offence in which it is included. The Principle is that where a new offence is created and the particular manner in which proceedings should be taken is laid down, then proceedings cannot be taken in any other way.^{82.} However, a person cannot be punished under both the Penal Code and a special law for the same

offence,⁸³ and ordinarily the sentence should be under the special Act.⁸⁴ This is, however, confined to cases where the offences are coincident or practically so.⁸⁵

The Supreme Court issued specific guidelines regarding the interpretation of general law and special law. See the Box below for these Guidelines.

Supreme Court Guidelines on Interpretation of General law and Special law

- (i) When a provision of law regulates a particular subject and a subsequent law contains a provision regulating the same subject, there is no presumption that the later law repeals the earlier law. The rule-making authority while making the later rule is deemed to know the existing law on the subject. If the subsequent law does not repeal the earlier rule, there can be no presumption of an intention to repeal the earlier rule;
- (ii) When two provisions of law – one being a general law and the other being special law govern a matter, the court should endeavour to apply a harmonious construction to the said provisions. But where the intention of the rule-making authority is made clear either expressly or impliedly, as to which law should prevail, the same shall be given effect.
- (iii) If the repugnancy or inconsistency subsists in spite of an effort to read them harmoniously, the prior special law is not presumed to be repealed by the later general law. The prior special law will continue to apply and prevail in spite of the subsequent general law. But where a clear intention to make a rule of universal application by superseding the earlier special law is evident from the later general law, then the later general law, will prevail over the prior special law.
- (iv) Where a later special law is repugnant to or inconsistent with an earlier general law, the later special law will prevail over the earlier general law.

[*Maya Mathew v State of Kerala*⁸⁶. and *P Raghava Kurup v V Ananthakumari*⁸⁷.]

[s 5.1] Contempt of Court

Contempt of Courts Act, 1971 (Act 70 of 1971) makes it clear that, Contempt of Court means 'Civil contempt' or 'Criminal contempt'.⁸⁸ 'Civil contempt' means wilful disobedience to any judgment, decree, direction, order, writ or other process of a Court or wilful breach of an Undertaking given to a Court.⁸⁹ "Criminal contempt" means the publication (whether by words, spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representations, or otherwise) of any matter or the doing of any other act whatsoever which – (i) scandalises or tends to scandalise or lowers or tends to lower the authority of any Court; or (ii) prejudices, or interferes or tends to interfere with, the due course of any judicial proceeding; or (iii) interferes or tends to interfere with, or obstructs or tends to obstruct, the administration of justice in any other manner.⁹⁰ The provisions of this Act shall be in addition to and not in derogation of, the provisions of any other law relating to contempt of Courts.⁹¹ Contempt proceeding is sui generis (of its own kind or class or unique). It has peculiar features which are not found in criminal proceedings. The respondent does not stand in the position of a person accused of an offence. Initiation of contempt proceedings against the respondent who is already accused in a criminal proceedings, does not amount to double jeopardy.⁹² Mens rea is not necessary for committing contempt of Court. The main ingredient of the offence of contempt of Court is the result of one's contumacious act of offending the prestige and dignity of the judiciary so as to lower it in the estimation of the general public. Whether the contemnor intended it or not is of no consequence.⁹³

[s 5.2] Contempt of Supreme Court and High Courts

Articles 129 and 215 preserve all the powers of the Supreme Court and the High Court, respectively, as a Court of Record which includes the power to punish the contempt of itself. There are no curbs on the power of the High Court to punish for contempt of itself except those contained in the Contempt of Courts Act, 1971.⁹⁴ For the judiciary to carry out its obligations effectively and true to the spirit with which it is sacredly entrusted the task, constitutional Courts have been given the power to punish for contempt, but greater the power; higher the responsibility.⁹⁵

[s 5.3] Contempt of Subordinate Courts

Every High Court shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction, powers and authority, in accordance with the same procedure and practice, in respect of contempt of Courts subordinate to it as it has and exercises in respect of contempt of itself provided that no High Court shall take cognizance of a contempt alleged to have been committed in respect of a Court subordinate to it where such contempt is an offence punishable under the IPC, 1860 [section 10 Contempt of Courts Act, 1971]. The procedure prescribed either under the Cr PC, 1973 or under the Indian Evidence Act, 1872 is not attracted to the proceedings initiated under section 15 of the Contempt of Courts Act. The High Court can deal with such matters summarily and adopt its own procedure. The only caution that has to be observed by the Court in exercising this inherent power of summary procedure is that the procedure followed must be fair and the contemnors are made aware of the charges levelled against them and given a fair and reasonable opportunity.⁹⁶

[s 5.4] Section 228 IPC vis-a-vis Contempt of Courts Act

What is made punishable under section 228 IPC, 1860⁹⁷ is the offence of intentional insult to a Judge or interruption of Court proceedings but not as a contempt of Court. The definition of criminal contempt is wide enough to include any act by a person which would either scandalise the Court or tend to interfere with the administration of justice. It would also include any act which lowers the authority of the Court or prejudices or interferes with the due course of any judicial proceedings. It is not limited to the offering of intentional insult to the Judge or interruption of the judicial proceedings.⁹⁸

1. MC Verghese v Ponnai, AIR 1970 SC 1876 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : (1969) 1 SCC 37 [LNIND 1968 SC 339] : 1970 Cr LJ 1651 .

2. Mobarik Ali v State of Bombay, AIR 1957 SC 857 [LNIND 1957 SC 81] : 1957 Cr LJ 1346 (SC).

77. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for section 5.

78. Ramachandrappa, (1883) 6 Mad 249; Motilal Shah, (1930) 32 Bom LR 1502 : 55 Bom 89.

79. UOI v Anand Singh Bisht, AIR 1997 SC 361 [LNIND 1996 SC 1341] : (1996) 10 SCC 153 [LNIND 1996 SC 1341] : 1996 Cr LJ 4435 : (1996) 1 SCC (Cr) 1198.
80. Section 41 IPC, 1860.
81. Section 42 IPC, 1860.
82. Bhalchandra Ranadive, (1929) 31 Bom LR 1151 , 1178 : 54 Bom 35.
83. Hussun Ali, (1873) 5 NWP 49.
84. Kuloda Prosad Majumdar, (1906) 11 Cal WN 100; Bhogilal, (1931) 33 Bom LR 648 .
85. Joti Prasad Gupta, (1931) 53 All 642 , 649; Suchit Raut v State, (1929) 9 Pat 126.
86. Maya Mathew v State of Kerala, (2010) 4 SCC 498 [LNIND 2010 SC 190] : (2010) 3 SCR 16 [LNIND 2010 SC 190] : AIR 2010 SC 1932 [LNIND 2010 SC 190] : 2010 (2) Scale 833 [LNIND 2010 SC 190] .
87. P Raghava Kurup v V Ananthakumari, (2007) 9 SCC 179 [LNIND 2007 SC 215] : 2007 (2) SCR 1058 [LNIND 2007 SC 215] : (2007) 3 Scale 431 [LNIND 2007 SC 215] .
88. Section 2(a).
89. Section 2(b).
90. Section 2(c).
91. Section 22.
92. Delhi Judicial Service, Association, Tis Hazari Court v State of Gujarat, AIR 1991 SC 2176 [LNIND 1991 SC 446] : 1991 (4) SCC 406 [LNIND 1991 SC 446] .
93. VG Ramachandran, Contempt of Court, 6th Edn, p 319 quoted in Re MV Jayarajan, 2012 (1) Ker LT SN 23 : 2011 (4) KHC 585 .
94. V G Peterson v O V Forbes, AIR 1963 SC 692 [LNIND 1962 SC 298] : 1963 Supp (1) SCR 40 : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 633 .
95. HG Rangangoud v State Trading Corp of India, AIR 2012 SC 490 : 2012 (1) SCC 297 .
96. Daroga Singh v BK Pandey, AIR 2004 SC 2579 [LNIND 2004 SC 485] : (2004) 5 SCC 26 [LNIND 2004 SC 485] : 2004 Cr LJ 2084 .
97. [s 228] - Intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceeding.—
Whoever intentionally offers any insult, or causes any interruption to any public servant, while such public servant is sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.
98. Daroga Singh v BK Pandey, AIR 2004 SC 2579 [LNIND 2004 SC 485] : (2004) 5 SCC 26 [LNIND 2004 SC 485] : 2004 Cr LJ 2084 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 6] Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions.

Throughout this Code every definition of an offence, every penal provision, and every illustration of every such definition or penal provision, shall be understood subject to the exceptions contained in the Chapter entitled "General Exceptions", though those exceptions are not repeated in such definition, penal provision, or illustration.

ILLUSTRATION

- (a) The sections, in this Code, which contain definitions of offences, do not express that a child under seven years of age cannot commit such offences, but the definitions are to be understood subject to the general exception which provides that nothing shall be an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.
- (b) A, a police-officer, without warrant, apprehends Z, who has committed murder. Here A is not guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement; for he was bound by law to apprehend Z and therefore the case falls within the general exception which provides that "nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is bound by law to do it".

COMMENT—

The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of the definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lies on the accused.¹

Section 6 is a convenient formula to avoid reproduction of lengthy exceptions in the description of offences. In other words, all the offences must be read subject to Chapter IV relating to General Exceptions (sections. 76–106 IPC, 1860). So when an act falls within any one of these exceptions by virtue of section 6 of the Code, the accused has to be given benefit of the appropriate General Exception even though it is not specifically stated over again in the description of the offence committed.² Section 6 of the Indian Penal Code imposes an obligation on the court to consider the case of exceptions on its own so far as it relates to the burden of proving legal insanity under section 106 of the Act. If the case of the accused comes within the purview of section 84 IPC, 1860, which is one of the provisions in Chapter IV of the General Exceptions of the Indian Penal Code, the court is to give due consideration and find out as to whether at the time of the occurrence the accused had any mental disability so as not to know what he was doing.³

The provisions of section 6 should be read as a proviso to section 105 of the Evidence Act 1872.⁴ When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the General Exceptions in the Indian Penal Code \(XIV of 1860\), or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.⁵

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

2. Abdul Latif v State of Assam, 1981 Cr LJ 1205 (Gau); see also Patras Mardi v State, 1982 Cr LJ NOC 7 (Gau).

3. Khageswar Pujari v State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 1108 (Orissa), see also Smt. Sandhya Rani Bardhan v State, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 245 (Gau). Subodh Tewari v State of Assam, 988 Cr LJ 223 (Assam).

4. Khurajam Somat Singh v State, 1997 Cr LJ 1461 (Gau).

5. Section 105 Evidence Act.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 7] Sense of expression once explained.

Every expression which is explained in any part of this Code is used in every part of this Code in conformity with the explanation.

COMMENT—

Section 7 of IPC, 1860 provides that 'every expression' which is explained in any part of the Code, is used in every part of the Code in conformity with the explanation. Let it be noted that unlike the modern statute, section 7 does not provide 'unless the context otherwise indicate' a phrase that prefaces the dictionary clauses of a modern statute. Therefore, the expression 'Government' in section 21(12)(a) must mean either the Central Government or the Government of a State.⁶

6. RS Nayak v AR Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] : AIR 1984 SC 684 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 8] Gender.

The pronoun "he" and its derivatives are used of any person, whether male or female.

COMMENT—

Section 8 of the Indian Penal Code lays down that the pronoun 'he' and its derivatives are used for any person whether male or female. Thus, in view of section 8, IPC, 1860 read with section 2(y), Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\) the pronoun 'his' in clause (d) of section 125\(1\), Cr PC, 1973 also indicates a female.⁷

7. Vijaya (Dr.) v Kashirao Rajaram Sawai, 1987 Cr LJ 977 : AIR 1987 SC 1100 [LNIND 1987 SC 200] ; M Areefa Beevi v Dr. K M Sahib, 1983 Cr LJ 412 (Ker) : See also Girdhar Gopal v State, 1953 Cr LJ 964 (MB) (Section 354 IPC, 1860).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 9] Number.

Unless the contrary appears from the context, words importing the singular number include the plural number, and words importing the plural number include the singular number.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 10] "Man" "Woman".

The word "man" denotes a male human being of any age; the word "woman" denotes a female human being of any age.

COMMENT—

A female child of seven and a half months was held to be a "woman" for the purpose of section 354 IPC, 1860.⁸

⁸. State of Punjab v Major Singh, AIR 1967 SC 63 [LNIND 1966 SC 130] : 1967 Cr LJ 1 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 11] "Person".

The word "person" includes any Company or Association or body of persons, whether incorporated or not.

COMMENT—

The term 'person' has been defined in section 11, IPC, 1860, and the same is in pari materia with section 3\(42\) of the General Clauses Act 1897. Obviously, the definition is inclusive.⁹ A natural person, an incorporated person or even an unincorporated association or body of persons like a partnership can be a person under section 11 of IPC, 1860.¹⁰ The Supreme Court has held in Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement,¹¹ that, as regards corporate criminal liability, there is no doubt that a corporation or company could be prosecuted for any offence punishable under law, whether it is coming under the strict liability or under absolute liability. A juristic person has been held to come within the meaning of the word "person" for the purposes of section 415 (cheating).¹²

The State and its instrumentalities are juristic persons,¹³ but by implication, the State stands excluded from the purview of the word 'person' for the purpose of limiting its right to avail the revisional power of the High Court under section 397\(1\) of Cr PC, 1973 for the reason that the State, being the prosecutor of the offender, is enjoined to conduct prosecution on behalf of the society and to take such remedial steps as to deems proper.¹⁴ Chief Educational Officer is an artificial person/ juristic person falling under section 11 of IPC, 1860.¹⁵

[s 11.1] Accused person.—

Though the word "person" is defined in the Indian Penal Code section 11 and the General Clauses Act section 3\(42\) which are identical and are not exhaustive but an inclusive one. The words "accused" or "accused person" or "accused of an offence" are not defined either in the Indian Penal Code or in the Indian Evidence Act or in the General Clauses Act 1897.¹⁶

[s 11.2] Complainant.—

A complaint can be filed in the name of a juristic person because it is also a person in the eye of law. It is clear that complainant must be a corporeal person who is capable of making a physical presence in the court. Its corollary is that even if the complaint is made in the name of incorporeal person (like a company or corporation) it is necessary that a natural person represents such juristic person in the court and it is that natural person who is looked upon, for all practical purposes, to be the complainant in the case. In other words, when the complainant is a body corporate it is the de jure complainant, and it must necessarily associate a human being as de facto complainant to represent the former in court proceedings.¹⁷ A company is a person in law and not in fact. A person in law is always required to be represented by a person in fact. A company can file a complaint for Defamation (section 500 IPC, 1860) through its authorised representative.¹⁸

9. Chief Education Officer, Salem v K S Palanichamy, 2012 Cr LJ 2543 (Mad).
10. B Raman v M/S. Shasun Chemicals and Drugs Ltd, 2006 Cr LJ 4552 (Mad); Target Overseas Exports Pvt Ltd v A M Iqbal, 2005 Cr LJ 1931 (Ker).
11. Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2005 SC 2622 [LNIND 2005 SC 476].
12. Reji Michael v Vertex Securities Ltd, 1999 Cr LJ 3787 (Ker).
13. Common Cause, A Registered Society v UOI, (1999) 6 SCC 667 [LNIND 1999 SC 637] : AIR 1999 SC 2979 [LNIND 1999 SC 637].
14. Krishnan v Krishnaveni, AIR 1997 SC 987 [LNIND 1997 SC 1883] : 1997 Cr LJ 1519 : (1997) 4 SCC 241 [LNIND 1997 SC 1883].
15. Chief Education Officer, Salem v K S Palanichamy, 2012 Cr LJ 2543 (Mad).
16. Directorate of Enforcement v Deepak Mahajan, AIR 1994 SC 1775 [LNIND 1993 SC 656] : (1994) 3 SCC 440 : 1994 Cr LJ 2269.
17. Associated Cement Co Ltd v Keshvanand, AIR 1998 SC 596 [LNIND 1997 SC 1634] : (1998) 1 SCC 687 [LNIND 1997 SC 1634] : 1998 Cr LJ 856.
18. CM Ibrahim v Tata Sons Ltd, 2009 Cr LJ 228 (Kar).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 12] "Public."

The word "public" includes any class of the public, or any community.

COMMENT—

This definition is inclusive and does not define the word 'public'. It only says that any class of public or any community is included within the term 'public'. A body or class of persons living in a particular locality may come within the term 'public'.^{19.}

^{19.} Harnandan Lal v Rampalak Mahto, (1938) 18 Pat 76.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 13] [Repealed]

[Definition of "Queen".] [Rep. by the A.O. 1950.]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

20. [[s 14] "Servant of Government".

The words "servant of Government" denote any officer or servant continued, appointed or employed in India by or under the authority of Government.]

20. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for section 14.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

20. [[s 14] "Servant of Government".

The words "servant of Government" denote any officer or servant continued, appointed or employed in India by or under the authority of Government.]

20. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for section 14.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 15] [Repealed]

[Definition of "British India".] [Rep. by the A.O. 1937.]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 16] [Repealed]

[Definition of "Government of India".] [Rep. by the A.O. 1937.]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

21. [s 17] "Government"

The word "Government" denotes the Central Government or the Government of a 22. [] State.]

COMMENT—

Legislature of a State cannot be comprehended in the expression 'State Government'.23.

21. Subs. by A.O. 1950, for section 17.

22. The word and letter "Part A" omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

23. RS Nayak v AR Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] : AIR 1984 SC 684 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

21. [s 17] "Government"

The word "Government" denotes the Central Government or the Government of a 22. [] State.]

COMMENT—

Legislature of a State cannot be comprehended in the expression 'State Government'. 23.

21. Subs. by A.O. 1950, for section 17.

22. The word and letter "Part A" omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

23. RS Nayak v AR Antulay, (1984) 2 SCC 183 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] : AIR 1984 SC 684 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

24. [s 18] "India."

"India" means the territory of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir.]

COMMENT—

This exclusion of the State of Jammu and Kashmir in this section is not violative of Article 1 and the First Schedule of the Constitution of India.²⁵ In fact, Fazal Ali, CJ, as he then was, held that exclusion of a territory postulates the existence of a territory itself; State of Jammu and Kashmir cannot be taken as a foreign territory.²⁶ Since the First Schedule to the Constitution of India specifically includes Jammu and Kashmir as a part of the territories of India, the exclusion of the State of Jammu and Kashmir from section 18 of the Penal Code only means that for the purposes of application of the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, that State shall not be considered as a part of India. In fact, section 1 of the Code itself makes this position abundantly clear. The State of Jammu and Kashmir has a separate Penal Code of its own. It is known as the Ranbir Penal Code, which is almost same as the Indian Penal Code.

24. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for section 18 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951). Earlier section 18 was repealed by the A.O. 1937 and was again inserted by the A.O. 1950.

25. KRK Vara Prasad v UOI, AIR 1980 AP 243 [LNIND 1980 AP 27].

26. Virender Singh v General Officer Commanding, 1974 J & K LR 101 (FB).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

24. [s 18] "India."

"India" means the territory of India excluding the State of Jammu and Kashmir.]

COMMENT—

This exclusion of the State of Jammu and Kashmir in this section is not violative of Article 1 and the First Schedule of the Constitution of India.²⁵ In fact, Fazal Ali, CJ, as he then was, held that exclusion of a territory postulates the existence of a territory itself; State of Jammu and Kashmir cannot be taken as a foreign territory.²⁶ Since the First Schedule to the Constitution of India specifically includes Jammu and Kashmir as a part of the territories of India, the exclusion of the State of Jammu and Kashmir from section 18 of the Penal Code only means that for the purposes of application of the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, that State shall not be considered as a part of India. In fact, section 1 of the Code itself makes this position abundantly clear. The State of Jammu and Kashmir has a separate Penal Code of its own. It is known as the Ranbir Penal Code, which is almost same as the Indian Penal Code.

24. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for section 18 (w.e.f. 1-4-1951). Earlier section 18 was repealed by the A.O. 1937 and was again inserted by the A.O. 1950.

25. KRK Vara Prasad v UOI, AIR 1980 AP 243 [LNIND 1980 AP 27].

26. Virender Singh v General Officer Commanding, 1974 J & K LR 101 (FB).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[[s 19] "Judge."

[s 19] The word "Judge" denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person,— who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such a judgment.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A Collector exercising jurisdiction in a suit under Act 10 of 1859, is a Judge.
- (b) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power to sentence to fine or imprisonment, with or without appeal, is a Judge.
- (c) A member of a panchayat which has power, under ²⁷ Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, to try and determine suits, is a Judge.
- (d) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power only to commit for trial to another Court, is not a Judge.

COMMENT—

Section 19 IPC, 1860 defines a 'Judge' as denoting not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give in any legal proceedings, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons empowered by law to give such a judgment. The Collector is neither a Judge as defined under section 19 nor does he act judicially, when discharging any of the functions under the Land Acquisition Act.²⁸ Regional Provident Fund Commissioner while passing an order under section 7-A of Employees' Provident Funds and Miscellaneous Provisions Act 1952 was 'Judge' within definition under section 19 of IPC, 1860.²⁹ The right to pronounce a definitive judgment is considered the sine qua non of a Court.³⁰

Illustration (d) is very important as it indicates that a Magistrate, who has power to try and determine cases, is a Court of Justice, but is not a Court of Justice when sitting in committal proceedings.

27. Rep. by the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873 (3 of 1873).

28. Surendra Kumar Bhatia v Kanhaiya Lal, AIR 2009 SC 1961 [LNIND 2009 SC 209] : (2009)12 SCC 184 [LNIND 2009 SC 209] .

29. E S Sanjeeva Rao v CBI, Mumbai, 2012 Cr LJ 4053 (Bom) : 2013 (1) RCR (Criminal) 284.

30. Brajnandan Sinha v Jyoti Narain, AIR 1956 SC 66 [LNIND 1955 SC 98] : 1956 SCJ 155 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 20] "Court of Justice."

The words "Court of Justice" denote a Judge who is empowered by law to act judicially alone, or a body of Judges which is empowered by law to act judicially as a body, when such Judge or body of Judges is acting judicially.

ILLUSTRATION

A panchayat acting under ³¹ Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, having power to try and determine suits, is a Court of Justice.

COMMENT—

The word 'court' is a generic term and embraces a Judge but the vice versa is not true. Therefore, the words 'court' and 'Judge' are frequently used interchangeably because a Judge is an essential constituent of a court since there can be no dispensation of justice without a Judge. But that is not to say that when a Judge demits office the court ceases to exist Supreme Court Legal Aid Committee v UOI.³²

³¹. Rep. by the Madras Civil Courts Act, 1873 (3 of 1873).

³². Supreme Court Legal Aid Committee v UOI, (1994) 6 SCC 731 [LNIND 1994 SC 955] : JT 1994 (6) SC 544 [LNIND 1989 SC 165] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 21] "Public servant."

The words "public servant" denote a person falling under any of the descriptions hereinafter following; namely:—

33. []

34. Second.—Every Commissioned Officer in the Military, ^{35.}[Naval or Air] Forces ^{36.}[^{37.} [] of India];

38. [Third.—Every Judge including any person empowered by law to discharge, whether by himself or as a member of any body of persons, any adjudicatory functions;]

Fourth.—Every officer of a Court of Justice ^{39.}[(including a liquidator, receiver or commissioner)] whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order in the Court, and every person specially authorized by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties;

Fifth.—Every juryman, assessor, or member of a panchayat assisting a Court of Justice or public servant;

Sixth.—Every arbitrator or other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report by any Court of Justice, or by any other competent public authority;

Seventh.—Every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement;

Eighth.—Every officer of ^{40.}[the Government] whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience;

Ninth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of ^{41.}[the Government], or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of ^{42.}[the Government], or to execute any revenue process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of ^{43.}[the Government], or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of ^{44.}[the Government], or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of ^{45.}[the Government]^{46.}[];

Tenth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property, to make any survey or assessment or to levy any rate or tax for any secular common purpose of any village, town or district, or to make, authenticate or keep any document for the ascertaining of the rights of the people of any village, town or district;

47. [Eleventh.—Every person who holds any office in virtue of which he is empowered to prepare, publish, maintain or revise an electoral roll or to conduct an election or part of an election;]

48. [Twelfth.—Every person—

- (a) in the service or pay of the Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty by the Government;
- (b) in the service or pay of a local authority, a corporation established by or under a Central, Provincial or State Act or a Government company as defined in section 617 of the Companies Act, 1956 (Act 1 of 1956).]

ILLUSTRATION

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1.—Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2.—Wherever the words "public servant" occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

49. [Explanation 3.—The word "election" denotes an election for the purpose of selecting members of any legislative, municipal or other public authority, of whatever character, the method of selection to which is by, or under, any law prescribed as by election.]

50. []

STATE AMENDMENT

Rajasthan.—In section 21, after clause twelfth, add the following clause, namely:— "Thirteenth.—Every person employed or engaged by any public body in the conduct and supervision of any examination recognised or approved under any law.

Explanation.—The The expression 'Public Body' includes—

- (a) a University, Board of Education or other body, either established by or under a Central or State Act or under the provisions of the Constitution of India or constituted by the Government; and
- (b) a local authority."

[Vide Rajasthan Act, 4 of 1993, sec. 2 (w.e.f. 11-2-1993)].

Public Servant.—A line is drawn between the great mass of the community and certain classes of persons in the service and pay of Government, or exercising various public functions, who are here included in the words "public servant." There are several offences which can only be committed by public servants and, on the other hand, public servants in the discharge of their duties have many privileges peculiar to themselves.^{51.}

The test to determine whether a person is a public servant is (1) whether he is in the service or pay of the Government and (2) whether he is entrusted with the performance of any public duty.^{52.} The definition is not exhaustive. A person may be a public servant in terms of another statute.^{53.}

Illustration.—The illustration at the end of the section relates to clause (10). The word "Commissioner" is used in the sense of a Municipal Councillor or member and not merely an officer designated as "Commissioner."^{54.}

The definition of the term "public servant" cannot be extended to the provisions of the Representation of the People Act where this Act makes reference to persons in the service of the Government.^{55.}

[s 21.1] Enlargement of concept under Prevention of Corruption Act 1988.—

Section 2(i) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1988 has enlarged the concept of public servant wider than that contained in section 21 IPC, 1860. A comparison of the definition of 'public servant' contained in section 21 of IPC, 1860 and that contained in section 2(c) of the 1988 Act would show that section 21 of IPC, 1860 did not include persons falling under sub-clause (ix), (x), (xi) and (xii) of section 2(c). Sub-clause (viii) of section 2(c) is also wider in amplitude than clause (12)(a) of section 21 of IPC, 1860.^{56.} Definition of 'public servant' is of no relevance under the PC Act 1988.^{57.}

[s 21.2] Definition not exhaustive.—

The definition under the section has been held to be not exhaustive. A person may be a public servant in terms of some other statute.^{58.}

[s 21.3] Judges [clause "Third"].—

Examining the scope of clause "third", the Supreme Court has laid down in K Veeraswami v UOI,^{59.} that this category of public servants would include judges of the High Courts and Supreme Court. The words "every judge", as used in the clause, the Court said, indicates "all judges and judges of all courts". "It is a general term... and should not be narrowly construed. It must receive comprehensive meaning. A judge of the superior court cannot ... be excluded from the definition of "public servant". It is not necessary that there should be master and servant relationship to constitute a person as a "public servant". The court noted that section 21 IPC, 1860 does not define the expression "public servant" as a concept. It enumerates only the categories of public servants. Each category is different from the other and in some of the categories there is hardly any relationship of master and servant. In the view of the Andhra Pradesh High Court the Central Government is not a competent authority for sanctioning the prosecution of a High Court Judge.^{60.}

[s 21.4] Explanation 2.—

The person who in fact discharges the duties of the office which brings him under some one of the descriptions of public servant, is for all the purposes of the Code rightfully a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold the office.^{61.} But even if a person is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, he is not a public servant unless he has a right to hold that situation, although in determining that right the legal defect, if any, has to be ignored.^{62.} A public servant under suspension does not cease to be a public servant within the meaning of this section.^{63.}

[s 21.5] CASES.—

^{64.}

The following persons are held to be Public Servants:

- (1) Member of Parliament (MP)^{65.}
- (2) Chief Minister and Ministers^{66.}
- (3) Judges of Superior Courts^{67.}
- (4) Speaker of Legislative Assembly^{68.}
- (5) Employee of a Nationalised Bank^{69.}
- (6) All Railway Servants^{70.}
- (7) Teacher in a Government school^{71.}
- (8) Chairman of Managing Committee of a Municipality^{72.}
- (9) Employees of Life Insurance Corporation^{73.}
- (10) Member of Auxiliary Air Force^{74.}
- (11) Employee of Bharat Heavy Electricals (India) Limited^{75.}
- (12) Employees of Government Company^{76.}
- (13) Officers of State Electricity Board^{77.}
- (14) An employee of a Co-operative Society which is controlled or aided by the government, is a public servant covered under section 2\(c\) of the IPC Act 1988^{78.} as also the manager for the commission of offence under section 409 of the IPC, 1860^{79.}
- (15) Secretary, Health Supervisor of Municipality^{80.}
- (16) Drug Inspector^{81.}
- (17) Any surveyor while performing his legitimate function under any of the Revenue Civil Court^{82.}
- (18) Government Pleaders^{83.}

(19) An IAS officer posted as the managing director of a State Financial Corporation⁸⁴.

(20) The sarpanch of a Gram Panchayat.⁸⁵

The following persons are not Public Servants:

(1) University Examiner⁸⁶.

(2) Elected office bearers with President and Secretary of a registered Co-operative Society.⁸⁷

(3) A Chartered Accountant who had been appointed as an Investigator by the Central Government under the Insurance Act 1938.⁸⁸

(4) Municipal Councillor⁸⁹.

(5) Laboratory Officer in Municipal Corporation⁹⁰.

(6) Member of IAS whose service placed at the disposal of Co-operative Society.⁹¹

(7) A Government Company is not a public servant though its employees are public servants Government Company.⁹²

(8) Chairperson and Standing Committee Chairman of Municipality.⁹³

(9) Leader of Opposition.⁹⁴

(10) Hospital or the Authorization Committee constituted by the Government under section 9\(4\) of the Transplantation of Human Organs Act 1994.⁹⁵

(11) Branch Manager under the Assam State Warehousing Corporation.⁹⁶

(12) Commissioner appointed by Civil Court to seize account book.⁹⁷

(13) A panel doctor under the ESI Scheme.⁹⁸

33. Clause First omitted by the A.O. 1950.

34. Clause First omitted by the A.O. 1950.

35. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Naval".

36. The original words "of the Queen while serving under the Government of India, or any Government" have successively been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948 and the A.O.1950 to read as above.

37. The words "of the Dominion" omitted by the A.O. 1950.

38. Subs. by Act 40 of 1964, section 2, for clause Third (w.e.f. 18-12-1964).

39. Ins. by Act 40 of 1964, section 2 (w.e.f. 18-12-1964).

40. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Government".

41. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Government".
42. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Government".
43. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Government".
44. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Government".
45. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Crown". Earlier the words "the Crown" were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "the word Government".
46. Certain words omitted by Act 40 of 1964, section 2 (w.e.f. 18-12-1964).
47. Ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.
48. Subs. by Act 40 of 1964, section 2, for clause Twelfth (w.e.f. 18-12-1964).
49. Ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.
50. Explanation 4 omitted by Act 40 of 1964, section 2 (w.e.f. 18-12-1964). Earlier Explanation 4 was inserted by Act 2 of 1958, section 2 (w.e.f. 12-2-1958).
51. M&M 20.
52. GA Monterio, AIR 1957 SC 13 [LNIND 1956 SC 66] : 1957 Cr LJ 1956 . See further Lakshminingsh (Dr.) v Naresh KC Jah, 1990 Cr LJ 1921 : AIR 1990 SC 1976 [LNIND 1990 SC 370] : (1990) 4 SCC 169 [LNIND 1990 SC 370] ; where a municipal officer working on deputation on a Government post (public analyst) committed an act entailing his removal and it was held that his removal would have to be effected by the Municipality and there he was not a public servant and hence, permission of the State under s 197(1) of Cr PC, 1973 was not necessary. Mohinder Singh v State of Punjab, 2001 Cr LJ 2329 (P&H), sanction is necessary only when the offence occurs in the course of the performance of official duty. For offences connected with cheating, preparing false records, misappropriation of public funds, including criminal conspiracy against a public servant, no prior sanction is necessary.
53. Naresh Kumar Madan v State of MP AIR 2008 SC 385 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] : (2007) 4 SCC 766 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] .
54. Banshilal Luhadia, AIR 1962 Raj 250 [LNIND 1962 RAJ 124] .
55. Abdul Rehman v State of Kerala, 1999 Cr LJ 4801 (Ker).
56. PV Narsimha Rao v State (CBI/SPE), AIR 1998 SC 2120 [LNIND 1998 SC 1259] : 1998 Cr LJ 2930 .
57. State of Maharashtra v Prabhakar Rao, (2002) 7 SCC 636 : JT 2002 (Supp1) SC 5.
58. Naresh Kumar Madan v State of MP, (2007) 4 SCC 766 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] : AIR 2008 SC 385 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] : (2007) 2 KLT 539 : (2007) 54 AIC 87 .
59. K. Veeraswami v Union of India, (1991) 3 SCC 655 [LNIND 1991 SC 320] : 1991 SCC (Cr) 734 : 1991 Cr LR (SC) 677 .
60. Advocate General, AP v Rachapudi Subba Rao, 1991 Cr LJ 613 AP.
61. Ramkrishna Das, (1871) 7 Beng LR 446, 448.
62. Bira Kishore, AIR 1964 Orissa 202 .
63. Dhanpal Singh, AIR 1970 Punj & Haryana 514.
64. M Karunanidhi v UOI, 1979 Cr LJ 773 : AIR 1979 SC 598 ; See also Shiv Bahadur, 1954 Cr LJ 910 : AIR 1954 SC 322 [LNIND 1954 SC 30] ; AR Antulay, (1984) Cr LJ 613 : AIR 1984; Rajendra Kumar Singh v State of MP, 1999 Cr LJ 2807 (MP).
65. PV Narasimha Rao v State (CBI/SPE), AIR 1998 SC 2120 [LNIND 1998 SC 1259] : (1998) 4 SCC 626 [LNIND 1998 SC 1259] (CB) Though another Constitution Bench in RS Nayak v AR

Antulay, AIR 1984 SC 684 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] : (1984) 2 SCC 183 [LNIND 1984 SC 43] that MLA is not a public servant within the meaning of Section 21 IPC, 1860, in view of the Narasimha Rao case (Supra) MLA and MPs are public servant within the meaning of Section 2 (i) of PC Act. See also Habibulla Khan v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 3604 ; L. K. Advani v Central Bureau of Investigation, 1997 Cr LJ 2559 (Del) : 1997 (4) Crimes 1 [LNIND 1997 DEL 319] .

66. M Karunanidhi v UOI, AIR 1979 SC 898 [LNIND 1979 SC 135] : (1979) 3 SCC 431 [LNIND 1979 SC 135] ; R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] , Minister is a Public Servant -R Balakrishna Pillai v State of Kerala, AIR 1996 SC 901 [LNIND 1995 SC 1239] : (1996) 1 SCC 478 [LNIND 1995 SC 1239] , Dattatraya Narayan Patil v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1975 SC 1685 [LNIND 1975 SC 157] : (1976) 1 SCC 11 [LNIND 1975 SC 157] ; Rajendra Kumar Singh and etc. v State of MP, 1999 Cr LJ 2807 (MP).

67. K Veeraswami v UOI, (1991) 3 SCC 655 [LNIND 1991 SC 320] : (1991) 1 SCC (Cr) 734.

68. P Nallammal v State, 1999 Cr LJ 1591 (Mad).

69. UOI v Ashok Kumar Mitra, AIR 1995 SC 1976 [LNIND 1995 SC 295] : (1995) 2 SCC 768 [LNIND 1995 SC 295] ; Mir Nagvi Askari v CBI, AIR 2010 SC 528 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] : (2009) 15 SCC 643 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] ; State (Delhi Administration) v S R Vij, 1999 Cr LJ 4762 (Del).

70. Ram Krishan v State of Delhi, AIR 1956 SC 476 [LNIND 1956 SC 157] : 1956 Cr LJ 837 , Shamrao Vishnu Parulekar v The District Magistrate, AIR 1957 SC 23 [LNIND 1956 SC 60] : 1957 Cr LJ 5 ; GA Monterio v State of Ajmer, AIR 1957 SC 13 [LNIND 1956 SC 66] : 1957 Cr LJ 1 ; Bajrang Lal v State of Rajasthan AIR 1976 SC 1008 [LNIND 1976 SC 57] : (1976) 2 SCC 217 [LNIND 1976 SC 57] . But see KN Shukla v Navnit Lal Manilal Bhatt, AIR 1967 SC 1331 [LNIND 1966 SC 310] : 1967 Cr LJ 1200 .

71. State of Ajmer v Shiv Lal, AIR 1959 SC 847 [LNIND 1959 SC 67] : 1959 Cr LJ 1127 .

72. Maharudrappa Danappa Kesarappanavar v The State of Mysore, AIR 1961 SC 785 [LNIND 1961 SC 60] : 1961 Cr LJ 857 .

73. State through Central Bureau of Investigation v D P Dogra, AIR 1986 SC 312 : (1985) 4 SCC 319 .

74. State (SPE, Hyderabad) v Air Commodore Kailash Chand, AIR 1980 SC 522 [LNIND 1979 SC 504] : (1980) 1 SCC 667 [LNIND 1979 SC 504] .

75. State of MP v M v Narasimhan, AIR 1975 SC 1835 [LNIND 1975 SC 212] : (1975) 2 SCC 377 [LNIND 1975 SC 212] .

76. National Small Industries Corporation Ltd v State AIR 2009 SC 1284 [LNIND 2008 SC 2243] : (2009) 1 SCC 407 [LNIND 2008 SC 2243] .

77. Bihar State Electricity Board v Nand Kishore Tamakhuwala, AIR 1986 SC 1653 [LNIND 1986 SC 82] : (1986) 2 SCC 414 [LNIND 1986 SC 82] , Naresh Kumar Madan v State of MP AIR 2008 SC 385 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] : (2007) 4 SCC 766 [LNIND 2007 SC 452] .

78. Govt. of AP v P Venken Reddy AIR 2002 SC 3346 : (2002) 7 SCC 631 .

79. Haridas Mondal v State of WB, 2016 Cr LJ 4335 : 2016 (4) Crimes 530 (Cal).

80. Chairperson, Kanhangad Municipality v State of Kerala, 2012 Cr LJ 4366 (Ker); G S K Janardhana Rao v Guntupalli Guru Prasad, 2000 Cr LJ 2927 (A.P) - officers of Municipal Corporation.

81. Laxmi Medical Distributors v State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 1601 (A.P).

82. Ram Avtar Sah v State of Bihar, 2002 Cr LJ 3899 (Pat).

83. Appadurai v State, Rep. By The Station House Officer, Cid Branch, Pondicherry 2001 Cr LJ 3129 (Mad).

84. Girish Chandra Patra v Pinakee Enterprises Ltd, 1989 Cr LJ 527 (Ori).

85. Sarat Chandra Dehury v Sankirtan Behera, 1989 Cr LJ (NOC) 162 Orissa; Sukhdev Singh v State of Punjab, 1988 Cr LJ 265 P&H.

86. Dilaver Babu Khurana v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 564 [LNIND 2002 SC 1739] : (2002) 2 SCC 135 [LNIND 2002 SC 1739] ; State of Gujarat v Manshanker Prabhashanker Dwivedi, AIR 1973 SC 330 [LNIND 1972 SC 257] : (1972) 2 SCC 392 [LNIND 1972 SC 257] .
87. Govt. of AP v P Venken Reddy, AIR 2002 SC 3346 : (2002) 7 SCC 631 : Rabindra Nath Bera v State Of WB, 2012 Cr LJ 913 (Cal); Haladhar Sasml v State Of WB, 2012 Cr LJ 1726 (CAL) A 'public servant' within the meaning of Maharashtra Co-operative Societies Act, 1960 is not a public servant under Section 21 of IPC, 1860; State of Maharashtra v Laljit Rajshi Shah, AIR 2000 SC 937 [LNIND 2000 SC 387] : (2000) 2 SCC 699 [LNIND 2000 SC 387] .
88. Ram Krishna Dalmia v Delhi Administration, (1963 (1) SCR 253 [LNIND 1962 SC 146] : AIR 1962 SC 1821 [LNIND 1962 SC 146] ; Insurance surveyer is not public servant- 1988 Cr LJ 311 Delhi).
89. State of TN v T Thulasingham, AIR 1995 SC 1314 [LNIND 1994 SC 1256] : (1994) Supp 2 SCC 405; Ramesh Balkrishna Kulkarni v State of Maharashtra, 1985 (3) SCC 606 [LNIND 1985 SC 235] : AIR 1985 SC 1655 [LNIND 1985 SC 235] .
90. Lakshmansingh Himatsingh Vaghela v Naresh Kumar Chandrashanker Jha, AIR 1990 SC 1976 [LNIND 1990 SC 370] : (1990) 4 SCC 169 [LNIND 1990 SC 370] .
91. SS Dhanoa v Municipal Corporation Delhi, AIR 1981 SC 1395 [LNIND 1981 SC 282] : (1981) 3 SCC 431 [LNIND 1981 SC 282] .
92. National Small Industries Corporation Ltd v State, AIR 2009 SC 1284 [LNIND 2008 SC 2243] : (2009) 1 SCC 407 [LNIND 2008 SC 2243] .
93. Chairperson, Kanhangad Municipality v State of Kerala, 2012 Cr LJ 4366 (Ker).
94. Sushil Modi v Mohan Guruswamy, 2008 Cr LJ 541 (Del).
95. Santosh Hospitals Private Ltd Chennai v State Human Rights Commission, TN AIR 2005 Mad. 348 [LNIND 2005 MAD 935] .
96. Ghulam Rabbani v State of Assam, 2001 Cr LJ 2331 : 2002 (1) Crimes 132 [LNIND 2001 GAU 403] (Gau).
97. Padam Sen v State of UP AIR 1961 SC 218 [LNIND 1960 SC 221] : 1961 Cr LJ 322 .
98. State of Maharashtra v Dr. Rustom Franrose Hakim, 2000 Cr LJ 3401 (Bom).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 22] "Movable property."

The words "movable property" are intended to include corporeal property¹ of every description, except land and things attached to the earth² or permanently fastened to anything which is attached to the earth.

COMMENT—

This definition is restricted to corporeal property; it excludes all choices in action. The definition of "movable property" in the section is not exhaustive.⁹⁹ The definition of "movable property" given in the Indian Penal Code is basically meant for the provisions contained in the Indian Penal Code itself (section 125 Cr PC, 1973).¹⁰⁰

1. 'Corporeal property' is property which may be perceived by the senses, in contradistinction to incorporeal rights, which are not so perceivable, as obligations of all kinds. Thus, salt produced on a swamp,¹⁰¹ and papers forming part of the record of a case,¹⁰² are movable property within the meaning of this section. Even if an assessment order is not 'property' in the hands of the Income-tax Officer, it is 'property' in the hands of the assessee (section 420 IPC, 1860).¹⁰³

2. 'Land and things attached to the earth'.—This section does not exempt "earth and things attached to the earth", but "land and things attached to the earth"; "land" and "earth" are not synonymous terms, and there is a great distinction between "the earth", and "earth". By severance, things that are immovable become movable; and it is perfectly correct to call those things attached which can be severed; and undoubtedly it is possible to sever earth from the earth and attach it again thereto. Earth, that is soil, and all the component parts of the soil, inclusive of stones and minerals, when severed from the earth or land to which it was attached, are movable property capable of being the subject of theft.¹⁰⁴ Any part of "the earth", whether it is stones or sand or clay or any other component, when severed from "the earth", is movable property.¹⁰⁵ Standing crop, so long as it is attached to the earth is not movable property as defined in the Code, but the moment it is severed from the earth its character is changed and it can become the subject of theft.¹⁰⁶

Fish in any water are corporeal property and they become subject of theft as soon as they are separated from the waters, dead or alive, and are moved.¹⁰⁷

99. RK Dalmia v Delhi Administration, AIR 1962 SC 1821 [LNIND 1962 SC 146] : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 805 .
100. Bhagwat Baburao Gaikwad v Baburao Bhaiyya Gaikwad, 1993 Cr LJ 2393 (Bom).
101. Tamma Ghantaya, (1881) 4 Mad 228.
102. Ramaswami Aiyer v Vaithiling Mudali, (1882) 1 Weir 28.
103. Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40 [LNIND 1968 SC 143] : 1969 Cr LJ 271 .
104. Shivram, (1891) 15 Bom 702.
105. Suri Venkatappayya Sastri v Madula Venkanna, (1904) 27 Mad 531, 535 (FB), overruling Kotayya, (1887) 10 Mad 255. It has been said that the words "corporeal property of every description" were not supposed to apply for all purposes. The matter before the court was that of attachment of salary for payment of maintenance.
106. Kunhayu v State, 1965 KLT 66 : 1965 KLJ 51 .
107. State of Rajasthan v Pooran Singh, 1977 Cr LJ 1055 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 23] "Wrongful gain."

"Wrongful gain" is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled.

"Wrongful loss."

"Wrongful loss" is the loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled.

Gaining wrongfully, Losing wrongfully

A person is said to gain wrongfully when such person retains wrongfully, as well as when such person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when such person is wrongfully kept out of any property,¹ as well as when such person is wrongfully deprived of property.

COMMENT—

The word 'wrongful' means prejudicially affecting a party in some legal right. For either wrongful loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner, or the owner must be wrongfully kept out of it. Thus, where a pledgee used a turban that was pledged, it was held that the deterioration of the turban by use was not 'wrongful loss' of property to the owner, and the wrongful beneficial use of it by the pledgee was not a 'wrongful gain' to him.¹⁰⁸ The gain or loss contemplated need not be a total acquisition or a total deprivation but it is enough if it is a temporary retention of property by the person wrongfully gaining or a temporary "keeping out" of property from the person legally entitled.¹⁰⁹ Forcible and illegal seizure of bullocks of a widow in satisfaction of a debt due to the accused by her deceased husband was held to be a 'wrongful loss'.¹¹⁰ Where a person, who purchased rice from a famine relief officer, at a certain rate on condition that he should sell it at a pound the rupee less, did not sell it at the rate agreed upon, but at four pounds the rupee less, it was held that no wrongful gain or wrongful loss had been caused to anyone within the meaning of this section. The rice having been sold to the accused, and he having paid for it, it was not unlawful for him to sell it again at such price as he thought fit.¹¹¹ Where the accused removed jute kept in a pond of the complainant for wetting and requested the complainant to take it away as the accused bona fide claimed the ownership of the pond, it was held that no wrongful loss was caused to the complainant.¹¹²

The words "gaining wrongfully," or "losing wrongfully" would cover cases of wrongful detention of property in the one case and wrongfully being kept out of property in the other.^{113.}

1. 'Wrongfully kept out of any property'.—When the owner is kept out of possession of his property with the object of depriving him of the benefit arising from the possession even temporarily, the case will come within the definition. If a creditor by force or otherwise takes the goods of his debtor out of his possession against his will in order to put pressure on him to compel him to discharge his debt he will be guilty of theft by causing wrongful loss to the debtor.^{114.} The loss must be caused wrongfully. Thus, whose municipal officers demolished an unauthorised construction as the complainant refused to remove the structure in spite of notice, they could not be held guilty of committing an offence of mischief within the meaning of section 425, IPC, 1860, for there was no intention to cause wrongful loss to the complainant as the demolition was done lawfully in exercise of powers under sections 179 and 189 of the Maharashtra Municipalities Act.^{115.}

Fees payable to a college for attending lectures are "property" within the meaning of this section.^{116.}

^{108.} (1866) 3 MHC (Appx.) 6.

^{109.} KN Mehra v State of Rajasthan, [AIR 1957 SC 369 \[LNIND 1957 SC 14\]](#) : 1957 Cr LJ 552 .

^{110.} Preonath Banerjee, (1866) 5 WR (Cr) 68.

^{111.} Lal Mohomed, (1874) 22 WR (Cr) 82.

^{112.} Paltu Goswami v Ram Kumar, AIR 1960 Tripura 40 .

^{113.} Krishan Kumar, (1960) 1 SCR 452 [LNIND 1959 SC 135] : 1959 Cr LJ 1508 : AIR 1960 SC 1390 .

^{114.} Sri Churn Chungo, (1895) 22 Cal 1017 , FB; Ganpat Krishnaji, (1930) 32 Bom LR 351 .

^{115.} Shriram v Thakurdas, 1978 Cr LJ 715 (Bom).

^{116.} Soshi Bhushan, (1893) 15 All 210 , 216.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 24] "Dishonestly".

Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "dishonestly".

COMMENT—

From this definition it will appear that the term 'dishonestly' is not used in the Code in its popular significance. Unless there is wrongful gain to one person, or wrongful loss to another, an act would not be 'dishonest'. Wrongful gain includes wrongful retention and wrongful loss includes being kept out of the property as well as being wrongfully deprived of property.¹¹⁷ An act done with the intention to cause 'wrongful gain' can be said to be dishonest.¹¹⁸ Deceit is not an ingredient of the definition of the word "dishonestly". "Dishonestly" involves a pecuniary or economic gain or loss.¹¹⁹ Thus, "dishonestly" means an intention to cause either wrongful gain or wrongful loss. So where municipal officers demolished and removed an unauthorised structure lawfully by virtue of powers given to them under the Municipal Act, it could not be said that they committed the offence of theft under section 380, IPC, 1860, as their act was not committed dishonestly within the meaning of section 24 read with section 23, IPC, 1860. And since "dishonesty" is an essential ingredient of the offence of theft, they could not be charged with that offence.¹²⁰ A mere erroneous belief and persistence in a wrong or perverse opinion cannot be said to be offence tainted with a dishonest or fraudulent intent.¹²¹

[s 24.1] Cheating.—

Two main ingredients of section 420 IPC, 1860 are dishonest and fraudulent intention.¹²² For the purpose of establishing the offence of cheating, the complainant is required to show that the accused had fraudulent or dishonest intention at the time of making promise or representation.¹²³

[s 24.2] Breach of Trust.—

The element of 'dishonest intention' is an essential element to constitute the offence of Criminal Breach of Trust.¹²⁴

[s 24.3] Hire-purchase.—

The element of 'dishonest intention' which is an essential element to constitute the offence of theft cannot be attributed to a person exercising his right under an agreement entered into between the parties as he may not have an intention of causing wrongful gain or to cause wrongful loss to the hirer.¹²⁵.

117. Krishan Kumar v UOI, 1959 Cr LJ 1508 : AIR 1959 SC 1390 [LNIND 1959 SC 135] .

118. Venkatakrishnan v CBI, AIR 2010 SC 1812 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] : (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .

119. Dr. Vimala, AIR 1963 SC 1572 [LNIND 1962 SC 397] : (1963) 2 Cr LJ 434 .

120. Shriram v Thakurdas, 1978 Cr LJ 715 (Bom). See also Narendra Pratap Narain Singh v State of UP, AIR 1991 SC 1394 [LNIND 1991 SC 186] : 1991 Cr LJ 1816 ; N Vaghul v State of Maharashtra, 1987 Cr LJ 385 (Bom).

121. N Vaghul v State of Maharashtra, 1987 Cr LJ 385 (Bom).

122. Annamalai v State of Karnataka, (2010) 8 SCC 524 [LNIND 2010 SC 745] : 2011 Cr LJ 692 .

123. B Suresh Yadav v Sharifa Bee, AIR 2008 SC 210 [LNIND 2007 SC 1238] : (2007) 13 SCC 107 [LNIND 2007 SC 1238] ; Indian Oil Corporation v NEPC India Ltd, JT 2006 (6) SC 474 [LNIND 2006 SC 537]) : (2006) 6 SCC 736 [LNIND 2006 SC 537] .

124. Venkatakrishnan v CBI, AIR 2010 SC 1812 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] : (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .

125. Charanjit Singh Chadha v Sudhir Mehra, AIR 2001 SC 3721 [LNIND 2001 SC 2906] : (2001) 7 SCC 417 [LNIND 2001 SC 2906] ; Sardar Trilok Singh v Satya Deo Tripathi, (1979) 4 SCC 396 : AIR 1979 SC 850 ; KA Mathai v Kora Bibbikutty, (1996) 7 SCC 212 : (1996) 1 SCC (Cr) 281.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 25] "Fraudulently".

A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud¹ but not otherwise.

COMMENT—

The intention with which an act is done is very important in determining whether the act is done 'dishonestly' or 'fraudulently'.

1. 'Intent to defraud'.—The terms 'fraud' and 'defraud' are not defined in the Penal Code. The word 'defraud' is of double meaning in the sense that it either may or may not imply deprivation, and, as it is not defined, its meaning must be sought by a consideration of the context in which the word 'fraudulently' is found.^{126.}

Fraud is an act of deliberate deception with a design to secure something, which is otherwise not due. Fraud and deception are synonymous.^{127.}

To 'defraud' or do something fraudulently is not by itself made an offence under the Penal Code, but various acts when done fraudulently (or fraudulently and dishonestly) are made offences. These include:

- (i) Fraudulent removal or concealment of property (sections 206, 421, 424)
- (ii) Fraudulent claim to property to prevent seizure (section 207).
- (iii) Fraudulent suffering or obtaining a decree (sections 208 and 210)
- (iv) Fraudulent possession/delivery of counterfeit coin (sections 239, 240, 242 and 243).
- (v) Fraudulent alteration/diminishing weight of coin (sections 246–253)
- (vi) Fraudulent acts relating to stamps (sections 261–261)
- (vii) Fraudulent use of false instruments/weight/measure (sections 264–266)
- (viii) Cheating (sections 415–420)
- (ix) Fraudulent prevention of debt being available to creditors (section 422).
- (x) Fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement of consideration (section 423).
- (xi) Forgery making or executing a false document (sections 463–471 and 474)

(xii) Fraudulent cancellation/destruction of valuable security, etc. (section 477)

(xiii) Fraudulently going through marriage ceremony (section 496).

It follows therefore, that by merely alleging or showing that a person acted fraudulently, it cannot be assumed that he committed an offence punishable under the Code or any other law, unless that fraudulent act is specified to be an offence under the Code or other law.^{128.}

The expression 'defraud' involves two elements, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived. The injury may even comprise a non-economic or non-pecuniary loss. Even in those rare cases where the benefit to the deceiver does not cause corresponding loss to the deceived, the second condition is satisfied.^{129.} The expression "intent to deceive" is different from the expression "intent to defraud".^{130.} "Intent to defraud" is established only when the deception has as its aim some advantage or the likelihood of advantage to the person who causes the deceit or some kind of injury or the possibility of injury to another.^{131.} Thus, where an expert deposing before a court as a defence witness was asked to produce his credentials before the court and it appeared from the documents produced that they were not genuine, it was held that as he acted under the orders of the court and not voluntarily, it could not be said that his intention was to cause any one to act to his disadvantage. In the circumstances, he did not act with "intent to defraud". He was, therefore, held liable under sections 193 and 196 but not under sections 465 and 471, IPC, 1860.^{132.}

[s 25.1] 'Fraudulently'; 'dishonestly'.—

According to the Supreme Court "the word "defraud" includes an element of deceit. Deceit is not an ingredient of the definition of the word "dishonestly" while it is an important ingredient of the definition of the word "fraudulently". The former involves a pecuniary or economic gain or loss while the latter by construction excludes that element. Further, the juxtaposition of the two expressions "dishonestly" and "fraudulently" used in the various sections of the Code indicate their close affinity and therefore, the definition of one may give colour to the other. To illustrate, in the definition of "dishonestly", wrongful gain or wrongful loss is the necessary ingredient. Both need not exist, one would be enough. So too, if the expression "fraudulently" were to be held to involve the element of injury to the person or persons deceived, it would be reasonable to assume that the injury should be something other than pecuniary or economic loss. Though almost always an advantage to one causes loss to another and vice versa, it need not necessarily be so."^{133.}

Where the accused, after the execution and registration of a document, which was not required by law to be attested, added his name to the document as an attesting witness, it was held that his act was neither fraudulent nor dishonest and the accused was, therefore, not guilty of forgery.^{134.} A person who is not a member of Scheduled Caste or Scheduled Tribes obtains a false certificate with a view to gain undue advantage to which he or she was not otherwise entitled to would amount to commission of fraud^{135.} Suppression of a material document would also amount to a fraud on the court.^{136.}

126. Abbas Ali, supra.
127. Meghmala v G Narasimha Reddy, 2010 (8) SCC 383 [LNIND 2010 SC 761] ; Inderjit Singh Grewal v State of Punjab, (2011) 12 SCC 588 [LNIND 2011 SC 801] : (2011) 10 SCR 557 [LNIND 2011 SC 801] : 2012 Cr LJ 309 (SC).
128. Mohd. Ibrahim v State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC 751 [LNIND 2009 SC 1774] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 929.
129. Dr. Vimala, AIR 1963 SC 1572 [LNIND 1962 SC 397] : (1963) 2 Cr LJ 434 ; State of UP v Ranjit Singh, AIR 1999 SC 1201 : 1999 (2) SCC 617 .
130. S Dutt v State of UP, 1966 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1960 SC 523 .
131. Re: BV Padmanabha Rao, 1970 Cr LJ 1502 (Mysore).
132. S Dutt, Supra.
133. Dr. Vimla, AIR 1963 SC 1572 [LNIND 1962 SC 397] : (1963) 2 Cr LJ 434 .
134. Surendra Nath Ghosh, (1910) 14 CWN 1076 . See also TR Arya v State of Punjab, 1987 Cr LJ 222 (P&H); Pramod Malhotra v UOI, (2004) 3 SCC 415 [LNIND 2004 SC 1543] : AIR 2004 SC 3338 [LNIND 2004 SC 1543] : (2004) 111 DLT 605 .
135. Lilly Kutty v Scrutiny Committee, AIR 2005 SC 4313 [LNIND 2005 SC 989] : (2005) Ibrahim v State of Bihar, (2009) 8 SCC751 : (2009) 3 SCC 8 SCC 283 Also see- Bhaurao Dagdu Paralkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 3330 : (2005) 7 SCC 605 [LNIND 2005 SC 624] .
136. Gowrishankar v Joshi Amba Shankar Family Trust, (1996 (3) SCC 310) [LNIND 1996 SC 447] For meaning of fraud See :Ram Chandra Singh v Savitri Devi, (2003 (8) SCC 319) Roshan Deen v Preeti Lal, (2002 (1) SCC100) Ram Preeti Yadav v UP Board of High School and Intermediate Education, (2003 (8) SCC 311) [LNIND 2003 SC 741] ,Ashok Leyland Ltd v State of TN, (2004 (3) SCC 1) [LNIND 2004 SC 1556] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 26] "Reason to believe."

A person is said to have "reason to believe" a thing, if he has sufficient cause to believe that thing but not otherwise.

COMMENT—

"Reason to believe" is another facet of the state of mind. It is not the same thing as "suspicion" or "doubt" and mere seeing also cannot be equated to believing. It is a higher level of state of mind. It means that a person must have reason to believe if the circumstances are such that a reasonable man would, by probable reasoning, conclude or infer regarding the nature of the thing concerned.¹³⁷ The word "believe" is a very much stronger word than "suspect" and that it involves the necessity of showing that the circumstances were such that a reasonable man must have felt convinced in his mind that the note with which he was dealing was a forged one and that it was not sufficient to show that the accused was careless or he had reason to suspect or that he did not make sufficient enquiry to ascertain the fact.¹³⁸ A person can be supposed to know something where there is a direct appeal to his senses. Suspicion or doubt cannot be raised to the level of "reason to believe."¹³⁹ "Reason to believe" in section 42 of NDPS Act is a question of fact and depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case.¹⁴⁰

¹³⁷. Joti Parshad v State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 1167 : 1993 Cr LJ 413 .

¹³⁸. Hamid Ali v State, 1961 (2) Cr LJ 801 .

¹³⁹. Prabha Malhotra v State, 2000 Cr LJ 549 (All), the Court was examining the conduct of doctors in reference to a patient and found no departure from the normal medical practices.

¹⁴⁰. State of Punjab v Balbir Singh, AIR 1994 SC 1872 [LNIND 1994 SC 283] : (1994) 3 SCC 299 [LNIND 1994 SC 283] ; Noor Aga v State of Punjab, (2008) 16 SCC 417 [LNIND 2008 SC 1363] : JT 2008 (7) SC 409 [LNIND 2008 SC 1363] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 27] Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant.

When property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant, on account of that person, it is in that person's possession within the meaning of this Code.

Explanation.*— A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this section.

COMMENT—

Under this section property in the possession of a person's wife, clerk, or servant, is deemed to be in that person's possession. The possession must be conscious and intelligent possession and not merely the physical presence of the accused near the object.^{141.}

Corporeal property is in a person's possession when he has such power over it that he can exclude others from it, and intends to exercise, if necessary, that power on behalf of himself or of some person for whom he is a trustee.

A man's goods are in his possession not only while they are in his house or on his premises, but also when they are in a place where he may usually send them (as when horses and cattle feed on common land), or in a place where they may be lawfully deposited by him, e.g., when he buries money or ornaments in his own land, or puts them in any other secret place of deposit.

1. 'Wife'.—A permanent mistress may be regarded as a 'wife'. When a man furnishes a house for his mistress' occupation, he may reasonably be presumed to be in possession of all articles therein which can reasonably be inferred to belong to him or to be in possession of his mistress on his behalf. But the inference must be inapplicable to articles of which the mistress is in possession illegally or contrary to the provisions of law, especially when the article in question is such that he might well remain in ignorance that it was in his mistress' possession.^{142.}

Under this section the possession of the wife or servant must be shown to be on account of the accused otherwise he cannot be held liable for possession by his wife or servant of any incriminatory thing even in his own house. In other words, it must be shown that the accused was in conscious possession of the thing in question through his wife or servant. Moreover, it must also be shown that the possession of the incriminatory thing amounted to an offence under the Indian Penal Code. Thus, possession of illicit liquor or an unlicensed pistol by the wife of the accused in his house would not make him liable for an offence under the Prohibition Act or the Arms Act. The mere fact that the accused was the head of the family would not go to show that the accused must have been in conscious possession of the incriminatory thing.¹⁴³

141. Wahib Basha, AIR 1961 Mad 162 [LNIND 1960 MAD 38] .

142. Banwari Lal, (1913) PR No. 20 of 1914; see also Narendra Nath Majumdar, AIR 1951 Cal 140 [LNIND 1951 CAL 14] ; Dharam Singh, 1961 Cr LJ 152 (Pun) where the wife alone was held responsible as she produced the key.

143. Chela Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1984 Cr LJ 17 .1143 (Raj); Narendra Nath Majumdar, AIR 1951 Cal 140 [LNIND 1951 CAL 14] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 28] "Counterfeit".

A person is said to "counterfeit" who causes one thing to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

^{144.} [Explanation 1.—It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.

Explanation 2.—When a person causes one thing to resemble another thing, and the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the person so causing the one thing to resemble the other thing intended by means of that resemblance to practise deception or knew it to be likely that deception would thereby be practised.]

COMMENT—

The aforesaid definition states that imitation is not required to be exact. It also says that it is not necessary that counterfeit note should be made with primary intention of its being looked as genuine. It is sufficient if resemblance to genuine currency note is so caused that it is capable to being passed as such.^{145.} In order to apply section 28, what the Court has to see is whether one thing is made to resemble another thing and if that is so and if the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived by it, there will be a presumption of the necessary intention or knowledge to make the thing counterfeit, unless the contrary is proved. The difference between the counterfeit and the original is not therefore, limited to a difference existing only by reason of faulty reproduction.^{146.} The main ingredients of counterfeiting as laid down in section 28, IPC, 1860, are:

- (i) causing one thing to resemble another thing,
- (ii) intending by means of such resemblance to practice deception, or
- (iii) knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

There can be counterfeiting even though the imitation is not exact and there are differences in detail between the original and the imitation so long as the resemblance is so close that deception may thereby be practised. And if the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby, it shall be presumed until the contrary is proved that the person causing one thing to resemble another thing was intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception or knew it to be likely that deception would thereby be practised.^{147.}

The word 'counterfeit' occurs in offences relating to coin provided in Chapter XII and offences relating to property marks and currency notes in Chapter XVIII.

If coins are made to resemble genuine coins and the intention of the makers is merely to use them in order to foist a false case upon their enemies, those coins do not come within the definition of counterfeit coins.¹⁴⁸ The prosecution must establish that the coins manufactured resemble the original. It must also establish that there is an intention to deceive, or the knowledge that deception would be caused by such resemblance.¹⁴⁹

[s 28.1] Foreign Currency.—

The Supreme Court has observed that the word "counterfeit" has been defined in this provision in very wide terms and the same has been further supplemented by the Explanation which draws an adverse inference against the maker of the counterfeit matter. There being no restriction as to the subject-matter of the offence, quite obviously the offence of imitating a foreign currency would be within the scope of the expression.¹⁵⁰

¹⁴⁴. Subs. by Act 1 of 1889, section 9, for Explanation.

¹⁴⁵. Narayan Maruti Waghmode v State of Maharashtra, 2011 Cr LJ 3318 (Bom).

¹⁴⁶. Liyakat Ali v State of Rajasthan 2010 Cr LJ 2450 (Raj); Golo Mandla Ram Rao v State of Jharkhand, > 2003 Cr LJ 1738 (Jha); Local Government v Seth Motilal Jain, (1938) Nag 192.

¹⁴⁷. State of UP v HM Ismail, 1960 Cr LJ 1017 : AIR 1960 SC 669 [LNIND 1960 SC 29] ; K Hasim v State of TN, 2005 Cr LJ 143 : AIR 2005 SC 128 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] : (2005) 1 SCC 237 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] , exact reproduction is not necessary.

¹⁴⁸. Velayudham, (1938) Mad 80.

¹⁴⁹. Shahid Sultan Khan v State of Maharashtra, 2007 Cr LJ 568 (Bom).

¹⁵⁰. State of Kerala v Mathai Verghese, (1986) 4 SCC 746 [LNIND 1986 SC 461] : AIR 1987 SC 33 [LNIND 1986 SC 461] : 1987 Cr LJ 308 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 29] "Document."

The word "document" denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures, or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanation 1.—It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

ILLUSTRATIONS

A writing expressing the terms of a contract, which may be used as evidence of the contract, is a document.

A cheque upon a banker is a document. A power-of-attorney is a document.

A map or plan which is intended to be used or which may be used as evidence, is a document. A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2.—Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures or marks as explained by mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures or marks within the meaning of this section, although the same may not be actually expressed.

ILLUSTRATION

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by mercantile usage, is that the bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words "pay to the holder" or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

COMMENT—

An assessment order is certainly a 'document', under section 29, IPC, 1860.¹⁵¹ An agreement in writing, which purported to be entered into between five persons, was signed by only two of them. It was held that it was a 'document' within the meaning of this section though it was not signed by all the parties thereto.¹⁵² Letters or marks imprinted on trees and intended to be used as evidence that the trees had been passed for removal by the Ranger of a forest are documents.¹⁵³ Currency notes would be included in the definition of "documents."¹⁵⁴ A charge ticket for overseas calls which a telephone operator has to prepare for accounting purposes is a document.¹⁵⁵

151. Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v State Of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40 [LNIND 1968 SC 143] : 1969 Cr LJ 271 (SC).

152. Ramaswami Ayyar v State, (1917) 41 Mad 589. Boraiah v State, 2003 Cr LJ 1031 (Kant), post mortem report which was marked without objection was allowed to be read in evidence without its author being produced.

153. Krishtappa, (1925) 27 Bom LR 599 .The definition includes anything done by pen, by engraving, by printing or otherwise, whereby, it is made on paper, parchment, wood or other substance. Similar definitions of the word 'document' are found in Section 3, Evidence Act, and also in Section 3 (16), General Clauses Act. L K Siddappa v Lalithamma 1954 Cr LJ 1235 (Mys).

154. Shyama Charan, AIR 1962 Tripura 50 .

155. RV Sharma, (1990) 2 All ER 602 (CA).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

156. [s 29A] "Electronic record."

The words "electronic record" shall have the meaning assigned to them in clause (t) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Information Technology Act, 2000.]

COMMENT—

This section has been inserted by the Information Technology Act 2000 (Act No. 21 of 2000), which came into force on 17 October, 2000. With the on-going electronic and communicational developments, electronic commerce requires the use of electronic record. Section 29A simply refers to the definition of 'electronic record' as the meaning assigned to these words in clause (t) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Information Technology Act 2000. It reads thus;

"(t) "electronic record" means data, record or data generated, image or sound stored, received or sent in an electronic form or micro film or computer generated microfiche;"

While giving meaning to the words "electronic record" and its definition under section 29A one has to resort to the meaning of the words "computer" and "data" as given in sections 2(1)(i) and 2(1)(o) of the Information Technology Act 2000. The words "electronic form" used in the definition of electronic record have further been defined in section 2\(1\)\(r\) of the Information Technology Act, which reads thus,

"2(1)(r) "electronic form" with reference to informations, means any information generated, sent, received or stored in media, magnetic, optical, computer memory, micro film, computer generated microfiche or similar device."

156. Ins. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

156. [s 29A] "Electronic record."

The words "electronic record" shall have the meaning assigned to them in clause (t) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Information Technology Act, 2000.]

COMMENT—

This section has been inserted by the Information Technology Act 2000 (Act No. 21 of 2000), which came into force on 17 October, 2000. With the on-going electronic and communicational developments, electronic commerce requires the use of electronic record. Section 29A simply refers to the definition of 'electronic record' as the meaning assigned to these words in clause (t) of sub-section (1) of section 2 of the Information Technology Act 2000. It reads thus;

"(t) "electronic record" means data, record or data generated, image or sound stored, received or sent in an electronic form or micro film or computer generated microfiche;"

While giving meaning to the words "electronic record" and its definition under section 29A one has to resort to the meaning of the words "computer" and "data" as given in sections 2(1)(i) and 2(1)(o) of the Information Technology Act 2000. The words "electronic form" used in the definition of electronic record have further been defined in section 2\(1\)\(r\) of the Information Technology Act, which reads thus,

"2(1)(r) "electronic form" with reference to informations, means any information generated, sent, received or stored in media, magnetic, optical, computer memory, micro film, computer generated microfiche or similar device."

156. Ins. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 30] "Valuable security".

The words "valuable security" denote a document which is, or purports to be, ¹ a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished or released, or where by any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

ILLUSTRATION

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is transfer the right to the bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a "valuable security".

COMMENT—

The words "valuable security" also occurs in sections 329–331, 347, 348, 420, 467 and 471. Account books containing entries not signed by a party are not "valuable security."¹⁵⁷ A copy of a valuable security is not a valuable security.¹⁵⁸ An 'order of assessment' is a 'valuable security'.¹⁵⁹

1. 'Which is, or purports to be'.—The use of the words "which is, or purports to be" indicates that a document which, upon certain evidence being given, may be held to be invalid, but on the face of it creates, or purports to create, a right in immoveable property, although a decree could not be passed upon the document, comes within the purview of this section.¹⁶⁰ The words "purports to be" are wide enough to include a document which is not in conformity with the provisions of the Registration Act. Such a document though not otherwise receivable in evidence would still be receivable in evidence for the purpose of the Indian Penal Code.¹⁶¹ However, certificates which the accused had forged in order to get admission in a college could not be described as "valuable security" and as such their conviction under section 471 read with section 467 had to be changed to one under section 471 read with section 465, IPC, 1860.¹⁶² A lottery ticket is a valuable security.¹⁶³

¹⁵⁷. Hari Prasad v State, (1955) 1 All 749 ; Moosa v State of Kerala, AIR 1963 Ker. 68 .

¹⁵⁸. Gobinda Prasad v State, AIR 1962 Cal 174 [LNIND 1961 CAL 76] .

159. Ishwarlal Girdharilal Parekh v State Of Maharashtra, AIR 1969 SC 40 [LNIND 1968 SC 143] : 1969 Cr LJ 271 (SC).
160. Ram Harakh Pathak, (1925) 48 All 140 .
161. Kalimuddin v State, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 261 (Cal).
162. BK Patil v State of Maharashtra, 1980 Cr LJ 1312 : AIR 1981 SC 80 ; Noor Mohamad v State of Maharashtra, 1980 Cr LJ 1345 AIR 1981 SC 297 ;
163. Farzeen Sulthana v Government of Kerala, 2012 (1) KLT 309 ; Chacko v State of Kerala, 1970 KLT358; relied on Central Government of India v Krishnaji Parvetesh Kulkarni, AIR 2006 SC 1744 [LNIND 2006 SC 253] : (2006) 4 SCC 275 [LNIND 2006 SC 253] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 31] "A will".

The words "a will" denote any testamentary document.

COMMENT—

'Will' is the legal declaration of the intention of a testator with respect to his property which he desires to be carried into effect after his death.^{164.}

^{164.} The Indian Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), section 2(h).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 32] Words referring to acts include illegal omissions.

In every part of this Code, except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts ¹ done extend also to illegal omissions. ²

COMMENT—

This section puts an illegal omission on the same footing as a positive act.

1. 'Acts'.—An 'act' generally means something voluntarily done by a person. 'Act' is a determination of the will, producing an effect in the sensible world. This word includes writing and speaking, or, in short, any external manifestation. In the Code it is not confined to its ordinary meaning of positive conduct of doing something, but includes also illegal omissions.

2. 'Omissions'.—Liability for an omission requires a legal duty to act; a moral duty to act is not sufficient. A duty arises from the former when an offence is defined in terms of omission. This is the situation where the legislature has made it an offence. A legal duty to act may also be created by a provision of either criminal or civil separate from the offence charged. Since there is no moral difference between (i) a positive act and (ii) an omission when a duty is established, it is to be borne in mind that cases of omissions, the liability should be exceptional and needs to be adequately justified in each instance. Secondly, when it is imposed this should be done by clear statutory language. Verbs primarily denoting (and forbidding) active conduct should not be construed to include omissions except when the statute contains a genuine implication to this effect. ^{165.}

An 'act' generally means something voluntarily done by a person, but in IPC, 1860 the term 'act' is not confined to its ordinary meaning of positive conduct of doing something but includes also illegal omission. The effect of sections 32 and 33, IPC, 1860 taken together is that the term 'act' comprises one or more 'acts' or one or more illegal omissions. The Code (IPC, 1860) makes punishable omissions which have caused, which have been intended to cause or which have been known to be likely to cause certain evil effect in the same manner as it punishes acts provided they were illegal and when the law imposes on a person a duty to act, his illegal omission to act renders (him) in liable to punishment. ^{166.}

[s 32.1] Penalty for omission.—

Maximum penalties applied to active wrongdoing should not automatically be transferred to corresponding omissions; penalties for omissions should be re-thought in each case. Indeed, the Indian Penal Code, 1860 does include explicitly the liability due to omissions. And even Indian courts have affirmed so.¹⁶⁷

¹⁶⁵. Dr PB Desai v State of Maharashtra, 2013 (11) Scale 429 [LNIND 2013 SC 815] .

¹⁶⁶. Raj Karan Singh v State of UP 2000 Cr LJ 555 (All).

¹⁶⁷. Dr PB Desai v State of Maharashtra, 2013 (11) Scale 429 [LNIND 2013 SC 815] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 33] "Act" "Omission";

The word "act" denotes as well a series of acts as a single act: the word "omission" denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.

COMMENT—

An omission is sometimes called a negative act, but this seems dangerous practice, for it too easily permits an omission to be substituted for an act without requiring the special requirement for omission liability such as legal duty and the physical capacity to perform the act. Criminal liability for an omission is also well accepted where the actor has a legal duty and the capacity to act. It is said that this rather fundamental exception to the act requirement is permitted because an actor's failure to perform a legal duty of which he is capable, satisfies the purposes of the act requirement or at least satisfies them as well as an act does. Specifically these two special requirements for omission liability help to exclude from liability cases of fantasizing and irresolute intentions, important purposes of the act requirement.¹⁶⁸ The effect of section 32 and this section taken together is that the term 'act' comprises one or more acts or one or more illegal omissions. The word 'act' does not mean only any particular, specific, instantaneous act of a person, but denotes, as well, a series of acts.¹⁶⁹

¹⁶⁸. Dr PB Desai v State of Maharashtra, 2013 (11) Scale 429 [LNIND 2013 SC 815].

¹⁶⁹. Om Parkash v State Of Punjab, AIR 1961 SC 1782 [LNIND 1961 SC 201] : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 848

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

170. [s 34] Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention.

When a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention¹ of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.]

COMMENT—

Introduction.—Ordinarily, no man can be held responsible for an independent act and wrong committed by another. However, section 34 of the IPC, 1860 makes an exception to this principle. It lays down a principle of joint liability in the doing of a criminal act. The essence of that liability is to be found in the existence of common intention, animating the accused leading to the doing of a criminal act in furtherance of such intention. It deals with the doing of separate acts, similar or adverse by several persons, if all are done in furtherance of common intention. In such situation, each person is liable for the result of that as if he had done that act himself.¹⁷¹ The soul of section 34, IPC, 1860 is the joint liability in doing a criminal act.¹⁷²

[s 34.1] History.—

Section 34 IPC, 1860 is part of the original Code of 1860 as drafted by Lord Macaulay. The original section as it stood was "When a criminal act is done by several persons, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if the act was done by him alone." However, on account of certain observations made by Sir Barnes Peacock, CJ, in Queen v Gora Chand Gope,¹⁷³ it was necessary to bring about a change in the wordings of the section. Accordingly, in the year 1870 an amendment was brought which introduced the following words after "when a criminal act is done by several persons..." "...in furtherance of the common intention...". After this change, the section has not been changed or amended ever.

[s 34.2] Object.—

The provision is intended to meet a case in which it may be difficult to distinguish between acts of individual members of a party who act in furtherance of the common intention of all or to prove exactly what part was taken by each of them. The true contents of the section are that if two or more persons intentionally do an act jointly, the position in law is just the same as if each of them has done it individually by himself. As observed in Ashok Kumar v State of Punjab,¹⁷⁴ the existence of a common intention amongst the participants in a crime is the essential element for application of this section. It is not necessary that the acts of the several persons charged with commission of an offence jointly must be the same or identically similar. The acts may be different in character, but must have been actuated by one and the same common intention in order to attract the provision.¹⁷⁵ Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor,¹⁷⁶ stated the true purport of section 34 as:

The words of s.34 are not to be eviscerated by reading them in this exceedingly limited sense. By s.33 a criminal act in s.34 includes a series of acts and, further, 'act' includes omission to act, for example, an omission to interfere in order to prevent a murder being done before one's very eyes. By s.37, when any offence is committed by means of several acts whoever intentionally cooperates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence. Even if the appellant did nothing as he stood outside the door, it is to be remembered that in crimes as in other things 'they also serve who only stand and wait'.¹⁷⁷

[s 34.3] Principle.—

This section is only a rule of evidence and does not create a substantive offence. Section 34 IPC, 1860 lays down the principle of constructive liability. The essence of section 34 IPC, 1860 is a simultaneous consensus of the minds of the persons participating in criminal action to bring about a particular result. Section 34 IPC, 1860 stipulates that the act must have been done in furtherance of the common intention. In fact, the section is intended to cover a case where a number of persons act together and on the facts of the case it is not possible for the prosecution to prove as to which of the persons who acted together actually committed the crime. Little or no distinction exists between a charge for an offence under a particular section and a charge under that section read with section 34.¹⁷⁸ Therefore, section 34, IPC, 1860, would apply even if no charge is framed under that section provided of course from the evidence it becomes clear that there was pre-arranged plan to achieve the commonly intended object.¹⁷⁹ Thus, where six persons were charged under sections 148, 302/149 and 307/149, IPC, 1860, but two were acquitted, the remaining four accused could be convicted on the charges of murder and attempt to murder with the aid of section 34 of the Penal Code.¹⁸⁰ This section really means that if two or more persons intentionally do a thing jointly, it is just the same as if each of them had done it individually.¹⁸¹ If the criminal act was a fresh and independent act springing wholly from the mind of the doer, the others are not liable merely because when it was done they were intending to be partakers with the doer in a different criminal act.

[s 34.4] Scope, ambit and applicability.—

Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code recognises the principle of vicarious liability in criminal jurisprudence. The said principle enshrined under Section 34 of the Code would be attracted only if one or more than one accused person act conjointly in the commission of offence with others. It is not necessary that all such persons should be named and identified before the liability under Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code can be invoked. So long as the evidence brought by the prosecution would disclose that one or more accused persons had acted in concert with other persons not named or identified, the liability under Section 34 of the Code would still be attracted. Once the other accused stands acquitted in absence of said evidence, the vicarious liability under section 34 of the Code would not be attracted so as to hold the accused liable for the offence with the aid of Section 34 of the Code. However, the accused would still be liable for the offence if the injury or injuries leading to offence can be attributed to him.¹⁸² A bare reading of this section shows that the section could be dissected as follows:

- (a) Criminal act is done by several persons;
- (b) Such act is done in furtherance of the common intention of all; and
- (c) Each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.
- (d) But, it is not necessary that all such persons should be named and identified before the liability under Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code can be invoked.^{183.}

In other words, these three ingredients would guide the court in determining whether an accused is liable to be convicted with the aid of section 34. While first two are the acts which are attributable and have to be proved as actions of the accused, the third is the consequence. Once the criminal act and common intention are proved, then by fiction of law, criminal liability of having done that act by each person individually would arise. The criminal act, according to section 34 IPC, 1860 must be done by several persons. The emphasis in this part of the section is on the word "done".^{184.} The section does not envisage the separate act by all the accused persons for becoming responsible for the ultimate criminal act. If such an interpretation is accepted, the purpose of section 34 shall be rendered infructuous.^{185.} Under section 34 of the Indian Penal Code, a pre-concert in the sense of a distinct previous plan is not necessary to be proved.^{186.} It is a well settled law that mere presence or association with other members is not per se sufficient to hold each of them criminally liable for the offences committed by the other members, unless there is sufficient evidence on record to show that one such member also intends to or knows the likelihood of commission of such an offending act.^{187.}

[s 34.5] Three leading Cases.—

The case of Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor,^{188.} is a locus classicus and has been followed by number of High Courts and the Supreme Court in a large number of cases. In this case, the Judicial Committee dealt with the scope of section 34 dealing with the acts done in furtherance of the common intention, making all equally liable for the results of all the acts of others. It was observed that section 34 when it speaks of a criminal act done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all, has regard not to the offence as a whole, but to the criminal act, that is to say, the totality of the series of acts which result in the offence. In the case of a person assaulted by many accused, the criminal act is the offence which finally results, though the achievement of that criminal act may be the result of the action of several persons.

In another celebrated case Mehub Shah v King-Emperor,^{189.} the court held that:

Section 34 lays down a principle of joint liability in the doing of a criminal act. The section does not say "the common intentions of all," nor does it say "an intention common to all." Under the section, the essence of that liability is to be found in the existence of a common intention animating the accused leading to the doing of a criminal act in furtherance of such intention. To invoke the aid of s.34 successfully, it must be shown that the criminal act complained against was done by one of the accused persons in the furtherance of the common intention of all; if this is shown, then liability for the crime may be imposed on any one of the persons in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone. This being the principle, it is clear to their Lordships that common intention within the meaning of the section implies a pre-arranged plan, and to convict the accused of an offence applying the section it should be proved that the criminal act was done in concert pursuant to the pre-arranged plan.

Approving the judgments of the Privy Council in Barendra Kumar Ghosh (Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor),^{190.} and Mahbub Shah ^{cases}¹⁹¹ a three-Judge Bench of Supreme Court in Pandurang v State of Hyderabad,^{192.} held that to attract the applicability of section 34 of the Code the prosecution is under an obligation to establish that there existed a common intention which requires a pre-arranged plan because before a man can be vicariously convicted for the criminal act of another, the act must have been done in furtherance of the common intention of all. The Court had in mind the ultimate act done in furtherance of the common intention

[s 34.6] Common intention and mens rea.—

Under section 34, every individual offender is associated with the criminal act which constitutes the offence both physically as well as mentally i.e. he is a participant not only in what has been described as a common act but also what is termed as the common intention and, therefore, in both these respects his individual role is put into serious jeopardy although this individual role might be a part of a common scheme in which others have also joined him and played a role that is similar or different. But referring to the common intention, it needs to be clarified that the courts must keep in mind the fine distinction between "common intention" on the one hand and mens rea as understood in criminal jurisprudence on the other. Common intention is not alike or identical to mens rea. The latter may be coincidental with or collateral to the former but they are distinct and different.^{193.}

[s 34.7] Participation.—

Participation of several persons in some action with the common intention of committing a crime is an essential ingredient; once such participation is established, section 34 is at once attracted.^{194.} Thus, the dominant feature of section 34 is the element of intention and participation in action. This participation need not in all cases be by physical presence.^{195.} The Supreme Court has held that it is the essence of the section that the person must be physically present at the actual commission of the crime. He need not be present in the actual room; he can, for instance, stand guard by a gate outside ready to warn his companions about any approach of danger or wait in a car on a nearby road ready to facilitate their escape, but he must be physically present at the scene of the occurrence and must actually participate in the commission of the offence in some way or other at the time crime is actually being committed.^{196.}

The Supreme Court has emphasised that proof of participation by acceptable evidence may in circumstances be a clue to the common intention and that it would not be fatal to the prosecution case that the culprits had no community of interests.^{197.}

Sometimes, however, absence of actual participation may serve an important purpose as it happened, for example, where in a love triangle the paramour killed the woman's husband and she remained sitting with the dead body inside the house without opening the door. The main accused having been acquitted, the Supreme Court held that the woman alone could not be convicted under section 302 read with section 34 particularly in view of the fact that the nature of the injuries (gandasa blows with a heavy hand) made it explicit that they were the handiwork of masculine power and not that of feminine hands.^{198.} It is also necessary to remember that mere presence of the offender at the scene of murder without any participation to facilitate the offence is not enough.^{199.} By merely accompanying the accused one does not become liable for the crime committed by the accused within the meaning of section 34, IPC, 1860.^{200.} The degree of participation is also an important factor.^{201.} The court restated the two ingredients for application of the section which are:

common intention to commit a crime, and

- (ii) participation by all the accused in the act or acts in furtherance of the common intention. These two things establish their joint liability.^{202.}

Where one of the accused persons focussed light on the victim with a torch so as to enable others to assault him, otherwise it is a dark night. The court said that his conduct prior and subsequent to the occurrence clearly showed that he shared the common intention so far as the assault on the deceased was concerned. Hence, he was rightly roped in under section 34.^{203.} If participation is proved and common intention is absent, section 34 cannot be invoked.^{204.} The co-accused was standing outside the house, where the incident took place, while the others committed the murder. There is no evidence of his having played any part in the crime. He did not even act as a guard; he did not prevent the witness from entering the house. There is no evidence of the formation or sharing of any common intention with the other accused. No weapon was seized from him, nor was any property connected with the crime, confiscated from him. It was therefore, held that, it was not safe to convict the co-accused of the offence of murder with the aid of sub-sections 34 and 120(B).^{205.}

[s 34.8] Physical Presence not sine qua non. –

Physical presence at the very spot is not always a necessary ingredient to attract the action. The Supreme Court decision in Shreekantiah Ramayya v State of Bombay,^{206.} is the authority for the aforesaid proposition. Vivian Bose, J, speaking for the Bench of three Judges stated thus:

He need not be present in the actual room; he can, for instance, stand guard by a gate outside ready to warn his companions about any approach of danger or wait in a car on a nearby road ready to facilitate their escape.

What is required is his actual participation in the commission of the offence in some way or other at the time when the crime is actually being committed. The participation need not in all cases be by physical presence. In offence involving physical violence, normally presence at the scene of offence may be necessary, but such is not the case in respect of other offences when the offence consists of diverse acts which may be done at different times and places. The physical presence at the scene of offence of the offender sought to be rendered liable under this section is not one of the conditions of its applicability in every case.^{207.} Even the concept of presence of the co-accused at the scene is not a necessary requirement to attract section 34 of the IPC, 1860, e.g., the co-accused can remain a little away and supply weapons to the participating accused either by throwing or by catapulting them so that the participating accused can inflict injuries on the targeted person. There may be other provisions in the IPC, 1860 like sub-sections 120B or 109 which could be invoked then to catch such non-participating accused. Thus, participation in the crime in furtherance of the common intention is sine qua non for section 34 IPC, 1860. Exhortation to other accused, even guarding the scene etc. would amount to participation. Of course, when the allegation against an accused is that he participated in the crime by oral exhortation or by guarding the scene the court has to evaluate the evidence very carefully for deciding whether that person had really done any such act.^{208.}

The absence of any overt act of assault, exhortation or possession of weapon cannot be singularly determinative of absence of common intention.^{209.}

[s 34.9] In furtherance of common intention.—

The Supreme Court referred to the Oxford English Dictionary where the word "furtherance" is defined as an "action of helping forward." Russell, in his book on Criminal Law adopted this definition and said:

It indicates some kind of aid or assistance proceeding an effect in future and that any act may be regarded as done in furtherance of the ultimate felony if it is a step intentionally taken for the purpose of effecting the felony." The Supreme Court has also construed the word "furtherance" as "advancement or promotion."^{210.}

1. 'Common intention'.—The phrase 'common intention' means a pre-oriented plan and acting in pursuance to the plan. The common intention to give effect to a particular act may even develop at the spur of moment between a number of persons with reference to the facts of a given case.^{211.} In Amrik Singh's case it has further been held that though common intention may develop in course of the fight but there must be clear and unimpeachable evidence to justify that inference.^{212.} Before a Court can convict a person for any offence read with section 34, it should come to a definite conclusion that the said person had a prior concert with one or more other persons, named or unnamed, for committing the said offence.^{213.} Where the act of murder by the main accused was facilitated by two others by catching hold of the victim but without knowing nor having the intention of causing death, it was held that the only common intention that could be inferred was that of causing grievous hurt.^{214.} Where the accused had inflicted lathi blows causing injuries only on the eyewitness and not on the deceased, he could not be said to have shared the common intention of committing murder of the deceased. He was acquitted for the charge of murder and was convicted under section 325.^{215.}

Common intention does not mean similar intention of several persons. To constitute common intention it is necessary that the intention of each one of them be known to the rest of them and shared by them.^{216.}

What to speak of similar intention even same intention without sharing each other's intention is not enough for this section.^{217.} In a case like this each will be liable for whatever injury he caused but none could be vicariously convicted for the act of any of the others.^{218.} In fine, if common intention cannot be inferred from the evidence of facts and circumstances of the case, section 34, IPC, 1860, cannot be invoked.^{219.} A party of farmers was cutting their crop. The deceased took away a portion of the harvested crop. That night when he was returning from a barat 16 persons waited for him on the way. They came towards him and the convict who was carrying a knife gave him a stab wound on the neck which proved fatal. The others did not know that he had a knife and all of them being with bare hands, it could not be said that they had the common intention of causing death. They could as well have thought that after surrounding the accused he would be called upon to return or pay for the harvest taken away by him.^{220.} A person gifted his land to one of his grandsons. His other son along with his wife fully armed, the man with a lathi and the woman with a gandasa came to protest. The man lost control and both grandson and his father intervened to save the situation but they received lathi blows and died. The woman struck only her brother-in-law with the gandasa causing a non-fatal injury. Her husband was convicted for murder but her punishment was reduced to causing grievous hurt because it appeared that the whole thing was a spot happening and not a planned affair.^{221.}

Where the genesis of the verbal wrangle between the neighbours was not known, but it appeared to have arisen suddenly, there being no chance for common intention to be formulated, each attacker was held to be punishable for his individual acts.^{222.}

Where common intention was established the mere fact that one of the culprits distanced himself from the scene could not absolve him from liability.^{223.}

It is not necessary for bringing a case within the scope of section 34 to find as to who in fact inflicted the fatal blow. A conviction under the section read with the relevant substantive provision can be made when the ingredients required by the section are satisfied and it is not necessary to mention the section number in the judgment.^{224.} Death of two persons was caused by unprovoked firing by appellants who are police officials and grievous gunshot injuries to another person. It was not necessary to assign a specific role to each individual appellant as the firing at the Car was undoubtedly with a clear intent to annihilate those in it and was resorted to in furtherance of common intention of all the appellants. The accused were liable to conviction under section 302/34 IPC, 1860.^{225.} The acts of all the accused need not be the same or identically similar. All that is necessary is that they all must be actuated by the one and the same common intention. The fact that two of them caused injuries at the back of their victim and the injury at the head which proved to be fatal was caused by the third person, the two co-accused could not claim to be absolved of liability for murder.^{226.}

It is not necessary for bringing about the conviction of the co-accused to show that he also committed an overt act for the achievement of their object. The absence of any overt act or possession of weapon cannot be singularly determinative of absence of common intention. If common intention by meeting of minds is established in the facts and circumstances of the case there need not be an overt act or possession of weapon required, to establish common intention.^{227.}

The accused caught hold of the victim and exhorted the main accused to strike him. On such exhortation the main accused inflicted a Kirpan wound. The victim died. It was held that the instigation was only to strike. It could not be said that the accused shared the intention of the main accused to kill. The conviction was altered from under sections 202/34 to one under section 324.^{228.} The victim woman was murdered by her father-in-law and brother-in-law. The third person helped them to conceal the dead body to screen them. The conviction of the two accused for murder was upheld but that of the third one only for concealment of evidence under sections 201/34.^{229.}

[s 34.10] Common Intention: How Proved.—

The common intention can be inferred from the circumstances of the case and that the intention can be gathered from the circumstances as they arise even during an incident.^{230.} Common intention is a state of mind. It is not possible to read a person's mind. There can hardly be direct evidence of common intention. The existence or non-existence of a common intention amongst the accused has to be deciphered cumulatively from their conduct and behaviour in the facts and circumstances of each case. Events prior to the occurrence as also after, and during the occurrence, are all relevant to deduce if there existed any common intention. There can be no straight jacket formula.^{231.} The Court has to examine the prosecution evidence in regard to application of section 34 cumulatively and if the ingredients are satisfied, the consequences must follow. It is difficult to state any hard and fast rule which can be applied universally to all cases. It will always depend on the facts and circumstances of the given case whether the person involved in the commission of the crime with a common intention can be held guilty of the main offence committed by them together.^{232.} Courts, in most cases, have to infer the intention from the act(s) or conduct of the accused or other relevant circumstances of the case. However, an inference as to the common intention shall not be readily drawn; the criminal liability can arise only when such inference can be drawn with a certain degree of assurance.²³³ In most cases it has to be inferred from the act or conduct or other relevant circumstances of the case in hand.²³⁴ This inference can be gathered by the manner in which the accused arrived on the scene and mounted the attack, the determination and concert with which the beating was given or the injuries caused by one or some of them, the acts done by others to assist those causing the injuries, the concerted conduct subsequent to the commission of the offence, for instance all of them left the scene of the incident together and other acts which all or some may have done as would help in determining the common intention. In other words, the totality of the circumstances must be taken into consideration in arriving at the conclusion whether the accused had a common intention to commit an offence of which they could be convicted.²³⁵ Manner of attack shows the common intention of accused.²³⁶ The Supreme Court has reiterated:

We reiterate that for common intention, there could rarely be direct evidence. The ultimate decision, at any rate would invariably depend upon the inference deducible from the circumstances of each case. It is settled law that the common intention or the intention of the individuals concerned in furtherance of the common intention could be proved either from direct evidence or by inference from the acts or attending circumstances of the case and conduct of the parties.²³⁷

[s 34.11] Complaint.—

In order to attract section 34 of the IPC, 1860, the complaint must, prima facie, reflect a common prior concert or planning amongst all the accused.²³⁸

[s 34.12] Effect of no charge under section 34.—

Even if section 34 has not been included in a charge framed for the offence under section 302 IPC, 1860 against the accused, a conviction for the offence under section 302 with the aid of section 34 is not bad as no prejudice would be caused to him.²³⁹ Where the appellants caused injuries not enough to cause the death but the same were caused by another, in the absence of a charge under section 34, they were found to be guilty under section 326 of IPC, 1860.²⁴⁰

Sections 34, 114 and 149 of the IPC, 1860 provide for criminal liability viewed from different angles as regards actual participants, accessories and men actuated by a common object or a common intention; and as explained by five Judge Constitution Bench of in Willie Slavey v The State of MP,²⁴¹ the charge is a rolled-up one involving the direct liability and the constructive liability without specifying who are directly liable and who are sought to be made constructively liable.²⁴² But before a court can convict a person under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, it should come to a definite conclusion that the said person had a prior concert with one or more other persons, named or unnamed, for committing the said offence. A few illustrations will bring out the impact of section 34 on different situations.

(1) A, B, C and D are charged under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, for committing the murder of E. The evidence is directed to establish that the said four persons have taken part in the murder.

(2) A, B, C and D and unnamed others are charged under the said sections. But evidence is adduced to prove that the said persons, along with others, named or unnamed, participated jointly in the commission of that offence.

(3) A, B, C and D are charged under the said sections. But the evidence is directed to prove that A, B, C and D, along with 3 others, have jointly committed the offence. As regards the third illustration, a Court is certainly entitled to come to the conclusion that one of the named accused is guilty of murder under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, though the other three named accused are acquitted, if it accepts the evidence that the said accused acted in concert along with persons, named or unnamed, other than those acquitted, in the commission of the offence. In the second illustration the Court can come to the same conclusion and convict one of the named accused if it is satisfied that no prejudice has been caused to the accused by the defect in the charge. But in the first illustration the Court certainly can convict two or more of the named accused if it accepts the evidence that they acted conjointly in committing the offence. But what is the position if the Court acquits 3 of the 4 accused either because it rejects the prosecution evidence or because it gives the benefit of doubt to the said accused? Can it hold, in the absence of a charge as well as evidence, that though the three accused are acquitted, some other unidentified persons acted conjointly along with one of the named persons? If the Court could do so, it would be making out a new case for the prosecution: it would be deciding contrary to the evidence adduced in the case. A Court cannot obviously make out a case for the prosecution which is not disclosed either in the charge or in regard to which there is no basis in the evidence. There must be some foundation in the evidence that persons other than those named have taken part in the commission of the offence and if there is such a basis the case will be covered by the third illustration.²⁴³ Absence of charge under section 34 is not fatal by itself unless prejudice to the accused is shown.²⁴⁴

[s 34.13] Alternative Charge.—

The trial Court framed charges under sections 302/307 r/w 120B IPC, 1860 and an alternative charge under sections 302/307 r/w section 34 IPC, 1860 without opining on the alternative charge, convicted the accused under sections 302/307 r/w 120B. The contention that accused is deemed to be acquitted for charges under sections 302/307/34 IPC, 1860 of the charge of common intention of committing murder and there was no appeal by the State against the deemed acquittal against that charge, it was not open to the High Court to alter or modify the conviction under sections 302/307/34 IPC, 1860, repelled by holding that charges had indeed been framed in the alternative and for cognate offences having similar ingredients as the main allegation of murder.²⁴⁵

[s 34.14] Distinction between sections 34 and 149, IPC, 1860.—

Though both these sections relate to the doctrine of vicarious liability and sometimes overlap each other there are substantial points of difference between the two. They are under:—

- (i) Section 34 does not by itself create any specific offence, whereas section 149, IPC, 1860, does so (see discussion under sub-para "principle" ante).
- (ii) Some active participation, especially in a crime involving physical violence is necessary under section 34 but section 149, IPC, 1860, does not require it and the liability arises by reason of mere membership of the unlawful assembly with a common object and there may be no active participation at all in the preparation and commission of the crime.
- (iii) Section 34 speaks of common intention but section 149, IPC, 1860, contemplates common object which is undoubtedly wider in its scope and amplitude than intention. If the offence committed by a member of an unlawful assembly is in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object, all other members of the unlawful assembly would be guilty of that offence under section 149, IPC, 1860, although they may not have intended to do it or participated in the actual commission of that offence.^{246.}

- (iv) Section 34 does not fix a minimum number of persons who must share the common intention, whereas section 149, IPC, 1860, requires that there must be at least five persons who must have the same common object (see also discussion under sub-head "Sections 34 and 149" under section 149, IPC, 1860, infra).^{247.}

[s 34.15] Effect of conviction or acquittal of one or more or others.—

Several persons involved in a criminal adventure may be guilty of different offences depending upon their respective acts. If the act is done in furtherance of their common intention, all of them become equally liable for the act. Similarly, if they are members of an unlawful assembly, an act done by any one in prosecution of the common object or any act which the members knew could happen in such prosecution, every member would be liable for the act. If any one of them happens to be wrongly acquitted and no appeal has been filed against it, it would not ipso facto impede the conviction of others. Likewise, the conviction of any one or more them does not automatically result in the conviction of others.^{248.}

[s 34.16] Substitution of conviction from section 149 to section 34.—

Following some earlier rulings,^{249.} the Supreme Court has stated the law in the following terms:^{250.}

It is true that there was no charge under s. 302 read with s. 34... but the facts of the case are such that the accused could have been charged alternatively either under s. 302 read with s. 149 or under s. 302 read with s. 34 and one of the accused having been acquitted, the conviction under s. 302/149 can be substituted with one under s. 302/34. No prejudice is likely to be caused to the accused whose appeal is being dismissed.^{251.}

[s 34.17] Robbery.—

Provision under section 397 inevitably negates the use of the principles of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted under section 34. The sentence for offence under section 397 of the IPC, 1860 cannot be awarded to those of the members of the group of dacoits who did not use any deadly weapon. A plain reading of section 397 of the IPC, 1860 would make it clear that such guilt can be attributed only to that offender who uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person during course of the commission of the robbery. The provision postulates that only the individual act of accused will be relevant to attract section 397 of the IPC, 1860.^{252.} In a sudden quarrel over payment, person sitting inside the car pulled the petrol pump attendant into the car and drove away. The occupants of the car escaped punishment. It was held that the driver alone could not be held guilty of the offence of robbery and abduction with the aid of section 34.^{253.} In a serial highway robbery and murder in which same persons were involved, it was found as a fact that the self-same two persons were seen by a witness together in a different town before the occurrence. One of their victims survived and he also testified that he saw both of them together. Both of them were held to be guilty of successive crimes and convicted for murder with the aid of section 34 without any need of knowing who played what part.^{254.}

[s 34.18] Mob action.—

A mob of 200 persons armed with different weapons came to the field with the object of preventing the prosecution party from carrying on transplantation operations. Some of them caused death of a person at the spur of the moment for some spot reason. The whole mob could not be convicted for it.²⁵⁵ A mob chased the members of the rival community up to their locality. A part of the mob started burning their houses and the other part kept on chasing and caused deaths. The court said that the two parts of the mob could not be said to have shared the intention of burning or causing death.^{256.}

[s 34.19] Misappropriation.—

Where the accused the Sarpanch and Secretary of a Gram Panchayat misappropriated the funds of the Panchayat and the circumstances and evidence showed patent dishonest intention on the part of the accused persons, the conviction and sentence of the accused under section 409/34, was not interfered with.^{257.}

[s 34.20] Rape cases.—

In Gang Rape it is not necessary that the intention should exist from the beginning. It can be developed at the last minute before the commission of the offence.^{258.}

[s 34.21] Exhortation.—

One of the accused exhorted while the other immobilised the deceased and the third accused delivered the fatal injuries. It was held that each one shared a common intention.^{259.} Section 34 was held to have been rightly applied where two of the accused persons caught hold of the deceased and on their exhortation the third accused shot him on the right temple resulting in death.^{260.}

Mere exhortation by one of the accused persons saying that they would not leave the victim till he died was held to be not a basis for roping into the common intention of the others.^{261.} The only allegation against the appellant was her exhortation. Enmity between the family of the deceased and that of the accused proved. In such a situation, where the eye witnesses have not narrated any specific role carried by the appellant, rather the specific role of assaulting with the sword has been attributed to the co-accused, it cannot be ruled out that the name of the appellant has been added due to enmity with the main accused.^{262.}

[s 34.22] Pre-conceived common intention.—

Only when a court with some certainty holds that a particular accused must have pre-conceived or pre-meditated the result which ensued or acted in concert with others in order to bring about that result, that section 34 may be applied.^{263.}

[s 34.23] Common intention and private defence.—

If two or more persons had common intention to commit murder and they had participated in the acts done by them in furtherance of that common intention, all of them would be guilty of murder. Section 96 IPC, 1860 says that nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence. Though all the accused would be liable for committing the murder of a person by doing an act or acts in furtherance of the common intention, they would not be liable for the act or acts if they had the right of private defence to voluntarily cause death of that person. Common intention, therefore, has relevance only to the offence and not to the right of private defence. What would be an offence by reason of constructive liability would cease to be one if the act constituting the offence was done in exercise of the right of private defence.

If the voluntary causing of death is not permissible under the right of private defence under section 96, then the common intention in regard thereto will lead to the result that the accused persons must be held guilty by reason of constructive liability under the relevant section (in this case section 304 Part I IPC, 1860). If, however, the common intention was only to commit an act which was permissible within the confines of s. 96 read with s. 98, then constructive liability under section 34 cannot be said to have been accrued to the accused. If the right of private defence was exceeded by some persons, the guilt of each of the accused proved to have exceeded the right of private defence would have to be dealt with separately. The instant case came under the former situation, and hence, such persons were guilty under section 304, Part I IPC, 1860. They, therefore, must be held to have had a common object for causing death of P. They were sentenced to undergo ten years' rigorous imprisonment each.^{264.}

170. Subs. by Act 27 of 1870, section 1, for section 34.

171. Goudappa v State of Karnataka, (2013) 3 SCC 675 [LNIND 2013 SC 177] ; Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011SC 1748 : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ. 2908 ; Abdul Sayeed v State of MP, 2010 (10) SCC 259 [LNIND 2010 SC 872] : 2010(9) Scale 379 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1262.

172. Kuria v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2013 SC 1085 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : (2012) 10 SCC 433 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : 2012 Cr LJ 4707 (SC).

173. Queen v Gora Chand Gope, (1866) 5 South WR (Cr) 45.

174. Ashok Kumar v State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 109 : (1977)1 SCC 746 .

175. Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v State Of Maharashtra AIR 2005 SC 1460 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] : (2005) 10 SCC 404 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] .

176. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor, AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] .

177. Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .

178. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .
179. Garib Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 1286 : AIR 1973 SC 460 [LNIND 1972 SC 187] . See also Yogendra v State of Bihar, 1984 Cr LJ 386 (SC).
180. Ram Tahal v State of UP, 1972 Cr LJ 227 : AIR 1972 SC 254 [LNIND 1971 SC 579] relied in Thoti Manohar v State of AP, 2012, (7) Scale 215 : (2012) 7 SCC 723 [LNIND 2012 SC 365] : 2012 Cr LJ 3492 ; see also Amar Singh v State of Haryana, 1973 Cr LJ 1409 : AIR 1973 SC 2221 ; Dharam Pal v State of UP, 1975 Cr LJ 1666 : AIR 1975 SC 1917 [LNIND 1975 SC 314] ; Amir Hussain v State of UP, 1975 Cr LJ 1874 : AIR 1975 SC 2211 State of Rajasthan v Arjun Singh, (2011) 9 SCC 115 [LNIND 2011 SC 855] : AIR 2011 SC 3380 [LNIND 2011 SC 855] .
181. BN Srikantiah v State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 672 [LNIND 1958 SC 49] : 1958 Cr LJ 1251 .
182. Killer Thiayagu v. State, AIR 2017 SC 612 [LNINDORD 2017 SC 1134] .
183. Killer Thiayagu v. State, AIR 2017 SC 612 [LNINDORD 2017 SC 1134] .
184. Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] ; NandKishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] ; Baldeo Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 464 : 1972 Cr LJ 262 ; Rana Pratap v State of Haryana, AIR 1983 SC 680 [LNIND 1983 SC 157] : 1983 Cr LJ 1272 : (1983) 3 SCC 327 [LNIND 1983 SC 157] ,
185. Syed Yousuf Hussain v State of AP, AIR 2013 SC 1677 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] : 2013 Cr LJ 2172 : 2013 (5) Scale 346 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] , (2013)4 SCC 517 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] ; Suresh v State of UP, 2001 (3) SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] ; Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .
186. Sudip Kr. Sen v State of WB, AIR 2016 SC 310 [LNIND 2016 SC 10] : 2016 Cr LJ 1121 .
187. Nagesar v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 2948 .
188. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor, AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] .
189. Mehbub Shah v King-Emperor, AIR 1945 PC 148 .
190. Supra. 191. Supra.
192. Pandurang v State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 SC 216 [LNIND 1954 SC 171] : 1955 Cr LJ 572 .
193. Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] NandKishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] .
194. Vijendra Singh v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 860 [LNIND 2017 SC 16] ; Bharwad Mepa Dana v State of Bombay, AIR 1960SC 289.
195. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .
196. Shreekantiah Ramayya, (1954) 57 Bom LR 632 (SC); Shiv Prasad, AIR 1965 SC 264 [LNIND 1964 SC 51] : (1965) 1 CrLJ 249 .
197. Baba Lodhi v State of UP, (1987) 2 SCC 352 : AIR 1987 SC 1268 : 1987 Cr LJ 1119 ; MA AbdullaKunhi v State of Kerala, AIR 1991 SC 452 [LNIND 1991 SC 24] : 1991 Cr LJ 525 : (1991) 2 SCC 225 [LNIND 1991 SC 24] ; Noor v State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 84 [LNIND 2007 SC 639] : (2008) 2 SCC Cr 221 : 2007 Cr LJ 4299 .
198. Tara Devi v State of UP, (1990) 4 SCC 144 : AIR 1991 SC 342 . See also Hem Raj v State Delhi Admn., 1990 Cr LJ 2665 : 1990 Supp SCC 291 : AIR 1990 SC 2252 , one of the accused alone proved to have given the fatal blow, the participation of others not proved, others not convicted under section 302/34.
199. Bishan Singh v State of Punjab, 1983 Cr LJ 973 : AIR 1983 SC 748 : 1983 Cr LJ (SC) 327 : 1983 SCC (Cr) 578; Ghanshyam v State of UP, 1983 Cr LJ 439 (SC) : AIR 1983 SC 293 : (1982) 2

SCC 400 .

200. Dasrathlal v State of Gujarat, 1979 Cr LJ 1078 (SC) : AIR 1979 SC 1342 . See further Rangaswami v State of TN, AIR 1989 SC 1137 : 1989 Cr LJ 875 : 1989 SCC (Cr) 617 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 686 . Gulshan v State of Punjab, 1989 Cr LJ 120 : AIR 1988 SC 2110 : 1990 Supp SCC 682 .

201. Jarnail Singh v State of Punjab, (1996) 1 SCC 527 [LNIND 1995 SC 1172] : AIR 1996 SC 755 [LNIND 1995 SC 1172] : 1996 Cr LJ 1139 .

202. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 ; Chandrakant Murgyappa Umrani v State of Maharashtra, 1998 SCC (Cr) 698; Hamlet @ Sasi. v State of Kerala, (2003) 10 SCC 108 [LNIND 2003 SC 688] ; Surendra Chauhan v State of MP, (2000) 4 SCC 110 [LNIND 2000 SC 515] : AIR 2000 SC 1436 [LNIND 2000 SC 515] ; Ramjee Rai v State of Bihar, (2006) 13 SCC 229 [LNIND 2006 SC 647] : 2006 Cr LJ 4630 ; Prakash v State of MP, (2006) 13 SCC 508 [LNIND 2006 SC 1071] : 2007 Cr LJ 798 ; Sham Shankar Kankaria v State of Maharashtra, (2006) 13 SCC 165 [LNIND 2006 SC 684] ; Manik Das v State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 403 [LNIND 2007 SC 769] : AIR 2007 SC 2274 [LNIND 2007 SC 769] , participation proved.

203. Chacko v State of Kerala, (2004) 12 SCC 269 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] : AIR 2004 SC 2688 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] ; Abdul Wahid v State of Rajasthan, (2004) 11 SCC 241 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : AIR 2004 SC 3211 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : 2004 Cr LJ 2850 ; Janak Singh v State of UP, (2004) 11 SCC 385 [LNIND 2004 SC 515] : AIR 2004 SC 2495 [LNIND 2004 SC 515] : 2004 Cr LJ 2533 ; Parsuram Pandey v State of Bihar, 2005 SCC (Cr) 113 : AIR 2004 SC 5068 [LNIND 2004 SC 1075] .

204. Suresh Sakharam Nangare v State of Maharashtra, 2012 (9) Scale 245 [LNIND 2012 SC 574] : (2012) 9 SCC 249 [LNIND 2012 SC 574] .

205. Raju v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 4425 .

206. Shreekantiah Ramayya v State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955 SCR (1) 1177 .

207. Parasa Raja Manikyala Rao v State of AP, (2003) 12 SC 306 : AIR 2004 SC 132 [LNIND 2003 SC 888] : 2004 Cr LJ 390 ; Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 ; Jaikrishnadas Desai, (1960) 3 SCR 319 [LNIND 1960 SC 79] : AIR 1960 SC 889 [LNIND 1960 SC 79] : 1960 Cr LJ 1250 ; Dani Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 4570 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] : (2004) 13 SCC 203 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] .

208. Suresh v State of UP, 2001 (3) SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] : AIR 2001 SC 1344 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] ; Ramaswami Ayyangar v State of TN, AIR 1976 SC 2027 [LNIND 1976 SC 128] : 1976 Cr LJ 1536 (the presence of those who in one way or the other facilitate the execution of the common design itself tantamounts to actual participation in the "criminal act").

209. Rajkishore Purohit v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] .

210. Parasa Raja Manikyala Rao v State of AP, (2003) 12 SC 306 : AIR 2004 SC 132 [LNIND 2003 SC 888] : 2004 Cr LJ 390 , citing Shankarlal Kacharabhai, AIR 1965 SC 1260 [LNIND 1964 SC 230] : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 226 .

211. Dharnidhar v State of UP, (2010) 7 SCC 759 [LNIND 2010 SC 584] : 2010 (7) Scale 12 ; Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] .

212. Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 465 (SC) : (1972) 4 SCC (N) 42 (SC).

213. Krishna Govind Patil v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1964 (1) SCR 678 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1963 Cr LJ 351 (SC); State of Maharashtra v Jagmohan Singh Kuldip Singh Anand, (2004) 7 SCC 659 [LNIND 2004 SC 862] : AIR 2004 SC 4412 [LNIND 2004 SC 862] , the prosecution is not required to prove in every case a pre-arranged plan or prior concert.

Preetam Singh v State of Rajasthan, (2003) 12 SCC 594 , prior concert can be inferred, common intention can develop on the spot.

214. Harbans Nonia v State of Bihar, AIR 1992 SC 125 : 1992 Cr LJ 105 .

215. Dharam Pal v State of UP, AIR 1995 SC 1988 [LNIND 1995 SC 198] : 1995 Cr LJ 3642 .

216. Hanuman Prasad v State of Rajasthan, (2009) 1 SCC 507 [LNIND 2008 SC 2256] : (2009) 1 SCC Cr 564, the Supreme Court distinguishes common intention from similar intention and also explains the meaning and applicability of the expression.

217. Dajya Moshaya Bhil v State of Maharashtra, 1984 Cr LJ 1728 : AIR 1984 SC 1717 : 1984 Supp SCC 373 . The Supreme Court applied the distinction between common intention and similar intention in State of UP v Rohan Singh, (1996) Cr LJ 2884 (SC) : AIR 1996 SCW 2612 . In Mohan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 174 [LNIND 1962 SC 118] it was held that persons having similar intention which is not the result of pre-concerted plan cannot be held guilty for the "criminal act" with the aid of Section 34.

218. Parichhat v State of MP, 1972 Cr LJ 322 : AIR 1972 SC 535 ; Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 465 (SC). Followed in Khem Karan v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 2138 All where each accused hit differently at the behest of one of them, hence, no common intention.

219. Mitter Sen v State of UP, 1976 Cr LJ 857 : AIR 1976 SC 1156 ; see also Gajjan Singh v State of Punjab, 1976 Cr LJ 1640 : AIR 1976 SC 2069 [LNIND 1976 SC 72] ; Jarnail Singh v State of Punjab, 1982 Cr LJ 386 : AIR 1982 SC 70 (SC).

220. Rambilas Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1989 SC 1593 [LNIND 1989 SC 216] : (1989) 3 SCC 605 [LNIND 1989 SC 216] : 1989 Cr LJ 1782 . The conviction under sub-sections 34/149 and 34/302 was set aside.

221. Tripta v State of Haryana, AIR 1992 SC 948 : 1992 Cr LJ 3944 . See also Major Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 342 [LNIND 2002 SC 742] : 2003 Cr LJ 473 : (2002) 10 SCC 60 [LNIND 2002 SC 742] ; Balram Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 2213 [LNIND 2003 SC 514] : (2003) SCC 286 .

222. Devaramani v State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1534 SC. See also Gopi Nath v State of UP, AIR 2001 SC 2493 : 2001 Cr LJ 3514 ; Pal Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1999 SC 2548 [LNIND 1999 SC 604] : 1999 Cr LJ 3962 ; Prem v Daula, AIR 1997 SC 715 [LNIND 1997 SC 64] : 1997 Cr LJ 838 ; Muni Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 3640 ; Mahesh Mahto v State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 3567 [LNIND 1997 SC 1103] : 1997 Cr LJ 4402 .

223. Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .

224. Narinder Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2000 SC 2212 [LNIND 2000 SC 615] : 2000 Cr LJ 3462 , Sheelam Ramesh v State of AP, AIR 2000 SC 118 [LNIND 1999 SC 926] : 2000 Cr LJ 51 ; State of Haryana v Bhagirath, AIR 1999 SC 2005 [LNIND 1999 SC 541] : 1999 Cr LJ 2898 ; Asha v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2828 [LNIND 1997 SC 844] : 1997 Cr LJ 3561 .

225. Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1748 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ 2908 .

226. Krishnan v State, (2003) 7 SCC 56 [LNIND 2003 SC 587] : AIR 2003 SC 2978 [LNIND 2003 SC 587] : 2003 Cr LJ 3705 .

227. Rajkishore Purohit v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] .

228. Ajay Sharma v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 2798 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] : 1998 Cr LJ 4599 . See also State of Karnataka v Maruthi, AIR 1997 SC 3797 : 1997 Cr LJ 4407 ; Bhupinder Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC 642 : 1997 Cr LJ 958 .

229. State of UP v Balkrishna Das, AIR 1997 SC 225 [LNIND 1996 SC 1753] : 1997 Cr LJ 73 .

230. State of AP v M Sobhan Babu, 2011 (3) Scale 451 [LNIND 2010 SC 1219] : 2011 Cr LJ 2175 (SC).

231. Rajkishore Purohit v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] ; State of AP v M. Sobhan Babu, 2011 (3) Scale 451 [LNIND 2010 SC 1219] : 2011 Cr LJ 2175 (SC).
232. Kuria v State of Rajasthan, (2012) 10 SCC 433 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : 2012 Cr LJ 4707 (SC); Hemchand Jha v State of Bihar, (2008) 11 SCC 303 [LNIND 2008 SC 1299] : (2008) Cr LJ 3203 ; Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] ; Nand Kishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] .
233. Bengai Mandal v State of Bihar, AIR 2010 SC 686 [LNIND 2010 SC 39] : (2010) 2 SCC 91 [LNIND 2010 SC 39] .
234. Maqsoodan v State of UP, 1983 Cr LJ 218 : AIR 1983 SC 126 [LNIND 1982 SC 199] : (1983) 1 SCC 218 [LNIND 1982 SC 199] ; Aizaz v State of UP, (2008) 12 SCC 198 [LNIND 2008 SC 1621] : 2008 Cr LJ 4374 , Lala Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 225 [LNIND 2007 SC 803] : (2007) 3 SCC Cr 634, Harbans Kaur v State of Haryana, AIR 2005 SC 2989 [LNIND 2005 SC 211] : 2005 Cr LJ 2199 (SC), Dani Singh v State of Bihar, 2004 (13) SCC 203 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] : 2004 Cr LJ 3328 (SC).
235. Ram Tahal v State of UP, 1972 Cr LJ 227 : AIR 1972 SC 254 [LNIND 1971 SC 579] ; see also Nitya Sen v State of WB, 1978 Cr LJ 481 : AIR 1978 SC 383 ; Sivam v State of Kerala, 1978 Cr LJ 1609 : AIR 1978 SC 1529 ; Jagdeo Singh v State of Maharashtra, 1981 Cr LJ 166 : AIR 1981 SC 648 (SC); Aher Pitha Vajshi v State of Gujarat, 1983 Cr LJ 1049 : AIR 1983 SC 599 [LNIND 1983 SC 98] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 607; Manju Gupta v MS Paintal, AIR 1982 SC 1181 [LNIND 1982 DEL 128] : 1982 Cr LJ 1393 : (1982) 2 SCC 412 . Another instance of failed prosecution under the Act is Harendra Narayan Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1991 SC 1842 [LNIND 1991 SC 307] : 1991 Cr LJ 2666 . Ghana Pradhan v State of Orissa, AIR 1991 SC 1133 : 1991 Cr LJ 1178 . Common intention not established even when the two accused were striking the same person in their own ways.
236. Raju @ Rajendra v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ 1248 (SC) : (2013) 2 SCC 233 [LNIND 2013 SC 25] .
237. Jhinku Nai v State of UP, AIR 2001 SC 2815 [LNIND 2001 SC 1587] at p. 2817. See also Jagga Singh v State of Punjab, (2011) 3 SCC 137 [LNIND 2011 SC 288] : AIR 2011 SC 960 [LNIND 2011 SC 288] .
238. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd, (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 : (2010) 12 SCR 551 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 68.
239. Darbara Singh v State of Punjab, 2012 (8) Scale 649 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : (2012) 10 SCC 476 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] ; Gurpreet Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2006 SC 191 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] : (2005) 12 SCC 615 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] .
240. Vijay Singh v State of MP, 2014 Cr LJ 2158 .
241. Willie Slavey v The State of MP, 1955 (2) SCR 1140 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] at p 1189 : AIR 1956 SC 116 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] .
242. Santosh Kumari v State of J&K, (2011) 9 SCC 234 [LNIND 2011 SC 901] : AIR 2011 SC 3402 [LNIND 2011 SC 901] : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 657.
243. Krishna Govind Patil v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1963 Cr LJ 351 relied in Chinnam Kameswara Rao v State of AP 2013 Cr LJ 1540 : JT 2013 (2) SC 398 [LNIND 2013 SC 57] : 2013 (1) Scale 643 [LNIND 2013 SC 57] .
244. Anil Sharma v State of Jharkhand, (2004) 5 SCC 679 [LNIND 2004 SC 590] : AIR 2004 SC 2294 [LNIND 2004 SC 590] : 2004 Cr LJ 2527 .
245. Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1748 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ 2908 .
246. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v Emp., AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] (7) : 26 Cr LJ 431; Nanak Chand v State of Punjab, 1955 Cr LJ 721 (SC); Anam Pradhan v State, 1982 Cr LJ 1585

(Ori). Chittaramal v State of Rajasthan, (2003) 2 SCC 266 [LNIND 2003 SC 14] : AIR 2003 SC 796 [LNIND 2003 SC 14] : 2003 Cr LJ 889 , points of similarity and distinction explained in the case.

247. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .

248. Surinder Singh v State of Punjab, (2003) 10 SCC 66 [LNIND 2003 SC 652] .

249. Lachman Singh v The State, 1952 SCR 839 [LNIND 1952 SC 21] : AIR 1952 SC 167 [LNIND 1952 SC 21] : 1952 Cr LJ 863 and Karnail Singh v State of Punjab, 1954 SCR 904 [LNIND 1953 SC 126] : AIR 1954 SC 204 [LNIND 1953 SC 126] : 1954 Cr LJ 580 .

250. Sangappa Sanganasappa v State of Karnataka (2010) 11 SCC 782 [LNIND 2010 SC 866] : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 256; Baital Singh v State of UP, AIR 1990 SC 1982 : 1990 Cr LJ 2091 : 1990 Supp SCC 804 ; Ramdeo Rao Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 1990 SC 1180 [LNIND 1990 SC 126] : 1990 Cr LJ 1983 .

251. Dahari v State of UP, AIR 2013 SC 308 2012 (10) Scale 160, (2012)10 SCC 256 [LNIND 2012 SC 638] ; Jivan Lal v State of MP, 1997 (9) SCC 119 [LNIND 1996 SC 2679] ; and Hamlet @ Sasi v State of Kerala, AIR 2003 SC 3682 [LNIND 2003 SC 688] ; Gurpreet Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2006 SC 191 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] ; Sanichar Sahni v State of Bihar, AIR 2010 SC 3786 [LNIND 2009 SC 1350] ; S Ganesan v Rama Raghuraman, 2011 (2) SCC 83 [LNIND 2011 SC 5] ; Darbara Singh v State of Punjab, 2012 (8) Scale 649 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : (2012)10 SCC 476 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : JT 2012 (8) SC 530 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] .

252. Manik Shankarrao Dhotre v State of Maharashtra, 2008 Cr LJ 1505 (Kar); State of Maharashtra v Mahipal Singh Satyanarayan Singh, 1996 Cr LJ 2485 .

253. Brahmjit Singh v State, 1992 Cr LJ 408 (Del).

254. Prem v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 1608 (Bom). 255. Dukhmochan Pandey v State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 40 [LNIND 1997 SC 1255] : 1998 Cr LJ 66 .

256. State of Gujarat v Chandubhai Malubhai Parmar, AIR 1997 SC 1422 [LNIND 1997 SC 627] : 1997 Cr LJ 1909 (SC).

257. Ghoura Chandra Naik v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 275 (Ori). See Rameshchandra Bhogilal Patel v State Of Gujarat, 2011 Cr LJ 1395 (Guj) (Section 420/34).

258. Dev Cyrus Colabawala v State of Maharashtra, 2010 Cr LJ 758 (Bom).

259. Atambir Singh v State of Delhi, 2016 Cr LJ 568 (Del).

260. Vinay Kumar Rai v State of Bihar, (2008) 12 SCC 202 [LNIND 2008 SC 1646] : 2008 Cr LJ 4319 : AIR 2008 SC 3276 [LNIND 2008 SC 1646] .

261. Nagaraja v State of Karnataka, (2008) 17 SCC 277 [LNIND 2008 SC 2484] : AIR 2009 SC 1522 [LNIND 2008 SC 2484] : one accused struck on the road with an iron rod, two others used fists and kicks, there was nothing more common, the two could be convicted under section 323. See also Mohan Singh v State of MP AIR 1999 SC 883 [LNIND 1999 SC 69] : (1999) 2 SCC 428 [LNIND 1999 SC 69] , Abdul Wahid v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2004 SC 3211 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : (2004) 11 SCC 241 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] ; Ajay Sharma v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 2798 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] : (1999) 1 SCC 174 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] .

262. Chandra Kaur v State of Rajasthan, 2016 Cr LJ 3346 : AIR 2016 SC 2926 [LNINDU 2015 SC 139] .

263. Suresh v State of UP AIR 2001 SC 1344 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] : (2001) 3 SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] quoted from Shatrughan Patar v Emperor. See also Sewa Ram v State of UP, 2008 Cr LJ 802 : AIR 2008 SC 682 [LNIND 2007 SC 1452] ; Abaram v State of MP, (2007) 12 SCC 105 [LNIND 2007 SC 546] : (2008) 2 SCC Cr 243 : 2007 Cr LJ 2743 .

264. Bhanwar Singh v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : AIR 2009 SC 768 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] ; Vajrapu Sambayya Naidu v State of AP, AIR 2003 SC 3706 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] : (2004) 10 SCC 152 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

170. [s 34] Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention.

When a criminal act is done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention¹ of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.]

COMMENT—

Introduction.—Ordinarily, no man can be held responsible for an independent act and wrong committed by another. However, section 34 of the IPC, 1860 makes an exception to this principle. It lays down a principle of joint liability in the doing of a criminal act. The essence of that liability is to be found in the existence of common intention, animating the accused leading to the doing of a criminal act in furtherance of such intention. It deals with the doing of separate acts, similar or adverse by several persons, if all are done in furtherance of common intention. In such situation, each person is liable for the result of that as if he had done that act himself.¹⁷¹ The soul of section 34, IPC, 1860 is the joint liability in doing a criminal act.¹⁷²

[s 34.1] History.—

Section 34 IPC, 1860 is part of the original Code of 1860 as drafted by Lord Macaulay. The original section as it stood was "When a criminal act is done by several persons, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if the act was done by him alone." However, on account of certain observations made by Sir Barnes Peacock, CJ, in Queen v Gora Chand Gope,¹⁷³ it was necessary to bring about a change in the wordings of the section. Accordingly, in the year 1870 an amendment was brought which introduced the following words after "when a criminal act is done by several persons..." "...in furtherance of the common intention...". After this change, the section has not been changed or amended ever.

[s 34.2] Object.—

The provision is intended to meet a case in which it may be difficult to distinguish between acts of individual members of a party who act in furtherance of the common intention of all or to prove exactly what part was taken by each of them. The true contents of the section are that if two or more persons intentionally do an act jointly, the position in law is just the same as if each of them has done it individually by himself. As observed in Ashok Kumar v State of Punjab,¹⁷⁴ the existence of a common intention amongst the participants in a crime is the essential element for application of this section. It is not necessary that the acts of the several persons charged with commission of an offence jointly must be the same or identically similar. The acts may be different in character, but must have been actuated by one and the same common intention in order to attract the provision.^{175.} Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor,^{176.} stated the true purport of section 34 as:

The words of s.34 are not to be eviscerated by reading them in this exceedingly limited sense. By s.33 a criminal act in s.34 includes a series of acts and, further, 'act' includes omission to act, for example, an omission to interfere in order to prevent a murder being done before one's very eyes. By s.37, when any offence is committed by means of several acts whoever intentionally cooperates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence. Even if the appellant did nothing as he stood outside the door, it is to be remembered that in crimes as in other things 'they also serve who only stand and wait'.^{177.}

[s 34.3] Principle.—

This section is only a rule of evidence and does not create a substantive offence. Section 34 IPC, 1860 lays down the principle of constructive liability. The essence of section 34 IPC, 1860 is a simultaneous consensus of the minds of the persons participating in criminal action to bring about a particular result. Section 34 IPC, 1860 stipulates that the act must have been done in furtherance of the common intention. In fact, the section is intended to cover a case where a number of persons act together and on the facts of the case it is not possible for the prosecution to prove as to which of the persons who acted together actually committed the crime. Little or no distinction exists between a charge for an offence under a particular section and a charge under that section read with section 34.^{178.} Therefore, section 34, IPC, 1860, would apply even if no charge is framed under that section provided of course from the evidence it becomes clear that there was pre-arranged plan to achieve the commonly intended object.^{179.} Thus, where six persons were charged under sections 148, 302/149 and 307/149, IPC, 1860, but two were acquitted, the remaining four accused could be convicted on the charges of murder and attempt to murder with the aid of section 34 of the Penal Code.^{180.} This section really means that if two or more persons intentionally do a thing jointly, it is just the same as if each of them had done it individually.^{181.} If the criminal act was a fresh and independent act springing wholly from the mind of the doer, the others are not liable merely because when it was done they were intending to be partakers with the doer in a different criminal act.

[s 34.4] Scope, ambit and applicability.—

Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code recognises the principle of vicarious liability in criminal jurisprudence. The said principle enshrined under Section 34 of the Code would be attracted only if one or more than one accused person act conjointly in the commission of offence with others. It is not necessary that all such persons should be named and identified before the liability under Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code can be invoked. So long as the evidence brought by the prosecution would disclose that one or more accused persons had acted in concert with other persons not named or identified, the liability under Section 34 of the Code would still be attracted. Once the other accused stands acquitted in absence of said evidence, the vicarious liability under section 34 of the Code would not be attracted so as to hold the accused liable for the offence with the aid of Section 34 of the Code. However, the accused would still be liable for the offence if the injury or injuries leading to offence can be attributed to him.^{182.} A bare reading of this section shows that the section could be dissected as follows:

- (a) Criminal act is done by several persons;
- (b) Such act is done in furtherance of the common intention of all; and
- (c) Each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.

- (d) But, it is not necessary that all such persons should be named and identified before the liability under Section 34 of the Indian Penal Code can be invoked.^{183.}

In other words, these three ingredients would guide the court in determining whether an accused is liable to be convicted with the aid of section 34. While first two are the acts which are attributable and have to be proved as actions of the accused, the third is the consequence. Once the criminal act and common intention are proved, then by fiction of law, criminal liability of having done that act by each person individually would arise. The criminal act, according to section 34 IPC, 1860 must be done by several persons. The emphasis in this part of the section is on the word "done".^{184.} The section does not envisage the separate act by all the accused persons for becoming responsible for the ultimate criminal act. If such an interpretation is accepted, the purpose of section 34 shall be rendered infructuous.^{185.} Under section 34 of the Indian Penal Code, a pre-concert in the sense of a distinct previous plan is not necessary to be proved.^{186.} It is a well settled law that mere presence or association with other members is not per se sufficient to hold each of them criminally liable for the offences committed by the other members, unless there is sufficient evidence on record to show that one such member also intends to or knows the likelihood of commission of such an offending act.^{187.}

[s 34.5] Three leading Cases.—

The case of Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor,^{188.} is a locus classicus and has been followed by number of High Courts and the Supreme Court in a large number of cases. In this case, the Judicial Committee dealt with the scope of section 34 dealing with the acts done in furtherance of the common intention, making all equally liable for the results of all the acts of others. It was observed that section 34 when it speaks of a criminal act done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all, has regard not to the offence as a whole, but to the criminal act, that is to say, the totality of the series of acts which result in the offence. In the case of a person assaulted by many accused, the criminal act is the offence which finally results, though the achievement of that criminal act may be the result of the action of several persons.

In another celebrated case Mehubub Shah v King-Emperor,^{189.} the court held that:

Section 34 lays down a principle of joint liability in the doing of a criminal act. The section does not say "the common intentions of all," nor does it say "an intention common to all." Under the section, the essence of that liability is to be found in the existence of a common intention animating the accused leading to the doing of a criminal act in furtherance of such intention. To invoke the aid of s.34 successfully, it must be shown that the criminal act complained against was done by one of the accused persons in the furtherance of the common intention of all; if this is shown, then liability for the crime may be imposed on any one of the persons in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone. This being the principle, it is clear to their Lordships that common intention within the meaning of the section implies a pre-arranged plan, and to convict the accused of an offence applying the section it should be proved that the criminal act was done in concert pursuant to the pre-arranged plan.

Approving the judgments of the Privy Council in Barendra Kumar Ghosh (Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor),^{190.} and Mahbub Shah cases¹⁹¹ a three-Judge Bench of Supreme Court in Pandurang v State of Hyderabad,^{192.} held that to attract the applicability of section 34 of the Code the prosecution is under an obligation to establish that there existed a common intention which requires a pre-arranged plan because before a man can be vicariously convicted for the criminal act of another, the act must have been done in furtherance of the common intention of all. The Court had in mind the ultimate act done in furtherance of the common intention

[s 34.6] Common intention and mens rea.—

Under section 34, every individual offender is associated with the criminal act which constitutes the offence both physically as well as mentally i.e. he is a participant not only in what has been described as a common act but also what is termed as the common intention and, therefore, in both these respects his individual role is put into serious jeopardy although this individual role might be a part of a common scheme in which others have also joined him and played a role that is similar or different. But referring to the common intention, it needs to be clarified that the courts must keep in mind the fine distinction between "common intention" on the one hand and mens rea as understood in criminal jurisprudence on the other. Common intention is not alike or identical to mens rea. The latter may be coincidental with or collateral to the former but they are distinct and different.^{193.}

[s 34.7] Participation.—

Participation of several persons in some action with the common intention of committing a crime is an essential ingredient; once such participation is established, section 34 is at once attracted.^{194.} Thus, the dominant feature of section 34 is the element of intention and participation in action. This participation need not in all cases be by physical presence.^{195.} The Supreme Court has held that it is the essence of the section that the person must be physically present at the actual commission of the crime. He need not be present in the actual room; he can, for instance, stand guard by a gate outside ready to warn his companions about any approach of danger or wait in a car on a nearby road ready to facilitate their escape, but he must be physically present at the scene of the occurrence and must actually participate in the commission of the offence in some way or other at the time crime is actually being committed.^{196.}

The Supreme Court has emphasised that proof of participation by acceptable evidence may in circumstances be a clue to the common intention and that it would not be fatal to the prosecution case that the culprits had no community of interests.^{197.}

Sometimes, however, absence of actual participation may serve an important purpose as it happened, for example, where in a love triangle the paramour killed the woman's husband and she remained sitting with the dead body inside the house without opening the door. The main accused having been acquitted, the Supreme Court held that the woman alone could not be convicted under section 302 read with section 34 particularly in view of the fact that the nature of the injuries (gandasa blows with a heavy hand) made it explicit that they were the handiwork of masculine power and not that of feminine hands.^{198.} It is also necessary to remember that mere presence of the offender at the scene of murder without any participation to facilitate the offence is not enough.^{199.} By merely accompanying the accused one does not become liable for the crime committed by the accused within the meaning of section 34, IPC, 1860.^{200.} The degree of participation is also an important factor.^{201.} The court restated the two ingredients for application of the section which are:

- (i) common intention to commit a crime, and
- (ii) participation by all the accused in the act or acts in furtherance of the common intention. These two things establish their joint liability.^{202.}

Where one of the accused persons focussed light on the victim with a torch so as to enable others to assault him, otherwise it is a dark night. The court said that his conduct prior and subsequent to the occurrence clearly showed that he shared the common intention so far as the assault on the deceased was concerned. Hence, he was rightly roped in under section 34.^{203.} If participation is proved and common intention is absent, section 34 cannot be invoked.^{204.} The co-accused was standing outside the house, where the incident took place, while the others committed the murder. There is no evidence of his having played any part in the crime. He did not even act as a guard; he did not prevent the witness from entering the house. There is no evidence of the formation or sharing of any common intention with the other accused. No weapon was seized from him, nor was any property connected with the crime, confiscated from him. It was therefore, held that, it was not safe to convict the co-accused of the offence of murder with the aid of sub-sections 34 and 120(B).²⁰⁵.

[s 34.8] Physical Presence not sine qua non. –

Physical presence at the very spot is not always a necessary ingredient to attract the action. The Supreme Court decision in Shreekantiah Ramayya v State of Bombay,²⁰⁶ is the authority for the aforesaid proposition. Vivian Bose, J, speaking for the Bench of three Judges stated thus:

He need not be present in the actual room; he can, for instance, stand guard by a gate outside ready to warn his companions about any approach of danger or wait in a car on a nearby road ready to facilitate their escape.

What is required is his actual participation in the commission of the offence in some way or other at the time when the crime is actually being committed. The participation need not in all cases be by physical presence. In offence involving physical violence, normally presence at the scene of offence may be necessary, but such is not the case in respect of other offences when the offence consists of diverse acts which may be done at different times and places. The physical presence at the scene of offence of the offender sought to be rendered liable under this section is not one of the conditions of its applicability in every case.²⁰⁷ Even the concept of presence of the co-accused at the scene is not a necessary requirement to attract section 34 of the IPC, 1860, e.g., the co-accused can remain a little away and supply weapons to the participating accused either by throwing or by catapulting them so that the participating accused can inflict injuries on the targeted person. There may be other provisions in the IPC, 1860 like sub-sections 120B or 109 which could be invoked then to catch such non-participating accused. Thus, participation in the crime in furtherance of the common intention is sine qua non for section 34 IPC, 1860. Exhortation to other accused, even guarding the scene etc. would amount to participation. Of course, when the allegation against an accused is that he participated in the crime by oral exhortation or by guarding the scene the court has to evaluate the evidence very carefully for deciding whether that person had really done any such act.²⁰⁸

The absence of any overt act of assault, exhortation or possession of weapon cannot be singularly determinative of absence of common intention.²⁰⁹

[s 34.9] In furtherance of common intention. –

The Supreme Court referred to the Oxford English Dictionary where the word "furtherance" is defined as an "action of helping forward." Russell, in his book on Criminal Law adopted this definition and said:

It indicates some kind of aid or assistance proceeding an effect in future and that any act may be regarded as done in furtherance of the ultimate felony if it is a step intentionally taken for the purpose of effecting the felony." The Supreme Court has also construed the word "furtherance" as "advancement or promotion."²¹⁰

1. 'Common intention'.—The phrase 'common intention' means a pre-oriented plan and acting in pursuance to the plan. The common intention to give effect to a particular act may even develop at the spur of moment between a number of persons with reference to the facts of a given case.²¹¹ In Amrik Singh's case it has further been held that though common intention may develop in course of the fight but there must be clear and unimpeachable evidence to justify that inference.²¹² Before a Court can convict a person for any offence read with section 34, it should come to a definite conclusion that the said person had a prior concert with one or more other persons, named or unnamed, for committing the said offence.²¹³ Where the act of murder by the main accused was facilitated by two others by catching hold of the victim but without knowing nor having the intention of causing death, it was held that the only common intention that could be inferred was that of causing grievous hurt.²¹⁴ Where the accused had inflicted lathi blows causing injuries only on the eyewitness and not on the deceased, he could not be said to have shared the common intention of committing murder of the deceased. He was acquitted for the charge of murder and was convicted under section 325.²¹⁵

Common intention does not mean similar intention of several persons. To constitute common intention it is necessary that the intention of each one of them be known to the rest of them and shared by them.²¹⁶

What to speak of similar intention even same intention without sharing each other's intention is not enough for this section.²¹⁷ In a case like this each will be liable for whatever injury he caused but none could be vicariously convicted for the act of any of the others.²¹⁸ In fine, if common intention cannot be inferred from the evidence of facts and circumstances of the case, section 34, IPC, 1860, cannot be invoked.²¹⁹ A party of farmers was cutting their crop. The deceased took away a portion of the harvested crop. That night when he was returning from a barat 16 persons waited for him on the way. They came towards him and the convict who was carrying a knife gave him a stab wound on the neck which proved fatal. The others did not know that he had a knife and all of them being with bare hands, it could not be said that they had the common intention of causing death. They could as well have thought that after surrounding the accused he would be called upon to return or pay for the harvest taken away by him.²²⁰ A person gifted his land to one of his grandsons. His other son along with his wife fully armed, the man with a lathi and the woman with a gandasa came to protest. The man lost control and both grandson and his father intervened to save the situation but they received lathi blows and died. The woman struck only her brother-in-law with the gandasa causing a non-fatal injury. Her husband was convicted for murder but her punishment was reduced to causing grievous hurt because it appeared that the whole thing was a spot happening and not a planned affair.²²¹

Where the genesis of the verbal wrangle between the neighbours was not known, but it appeared to have arisen suddenly, there being no chance for common intention to be formulated, each attacker was held to be punishable for his individual acts.²²²

Where common intention was established the mere fact that one of the culprits distanced himself from the scene could not absolve him from liability.²²³

It is not necessary for bringing a case within the scope of section 34 to find as to who in fact inflicted the fatal blow. A conviction under the section read with the relevant substantive provision can be made when the ingredients required by the section are satisfied and it is not necessary to mention the section number in the judgment.²²⁴ Death of two persons was caused by unprovoked firing by appellants who are police officials and grievous gunshot injuries to another person. It was not necessary to assign a specific role to each individual appellant as the firing at the Car was undoubtedly with a clear intent to annihilate those in it and was resorted to in furtherance of common intention of all the appellants. The accused were liable to conviction under section 302/34 IPC, 1860.²²⁵ The acts of all the accused need not be the same or identically similar. All that is necessary is that they all must be actuated by the one and the same common intention. The fact that two of them caused injuries at the back of their victim and the injury at the head which proved to be fatal was caused by the third person, the two co-accused could not claim to be absolved of liability for murder.^{226.}

It is not necessary for bringing about the conviction of the co-accused to show that he also committed an overt act for the achievement of their object. The absence of any overt act or possession of weapon cannot be singularly determinative of absence of common intention. If common intention by meeting of minds is established in the facts and circumstances of the case there need not be an overt act or possession of weapon required, to establish common intention.^{227.}

The accused caught hold of the victim and exhorted the main accused to strike him. On such exhortation the main accused inflicted a Kirpan wound. The victim died. It was held that the instigation was only to strike. It could not be said that the accused shared the intention of the main accused to kill. The conviction was altered from under sections 202/34 to one under section 324.^{228.} The victim woman was murdered by her father-in-law and brother-in-law. The third person helped them to conceal the dead body to screen them. The conviction of the two accused for murder was upheld but that of the third one only for concealment of evidence under sections 201/34.^{229.}

[s 34.10] Common Intention: How Proved.—

The common intention can be inferred from the circumstances of the case and that the intention can be gathered from the circumstances as they arise even during an incident.^{230.} Common intention is a state of mind. It is not possible to read a person's mind. There can hardly be direct evidence of common intention. The existence or non-existence of a common intention amongst the accused has to be deciphered cumulatively from their conduct and behaviour in the facts and circumstances of each case. Events prior to the occurrence as also after, and during the occurrence, are all relevant to deduce if there existed any common intention. There can be no straight jacket formula.^{231.} The Court has to examine the prosecution evidence in regard to application of section 34 cumulatively and if the ingredients are satisfied, the consequences must follow. It is difficult to state any hard and fast rule which can be applied universally to all cases. It will always depend on the facts and circumstances of the given case whether the person involved in the commission of the crime with a common intention can be held guilty of the main offence committed by them together.^{232.} Courts, in most cases, have to infer the intention from the act(s) or conduct of the accused or other relevant circumstances of the case. However, an inference as to the common intention shall not be readily drawn; the criminal liability can arise only when such inference can be drawn with a certain degree of assurance.^{233.} In most cases it has to be inferred from the act or conduct or other relevant circumstances of the case in hand.^{234.} This inference can be gathered by the manner in which the accused arrived on the scene and mounted the attack, the determination and concert with which the beating was given or the injuries caused by one or some of them, the acts done by others to assist those causing the injuries, the concerted conduct subsequent to the commission of the offence, for instance all of them left the scene of the incident together and other acts which all or some may have done as would help in determining the common intention. In other words, the totality of the circumstances must be taken into consideration in arriving at the conclusion whether the accused had a common intention to commit an offence of which they could be convicted.^{235.} Manner of attack shows the common intention of accused.^{236.} The Supreme Court has reiterated:

We reiterate that for common intention, there could rarely be direct evidence. The ultimate decision, at any rate would invariably depend upon the inference deducible from the circumstances of each case. It is settled law that the common intention or the intention of the individuals concerned in furtherance of the common intention could be proved either from direct evidence or by inference from the acts or attending circumstances of the case and conduct of the parties.^{237.}

[s 34.11] Complaint.—

In order to attract section 34 of the IPC, 1860, the complaint must, prima facie, reflect a common prior concert or planning amongst all the accused.^{238.}

[s 34.12] Effect of no charge under section 34.—

Even if section 34 has not been included in a charge framed for the offence under section 302 IPC, 1860 against the accused, a conviction for the offence under section 302 with the aid of section 34 is not bad as no prejudice would be caused to him.^{239.} Where the appellants caused injuries not enough to cause the death but the same were caused by another, in the absence of a charge under section 34, they were found to be guilty under section 326 of IPC, 1860.^{240.}

Sections 34, 114 and 149 of the IPC, 1860 provide for criminal liability viewed from different angles as regards actual participants, accessories and men actuated by a common object or a common intention; and as explained by five Judge Constitution Bench of in Willie Slavey v The State of MP,^{241.} the charge is a rolled-up one involving the direct liability and the constructive liability without specifying who are directly liable and who are sought to be made constructively liable.^{242.} But before a court can convict a person under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, it should come to a definite conclusion that the said person had a prior concert with one or more other persons, named or unnamed, for committing the said offence. A few illustrations will bring out the impact of section 34 on different situations.

(1) A, B, C and D are charged under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, for committing the murder of E. The evidence is directed to establish that the said four persons have taken part in the murder.

(2) A, B, C and D and unnamed others are charged under the said sections. But evidence is adduced to prove that the said persons, along with others, named or unnamed, participated jointly in the commission of that offence.

(3) A, B, C and D are charged under the said sections. But the evidence is directed to prove that A, B, C and D, along with 3 others, have jointly committed the offence. As regards the third illustration, a Court is certainly entitled to come to the conclusion that one of the named accused is guilty of murder under section 302, read with section 34, of the Indian Penal Code, though the other three named accused are acquitted, if it accepts the evidence that the said accused acted in concert along with persons, named or unnamed, other than those acquitted, in the commission of the offence. In the second illustration the Court can come to the same conclusion and convict one of the named accused if it is satisfied that no prejudice has been caused to the accused by the defect in the charge. But in the first illustration the Court certainly can convict two or more of the named accused if it accepts the evidence that they acted conjointly in committing the offence. But what is the position if the Court acquits 3 of the 4 accused either because it rejects the prosecution evidence or because it gives the benefit of doubt to the said accused? Can it hold, in the absence of a charge as well as evidence, that though the three accused are acquitted, some other unidentified persons acted conjointly along with one of the named persons? If the Court could do so, it would be making out a new case for the prosecution: it would be deciding contrary to the evidence adduced in the case. A Court cannot obviously make out a case for the prosecution which is not disclosed either in the charge or in regard to which there is no basis in the evidence. There must be some foundation in the evidence that persons other than those named have taken part in the commission of the offence and if there is such a basis the case will be covered by the third illustration.²⁴³ Absence of charge under section 34 is not fatal by itself unless prejudice to the accused is shown.²⁴⁴

[s 34.13] Alternative Charge.—

The trial Court framed charges under sections 302/307 r/w 120B IPC, 1860 and an alternative charge under sections 302/307 r/w section 34 IPC, 1860 without opining on the alternative charge, convicted the accused under sections 302/307 r/w 120B, The contention that accused is deemed to be acquitted for charges under sections 302/307/34 IPC, 1860 of the charge of common intention of committing murder and there was no appeal by the State against the deemed acquittal against that charge, it was not open to the High Court to alter or modify the conviction under sections 302/307/34 IPC, 1860, repelled by holding that charges had indeed been framed in the alternative and for cognate offences having similar ingredients as the main allegation of murder.²⁴⁵

[s 34.14] Distinction between sections 34 and 149, IPC, 1860.—

Though both these sections relate to the doctrine of vicarious liability and sometimes overlap each other there are substantial points of difference between the two. They are as under:—

- (i) Section 34 does not by itself create any specific offence, whereas section 149, IPC, 1860, does so (see discussion under sub-para "principle" ante).
- (ii) Some active participation, especially in a crime involving physical violence is necessary under section 34 but section 149, IPC, 1860, does not require it and the liability arises by reason of mere membership of the unlawful assembly with a common object and there may be no active participation at all in the preparation and commission of the crime.
- (iii) Section 34 speaks of common intention but section 149, IPC, 1860, contemplates common object which is undoubtedly wider in its scope and amplitude than intention. If the offence committed by a member of an unlawful assembly is in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object, all other members of the unlawful assembly would be guilty of that offence under section 149, IPC, 1860, although they may not have intended to do it or participated in the actual commission of that offence.²⁴⁶
- (iv) Section 34 does not fix a minimum number of persons who must share the common intention, whereas section 149, IPC, 1860, requires that there must be at least five persons who must have the same common object (see also discussion under sub-head "Sections 34 and 149" under section 149, IPC, 1860, infra).²⁴⁷

[s 34.15] Effect of conviction or acquittal of one or more or others.—

Several persons involved in a criminal adventure may be guilty of different offences depending upon their respective acts. If the act is done in furtherance of their common intention, all of them become equally liable for the act. Similarly, if they are members of an unlawful assembly, an act done by any one in prosecution of the common object or any act which the members knew could happen in such prosecution, every member would be liable for the act. If any one of them happens to be wrongly acquitted and no appeal has been filed against it, it would not ipso facto impede the conviction of others.

Likewise, the conviction of any one or more them does not automatically result in the conviction of others.^{248.}

[s 34.16] Substitution of conviction from section 149 to section 34.—

Following some earlier rulings,^{249.} the Supreme Court has stated the law in the following terms:^{250.}

It is true that there was no charge under s. 302 read with s. 34... but the facts of the case are such that the accused could have been charged alternatively either under s. 302 read with s. 149 or under s. 302 read with s. 34 and one of the accused having been acquitted, the conviction under s. 302/149 can be substituted with one under s. 302/34. No prejudice is likely to be caused to the accused whose appeal is being dismissed.^{251.}

[s 34.17] Robbery.—

Provision under section 397 inevitably negates the use of the principles of constructive or vicarious liability engrafted under section 34. The sentence for offence under section 397 of the IPC, 1860 cannot be awarded to those of the members of the group of dacoits who did not use any deadly weapon. A plain reading of section 397 of the IPC, 1860 would make it clear that such guilt can be attributed only to that offender who uses any deadly weapon or causes grievous hurt to any person during course of the commission of the robbery. The provision postulates that only the individual act of accused will be relevant to attract section 397 of the IPC, 1860.^{252.} In a sudden quarrel over payment, person sitting inside the car pulled the petrol pump attendant into the car and drove away. The occupants of the car escaped punishment. It was held that the driver alone could not be held guilty of the offence of robbery and abduction with the aid of section 34.^{253.} In a serial highway robbery and murder in which same persons were involved, it was found as a fact that the self-same two persons were seen by a witness together in a different town before the occurrence. One of their victims survived and he also testified that he saw both of them together. Both of them were held to be guilty of successive crimes and convicted for murder with the aid of section 34 without any need of knowing who played what part.^{254.}

[s 34.18] Mob action.—

A mob of 200 persons armed with different weapons came to the field with the object of preventing the prosecution party from carrying on transplantation operations. Some of them caused death of a person at the spur of the moment for some spot reason. The whole mob could not be convicted for it.²⁵⁵ A mob chased the members of the rival community up to their locality. A part of the mob started burning their houses and the other part kept on chasing and caused deaths. The court said that the two parts of the mob could not be said to have shared the intention of burning or causing death.^{256.}

[s 34.19] Misappropriation.—

Where the accused the Sarpanch and Secretary of a Gram Panchayat misappropriated the funds of the Panchayat and the circumstances and evidence showed patent dishonest intention on the part of the accused persons, the conviction and sentence of the accused under section 409/34, was not interfered with.^{257.}

[s 34.20] Rape cases.—

In Gang Rape it is not necessary that the intention should exist from the beginning. It can be developed at the last minute before the commission of the offence.^{258.}

[s 34.21] Exhortation.—

One of the accused exhorted while the other immobilised the deceased and the third accused delivered the fatal injuries. It was held that each one shared a common intention.²⁵⁹ Section 34 was held to have been rightly applied where two of the accused persons caught hold of the deceased and on their exhortation the third accused shot him on the right temple resulting in death.²⁶⁰

Mere exhortation by one of the accused persons saying that they would not leave the victim till he died was held to be not a basis for roping into the common intention of the others.²⁶¹ The only allegation against the appellant was her exhortation. Enmity between the family of the deceased and that of the accused proved. In such a situation, where the eye witnesses have not narrated any specific role carried by the appellant, rather the specific role of assaulting with the sword has been attributed to the co-accused, it cannot be ruled out that the name of the appellant has been added due to enmity with the main accused.²⁶²

[s 34.22] Pre-conceived common intention.—

Only when a court with some certainty holds that a particular accused must have pre-conceived or pre-meditated the result which ensued or acted in concert with others in order to bring about that result, that section 34 may be applied.²⁶³

[s 34.23] Common intention and private defence.—

If two or more persons had common intention to commit murder and they had participated in the acts done by them in furtherance of that common intention, all of them would be guilty of murder. Section 96 IPC, 1860 says that nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence. Though all the accused would be liable for committing the murder of a person by doing an act or acts in furtherance of the common intention, they would not be liable for the act or acts if they had the right of private defence to voluntarily cause death of that person. Common intention, therefore, has relevance only to the offence and not to the right of private defence. What would be an offence by reason of constructive liability would cease to be one if the act constituting the offence was done in exercise of the right of private defence.

If the voluntary causing of death is not permissible under the right of private defence under section 96, then the common intention in regard thereto will lead to the result that the accused persons must be held guilty by reason of constructive liability under the relevant section (in this case section 304 Part I IPC, 1860). If, however, the common intention was only to commit an act which was permissible within the confines of s. 96 read with s. 98, then constructive liability under section 34 cannot be said to have been accrued to the accused. If the right of private defence was exceeded by some persons, the guilt of each of the accused proved to have exceeded the right of private defence would have to be dealt with separately. The instant case came under the former situation, and hence, such persons were guilty under section 304, Part I IPC, 1860. They, therefore, must be held to have had a common object for causing death of P. They were sentenced to undergo ten years' rigorous imprisonment each.²⁶⁴

170. Subs. by Act 27 of 1870, section 1, for section 34.

171. Goudappa v State of Karnataka, (2013) 3 SCC 675 [LNIND 2013 SC 177] ; Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011SC 1748 : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ.

2908 ; Abdul Sayeed v State of MP, 2010 (10) SCC 259 [LNIND 2010 SC 872] : 2010(9) Scale 379 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1262.

172. Kuria v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2013 SC 1085 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : (2012) 10 SCC 433 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : 2012 Cr LJ 4707 (SC).

173. Queen v Gora Chand Gope, (1866) 5 South WR (Cr) 45.

174. Ashok Kumar v State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 109 : (1977)1 SCC 746 .

175. Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v State Of Maharashtra AIR 2005 SC 1460 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] : (2005) 10 SCC 404 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] .

176. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor, AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] .

177. Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .

178. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .

179. Garib Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 1286 : AIR 1973 SC 460 [LNIND 1972 SC 187] . See also Yogendra v State of Bihar, 1984 Cr LJ 386 (SC).

180. Ram Tahal v State of UP, 1972 Cr LJ 227 : AIR 1972 SC 254 [LNIND 1971 SC 579] relied in Thoti Manohar v State of AP, 2012, (7) Scale 215 : (2012) 7 SCC 723 [LNIND 2012 SC 365] : 2012 Cr LJ 3492 ; see also Amar Singh v State of Haryana, 1973 Cr LJ 1409 : AIR 1973 SC 2221 ; Dharam Pal v State of UP, 1975 Cr LJ 1666 : AIR 1975 SC 1917 [LNIND 1975 SC 314] ; Amir Hussain v State of UP, 1975 Cr LJ 1874 : AIR 1975 SC 2211 State of Rajasthan v Arjun Singh, (2011) 9 SCC 115 [LNIND 2011 SC 855] : AIR 2011 SC 3380 [LNIND 2011 SC 855] .

181. BN Srikantiah v State of Mysore, AIR 1958 SC 672 [LNIND 1958 SC 49] : 1958 Cr LJ 1251 .

182. Killer Thiayagu v. State, AIR 2017 SC 612 [LNINDORD 2017 SC 1134] .

183. Killer Thiayagu v. State, AIR 2017 SC 612 [LNINDORD 2017 SC 1134] .

184. Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] ; NandKishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] ; Baldeo Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1972 SC 464 : 1972 Cr LJ 262 ; Rana Pratap v State of Haryana, AIR 1983 SC 680 [LNIND 1983 SC 157] : 1983 Cr LJ 1272 : (1983) 3 SCC 327 [LNIND 1983 SC 157] ,

185. Syed Yousuf Hussain v State of AP, AIR 2013 SC 1677 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] : 2013 Cr LJ 2172 : 2013 (5) Scale 346 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] , (2013)4 SCC 517 [LNIND 2013 SC 275] ; Suresh v State of UP, 2001 (3) SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] ; Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .

186. Sudip Kr. Sen v State of WB, AIR 2016 SC 310 [LNIND 2016 SC 10] : 2016 Cr LJ 1121 .

187. Nagesar v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 2948 .

188. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v King Emperor, AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] .

189. Mehbub Shah v King-Emperor, AIR 1945 PC 148 .

190. Supra. 191. Supra.

192. Pandurang v State of Hyderabad, AIR 1955 SC 216 [LNIND 1954 SC 171] : 1955 Cr LJ 572 .

193. Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] NandKishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] .

194. Vijendra Singh v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 860 [LNIND 2017 SC 16] ; Bharwad Mepa Dana v State of Bombay, AIR 1960SC 289.

195. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .

196. Shreekantiah Ramayya, (1954) 57 Bom LR 632 (SC); Shiv Prasad, AIR 1965 SC 264 [LNIND 1964 SC 51] : (1965) 1 CrLJ 249 .
197. Baba Lodhi v State of UP, (1987) 2 SCC 352 : AIR 1987 SC 1268 : 1987 Cr LJ 1119 ; MA AbdullaKunhi v State of Kerala, AIR 1991 SC 452 [LNIND 1991 SC 24] : 1991 Cr LJ 525 : (1991) 2 SCC 225 [LNIND 1991 SC 24] ; Noor v State of Karnataka, (2007) 12 SCC 84 [LNIND 2007 SC 639] : (2008) 2 SCC Cr 221 : 2007 Cr LJ 4299 .
198. Tara Devi v State of UP, (1990) 4 SCC 144 : AIR 1991 SC 342 . See also Hem Raj v State Delhi Admn., 1990 Cr LJ 2665 : 1990 Supp SCC 291 : AIR 1990 SC 2252 , one of the accused alone proved to have given the fatal blow, the participation of others not proved, others not convicted under section 302/34.
199. Bishan Singh v State of Punjab, 1983 Cr LJ 973 : AIR 1983 SC 748 : 1983 Cr LJ (SC) 327 : 1983 SCC (Cr) 578; Ghanshyam v State of UP, 1983 Cr LJ 439 (SC) : AIR 1983 SC 293 : (1982) 2 SCC 400 .
200. Dasrathlal v State of Gujarat, 1979 Cr LJ 1078 (SC) : AIR 1979 SC 1342 . See further Rangaswami v State of TN, AIR 1989 SC 1137 : 1989 Cr LJ 875 : 1989 SCC (Cr) 617 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 686 . Gulshan v State of Punjab, 1989 Cr LJ 120 : AIR 1988 SC 2110 : 1990 Supp SCC 682 .
201. Jarnail Singh v State of Punjab, (1996) 1 SCC 527 [LNIND 1995 SC 1172] : AIR 1996 SC 755 [LNIND 1995 SC 1172] : 1996 Cr LJ 1139 .
202. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 ; Chandrakant Murgyappa Umrani v State of Maharashtra, 1998 SCC (Cr) 698; Hamlet @ Sasi. v State of Kerala, (2003) 10 SCC 108 [LNIND 2003 SC 688] ; Surendra Chauhan v State of MP, (2000) 4 SCC 110 [LNIND 2000 SC 515] : AIR 2000 SC 1436 [LNIND 2000 SC 515] ; Ramjee Rai v State of Bihar, (2006) 13 SCC 229 [LNIND 2006 SC 647] : 2006 Cr LJ 4630 ; Prakash v State of MP, (2006) 13 SCC 508 [LNIND 2006 SC 1071] : 2007 Cr LJ 798 ; Sham Shankar Kankaria v State of Maharashtra, (2006) 13 SCC 165 [LNIND 2006 SC 684] ; Manik Das v State of Assam, (2007) 11 SCC 403 [LNIND 2007 SC 769] : AIR 2007 SC 2274 [LNIND 2007 SC 769] , participation proved.
203. Chacko v State of Kerala, (2004) 12 SCC 269 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] : AIR 2004 SC 2688 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] ; Abdul Wahid v State of Rajasthan, (2004) 11 SCC 241 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : AIR 2004 SC 3211 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : 2004 Cr LJ 2850 ; Janak Singh v State of UP, (2004) 11 SCC 385 [LNIND 2004 SC 515] : AIR 2004 SC 2495 [LNIND 2004 SC 515] : 2004 Cr LJ 2533 ; Parsuram Pandey v State of Bihar, 2005 SCC (Cr) 113 : AIR 2004 SC 5068 [LNIND 2004 SC 1075] .
204. Suresh Sakharam Nangare v State of Maharashtra, 2012 (9) Scale 245 [LNIND 2012 SC 574] : (2012) 9 SCC 249 [LNIND 2012 SC 574] .
205. Raju v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 4425 .
206. Shreekantiah Ramayya v State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955 SCR (1) 1177 .
207. Parasa Raja Manikyala Rao v State of AP, (2003) 12 SC 306 : AIR 2004 SC 132 [LNIND 2003 SC 888] : 2004 Cr LJ 390 ; Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 ; Jaikrishnadas Desai, (1960) 3 SCR 319 [LNIND 1960 SC 79] : AIR 1960 SC 889 [LNIND 1960 SC 79] : 1960 Cr LJ 1250 ; Dani Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 4570 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] : (2004) 13 SCC 203 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] .
208. Suresh v State of UP, 2001 (3) SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] : AIR 2001 SC 1344 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] ; Ramaswami Ayyangar v State of TN, AIR 1976 SC 2027 [LNIND 1976 SC 128] : 1976 Cr LJ 1536 (the presence of those who in one way or the other facilitate the execution of the common design itself tantamounts to actual participation in the "criminal act").

209. Rajkishore Purohit v State of Madhya Pradesh, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] .
210. Parasa Raja Manikyala Rao v State of AP, (2003) 12 SC 306 : AIR 2004 SC 132 [LNIND 2003 SC 888] : 2004 Cr LJ 390 , citing Shankarlal Kacharabhai, AIR 1965 SC 1260 [LNIND 1964 SC 230] : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 226 .
211. Dharnidhar v State of UP, (2010) 7 SCC 759 [LNIND 2010 SC 584] : 2010 (7) Scale 12 ; Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] .
212. Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 465 (SC) : (1972) 4 SCC (N) 42 (SC).
213. Krishna Govind Patil v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1964 (1) SCR 678 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1963 Cr LJ 351 (SC); State of Maharashtra v Jagmohan Singh Kuldip Singh Anand, (2004) 7 SCC 659 [LNIND 2004 SC 862] : AIR 2004 SC 4412 [LNIND 2004 SC 862] , the prosecution is not required to prove in every case a pre-arranged plan or prior concert. Preetam Singh v State of Rajasthan, (2003) 12 SCC 594 , prior concert can be inferred, common intention can develop on the spot.
214. Harbans Nonia v State of Bihar, AIR 1992 SC 125 : 1992 Cr LJ 105 .
215. Dharam Pal v State of UP, AIR 1995 SC 1988 [LNIND 1995 SC 198] : 1995 Cr LJ 3642 .
216. Hanuman Prasad v State of Rajasthan, (2009) 1 SCC 507 [LNIND 2008 SC 2256] : (2009) 1 SCC Cr 564, the Supreme Court distinguishes common intention from similar intention and also explains the meaning and applicability of the expression.
217. Dajya Moshaya Bhil v State of Maharashtra, 1984 Cr LJ 1728 : AIR 1984 SC 1717 : 1984 Supp SCC 373 . The Supreme Court applied the distinction between common intention and similar intention in State of UP v Rohan Singh, (1996) Cr LJ 2884 (SC) : AIR 1996 SCW 2612 . In Mohan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 174 [LNIND 1962 SC 118] it was held that persons having similar intention which is not the result of pre-concerted plan cannot be held guilty for the "criminal act" with the aid of Section 34.
218. Parichhat v State of MP, 1972 Cr LJ 322 : AIR 1972 SC 535 ; Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1972 Cr LJ 465 (SC). Followed in Khem Karan v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 2138 All where each accused hit differently at the behest of one of them, hence, no common intention.
219. Mitter Sen v State of UP, 1976 Cr LJ 857 : AIR 1976 SC 1156 ; see also Gajjan Singh v State of Punjab, 1976 Cr LJ 1640 : AIR 1976 SC 2069 [LNIND 1976 SC 72] ; Jarnail Singh v State of Punjab, 1982 Cr LJ 386 : AIR 1982 SC 70 (SC).
220. Rambilas Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1989 SC 1593 [LNIND 1989 SC 216] : (1989) 3 SCC 605 [LNIND 1989 SC 216] : 1989 Cr LJ 1782 . The conviction under sub-sections 34/149 and 34/302 was set aside.
221. Tripta v State of Haryana, AIR 1992 SC 948 : 1992 Cr LJ 3944 . See also Major Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 342 [LNIND 2002 SC 742] : 2003 Cr LJ 473 : (2002) 10 SCC 60 [LNIND 2002 SC 742] ; Balram Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 2213 [LNIND 2003 SC 514] : (2003) SCC 286 .
222. Devaramani v State of Karnataka, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1534 SC. See also Gopi Nath v State of UP, AIR 2001 SC 2493 : 2001 Cr LJ 3514 ; Pal Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1999 SC 2548 [LNIND 1999 SC 604] : 1999 Cr LJ 3962 ; Prem v Daula, AIR 1997 SC 715 [LNIND 1997 SC 64] : 1997 Cr LJ 838 ; Muni Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 3640 ; Mahesh Mahto v State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 3567 [LNIND 1997 SC 1103] : 1997 Cr LJ 4402 .
223. Lallan Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 333 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] : 2003 Cr LJ 465 : (2003) 1 SCC 268 [LNIND 2002 SC 705] .
224. Narinder Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2000 SC 2212 [LNIND 2000 SC 615] : 2000 Cr LJ 3462 , Sheelam Ramesh v State of AP, AIR 2000 SC 118 [LNIND 1999 SC 926] : 2000 Cr LJ 51 ; State of

Haryana v Bhagirath, AIR 1999 SC 2005 [LNIND 1999 SC 541] : 1999 CrLJ 2898 ; Asha v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 2828 [LNIND 1997 SC 844] : 1997 Cr LJ 3561 .

225. Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1748 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ 2908 .

226. Krishnan v State, (2003) 7 SCC 56 [LNIND 2003 SC 587] : AIR 2003 SC 2978 [LNIND 2003 SC 587] : 2003 Cr LJ 3705 .

227. Rajkishore Purohit v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] .

228. Ajay Sharma v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 2798 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] : 1998 Cr LJ 4599 . See also State of Karnatakav Maruthi, AIR 1997 SC 3797 : 1997 Cr LJ 4407 ; Bhupinder Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 1997 SC642 : 1997 Cr LJ 958 .

229. State of UP v Balkrishna Das, AIR 1997 SC 225 [LNIND 1996 SC 1753] : 1997 Cr LJ 73 .

230. State of AP v M Sobhan Babu, 2011 (3) Scale 451 [LNIND 2010 SC 1219] : 2011 Cr LJ 2175 (SC).

231. Rajkishore Purohit v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 3588 [LNIND 2017 SC 362] ; State of AP v M. Sobhan Babu, 2011 (3) Scale 451 [LNIND 2010 SC 1219] : 2011 Cr LJ 2175 (SC).

232. Kuria v State of Rajasthan, (2012) 10 SCC 433 [LNIND 2012 SC 678] : 2012 Cr LJ 4707 (SC); Hemchand Jha v State of Bihar, (2008) 11 SCC 303 [LNIND 2008 SC 1299] : (2008) Cr LJ 3203 ; Shyamal Ghosh v State of WB, (2012) 7 SCC 646 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] : 2012 Cr LJ 3825 : AIR 2012 SC 3539 [LNIND 2012 SC 397] ; Nand Kishore v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 2775 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] : (2011) 12 SCC 120 [LNIND 2011 SC 622] .

233. Bengai Mandal v State of Bihar, AIR 2010 SC 686 [LNIND 2010 SC 39] : (2010) 2 SCC 91 [LNIND 2010 SC 39] .

234. Maqsoodan v State of UP, 1983 Cr LJ 218 : AIR 1983 SC 126 [LNIND 1982 SC 199] : (1983) 1 SCC 218 [LNIND 1982 SC 199] ; Aizaz v State of UP, (2008) 12 SCC 198 [LNIND 2008 SC 1621] : 2008 Cr LJ 4374 , Lala Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 225 [LNIND 2007 SC 803] : (2007) 3 SCC Cr 634, Harbans Kaur v State of Haryana, AIR 2005 SC 2989 [LNIND 2005 SC 211] : 2005 Cr LJ 2199 (SC), Dani Singh v State of Bihar, 2004 (13) SCC 203 [LNIND 2004 SC 1490] : 2004 Cr LJ 3328 (SC).

235. Ram Tahal v State of UP, 1972 Cr LJ 227 : AIR 1972 SC 254 [LNIND 1971 SC 579] ; see also Nitya Sen v State of WB, 1978 Cr LJ 481 : AIR 1978 SC 383 ; Sivam v State of Kerala, 1978 Cr LJ 1609 : AIR 1978 SC 1529 ; Jagdeo Singh v State of Maharashtra, 1981 Cr LJ 166 : AIR 1981 SC 648 (SC); Aher Pitha Vajshi v State of Gujarat, 1983 Cr LJ 1049 : AIR 1983 SC 599 [LNIND 1983 SC 98] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 607; Manju Gupta v MS Paintal, AIR 1982 SC 1181 [LNIND 1982 DEL 128] : 1982 Cr LJ 1393 : (1982) 2 SCC 412 . Another instance of failed prosecution under the Act is Harendra Narayan Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1991 SC 1842 [LNIND 1991 SC 307] : 1991 Cr LJ 2666 . Ghana Pradhan v State of Orissa, AIR 1991 SC 1133 : 1991 Cr LJ 1178 . Common intention not established even when the two accused were striking the same person in their own ways.

236. Raju @ Rajendra v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ 1248 (SC) : (2013) 2 SCC 233 [LNIND 2013 SC 25] .

237. Jhinku Nai v State of UP, AIR 2001 SC 2815 [LNIND 2001 SC 1587] at p. 2817. See also Jagga Singh v State of Punjab, (2011) 3 SCC 137 [LNINDORD 2011 SC 288] : AIR 2011 SC 960 [LNINDORD 2011 SC 288] .

238. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd, (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 : (2010) 12 SCR 551 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 68.

239. Darbara Singh v State of Punjab, 2012 (8) Scale 649 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : (2012) 10 SCC 476 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] ; Gurpreet Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2006 SC 191 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] : (2005) 12 SCC 615 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] .

240. Vijay Singh v State of MP, 2014 Cr LJ 2158 .

241. Willie Slavey v The State of MP, 1955 (2) SCR 1140 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] at p 1189 : AIR 1956 SC 116 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] .
242. Santosh Kumari v State of J&K, (2011) 9 SCC 234 [LNIND 2011 SC 901] : AIR 2011 SC 3402 [LNIND 2011 SC 901] : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 657.
243. Krishna Govind Patil v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1963 SC 1413 [LNIND 1963 SC 12] : 1963 Cr LJ 351 relied in Chinnam Kameswara Rao v State of AP 2013 Cr LJ 1540 : JT 2013 (2) SC 398 [LNIND 2013 SC 57] : 2013 (1) Scale 643 [LNIND 2013 SC 57] .
244. Anil Sharma v State of Jharkhand, (2004) 5 SCC 679 [LNIND 2004 SC 590] : AIR 2004 SC 2294 [LNIND 2004 SC 590] : 2004 Cr LJ 2527 .
245. Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1748 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ 2908 .
246. Barendra Kumar Ghosh v Emp., AIR 1925 PC 1 [LNIND 1924 BOM 206] (7) : 26 Cr LJ 431; Nanak Chand v State of Punjab, 1955 Cr LJ 721 (SC); Anam Pradhan v State, 1982 Cr LJ 1585 (Ori). Chittaramal v State of Rajasthan, (2003) 2 SCC 266 [LNIND 2003 SC 14] : AIR 2003 SC 796 [LNIND 2003 SC 14] : 2003 Cr LJ 889 , points of similarity and distinction explained in the case.
247. Virendra Singh v State of MP, (2010) 8 SCC 407 [LNIND 2010 SC 723] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 893 : 2011 Cr LJ 952 .
248. Surinder Singh v State of Punjab, (2003) 10 SCC 66 [LNIND 2003 SC 652] .
249. Lachman Singh v The State, 1952 SCR 839 [LNIND 1952 SC 21] : AIR 1952 SC 167 [LNIND 1952 SC 21] : 1952 Cr LJ 863 and Karnail Singh v State of Punjab, 1954 SCR 904 [LNIND 1953 SC 126] : AIR 1954 SC 204 [LNIND 1953 SC 126] : 1954 Cr LJ 580 .
250. Sangappa Sanganasappa v State of Karnataka (2010) 11 SCC 782 [LNIND 2010 SC 866] : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 256; Baital Singh v State of UP, AIR 1990 SC 1982 : 1990 Cr LJ 2091 : 1990 Supp SCC 804 ; Ramdeo Rao Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 1990 SC 1180 [LNIND 1990 SC 126] : 1990 Cr LJ 1983 .
251. Dahari v State of UP, AIR 2013 SC 308 2012 (10) Scale 160, (2012)10 SCC 256 [LNIND 2012 SC 638] ; Jivan Lal v State of MP, 1997 (9) SCC 119 [LNIND 1996 SC 2679] ; and Hamlet @ Sasi v State of Kerala, AIR 2003 SC 3682 [LNIND 2003 SC 688] ; Gurpreet Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2006 SC 191 [LNIND 2005 SC 887] ; Sanichar Sahni v State of Bihar, AIR 2010 SC 3786 [LNIND 2009 SC 1350] ; S Ganesan v Rama Raghuraman, 2011 (2) SCC 83 [LNIND 2011 SC 5] ; Darbara Singh v State of Punjab, 2012 (8) Scale 649 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : (2012)10 SCC 476 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] : JT 2012 (8) SC 530 [LNIND 2012 SC 545] .
252. Manik Shankarrao Dhotre v State of Maharashtra, 2008 Cr LJ 1505 (Kar); State of Maharashtra v Mahipal Singh Satyanarayan Singh, 1996 Cr LJ 2485 .
253. Brahmjit Singh v State, 1992 Cr LJ 408 (Del).
254. Prem v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 1608 (Bom). 255. Dukhmochan Pandey v State of Bihar, AIR 1998 SC 40 [LNIND 1997 SC 1255] : 1998 Cr LJ 66 .
256. State of Gujarat v Chandubhai Malubhai Parmar, AIR 1997 SC 1422 [LNIND 1997 SC 627] : 1997 Cr LJ 1909 (SC).
257. Ghousa Chandra Naik v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 275 (Ori). See Rameshchandra Bhogilal Patel v State Of Gujarat, 2011 Cr LJ 1395 (Guj) (Section 420/34).
258. Dev Cyrus Colabawala v State of Maharashtra, 2010 Cr LJ 758 (Bom).
259. Atambir Singh v State of Delhi, 2016 Cr LJ 568 (Del).
260. Vinay Kumar Rai v State of Bihar, (2008) 12 SCC 202 [LNIND 2008 SC 1646] : 2008 Cr LJ 4319 : AIR 2008 SC 3276 [LNIND 2008 SC 1646] .
261. Nagaraja v State of Karnataka, (2008) 17 SCC 277 [LNIND 2008 SC 2484] : AIR 2009 SC 1522 [LNIND 2008 SC 2484] : one accused struck on the road with an iron rod, two others used fists and kicks, there was nothing more common, the two could be convicted under section 323.

See also Mohan Singh v State of MP AIR 1999 SC 883 [LNIND 1999 SC 69] : (1999) 2 SCC 428 [LNIND 1999 SC 69] , Abdul Wahid v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2004 SC 3211 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] : (2004) 11 SCC 241 [LNIND 2004 SC 1454] ; AjaySharma v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 2798 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] : (1999) 1 SCC 174 [LNIND 1998 SC 879] .

262. Chandra Kaur v State of Rajasthan, 2016 Cr LJ 3346 : AIR 2016 SC 2926 [LNINDU 2015 SC 139] .

263. Suresh v State of UP AIR 2001 SC 1344 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] : (2001) 3 SCC 673 [LNIND 2001 SC 623] quoted from Shatrughan Patar vEmperor. See also Sewa Ram v State of UP, 2008 Cr LJ 802 : AIR 2008 SC682 [LNIND 2007 SC 1452] ; Abaram v State of MP, (2007) 12 SCC 105 [LNIND 2007 SC 546] : (2008) 2 SCC Cr 243 : 2007 Cr LJ 2743 .

264. Bhanwar Singh v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : AIR 2009 SC 768 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] ; Vajrapu Sambayya Naidu vState of AP, AIR 2003 SC 3706 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] : (2004) 10 SCC 152 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 35] When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention.

Whenever an act, which is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, is done by several persons, each of such persons who joins in the act with such knowledge or intention is liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone with that knowledge or intention.

COMMENT—

The preceding section provided for a case in which a criminal act was done by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of all. Under this section several persons who actually perform the act must be shown to have the particular intent or knowledge, if the act is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention. If several persons, having one and the same criminal intention or knowledge, jointly commit murder or an assault, each is liable for the offence as if he has acted alone; but if several persons join in an act, each having a different intention or knowledge from the others, each is liable according to his own criminal intention or knowledge, and he is not liable further. If an act which is an offence in itself and without reference to any criminal knowledge or intention on the part of the doers is done by several persons, each of such persons is liable for the offence.

Neither section 34 nor this section provides that those who take part in the act are jointly liable for the same offence. They merely provide that each of the performers shall be liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone. In this section also, the responsibility is shared by each offender individually if the act which is criminal only by reason of certain criminal knowledge or intention is done by each person sharing that knowledge or intention.²⁶⁵ A mere look at that section shows that if the act alleged against these accused becomes criminal on account of their sharing common knowledge about the defective running of Plant at Bhopal by the remaining accused who represented them on the spot and who had to carry out their directions from them and who were otherwise required to supervise their activity. Section 35 of the Indian Penal Code could at least prima facie be invoked against accused 2, 3, 4 and 12 to be read with section 304-A Indian Penal Code.²⁶⁶

265. Afrhim Sheikh v State of WB, AIR 1964 SC 1263 [LNIND 1964 SC 1] : 1964 Cr LJ 350 ; State v Bhimshankar Siddannappa Thobde, 1968 Cr LJ 898 (Bom).

266. Keshub Mahindra v State of MP, (1996) 6 SCC 129 [LNIND 1996 SC 2462] : JT 1996 (8) SC 136 [LNIND 1996 SC 2462] (1996) 1 SCC (Cri) 1124 (Bhopal Gas Tragedy case) against which a curative petition was filed by the CBI and it was dismissed by the Constitution bench in CBI v Keshub Mahindra, AIR 2011 SC 2037 [LNINDORD 2011 SC 209] : (2011) 6 SCC 216 [LNIND 2011 SC 514] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 36] Effect caused partly by act and partly by omission.

Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

ILLUSTRATION

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

COMMENT—

This section follows as a corollary from section 32. The legal consequences of an 'act' and of an 'omission' being the same, if an offence is committed partly by an act and partly by an omission the consequences will be the same as if the offence was committed by an 'act' or by an 'omission' alone. Fire in the transformer installed in a cinema hall led to multiple deaths but was not the causa causans of the tragedy. The absence of rapid dispersal facilities, various acts of omission and commission, violation of rules and bye-laws meant for public safety were other causes which contributed to the tragedy in equal proportion. A charge under this section was held to be justifiable.²⁶⁷

²⁶⁷. Sushil Ansal v State, 2002 Cr LJ 1369 . Also see Association of Victims of Uphaar Tragedy v Gopal Ansal, (2008) 14 SCC 611 [LNIND 2008 SC 1818] : (2009) 2 SCC (Cr) 878.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 37] Co-operation by doing one of several acts constituting an offence.

When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever intentionally co-operates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement with intent to murder Z. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B intentionally co-operate in the commission of murder and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both guilty of the offence though their acts are separate.
- (b) A and B are joint jailors, and as such have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternatively for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly co-operate in causing that effect by illegally omitting, each during the time of his attendance, to furnish Z with food supplied to them for that purpose, Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are guilty of the murder of Z.
- (c) A, a jailor, has the charge of a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much reduced in strength, but the starvation is not sufficient to cause his death. A is dismissed from his office, and B succeeds him. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, illegally omits to supply Z with food, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death. Z dies of hunger. B is guilty of murder, but, as A did not co-operate with B. A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

COMMENT—

This section follows as a corollary from section 35 as appears from the illustrations. It provides that, when several acts are done so as to result together in the commission of an offence, the doing of any one of them, with an intention to co-operate in the offence (which may not be the same as an intention common to all), makes the actor liable to be punished for the commission of the offence.²⁶⁸ By co-operating in the doing of several acts which together constitute a single criminal act, each person who co-operates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of the acts is either singly or jointly liable for that offence.²⁶⁹ If common intention is the hub of section 34, intentional cooperation is the spindle of section 37 of the Penal Code. One who shares common intention can as well cooperate in the commission of the offence intentionally. In that sense the two sections are not contradictory to each other. The former does not necessarily exclude the latter. Co-operation in the commission of the offence need not be for the entire gamut of the offence committed. It is enough if he cooperates in one of the several acts which constitute the offence. Sections 34–38 of the Penal Code delineate the parameters of constructive or vicarious penal liability in different situations. Therefore, it is not imperative that the charge should contain the particular section of the Penal Code with which constructive liability is fastened.²⁷⁰

268. Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 52 IA 40 : 52 Cal 197 : 211, 27 Bom LR 148.

269. Afrachim Sheikh v State of WB, AIR 1964 SC 1263 [LNIND 1964 SC 1] : 1964 (6) SCR 172 [LNIND 1964 SC 1] : 1964 Cr LJ 350 .

270. Justus v State, 1987 (2) KLT 330 [LNIND 1987 KER 337] : ILR 1988 (1) Ker 98 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 38] Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences.

Where several persons are engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

ILLUSTRATION

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide not amounting to murder. B, having ill-will towards Z and intending to kill him, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both engaged in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

COMMENT—

Section 38 provides that the responsibility for the completed criminal act may be of different grades according to the share taken by the different accused in the completion of the criminal act and this section does not mention anything about intention common or otherwise or knowledge.^{271.}

Sections 34–38 lay down principles similar to the English law of 'principals in the first and second degrees.' See Comment on section 107.

The basic principle which runs through sections 32 to 38 is that in certain circumstances an entire act is attributed to a person who may have performed only a fractional part of it. This axiom is laid down in section 34 in which emphasis are on the act. Sections 35–38 take up this axiom as the basis of a further rule by which the criminal liability of the doer of a fractional part (who is to be taken as the doer of the entire act) is to be adjudged in different situations of mens rea. Without the axiom itself, however, the other sections would not work, inasmuch as it is the foundation on which they all stand.^{272.}

This section provides for different punishments for different offences as an alternative to one punishment for one offence, whether the persons engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act are set in motion by the one intention or by the other.^{273.} The section applies where a criminal act jointly done by several persons and the several persons have different intentions or states of knowledge in doing the joint act.^{274.} Where three accused assaulted the deceased but only two used their weapons in a determined manner which clearly showed their common intention to kill the deceased and the third accused who had a lathi in his hand did not even use it to cause any injury to the victim, it was held that the former two were liable to be convicted under section 302 read with section 34, IPC, 1860, and the third accused was only liable under section 304, Part II read with section 38, IPC, 1860, as he had intentionally joined the other two in the commission of the act with the knowledge that the assault was likely to cause death of the deceased even though he did not have the intention to kill him.²⁷⁵.

271. Afrahim Sheikh v State of WB, AIR 1964 SC 1263 [LNIND 1964 SC 1] : 1964 (6) SCR 172 [LNIND 1964 SC 1] : 1964 Cr LJ 350 .

272. Ibra Akanda, (1944) 2 Cal 405 .

273. Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 52 IA 40 : 52 Cal 197 211 : 27 Bom LR 148.

274. State v Bhimshankar Siddannappa Thobde, 1968 Cr LJ 898 (Bom).

275. Bhaba Nanda v State of Assam, 1977 Cr LJ 1930 : AIR 1977 SC 2252 [LNIND 1977 SC 291] .
Mano Dutt v State of UP, JT 2012 (2) SC 573 : 2012 (3) Scale 219 [LNIND 2012 SC 160] : (2012) 4 SCC 79 [LNIND 2012 SC 160] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 39] "Voluntarily".

A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily" when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

ILLUSTRATION

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating a robbery and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death; and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act; yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

COMMENT—

Bare reading of this section shows that a person need not intend to cause a certain effect. If an act is the probable consequence of the means used by him, he is said to have caused it voluntarily whether he really means to cause it or not. Section implicitly lays down the principle that a man is presumed to intend the probable consequences of his act.²⁷⁶ Following this it has been held that if the accused was not aware that the person whom they confined was a public servant, section 332 (voluntarily causing hurt to deter public servant from his duty) would not be attracted. The accused would be guilty of causing hurt under section 323.²⁷⁷ The Supreme Court has given a new meaning to the word "voluntary" by holding in Olga Tellis v Bombay MC,²⁷⁸ that the act of slum dwellers putting up their huts on public footpaths and pavements cannot be described to be "voluntary" for the purposes of the definition of "criminal trespass" in section 441, it being the result of utter helplessness and their moral right of survival.

²⁷⁶. Dr.Meenu Bhatia Prasad v State, 2002 Cr LJ 1674 (Del).

²⁷⁷. Abdul Majeed v State of Kerala, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 1404 (Ker).

²⁷⁸. Olga Tellis v. Bombay MC, (1985) 3 SCC 545 [LNIND 1985 SC 215] : 1986 CrLR (SC) 23 : AIR 1986 SC 180 [LNIND 1985 SC 215] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

279. [[s 40] "Offence".

Except in the ^{280.}[Chapters] and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of this section, the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

In Chapter IV, ^{281.}[Chapter VA] and in the following sections, namely, sections ^{282.}[64, 65, 66, ^{283.}[67], 71], 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, ^{284.}[118, 119, 120] 187, 194, 195, 203, 211, 213, 214, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 347, 348, 388, 389 and 445, the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as hereinafter defined.

And in sections 141, 176, 177, 201, 202, 212, 216 and 441, the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.]

COMMENT—

"Offence" means 'an act or instance of offending'; 'commit an illegal act' and illegal means, 'contrary to or forbidden by law'. "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of sub-section 40, 41 and 42 IPC, 1860 which cover the offences punishable under IPC, 1860 or under special or local law or as defined under section 2(n) Cr PC, 1973 or section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act 1897. There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of 'adultery' as defined under section 497 IPC, 1860.^{285.} In Joseph Shine v UOI^{286.} a five judge Constitution bench of the Supreme Court struck down section 497 of the Indian Penal Code as manifestly discriminatory and arbitrary. Section 2(n) of Cr PC, 1973 defines offence as any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force and includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act 1871 (1 of 1871). Thus, the definition of 'offence' under section 2(n), Cr PC, 1973, is wider enough to enable the police to investigate into offences under other enactments also, apart from those under the IPC, 1860.^{287.} An offence seldom consists of a single act. It is usually composed of several elements and, as a rule; a whole series of acts must be proved before it can be established.^{288.} There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished. But for framing a charge for an offence under the Penal Code, the traditional rule of existence of mens rea is to be followed.²⁸⁹ In the absence of a definition in a special act, the term 'offence' should be understood in the context of section 40 of the Indian Penal Code as an act that is criminally punishable and section 3\(38\) of the General Clauses Act as an act made punishable by any law and the essential ingredient is that it should be a criminal act as understood.²⁹⁰ In Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi,²⁹¹ section 377 of IPC, 1860 in so far it criminalised consensual sexual acts of adults in private, was held violative of Article 21, Article 14 and Article 15 of the Constitution by the Delhi High Court.²⁹² This judgement of the Delhi High Court was later overruled by the Supreme Court on 12 December 2013 in Suresh Kumar Koushal case.²⁹³ Finally in Navtej Singh Johar v UOI,²⁹⁴ a five-judge bench of the Supreme Court declared section 377 of the Indian Penal Code unconstitutional, insofar as it criminalises consensual sexual acts of adults of same sex in private. However, other parts of Section 377 relating to sex with minors and bestiality remain in force.

[s 40.1] Offences under Special law.—

A plain reading of this provision of law makes it crystal clear that the effect of clause (2) of section 40 is to make everything punishable under the special law as an offence within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. The offences under the NDPS Act thus, become offences under the Indian Penal Code as the term "offence" in certain cases is extended to the things made punishable under any special or local law.²⁹⁵

[s 40.2] Article 20(1).—

The word 'offence' under Article 20 sub-clause (1) of the Constitution has not been defined under the Constitution. But Article 367 of the Constitution states that unless the context otherwise requires, the General Clauses Act 1897 shall apply for the interpretation of the Constitution as it does for the interpretation of an Act.²⁹⁶

[s 40.3] Offence and breach of duty distinguished.—

Offence generally implies infringement of public, as distinguished from mere private rights punishable under criminal law. When trial for criminal offence is conducted it should be in accordance with proof of the offence as per the evidence defined under the provisions of the Evidence Act. Converse is the case of departmental enquiry. The enquiry in departmental proceedings relates to conduct or breach of duty of the delinquent officer to punish him for his misconduct defined under the relevant statutory rules or law.²⁹⁷

[s 40.4] Suicide.—

Suicide by itself is not an offence under either English or Indian Criminal Law, though at one time it was a felony in England.²⁹⁸

[s 40.5] Euthanasia.—

In India active euthanasia is illegal and a crime under section 302 or at least section 304 IPC, 1860. Physician assisted suicide is a crime under section 306 IPC, 1860 (abetment to suicide).²⁹⁹. But in Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI,³⁰⁰ the Supreme Court held that passive euthanasia can be allowed under exceptional circumstances under the strict monitoring of the Court. In March 2018, a five-judge Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court gave legal sanction to passive euthanasia, permitting 'living will' by patients.³⁰¹

[s 40.6] Sections 40 and 141 IPC, 1860.—

Section 40 specifically mentions as to how the term 'offence' will have to be construed. In the main clause of the said section it has been clearly set out that the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code except the chapters and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of the said section. Therefore, going by the main clause of section 40, the word "offence" since denotes the thing made punishable under the Code, 'other offence' mentioned in section 141 'third', can only denote to offences, which are punishable under any of the provisions of the Code. Therefore, by applying the main clause of section 40, it can be straight away held that all offences referred to in any of the provisions of the Code for which the punishment is provided for would automatically fall within the expression "other offence", which has been used in section 141 'third'. Therefore, a conspectus reading of section 40 makes the position abundantly clear that for all offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code, the main clause of section 40 would straight away apply in which event the expression "other offence" used in section 141 'third', will have to be construed as any offence for which punishment is prescribed under the Code. To put it differently, whosoever is proceeded against for any offence punishable under the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, section 40 sub-clause 1 would straight away apply for the purpose of construing what the offence is and when it comes to the question of offence under any other special or local law, the aid of sub-clause 2 and 3 will have to be applied for the purpose of construing the offence for which the accused is proceeded against. Therefore, having regard to sub-clause 1 of section 40 of the Code read along with section 141 'third', the argument of learned senior counsel for the Appellants will have to be rejected. Only such a construction would be in tune with the purport and intent of the law makers while defining an unlawful assembly for commission of an offence with a common object, as specified under section 141 of the Code.³⁰² ²⁷⁹. Subs. by Act 27 of 1870, section 1, for section 40.

²⁸⁰. Subs. by Act 8 of 1930, section 2 and Sch I, for "Chapter".

²⁸¹. Ins. by Act 8 of 1913, section 2.

²⁸². Ins. by Act 8 of 1882, section 1.

²⁸³. Ins. by Act 10 of 1886, section 21(1).

²⁸⁴. Ins. by Act 10 of 2009, section 51(b) (w.e.f. 27-10-2009).

²⁸⁵. S Khushboo v Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : AIR 2010 SC 3196 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 2 SCC (Cr) 1299; VijaySingh v State of UP, (2012) 5 SCC 242 [LNIND 2012 SC 1216] : AIR 2012 SC 2840 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 356] .

286. Joseph Shine v UOI, decided by Hon'ble Supreme Court of India.
287. Dharma Reddy v State, 1990 Cr LJ 1476 . (AP); Director of Enforcement v MCT M Corporation PvtLtd, AIR 1996 SC 1100 [LNIND 1996 SC 63] : (1996) 2 SCC 471 [LNIND 1996 SC 63] .
288. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955 (1) SCR 1177 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955Cr LJ 857.
289. Radhey Shyam Khemka v State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54 [LNIND 1993 SC 276] : 1993 Cr LJ 2888 .
290. Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2006 SC 1301 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] : (2006) 4 SCC 278 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] .
291. Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi, 2010 Cr LJ 94 (Del).
292. Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi, 2010 Cr LJ 94 (Del).
293. Suresh Kumar Koushal v Naz Foundation, (2014) 1 SCC 1 [LNIND 2013 SC 1059] .
294. Navtej Singh Johar v UOI, 2018 (10) Scale 386 [LNIND 2018 SC 451] .
295. Daulat Raghunath Derale v State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 817 (Bom).
296. SEBI v Ajay Agarwal, AIR 2010 SC 3466 [LNIND 2010 SC 203] : (2010) 3 SCC 765 [LNIND 2010 SC 203] .
297. Depot Manager, AP State Road Transport Corporation v Mohd. Yousuf Miya, AIR 1997 SC 2232 [LNINDORD 1996 SC 4] : (1997) 2 SCC 699 [LNINDORD 1996 SC 4] .
298. Gangula Mohan Reddy v State of AP, AIR 2010 SC 327 [LNIND 2010 SC 3] : (2010) 1 SCC 327 ; Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] : AIR 1996 SC 946 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] .
299. The Constitution Bench in Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] held that both euthanasia and assisted suicide are not lawful in India, overruling the two Judge Bench decision of the Supreme Court in P Rathinam v UOI, AIR 1994 SC 1844 [LNIND 1994 SC 1533] : 1994 (3) SCC 394 [LNIND 1994 SC 1533] . The Court held that the right to life under Article 21 of the Constitution does not include the right to die.
300. Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI, (2011) 4 SCC 454 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] : AIR 2011 SC 1290 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] .
301. Common Cause (A Registered Society) v UOI, (2018) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2018 SC 87] .
302. Manga @ Man Singh v State of Uttarakhand, (2013) 7 SCC 629 [LNIND 2013 SC 529] : 2013 Cr LJ 3332 (SC).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

279. [[s 40] "Offence".

Except in the 280. [Chapters] and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of this section, the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

In Chapter IV, 281. [Chapter VA] and in the following sections, namely, sections 282. [64, 65, 66, 283. [67], 71], 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 284. [118, 119, 120] 187, 194, 195, 203, 211, 213, 214, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 347, 348, 388, 389 and 445, the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as hereinafter defined.

And in sections 141, 176, 177, 201, 202, 212, 216 and 441, the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.]

COMMENT—

"Offence" means 'an act or instance of offending'; 'commit an illegal act' and illegal means, 'contrary to or forbidden by law'. "Offence" has to be read and understood in the context as it has been prescribed under the provisions of sub-section 40, 41 and 42 IPC, 1860 which cover the offences punishable under IPC, 1860 or under special or local law or as defined under section 2(n) Cr PC, 1973 or section 3(38) of the General Clauses Act 1897. There is no statutory offence that takes place when adults willingly engage in sexual relations outside the marital setting, with the exception of 'adultery' as defined under section 497 IPC, 1860.²⁸⁵ In *Joseph Shine v UOI*²⁸⁶. a five judge Constitution bench of the Supreme Court struck down section 497 of the Indian Penal Code as manifestly discriminatory and arbitrary. Section 2(n) of Cr PC, 1973 defines offence as any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force and includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act 1871 (1 of 1871). Thus, the definition of 'offence' under section 2(n), Cr PC, 1973, is wider enough to enable the police to investigate into offences under other enactments also, apart from those under the IPC, 1860.²⁸⁷ An offence seldom consists of a single act. It is usually composed of several elements and, as a rule; a whole series of acts must be proved before it can be established.²⁸⁸ There is a basic difference between the offences under the Penal Code and acts and omissions which have been made punishable under different Acts and statutes which are in nature of social welfare legislations. For framing charges in respect of those acts and omissions, in many cases, mens rea is not an essential ingredient; the concerned statute imposes a duty on those who are in charge of the management, to follow the statutory provisions and once there is a breach or contravention, such persons become liable to be punished. But for framing a charge for an offence under the Penal Code, the traditional rule of existence of mens rea is to be followed.²⁸⁹ In the absence of a definition in a special act, the term 'offence' should be understood in the context of section 40 of the Indian Penal Code as an act that is criminally punishable and section 3\(38\) of the General Clauses Act as an act made punishable by any law and the essential ingredient is that it should be a criminal act as understood.²⁹⁰ In Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi,²⁹¹ section 377 of IPC, 1860 in so far it criminalised consensual sexual acts of adults in private, was held violative of Article 21, Article 14 and Article 15 of the Constitution by the Delhi High Court.²⁹² This judgement of the Delhi High Court was later overruled by the Supreme Court on 12 December 2013 in Suresh Kumar Koushal case.²⁹³ Finally in Navtej Singh Johar v UOI,²⁹⁴ a five-judge bench of the Supreme Court declared section 377 of the Indian Penal Code unconstitutional, insofar as it criminalises consensual sexual acts of adults of same sex in private. However, other parts of Section 377 relating to sex with minors and bestiality remain in force.

[s 40.1] Offences under Special law.—

A plain reading of this provision of law makes it crystal clear that the effect of clause (2) of section 40 is to make everything punishable under the special law as an offence within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. The offences under the NDPS Act thus, become offences under the Indian Penal Code as the term "offence" in certain cases is extended to the things made punishable under any special or local law.²⁹⁵

[s 40.2] Article 20(1).—

The word 'offence' under Article 20 sub-clause (1) of the Constitution has not been defined under the Constitution. But Article 367 of the Constitution states that unless the context otherwise requires, the General Clauses Act 1897 shall apply for the interpretation of the Constitution as it does for the interpretation of an Act.²⁹⁶

[s 40.3] Offence and breach of duty distinguished.—

Offence generally implies infringement of public, as distinguished from mere private rights punishable under criminal law. When trial for criminal offence is conducted it should be in accordance with proof of the offence as per the evidence defined under the provisions of the Evidence Act. Converse is the case of departmental enquiry. The enquiry in departmental proceedings relates to conduct or breach of duty of the delinquent officer to punish him for his misconduct defined under the relevant statutory rules or law.²⁹⁷

[s 40.4] Suicide.—

Suicide by itself is not an offence under either English or Indian Criminal Law, though at one time it was a felony in England.²⁹⁸

[s 40.5] Euthanasia.—

In India active euthanasia is illegal and a crime under section 302 or at least section 304 IPC, 1860. Physician assisted suicide is a crime under section 306 IPC, 1860 (abetment to suicide).²⁹⁹ But in Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI,³⁰⁰ the Supreme Court held that passive euthanasia can be allowed under exceptional circumstances under the strict monitoring of the Court. In March 2018, a five-judge Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court gave legal sanction to passive euthanasia, permitting 'living will' by patients.³⁰¹

[s 40.6] Sections 40 and 141 IPC, 1860.—

Section 40 specifically mentions as to how the term 'offence' will have to be construed. In the main clause of the said section it has been clearly set out that the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code except the chapters and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of the said section. Therefore, going by the main clause of section 40, the word "offence" since denotes the thing made punishable under the Code, 'other offence' mentioned in section 141 'third', can only denote to offences, which are punishable under any of the provisions of the Code. Therefore, by applying the main clause of section 40, it can be straight away held that all offences referred to in any of the provisions of the Code for which the punishment is provided for would automatically fall within the expression "other offence", which has been used in section 141 'third'. Therefore, a conspectus reading of section 40 makes the position abundantly clear that for all offences punishable under the Indian Penal Code, the main clause of section 40 would straight away apply in which event the expression "other offence" used in section 141 'third', will have to be construed as any offence for which punishment is prescribed under the Code. To put it differently, whosoever is proceeded against for any offence punishable under the provisions of the Indian Penal Code, section 40 sub-clause 1 would straight away apply for the purpose of construing what the offence is and when it comes to the question of offence under any other special or local law, the aid of sub-clause 2 and 3 will have to be applied for the purpose of construing the offence for which the accused is proceeded against. Therefore, having regard to sub-clause 1 of section 40 of the Code read along with section 141 'third', the argument of learned senior counsel for the Appellants will have to be rejected. Only such a construction would be in tune with the purport and intent of the law makers while defining an unlawful assembly for commission of an offence with a common object, as specified under section 141 of the Code.³⁰².

279. Subs. by Act 27 of 1870, section 1, for section 40.

280. Subs. by Act 8 of 1930, section 2 and Sch I, for "Chapter".

281. Ins. by Act 8 of 1913, section 2.

282. Ins. by Act 8 of 1882, section 1.

283. Ins. by Act 10 of 1886, section 21(1).

284. Ins. by Act 10 of 2009, section 51(b) (w.e.f. 27-10-2009).

285. S Khushboo v Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : AIR 2010 SC 3196 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 2 SCC (Cr) 1299; VijaySingh v State of UP, (2012) 5 SCC 242 [LNIND 2012 SC 1216] : AIR 2012 SC 2840 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 356] .

286. Joseph Shine v UOI, decided by Hon'ble Supreme Court of India.

287. Dharma Reddy v State, 1990 Cr LJ 1476 . (AP); Director of Enforcement v MCT M Corporation PvtLtd, AIR 1996 SC 1100 [LNIND 1996 SC 63] : (1996) 2 SCC 471 [LNIND 1996 SC 63] .

288. Shreekantiah Ramayya Munipalli v State of Bombay, AIR 1955 SC 287 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955 (1) SCR 1177 [LNIND 1954 SC 180] : 1955Cr LJ 857.

289. Radhey Shyam Khemka v State of Bihar, (1993) 3 SCC 54 [LNIND 1993 SC 276] : 1993 Cr LJ 2888 .

290. Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2006 SC 1301 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] : (2006) 4 SCC 278 [LNIND 2006 SC 145] .

291. Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi, 2010 Cr LJ 94 (Del).

292. Naz Foundation v NCT Delhi, 2010 Cr LJ 94 (Del).

293. Suresh Kumar Koushal v Naz Foundation, (2014) 1 SCC 1 [LNIND 2013 SC 1059] .
294. Navtej Singh Johar v UOI, 2018 (10) Scale 386 [LNIND 2018 SC 451] .
295. Daulat Raghunath Derale v State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 817 (Bom).
296. SEBI v Ajay Agarwal, AIR 2010 SC 3466 [LNIND 2010 SC 203] : (2010) 3 SCC 765 [LNIND 2010 SC 203] .
297. Depot Manager, AP State Road Transport Corporation v Mohd. Yousuf Miya, AIR 1997 SC 2232 [LNINDORD 1996 SC 4] : (1997) 2 SCC 699 [LNINDORD 1996 SC 4] .
298. Gangula Mohan Reddy v State of AP, AIR 2010 SC 327 [LNIND 2010 SC 3] : (2010) 1 SCC 327 ; Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] : AIR 1996 SC 946 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] .
299. The Constitution Bench in Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] held that both euthanasia and assisted suicide are not lawful in India, overruling the two Judge Bench decision of the Supreme Court in P Rathinam v UOI, AIR 1994 SC 1844 [LNIND 1994 SC 1533] : 1994 (3) SCC 394 [LNIND 1994 SC 1533] . The Court held that the right to life under Article 21 of the Constitution does not include the right to die.
300. Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI, (2011) 4 SCC 454 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] : AIR 2011 SC 1290 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] .
301. Common Cause (A Registered Society) v UOI, (2018) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2018 SC 87] .
302. Manga @ Man Singh v State of Uttarakhand, (2013) 7 SCC 629 [LNIND 2013 SC 529] : 2013 Cr LJ 3332 (SC).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 41] "Special law".

A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.

COMMENT—

Laws dealing with special subjects are called special laws. The special laws contemplated in section 40 and this section are only laws, such as the Excise, Opium, Cattle Trespass, Gambling and Railway Acts, creating fresh offences, that is, laws making punishable certain things which are not already punishable under the Penal Code. Negotiable Instruments Act being a special statute has overriding effect over the provisions of Cr PC, 1973.³⁰³ Since nothing in Factories Act (Special Law) which prescribes punishment for rash and negligent act of occupier or manager of factory which resulted into death of any worker or any other person, the general Law, i.e., IPC, 1860 will apply.³⁰⁴ ³⁰³. Rajan K Moorthy v M Vijayan, 2008 Cr LJ 1254 (Mad).

³⁰⁴. Ejas Ahmed v State of Jharkhand, 2010 Cr LJ 1953 (Jha) also see the comments under Section 5 of IPC, 1860.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 42] "Local law".

A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of ^{305.}~~306.~~^{307.}[India].

COMMENT—

Laws applicable to a particular locality only are termed local laws, e.g., Port Trust Acts.

^{305.} Subs. by the A.O. 1948, for "British India".

^{306.} The words "the territories comprised in" omitted by Act 48 of 1952, section 3 and Sch II (w.e.f. 2-8-1952).

^{307.} Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for "the States" (w.e.f. 3-4-1951). Earlier the words "the States" were substituted by the A.O. 1950, for "the Provinces".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 43] "Illegal." "Legally bound to do."

The word "illegal" is applicable to everything which is an offence or which is prohibited by law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action; and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.

COMMENT—

The word 'illegal' in the section has been given a very wide meaning. It consists of three ingredients: (1) everything which is an offence; (2) everything which is prohibited by law and (3) everything which furnishes ground for civil action.³⁰⁸ The words "legally bound" do not necessarily only mean the law made by the legislature or statutory law. Section 43 IPC, 1860 contains a definition of a person being legally bound to do, that is, a person is stated to be legally bound to do whatever it is illegal in him to omit.³⁰⁹

The expression "legally bound to do" carries very wide meaning where any ground for civil action can be founded on the basis of any act or omission on the part of a person, his act may be held to be illegal or it may be held that he was legally bound to do an act which he had omitted to do. If a person breaches a departmental order, he may be held guilty as he was legally bound to act in terms of the order.³¹⁰

Sexual contact between two persons with consent but out of marriage does not amount to an illegal act.³¹¹

[s 43.1] "Ground for civil action."—

In order to constitute a ground for a civil action there must be the right in a party which can be enforced. It may be breach of a contract or a claim for damages or any such similar right accruing under the law. There is no law which debars the Chief Minister from participating in a sale conducted by any Government Department or any of the corporation or any public sector undertaking affording a cause for civil action particularly when no fraud or illegal gain is involved. There was nothing in the charge to indicate, nor did the prosecution take a specific stand that the purchase of the property of the Government company furnished a ground for a civil action. The nature of the civil action should not be left to a guess work. The accused could not be expected to meet such a case at any subsequent stage.³¹²

[s 43.2] "Illegal" and "unlawful".—

The expression "illegal" and "unlawful" are synonymous and convey the same idea in language - ordinary and legal. But when a statute employs an expression with intention of conveying a special meaning and with the said purpose defines the expression in such statute as the expression "illegal" is defined in section 43 of the IPC, 1860, such meaning is to be ascertained for that expression specially and specifically for such a statute and for the purpose of such statute. Merely because two expressions mean the same ordinarily in language and law, both cannot be held to have the same meaning when one of them is specially and specifically defined and explained in one statute. So reckoned, it cannot be accepted that the definition of the expression "illegal" in section 43 of the IPC, 1860 must straightaway be mechanically imported into section 98 of the Cr PC, 1973 when we consider the ambit and play of the expression "unlawful" in section 98 of the Cr PC, 1973.³¹³.

308. R Venkatakrishnan v Central Bureau of Investigation, (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] : AIR 2010 SC 1812 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 164.

309. R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : JT 2003 (9) SC 343 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] .

310. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1 [LNIND 2009 SC 1652] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 646 : AIR 2009 SC 480 [LNIND 2008 SC 2235] .

311. S Khushboo v Kanniammal, (2010) 5 SCC 600 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : 2010 Cr LJ 2828 : AIR 2010 SC 3196 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 2 SCC(Cr) 1299; Mailsami v State, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2238 (Mad).

312. R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : 2004 Cr LJ 286 .

313. Zeenath v Khadeeja, 2007 Cr LJ 600 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 44] "Injury".

The word "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property.

COMMENT—

'Injury' is an act contrary to law.³¹⁴ It will include any tortious act.

A Magistrate imposed a fine in addition to a sentence of imprisonment on a conviction for the offence of causing death by a rash and negligent act and gave compensation to the widow of the deceased out of the fine imposed. It was held that compensation could not be given to her for she did not suffer any injury as here defined.³¹⁵ It may, however, be argued that nothing could be more harmful to the mind of a woman than the death of her husband, and the section speaks of harm to the mind as 'injury'. The former Chief Court of the Punjab held that loss of her husband's support affected a widow prejudicially in a legal right, and was therefore, an injury as defined in the Penal Code.³¹⁶ The context of section 125(1)(c) does not require reference to the definition of 'injury' rendered in section 44 IPC, 1860. The words "physical or mental abnormality" will prima facie take in congenital defects while 'injury' leading to inability to maintain itself can have reference, be at any point of time even after the attaining of majority. It may even be possible to take in all cases of physical or mental abnormality which need not necessarily be congenital.³¹⁷ As defined in section 44 IPC, 1860, "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person in body, mind, reputation or property. Now, if a person wants to save himself from injury, such as conviction in a criminal case, it does not mean that he caused injury to another.³¹⁸ Harm caused to a reputation has been held to constitute an injury, within the purview of section 44.³¹⁹

³¹⁴. Svami Nayudu v Subramania Mudali, (1864) 2 MHC 158 .

³¹⁵. Yalla Gangulu v Mamidi Dali, (1897) 21 Mad 74 (FB).

³¹⁶. Saif Ali v State, (1989) PR No. 17 of 1898 (FB).

³¹⁷. TPSH Selva Saroja v TPSH Sasinathana, 1989 Cr LJ 2032 (Mad).

³¹⁸. Prayag Das v State, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 279 .

³¹⁹. Subramanian Swamy v UOI, 2016 Cr LJ 3214 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 45] "Life".

The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

COMMENT—

Section 45 of the IPC, 1860 defines life as denoting the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context. Therefore, when a punishment for murder is awarded under section 302 of the IPC, 1860, it might be imprisonment for life, where life denotes the life of the convict or death. The term of sentence spanning the life of the convict, can be curtailed by the appropriate Government for good and valid reasons in exercise of its powers under section 432 of the Cr PC, 1973.³²⁰ Life imprisonment cannot be equivalent to imprisonment for 14 years or 20 years or even 30 years, rather it always means the whole natural life.³²¹ The expression 'imprisonment for life' must be read in the context of section 45, IPC, 1860.³²² The Court may feel that the punishment more just and proper, in the facts of the case, would be imprisonment for life with life given its normal meaning and as defined in section 45 of the Indian Penal Code.³²³

[s 45.1] Imprisonment for the remainder of Accused's natural life.—

As per the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act 2013³²⁴, the punishment for rape (section 376) is rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than ten years, but which may extend to imprisonment for life, which shall mean imprisonment for the remainder of that person's natural life, and shall also be liable to fine. In sub-sections 370, 376(A), 376(D), 376(E) also it is specifically mentioned that 'Life' shall mean imprisonment for the remainder of that person's natural life. Parliament has enacted the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 2018 which provides for enhanced punishment in rape cases. The Amendment Act provides stringent punishment for perpetrators of rape particularly of girls below 12 years. Gang rape of a girl under 12 years of age is now made punishable with a jail term for remainder of guilty person's natural life or death.³²⁵

The right to claim remission, commutation, reprieve, etc., as provided under Article 72 or Article 161 of the Constitution will always be available, being guaranteed Constitutional remedies, which are untouchable by the Court.³²⁶

-
320. Sangeet v State Of Haryana, (2013) 2 SCC 452 [LNIND 2012 SC 719] : 2013 Cr LJ 425 .
321. Mohinder Singh v State of Punjab, (2013) 3 SCC 294 [LNIND 2013 SC 71] : 2013 Cr LJ 1559 (SC); Life Convict Bengal @Khoka @Prasanta Sen v BK Srivastava, 2013 Cr LJ 1446 (SC) : AIR 2013 SC 1163 , JT 2013 (3) SC20 : 2013 (2) Scale 467 : (2013) 3 SCC 425 [LNINDORD 2013 SC 6760] ; Zahid Hussein v State of WB, AIR 2001 SC 1312 [LNIND 2001 SC 692] : (2001)3 SCC 750 [LNIND 2001 SC 692] ; Munna v UOI, AIR 2005 SC 3440 [LNIND 2005 SC 701] : (2005) 7 SCC 417 [LNIND 2005 SC 701] - A plea for premature release after 21 years of imprisonment rejected.
322. Ashok Kumar v UOI, (1991) 3 SCC 498 [LNIND 1991 SC 288] : 1991 SCC (Cr) 845 (3 Judge Bench); Gopal Vinayak Godse v State of Maharashtra, 1961 (3) SCR 440 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] : AIR 1961 SC (Const. Bench) : But a two judge bench in Ramraj v State of Chhattisgarh, (2010) 1 SCC 573 [LNIND 2009 SC 2093] : AIR 2010 SC 420 [LNIND 2009 SC 2093] held that life imprisonment is not to be interpreted as being imprisonment for the whole of a convict's natural life within the scope of Section 45.
323. Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka, 2008 (13) SCC 767 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : AIR 2008 SC 3040 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : 2008 CrLJ 3911 .
324. Act No. 13 of 2013 w.e.f 2-4-2013.
325. Refer Chapter XVI infra.
326. UOI v V Sriharan, (2016) 7 SCC 1 [LNIND 2015 SC 677] : 2016 Cr LJ 845 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 46] "Death."

The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

COMMENT—

A present day understanding of death as the irreversible end of life must imply total brain failure, such that neither breathing, nor circulation is possible any more.³²⁷

³²⁷. Aruna ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI, (2011) 4 SCC 454 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] : AIR 2011 SC 1290 [LNIND 2011 SC 265].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 47] "Animal".

The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 48] "Vessel".

The word "vessel" denotes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or of property.

COMMENT—

The word "vessel" has been defined in section 48 of the Indian Penal Code to denote anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or of property. The train compartment is not a building, tent or vessel used as a human building neither a place for worship nor a place used for the custody of property.^{328.}

^{328.} P Balaraman v The State, 1991 Cr LJ 166 (Mad).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 49] "Year." "Month."

Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British calendar.

COMMENT—

A person sentenced to imprisonment for the space of one calendar month is entitled to be discharged on the day in the succeeding month immediately preceding the day corresponding to that from which his sentence takes effect.³²⁹ The day on which a sentence is passed on a prisoner is calculated as a whole day.

³²⁹. Migotti v Colvill, (1879) 4 CPD 233 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 50] "Section."

The word "section" denotes one of those portions of a Chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 51] "Oath."

The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorized by law to be made before a public servant or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.

COMMENT—

An oath is a religious asseveration, by which a person renounces the mercy, and imprecates the vengeance of heaven, if he does not speak the truth.³³⁰ The form of oath differs according to the religious persuasion of the swearer. A Christian swears on the Bible, a Jew upon the Pentateuch, a Mahomedan upon the Koran, and a Hindu on the Gita. A Hindu or a Mahomedan has the statutory right to be affirmed instead of taking an oath.

³³⁰. White v White, (1786) 1 Leach 430; U Vali Basha v Mohd. Bashu, (2008) Cr LJ 1011 (Karn).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

[s 52] "Good faith".

Nothing is said to be done or believed in "good faith" which is done or believed without due care and attention.

COMMENT—

The expression "good faith" in criminal jurisprudence has a definite connotation. Its import is totally different from saying that the person concerned has honestly believed the truth of what is said. See the language of the law in this regard. It starts in the negative tone excluding all except what is allowed to be within its amplitude. Insistence sought to be achieved through the commencing words of the definition "nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith" is that the solitary item included within the purview of the expression "good faith" is what is done with "due care and attention". Due care denotes the degree of reasonableness in the care sought to be exercised. In Black's Law Dictionary, "reasonable care" is explained as "such a degree of care, precaution, or diligence as may fairly and properly be expected or required, having regard to the nature of the action, or of the subject matter and the circumstances surrounding the transaction. It is such care as an ordinary prudent person would exercise under the conditions existing at the time he is called upon to act".³³¹ The element of honesty which is introduced by the definition prescribed by the General Clauses Act is not introduced by the definition of the Penal Code; and we are governed by the definition prescribed by section 52 of that Code.³³² Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of mistake of fact and not by reason of mistake of law, in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law, in doing it.³³³

Some parents made poisonous propaganda against an educational institution. The court said that this could not have been done by them in good faith. Hence, the exception to section 499 was not attracted. The complaint of defamation against them could not be quashed.³³⁴

[s 52.1] Burden of proof.—

The burden is on the accused to prove this fact. Whether a person took due care and attention before he made the imputation is a matter most often within the personal knowledge of that person himself. The accused must prove that he made due enquiries before he published the imputation. It is not enough to say that he made a formal enquiry in a slipshod manner. The words 'due care and attention' imply that the accused must have made the enquiry in a reasonable manner with all circumspection. It is true that the accused is not bound to prove that the enquiry made by him was fool-proof or without the possibility of any error or chance of mistake. However, the accused must show that he got the information from proper source and he had reasonable grounds to believe the truth of the statement he made. The accused must prove by preponderance of probability that there was good faith on his part. The accused also should show that there was no malice on his part, that is to say, that there was no ill-will or spite towards the person against whom he made the imputation. What must ultimately be decided is the honesty of the accused in publishing the words complained of. So also the accused are not entitled to exception 9 of section 499, IPC, 1860 merely on the reason that the publications were not made in good faith.^{335.}

Good faith is a question of fact to be considered and decided on the facts of each case. Section 52 of the Penal Code emphasizes due care and attention in relation to the good faith. In the General Clauses Act emphasis is laid on honesty.^{336.} The meaning of the expression "good faith" is what is done with "due care and attention". Due care denotes the degree of reasonableness in the care sought to be exercised. So, before a person proposes to make an imputation, he must first make an enquiry into the factum of the imputation which he proposes to make. It is not enough that he does just a make believe show for an enquiry. The enquiry expected of him is of such a depth as a reasonable and prudent man would make with the genuine intention in knowing the real truth of the imputation. If he does not do so he cannot claim that what he did was bona fide i.e. done in good faith. Thus, a contemner, if he is to establish "good faith" has to say that he conducted a reasonable and proper enquiry before making an imputation.^{337.} The question of good faith must be considered with reference to the position of the accused and the circumstances under which he acted. 'Good faith' requires not logical infallibility but due care and attention.^{338.}

^{331.} Re: SK Sundaram, AIR 2001 SC 2374 [LNIND 2000 KER 575] : (2001) 2 SCC 171 [LNIND 2000 SC 1889] .

^{332.} Harbhajan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1966 SC 97 [LNIND 1965 SC 65] : 1966 Cr LJ 82 .

^{333.} Section 79 IPC, 1860.

^{334.} Dogar Singh v Shobha Gupta, 1998 Cr LJ 1541 (P&H).

^{335.} Damodra Shenoji v Public Prosecutor, Ernakulam, 1989 Cr LJ 2398 at 2400 (Ker). A declaration in newspapers 2½ months; after selling land by registered sale deed that the sale was under compulsion was held to be not made in good faith. The defence of exception 9 to section 499 (defamation) was not available. P Swaminathan v Lakshmanan, 1992 Cr LJ 990 (Mad).

^{336.} R K Mohammed Ubaidullah v Hajee C Abdul Wahab, AIR 2001 SC 1658 [LNIND 2000 SC 924] : (2000) 6 SCC 402 [LNIND 2000 SC 924] See Assistant Commissioner Anti Evasion Commercial Taxes Bharatpur v Amtek India Ltd, (2007) 11 SCC 407 [LNIND 2007 SC 210] : JT 2007 (4) SC 297 [LNIND 2007 SC 210] for definition of "good faith" in various enactments.

^{337.} In the matter of RKaruppan, 2004 Cr LJ 4284 (Mad)(FB).

^{338.} State of Orissa v Bhagaban Barik, AIR 1987 SC 1265 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] : (1987) 2 SCC 498 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] ; Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 1970 SC 1372 [LNIND 1970 SC 106] : 1970 Cr LJ 1266 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

339. [[s 52A] "Harbour."

Except in section 157, and in section 130 in the case in which the harbour is given by the wife or husband of the person harboured, the word "harbour" includes the supplying a person with shelter, food, drink, money, clothes, arms, ammunition or means or conveyance, or the assisting a person by any means, whether of the same kind as those enumerated in this section or not, to evade apprehension.]

COMMENT—

There are two hurdles in the way to adopt the IPC, 1860 definition of the word "harbour" as for TADA. First is that TADA permits reliance to be made only on the definitions included in the Procedure Code and not on the definitions in the IPC, 1860. Second is, the word "harbour" as such has not been used in the Procedure Code and hence, the question of side-stepping to Penal Code definitions does not arise. Sections 136 and 312 of IPC, 1860 are the provisions incorporating two of the offences involving "harbour" in which the common words used are "whoever knowing or having reason to believe. Another offence in the Penal Code involving "harbour" is section 157 wherein also the words "whoever harbours knowing that such person etc." are available. It was contended that mens rea is explicitly indicated in the said provisions in the Penal Code whereas no such indication is made in section 3(4) of TADA and therefore, the element of mens rea must be deemed to have been excluded from the scope of section 3(4) of TADA. The word "harbours" used in TADA must be understood in its ordinary meaning as for penal provisions.^{340.}

339. Ins. by Act 8 of 1942, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-2-1942).

340. Kalp Nath Rai v State, AIR 1998 SC 201 [LNIND 1997 SC 1396]: (1997) 8 SCC 732 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER II GENERAL EXPLANATIONS

THIS Chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms used are here defined and explained and the meanings thus, announced are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters.

339. [[s 52A] "Harbour."

Except in section 157, and in section 130 in the case in which the harbour is given by the wife or husband of the person harboured, the word "harbour" includes the supplying a person with shelter, food, drink, money, clothes, arms, ammunition or means or conveyance, or the assisting a person by any means, whether of the same kind as those enumerated in this section or not, to evade apprehension.]

COMMENT—

There are two hurdles in the way to adopt the IPC, 1860 definition of the word "harbour" as for TADA. First is that TADA permits reliance to be made only on the definitions included in the Procedure Code and not on the definitions in the IPC, 1860. Second is, the word "harbour" as such has not been used in the Procedure Code and hence, the question of side-stepping to Penal Code definitions does not arise. Sections 136 and 312 of IPC, 1860 are the provisions incorporating two of the offences involving "harbour" in which the common words used are "whoever knowing or having reason to believe. Another offence in the Penal Code involving "harbour" is section 157 wherein also the words "whoever harbours knowing that such person etc." are available. It was contended that mens rea is explicitly indicated in the said provisions in the Penal Code whereas no such indication is made in section 3(4) of TADA and therefore, the element of mens rea must be deemed to have been excluded from the scope of section 3(4) of TADA. The word "harbours" used in TADA must be understood in its ordinary meaning as for penal provisions.^{340.}

339. Ins. by Act 8 of 1942, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-2-1942).

340. Kalp Nath Rai v State, AIR 1998 SC 201 [LNIND 1997 SC 1396]: (1997) 8 SCC 732 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 53] "Punishments."

The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions of this Code are—

First.—Death;

¹. [Secondly.—Imprisonment for life;]

². []

Fourthly.—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely:—

(1) Rigorous, that is, with hard labour;

(2) Simple;

Fifthly.—Forfeiture of property;

Sixthly.—Fine.

COMMENT—

The object of punishment in the scheme of modern social defence is correction of the wrongdoer and not wrecking gratuitous punitive vengeance on the criminal. Some attempts have been made to modernise our penal system through piecemeal legislation at best for the first offenders, the children and the juvenile delinquents example the Probation of Offenders Act 1958, the Juvenile Justice \(Care and Protection of Children\) Act 2000, Juvenile Justice \(Care and Protection of Children\) Act, 2015 etc. In the Indian Penal Code, there is no scope for individualising the punishment; rather these five forms of punishment have to be doled out to the offenders irrespective of their psycho-social problems and needs of individual offenders. Commenting on this unhappy aspect of our penal system Krishna iyer, J, observed in Shivaji's case.³

Two men in their twenties thus stand convicted of murder and have to suffer imprisonment for life because the punitive strategy of our Penal Code does not sufficiently reflect the modern trends in correctional treatment and personalised sentencing. When accused persons are of tender age then even in a murder case it is not desirable to send them beyond the high prison walls and forget all about their correction and eventual reformation.

In Inder Singh's case.⁴ the Supreme Court issued directions to the State Government to see that the young accused of the case are not given any degrading work and they are given the benefit of liberal parole every year if their behaviour shows responsibility and trustworthiness. Moreover, the Sessions Judge was directed to make jail visits to ensure compliance with these directions.

[s 53.1] Object of Punishment.—

One of the prime objectives of criminal law is imposition of appropriate, adequate, just and proportionate sentence commensurate with the nature and gravity of crime and the manner in which the crime is done.⁵ Undue sympathy by means of imposing inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system and undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law.⁶ The object should be to protect the society and to deter the criminal in achieving the avowed object to law by imposing appropriate sentence. It is expected that the Courts would operate the sentencing system so as to impose such sentence which reflects the conscience of the society and the sentencing process has to be stern where it should be.⁷ The main purpose of the sentence broadly stated is that the accused must realise that he has committed an act which is not only harmful to the society of which he forms an integral part but is also harmful to his own future, both as an individual and as a member of the society. Punishment is designed to protect society by deterring potential offenders as also by preventing the guilty party from repeating the offence; it is also designed to reform the offender and re-claim him as a law-abiding citizen for the good of the society as a whole. Reformatory, deterrent and punitive aspects of punishment thus play their due part in judicial thinking while determining this question. In modern civilized societies, however, reformatory aspect is being given somewhat greater importance. Too lenient as well as too harsh sentences both lose their efficaciousness. One does not deter and the other may frustrate thereby making the offender a hardened criminal.⁸

[s 53.2] Different Approaches.—

Punishment in criminal cases is both punitive and reformatory. The purpose is that the person found guilty of committing the offence is made to realise his fault and is deterred from repeating such acts in future. On the commission of crime, three types of reactions may generate; the traditional reaction of universal nature which is termed as punitive approach. It regards the criminal as a notoriously dangerous person who must be inflicted severe punishment to protect the society from his criminal assaults. The other approach is the therapeutic approach. It regards the criminal as a sick person requiring treatment, while the third is the preventive approach, which seeks to eliminate those conditions from the society, which were responsible for crime causation. Under the punitive approach, the rationalisation of punishment is based on retributive and utilitarian theories. Deterrent theory, which is also part of the punitive approach, proceeds on the basis that the punishment should act as a deterrent not only to the offender, but also to others in the community. The therapeutic approach aims at curing the criminal tendencies, which were the product of a diseased psychology. Therapeutic approach has since been treated as an effective method of punishment, which not only satisfies the requirements of law that a criminal should be punished and the punishment prescribed must be meted out to him, but also reforms the criminal through various processes, the most fundamental of which is that in spite of having committed a crime, may be a heinous crime, he should be treated as a human being entitled to all the basic human rights, human dignity and human sympathy. It was under this theory that this Court in a stream of decisions, projected the need for prison reforms, the need to acknowledge the vital fact that the prisoner, after being lodged in jail, does not lose his fundamental rights or basic human rights and that he must be treated with compassion and sympathy.⁹ Imposing a hard punishment on the accused serves a limited purpose, but at the same time, it is to be kept in mind that relevance of deterrent punishment in matters of serious crimes affecting society should not be undermined. Within the parameters of the law an attempt has to be made to afford an opportunity to the individual to reform himself and lead life of a normal, useful member of society and make his contribution in that regard.¹⁰ In Dhannajoy Chatterjee v State of WB,¹¹ the Supreme Court has observed that shockingly large number of criminals go unpunished, thereby increasingly encouraging the criminals and ultimately making justice suffer by weakening the system's credibility. Realising that it is not the brutality of punishment but its surety that serves as a greater deterrent, our Supreme Court held that a barbaric crime does not have to be visited with a barbaric penalty such as public hanging which will be clearly violative of Article 21 of the Constitution.¹² With regards the question of punishment, it should be noted that punishment in one matter cannot be the guiding factor for punishment in another. Punishment has a co-relation with facts and in each case where punishment is imposed, the same must be the resultant effect of the acts complained of. More serious the violation, more severe is the punishment and that has been the accepted norm, in matters though, however, within the prescribed limits.¹³

[s 53.3] Reformation Theory.—

The reformatory aspect is meant to enable the person concerned to relent and repent for his action and make himself acceptable to the society as a useful social being.¹⁴ Theory of reformation through punishment is grounded on the sublime philosophy that every man is born good but circumstances transform him into a criminal. The aphorism that "if every saint has a past every sinner has a future" is a tested philosophy concerning human life. VR Krishna Iyer, J, has taken pains to ornately fresco the reformatory profile of the principles of sentencing in Mohammad Giasuddin v State of AP.¹⁵ Reformation should hence be the dominant objective of a punishment and during incarceration, every effort should be made to recreate the good man out of convicted prisoner. An assurance to him that his hard labour would eventually snowball into a handsome saving for his own rehabilitation would help him to get stripped of the moroseness and desperation in his mind while toiling with the rigours of hard labour during the period of his jail life. Thus, reformation and rehabilitation of a prisoner are of great public policy. Hence, they serve a public purpose.¹⁶ Punishment is also to reform such wrongdoers not to commit such offence in future.¹⁷

[s 53.4] Deterrence.—

Deterrence is one of the vital considerations of punishment. Law demands that the offender should be adequately punished for the crime, so that it can deter the offender and other persons from committing similar offences. Nature and circumstances of the offence; the need for the sentence imposed to reflect the seriousness of the offence; to afford adequate deterrence to the conduct and to protect the public from such crimes are certain factors to be considered while imposing the sentence.¹⁸ Any liberal attitude by imposing meagre sentences or taking too sympathetic view merely on account of lapse of time or personal inconveniences in respect of such offences will be result-wise counterproductive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by string of deterrence built in the sentencing system.¹⁹ For instance, a murder committed due to deep-seated mutual and personal rivalry may not call for penalty of death. However, an organised crime or mass murders of innocent people would call for imposition of death sentence as deterrence.²⁰ Protection of society and deterring the criminal is the avowed object of law and is required to be achieved by imposing an appropriate sentence. The sentencing Courts are expected to consider all relevant facts and circumstances bearing on the question of sentence and proceed to impose a sentence commensurate with the gravity of the offence. Courts must hear the loud cry for justice by the society in cases of heinous crimes like rape on innocent helpless girls of tender years, as in this case, and respond by imposition of proper sentence. Public abhorrence of the crime needs reflection through imposition of appropriate sentence by the Court. To show mercy in the case of such a heinous crime would be a travesty of justice.²¹ To give a lesser punishment to the appellants would be to render the justice system of this country suspect. The common man will lose faith in the Courts. In such cases, he understands and appreciates the language of deterrence more than the reformatory jargon.²² Punishment to an accused in criminal jurisprudence is not merely to punish the wrongdoer but also to strike warning to those who are in the same sphere of crime or to those intending to join in such crime.²³

[s 53.5] Principles of sentencing.—

Sentencing is an important task in the matters of crime. There is no straitjacket formula for sentencing an accused on proof of crime. In practice, there is much variance in the matter of sentencing. In many countries, there are laws prescribing sentencing guidelines, but there is no statutory sentencing policy in India.²⁴ The Indian Penal Code provides discretion to Indian Judges while awarding the sentence.²⁵ Courts have wide discretion in awarding sentence within the statutory limits.²⁶ The Courts have evolved certain principles: twin objective of the sentencing policy is deterrence and correction.²⁷ There are many philosophies behind sentencing justifying penal consequences. The philosophical/jurisprudential justification can be retribution, incapacitation, specific deterrence, general deterrence, rehabilitation, or restoration. Anyone or a combination thereof can be the goal of sentencing. However, when it comes to sentencing a person for committing a heinous crime, the deterrence theory as a rationale for punishing the offender becomes more relevant. In such cases, the role of mercy, forgiveness and compassion becomes secondary and while determining the quantum of sentence, discretion lies with the Court. While exercising such a discretion, the Court has to govern itself by reason and fair play, and discretion is not to be exercised according to whim and caprice. It is the duty of the Court to impose adequate sentence, for one of the purposes of imposition of requisite sentence is protection of the society and a legitimate response to the collective conscience. While considering as to what would be the appropriate quantum of imprisonment, the Court is empowered to take into consideration mitigating circumstances, as well as aggravating circumstances.²⁸ What sentence would meet the ends of justice depends on the facts and circumstances of each case and the Court must keep in mind the gravity of the crime, motive for the crime, nature of the offence and all other attendant circumstances.²⁹ The criminal law adheres in general to the principle of proportionality in prescribing liability according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct. It ordinarily allows some significant discretion to the Judge in arriving at a sentence in each case, presumably to permit sentences that reflect more subtle considerations of culpability that are raised by the special facts of each case. Judges in essence affirm that punishment ought always to fit the crime; yet in practice, sentences are determined largely by other considerations. Sometimes it is the correctional needs of the perpetrator that are offered to justify a sentence, sometimes the desirability of keeping him out of circulation, and sometimes even the tragic results of his crime. Inevitably, these considerations cause a departure from just desert as the basis of punishment and create cases of apparent injustice that are serious and widespread.³⁰ Proportion between crime and punishment is a goal respected in principle, and in spite of errant notions, it remains a strong influence in the determination of sentences. The practice of punishing all serious crimes with equal severity is now unknown in civilized societies, but such a radical departure from the principle of proportionality has disappeared from the law only in recent times. Even now for a single grave infraction, drastic sentences are imposed. Anything less than a penalty of greatest severity for any serious crime is thought then to be a measure of toleration that is unwarranted and unwise. But in fact, quite apart from those considerations that make punishment unjustifiable when it is out of proportion to the crime, uniformly disproportionate punishment has some very undesirable practical consequences.³¹ The principle of proportionality in sentencing a crime doer is well entrenched in criminal jurisprudence.

As a matter of law, proportion between crime and punishment bears most relevant influence in determination of sentencing the crime doer. The Court has to take into consideration all aspects including social interest and consciousness of the society for award of appropriate sentence.³² Undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. Imposition of sentence without considering its effect on the social order in many cases may be in reality a futile exercise. The social impact of the crime e.g. where it relates to offences against women, dacoity, kidnapping, misappropriation of public money, treason and other offences involving moral turpitude or moral delinquency which have great impact on social order and public interest, cannot be lost sight of and per se require exemplary treatment. Any liberal attitude by imposing meagre sentences or taking too sympathetic view merely on account of lapse of time in respect of such offences will be result wise counterproductive in the long run and against societal interest which needs to be cared for and strengthened by a string of deterrence inbuilt in the sentencing system.³³ Undue sympathy to impose inadequate sentence would do more harm to the justice system to undermine the public confidence in the efficacy of law and society could not long endure under such serious threats. It is, therefore, the duty of every Court to award proper sentence keeping in mind the nature of the offence and the manner in which it was executed or committed etc. Thus, it is evident that Criminal Law requires strict adherence to the rule of proportionality in providing punishment according to the culpability of each kind of criminal conduct keeping in mind the effect of not awarding just punishment on the society.³⁴ An undeserved indulgence or liberal attitude in not awarding adequate sentence in such cases would amount to allowing or even to encouraging 'potential criminals'. The society can no longer endure under such serious threats. Courts must hear the loud cry for justice by society in cases of heinous crime of rape and impose adequate sentence. Public abhorrence of the crime needs reflection through imposition of appropriate sentence by the Court.³⁵

[s 53.6] Factors to be considered.—

These are some factors which are required to be taken into consideration before awarding appropriate sentence to the accused. These factors are only illustrative in character and not exhaustive. Each case has to be seen from its special perspective. The relevant factors are as under:

- (a) Motive or previous enmity;
- (b) Whether the incident had taken place on the spur of the moment;
- (c) The intention/knowledge of the accused while inflicting the blow or injury;
- (d) Whether the death ensued instantaneously or the victim died after several days;
- (e) The gravity, dimension and nature of injury;
- (f) The age and general health condition of the accused;
- (g) Whether the injury was caused without pre-meditation in a sudden fight;
- (h) The nature and size of weapon used for inflicting the injury and the force with which the blow was inflicted;
- (i) The criminal background and adverse history of the accused;

(j) Whether the injury inflicted was not sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death but the death was because of shock;

(k) Number of other criminal cases pending against the accused;

(l) Incident occurred within the family members or close relations;

(m) The conduct and behaviour of the accused after the incident. Whether the accused had taken the injured/the deceased to the hospital immediately to ensure that he/she gets proper medical treatment?

These are some of the factors which can be taken into consideration while granting an appropriate sentence to the accused.

The list of circumstances enumerated above is only illustrative and not exhaustive. In our considered view, proper and appropriate sentence to the accused is the bounded obligation and duty of the Court. The endeavour of the Court must be to ensure that the accused receives appropriate sentence, in other words, sentence should be according to the gravity of the offence. These are some of the relevant factors which are required to be kept in view while convicting and sentencing the accused.³⁶ The facts and given circumstances in each case, the nature of the crime, the manner in which it was planned and committed, the motive for commission of the crime, the conduct of the accused, the nature of weapons used and all other attending circumstances are relevant facts which would enter into the area of consideration.³⁷

[s 53.7] Judicial Discretion:³⁸ Cases.—

A Judge has wide discretion in awarding the sentence within the statutory limits. Since in many offences, only the maximum punishment is prescribed and for some offences the minimum punishment is prescribed, each Judge exercises his discretion accordingly.³⁹ In case where for an offence, maximum imprisonment is prescribed and there is no provision for minimum imprisonment, the Court can exercise wide discretion imposing any imprisonment which may be from one day (or even till the rising of the court) to ten years/life.⁴⁰ However, the Courts will have to take into account certain principles while exercising their discretion in sentencing, such as proportionality, deterrence and rehabilitation. In a proportionality analysis, it is necessary to assess the seriousness of an offence in order to determine the commensurate punishment for the offender.⁴¹ Though punishment is the discretion of the Court, yet it must be exercised judicially and where circumstances call for a deterrent punishment, it ought to be awarded in an appropriate case.⁴² Thus where the accused, a young man of 22 committed multiple murders for sheer gain in a most cruel, callous and fiendish fashion, there was no way to show him any mercy as it was rarest of the rare cases where a sentence of death was fully justified.⁴³ In exercising this discretion, the Court must consider the gravity of the offence, the mitigating or the extenuating circumstances of the case which may justify the award of the lesser or maximum sentence.⁴⁴ Where the accused was a youth of 19, the Supreme Court while upholding conviction under section 304-Part I, Indian Penal Code, 1860, \(IPC, 1860\) reduced his sentence to the period already undergone which was 18 and a half months in the instant case. The accused, a Government servant, who will lose pensionary benefits due to conviction, deserves to be treated leniently.

The Supreme Court has laid down that in cases of death in custody on account of third degree methods, deterrent punishment should be awarded.⁴⁵ Where certain police officials, who took a man illegally in their custody and gave him beating due to which he died, were convicted under section 342, it was held that the facts that one of the accused was recipient of a medal from the President for saving a life, was awarded Rs. 5,000 by the State Government also and was suffering from T.B. and the other accused had acted on the direction of his superior, were not mitigating circumstances and the accused were liable to be punished with the maximum sentence.^{46.}

Where due to dire poverty the accused killed his ailing wife, as he could not provide money for her operation and thereafter killed his two children, as they would be neglected after their mother's death, it was held the accused deserved to be awarded life imprisonment and not capital punishment.^{47.} Where the murder in question showed signs of ruthless, unrelenting and determined vindictiveness and though the accused was 55 at the time of occurrence and 70 at the time of this appeal, the Supreme Court did not think it necessary to modify his sentence of life imprisonment.^{48.} Similarly, where murders were committed for gain, the Supreme Court refused to interfere with death sentence only because the condemned prisoners were very young and their wives and children and aged parents were dependent on them. Such considerations, the Court said, are present in most cases.^{49.} Where, for the offence of dacoity under section 395, the trial Court awarded three years' R.I., the High Court acquitted the offenders, but the Supreme Court restored the conviction after a long gap during which they got married and had resumed normal life, the period already undergone was considered to be sufficient, but a fine of Rs. 3,000 was imposed on each of them.^{50.}

Where a conviction under section 161, IPC, 1860 read with section 5\(2\) of the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 was confirmed, the Gujarat High Court modified the sentence of R.I. for one year and ordered that the appellant shall undergo sentence of R.I. for six months only. This was done in view of his age of 60 years and a number of illnesses he was suffering from.^{51.} The accused had been out of job for nearly 16 years and had undergone the trial for a number of years. He was 65 years old but had received no pension and had a large family to maintain. Hence, the Supreme Court while confirming the conviction, reduced the sentence of one year R.I. each under section 161 and the Prevention of Corruption Act to 15 days R.I. on each count. The sentence of fine was however confirmed.^{52.} Where the accused had accepted a very small amount of Rs. 30 as bribe about 16 years back and underwent the agony of trial for a long time and had to support his family, he had been in jail for some time during trial, considering these facts his sentence of imprisonment was reduced from three months R.I. to the period already undergone.^{53.}

Imposition of proper and appropriate sentence is bounded obligation and duty of the Court. The endeavour of the Court must be to ensure that the accused received appropriate sentence. The sentence must be accorded to the gravity of the offence.^{54.}

[s 53.8] Minimum Sentence.—

In order to exercise the discretion of reducing the sentence the statutory requirement is that the Court has to record "adequate and special reasons" in the judgment and not fanciful reasons, which would permit the Court to impose a sentence less than the prescribed minimum. The reason has not only to be adequate but also special. What is adequate and special would depend upon several factors and no straitjacket formula can be indicated.^{55.} Mere absence of provisions for minimum sentence is no reason or justification to treat the offence under the Act (NDPS) as any less serious.^{56.}

For the offence of murder, minimum sentence is 'life imprisonment'. Thus, the High Court cannot modify the sentence of life imprisonment awarded by the Trial Court to the one already undergone.^{57.}

To the five kinds of punishments in the section, two more were added by subsequent enactments, viz., whipping (now abolished) and detention in reformatories.

1. Death.—Death punishment is awarded for murder in rarest of the rare cases.⁵⁸ It may be awarded as punishment for the following offences:—

- (1) Waging war against the Government of India (section 121).
- (2) Abetting mutiny actually committed (section 132).
- (3) Giving or fabricating false evidence upon which an innocent person suffers death (section 194).
- (4) Threatening or inducing any person to give false evidence- if innocent person is convicted and sentenced in consequence of such false evidence, with death (195A-Part II)
- (5) Murder (section 302).
- (6) Abetment of suicide of a minor, or an insane or an intoxicated person (section 305).
- (7) Attempt to murder by life convicts (section 307-Part II)
- (8) Kidnapping for ransom, etc. (section 364A)
- (9) Causing death or resulting in persistent vegetative state of rape victim (section 376A)
- (10) Repeat offenders of offences punishable under section 376 or section 376A or section 376D (section 376E)
- (11) Dacoity accompanied with murder (section 396).
- (12) Attempt to murder by a person under sentence of imprisonment for life, if hurt is caused (section 307). For the detailed discussion on Death Penalty See Comments under [section 302 IPC].

In addition to this, Death penalty can be imposed by virtue of section 34, 149, 109 and 120B of IPC.

2. Imprisonment for life is now substituted for transportation. "Imprisonment for life" in the Code means "rigorous imprisonment for life" and not "simple imprisonment for life".⁵⁹

3. Imprisonment.—Imprisonment is of two kinds: (a) rigorous and (b) simple. In the case of rigorous imprisonment, the offender is put to hard labour such as grinding corn, digging earth, drawing water, cutting firewood, bowing wool, etc. In the case of simple imprisonment, the offender is confined to jail and is not put to any kind of work. Imposition of hard labour on prisoners undergoing rigorous imprisonment has been held to be legal.⁶⁰

The minimum term of imprisonment, however, is fixed in the following two cases: (1) If, at the time of committing robbery or dacoity, the offender uses any deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt to any person, he is punished with imprisonment of not less than seven years (section 397).

(2) If, at the time of attempting to commit robbery or dacoity, the offender is armed with any deadly weapon, he is punished with imprisonment of not less than seven years (section 398).

The Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act 2013 [Act No. 13 of 2013 w.e.f 2 April 2013] provides minimum punishment for the following offences:

- (1) Public servant disobeying direction under law- Imprisonment for a term, which shall not be less than six months. (section 166A)
- (2) Voluntarily causing grievous hurt by use of acid, etc.- Imprisonment for not less than ten years. (section 326A)
- (3) Outraging the modesty of a woman- Imprisonment of either description for a term which shall not be less than one year (section 354)
- (4) Assault or use of criminal force to woman with intent to disrobe- Imprisonment of not less than three years. (section 354B)
- (5) Voyeurism- Imprisonment of not less than one year. (section 354C)
- (6) Trafficking of person- Seven years [section 370(2)], ten years [sections 370(3), (4)], 14 years [section 370(5)],
- (7) Exploitation of a trafficked child- Imprisonment of not less than five years but which may extend to seven years and with fine. (section 370A)
- (8) Rape- Seven years [section 376(1)], ten years [section 376(2)].
- (9) Causing death or resulting in persistent vegetative state of victim- Imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than 20 years (section 376A)
- (10) Sexual intercourse by husband upon his wife during separation- Imprisonment of either description for a term which shall not be less than two years (section 376B)
- (11) Sexual intercourse by a person in authority- Imprisonment of either description for a term which shall not be less than five years. (section 376C)
- (12) Gang rape- Imprisonment for a term, which shall not be less than 20 years. (section 376D).

The Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 2018 has further amended the Indian Penal Code 1860. The Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 2018 has increased the minimum sentence in section 376(1) from seven years to ten years. The 2018 Amendment Act has inserted sections 376AB, 376DA and 376DB which provide for enhanced punishment in certain aggravated forms of rape. Refer Chapter XVI infra.

An offender is punished with rigorous imprisonment without the alternative of simple imprisonment, in the cases of—

- (1) Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of an offence, which is capital by this Code (section 194).
- (2) Rape (sections 376, 376A, 376AB, 376C, 376D, 376DA, 376DB and 376E)
- (3) House-trespass in order to the commission of an offence punishable with death (section 449).

The following offences are punishable with simple imprisonment only:—

- (1) Public servant unlawfully engaging in trade; or unlawfully buying or bidding for property (sections 168, 169).
- (2) A person absconding to avoid service of summons or other proceedings from a public servant or preventing service of summons or other proceedings, or preventing publication thereof; or not attending in obedience to an order from a public servant (sections 172, 173, 174).

(3) Intentional omission to produce a document to a public servant by a person legally bound to produce such document; or intentional omission to give notice or information to a public servant by a person legally bound to give; or intentional omission to assist a public servant when bound by law to give assistance (sections 175, 176, 187).

(4) Refusing oath when duly required to take oath by a public servant; or refusing to answer a public servant authorised to question or refusing to sign any statement made by a person himself before a public servant (sections 178, 179, 180).

(5) Disobedience to an order duly promulgated by a public servant if such disobedience causes obstruction, annoyance, or injury (section 188).

(6) Escape from confinement negligently suffered by a public servant; or negligent omission to apprehend, or negligent sufferance of escape, on the part of a public servant in cases not otherwise provided for (sections 223, 225-A).

(7) Intentional insult or interruption to a public servant sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding (section 228).

(8) Continuance of nuisance after injunction to discontinue (section 291).

(9) Wrongful restraint (section 341).

(10) Defamation: printing or selling defamatory matter known to be so (sections 500, 501, 502).

(11) Uttering any word, or making any sound or gesture, with an intention to insult the modesty of a woman (section 509).

(12) Misconduct in a public place by a drunken person (section 510).⁶¹

[s 53.9] Imprisonment for the remainder of the Accused's natural life.—

As per the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013,⁶² the punishment for rape (section 376) is rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than ten years, but which may extend to imprisonment for life, which shall mean imprisonment for the remainder of that person's natural life, and shall also be liable to fine. In sections 370, 376(A), 376(D), 376(E) it is also specifically mentioned that 'Life' shall mean imprisonment for the remainder of that person's natural life. The Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 2018 has increased the minimum sentence in section 376(1) from seven years to ten years as well as inserted sections 376AB, 376DA and 376DB which provide for enhanced punishment in certain aggravated forms of rape. Refer Chapter XVI infra.

Spending 13 and half years in jail does not mean that the petitioner has undergone a sentence for life.⁶³

4. Forfeiture.—The punishment of absolute forfeiture of all property of the offender is now abolished. Sections 61 and 62 of the IPC, 1860 dealing with such forfeiture are repealed by Act XVI of 1921.

There are, however, three offences in which the offender is liable to forfeiture of specific property. They are sections 126, 127 and 169 of the Code.⁶⁴

5. Fine.—Fine is the only punishment in the following cases:—

- (1) A person in charge of a merchant vessel, negligently allowing a deserter from the Army or Navy or Air Force to obtain concealment in such vessel, is liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 500 (section 137).
- (2) The owner or occupier of land on which a riot is committed or an unlawful assembly is held, and any person having or claiming any interest in such land, and not using all lawful means to prevent such riot or unlawful assembly, is punishable with a fine not exceeding Rs. 1,000 (section 154).
- (3) The person for whose benefit a riot has been committed not having duly endeavoured to prevent it (section 155).
- (4) The agent or manager of such person under like circumstances (section 156).
- (5) False statements in connection with an election (section 171-G).
- (6) Illegal payments in connection with an election (section 171-H).
- (7) Failure to keep election accounts (section 171-I).
- (8) Voluntarily vitiating the atmosphere so as to render it noxious to the public health, is punishable with a fine up to Rs. 500 (section 278).
- (9) Obstructing a public way or line of navigation, is punishable with a fine not exceeding Rs. 200 (section 283).
- (10) Committing of a public nuisance not otherwise punishable is punishable with a fine not exceeding Rs. 200 (section 290).
- (11) Publication of a proposal regarding a lottery, is punishable with a fine not exceeding Rs. 1,000 (section 294-A).

Where the accused partners of a firm were acquitted on a charge under section 420 of making substantial gains for themselves and an appeal against their acquittal was decided against them 15 years after the acquittal, fine and not imprisonment was considered proper punishment.⁶⁵ Where the murder accused remained in prison for sometime and was on bail for 13 years, he was not committed to prison; a fine of Rs. 50,000 in addition to the imprisonment already undergone was imposed, he being a young man.⁶⁶ Where the accused along with others convicted under section 323 for six months' imprisonment had already undergone an imprisonment of one year and, looking at his good conduct inside jail and lest he should lose his service, he was given the benefit of section 3 of the Probation of Offenders Act 1958 so to assure that his conviction should not affect his service.⁶⁷

[s 53.10] Rigorous and Simple imprisonment.—

Section 53 of the IPC, 1860 defines five kinds of punishment which includes punishment for life and two other kinds of imprisonment, i.e., rigorous and simple imprisonment. Rigorous imprisonment is one which is required by law to be completed with hard labour. There are principally two categories of prisoners: (1) under trial prisoners and (2) convicted prisoners (Besides them there are those detained as preventive measure, and those undergoing detention for default of payment of fine). A person sentenced to simple imprisonment cannot be required to work unless he volunteers himself to do the work. However, the Jail officer who requires a prisoner sentenced to rigorous imprisonment to do hard labour would be doing so as enjoined by law and mandated by the Court.⁶⁸ Thus, while a person sentenced to simple imprisonment has the option of choosing to work, a person sentenced to rigorous imprisonment is required by law to undergo hard labour. The under trials are not required to work in Jail.⁶⁹ Section 60 of the Indian Penal Code confers power on a sentencing Court to direct that "such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple." The sentence of "imprisonment for life" tagged along with a number of offences delineated in the IPC, 1860 is interpreted as "rigorous imprisonment for life" and not simple imprisonment.⁷⁰

Supreme Court Guidelines regarding employment of prisoners and wages.—

(1) It is lawful to employ the prisoners sentenced to rigorous imprisonment to do hard labour whether he consents to do it or not.

(2) It is open to the jail officials to permit other prisoners also to do any work which they choose to do provided such prisoners make a request for that purpose.

(3) It is imperative that the prisoner should be paid equitable wages for the work done by them. In order to determine the quantum of equitable wages payable to prisoners the State concerned shall constitute a wage fixation body for making recommendations. We direct each State to do so as early as possible.

(4) Until the State Government takes any decision on such recommendations every prisoner must be paid wages for the work done by him at such rates or revised rates as the Government concerned fixes in the light of the observations made above. For this purpose we direct all the State Governments to fix the rate of such interim wages within six weeks from today and report to this Court of compliance of this direction.

(5) We recommend to the State concerned to make law for setting apart a portion of the wages earned by the prisoners to be paid as compensation to deserving victims of the offence the commission of which entailed the sentence of imprisonment to the prisoner, either directly or through a common fund to be created for this purpose or in any other feasible mode.

[*State of Gujarat v Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat.*⁷¹.]

[s 53.11] Rights of Convicts.—

Convicts are not, by mere reason of the conviction, denuded of all the fundamental rights which they otherwise possess. A compulsion under the authority of law, following upon a conviction, to live in a prison house entails by its own force the deprivation of fundamental freedoms like the right to move freely throughout the territory of India or the right to "practise" a profession. A man of profession would thus stand stripped of his right to hold consultations while serving out his sentence. But the Constitution guarantees other freedoms like the right to acquire, hold and dispose of property for the exercise of which incarceration can be no impediment, likewise, even a convict is entitled to the precious right guaranteed by Article 21 of the Constitution that he shall not be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law.⁷²

[s 53.12] Cases of Leniency.—

In a given situation, where it is demonstrated that during the pendency of the proceedings the accused has undergone a lot of suffering such as where the accused was in custody or for that matter, in situations where the accused is suspended and is on a subsistence allowance or where as a result of the prosecution the consequences have been so disastrous that the accused has suffered virtual ruination, these aspects alone would be valid justification on which a plea for leniency could be based. On the other hand, one needs to bear in mind that the consequences of criminal acts catch up with the accused particularly when the crimes are against the society the ethical concept of forgive and forget merely because the incident took place in the distant past will not hold good in a Court of Law.⁷³ Where there was acquittal in the same year in which the crime was committed but the acquittal was reversed after eight years and conviction and jail terms were awarded and appeal against this order was disposed of in the 20th year of the crime, the Supreme Court reduced the sentence to the period already undergone and imposed a fine which if not paid, the original sentence was to be restored.⁷⁴ Where the guilt of the accused under sections 406 and 120-B were established beyond all reasonable doubt, the Supreme Court did not interfere with their conviction. However, in view of the fact that the accused had undergone proceedings for a period of two decades, their sentence was reduced to one already undergone.⁷⁵ Where the accused was convicted for criminal conspiracy and breach of trust and about 48 years had elapsed since the accused was charged for the offences, keeping in view his advanced age he was sentenced to imprisonment till rising of the Court with a fine of Rs. 5,000.⁷⁶ Where a man of 20 was convicted under section 324 and sentenced to undergo imprisonment for four months whereas he had already undergone imprisonment of one year and two months, his sentence was reduced to one already undergone.⁷⁷ Where the accused were convicted under section 326 for causing grievous hurt to the victim, considering the lapse of about six years from the incident, accused not being habitual criminals or previous convicts and there being no misuse of liberty during bail, the sentence was reduced to the period already undergone with a fine of Rs. 5,000 each.⁷⁸ Where the accused convicted and sentenced under sections 379 and 411, were found to be the sole earning member of their families and they had no past criminal records, the Court directed that one year's rigorous imprisonment instead of two would meet the ends of justice.⁷⁹ Where the accused seeing his wife in a compromising position with a man assaulted both of them as a result of grave and sudden provocation resulting in the death of both, his conviction under section 304, Part II was upheld but the sentence of five years' R.I. was reduced to one years' R.I. with the recommendation that the State Government might remit such a portion of sentence as it deemed fit and proper.⁸⁰

[s 53.13] Offences against women.—

Where the accused had outraged the modesty of a woman, his conviction under section 354 was upheld but considering the lapse of eight years, it was not found desirable to send him back to jail to be in midst of hardened criminals. He was sentenced to sit in the Court of Judicial Magistrate First Class for five days continuously, during the entire working hours.⁸¹ Where the accused, in his late fifties, betraying the confidence of the prosecutrix committed rape on her, it was held that he deserved no sympathy. However, as the accused remained in jail for eight years, the Court took a liberal view and considering his age and helplessness sentenced him to the period for which he had already been in jail.⁸² Where the victim of rape belonged to a tribal (Bhilla) community and the act of the accused did not cast any serious stigma on the girl and she was married to a different person sometime after the incident by her father, it was held that sentence much below the minimum sentence prescribed could be inflicted on the accused.⁸³ Where the conviction and sentence of the accused husband to rigorous imprisonment for six months under section 498-A was substituted with a fine of Rs. 6,000, taking into consideration the age, occupation and family conditions of the husband, it was held that though the appellate Court was justified in substituting the jail sentence, the Court ought not have awarded a modest fine. The fine was raised to Rs. 30,000.⁸⁴ Where a person was married in childhood and was subjected to a second marriage under the pressure exerted by his parents as well as the woman who became his second wife, it was held that a lesser sentence of six months instead two years' R.I. and a fine of Rs. 2,000 to the accused husband and imprisonment till the rising of the Court and a fine of Rs. 1,500 to the accused parents and the second wife in place of the original sentence of six months' R.I. and a fine of Rs. 1,000 would meet the ends of justice.⁸⁵

[s 53.14] Conversion of death sentence into life imprisonment.—

Where the accused, being dissatisfied with the partition of family property, committed ghastly murders of four members of his family and there was no evidence that the crime was pre-planned and the circumstances indicated that he was under the influence of some kind of extreme mental or emotional disturbance which impaired his capacity to appreciate criminality of his conduct, death sentence awarded to him was converted into imprisonment for life.⁸⁶ Where three accused persons conspired to kill the wife and two minor children of one of the accused but one of the accused was not a party to actual commission of murder and the part played by the other accused was not definitely proved, the sentence of death imposed on both the accused was commuted to that of life imprisonment. The death sentence of the main accused, the father, was not interfered with.⁸⁷ Where the accused shot his two younger brothers dead on a petty quarrel, as there was no pre-plan to commit murder, the death sentence awarded to the accused was altered into life imprisonment with a fine of Rs. 30,000.⁸⁸

[s 53.15] Award of compensation.—

Power of Courts to award compensation is not ancillary to other sentences but it is in addition thereto. This power was intended to do something to reassure the victim that he or she is not forgotten in the criminal justice system. It is a measure of responding appropriately to crime as well of reconciling the victim with the offender. It is, to some extent, a constructive approach to crimes. It is indeed a step forward in our criminal justice system.⁸⁹ The purpose of imposition of fine and/or grant of compensation to a great extent must be considered having the relevant factors therefore in mind. It may be compensating the person in one way or the other.⁹⁰

In the BMW Case, the Supreme Court directed the accused to pay an amount of Rs. 50 lakh to the Union of India which will be utilized within for providing compensation to the victims of motor accidents, where the vehicles owner, driver etc. could not be traced, like victims of hit and run cases.⁹¹ Where a doctor was convicted for an attempt to cause miscarriage and sentenced to undergo rigorous imprisonment for one year and pay a fine of Rs. 5,000, the sentence of imprisonment was found to be excessive and was set aside but the fine was enhanced to Rs. 15,000 out of which, if realised Rs. 10,000 was to be paid to the mother of the deceased for the maintenance of the children of the deceased shown to be living with her.⁹² The accused, an agriculturist, assaulted his sister's husband with a knife giving a blow in his abdomen resulting in death. The accused was convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for life under section 302. However, on overall appraisal of material on record and the accused having no criminal antecedents, his conviction under section 302 was set aside and he was convicted under section 304 and directed to undergo 10 years' R.I. But on special facts of the case an option was given to the accused to pay a fine of Rs. 40,000 in all and in default to undergo R.I. for seven years and, if the fine was paid within 12 weeks, jail sentence was to be reduced to three years' R.I. Out of the fine, if paid, Rs. 10,000 were to be given to the mother of the deceased and Rs. 30,000 utilised for the benefit of the three minor children of the deceased in sum of Rs. 10,000 each.⁹³ Where the accused caused a serious injury in the abdomen of a man and was convicted under section 307 but considering that he had a widowed mother and two children and was willing to compensate the victim substantially, sentence imposed upon him was modified into one of fine in the way of compensation of Rs. One lakh.⁹⁴ Where in a case under section 304, Part II the accused remained in custody for over a year after conviction by the High Court and also for sometime during investigation, the Apex Court reduced the sentence to the period already undergone but imposed a fine of Rs. 20,000 payable to the widow of the deceased as compensation.⁹⁵

[s 53.16] Reform and rehabilitation.—

Where the accused caused several incised injuries to a man, he was convicted under section 326 but as there was no previous enmity between the accused and the injured person and it was the first offence committed by him, besides 14 years had lapsed since the commission of the offence, he was given an opportunity to reform and rehabilitate in society and his sentence was reduced to the period already undergone.⁹⁶ Where the accused convicted under section 302 was only 15 years old at the time of offence and at the time of appeal he was over 30, he could not be sent to approved school or jail. His conviction was upheld but the sentence was quashed.⁹⁷

[s 53.17] Separate trial for child offender.—

One of the members of an unlawful assembly was of 13 years at the time of the incident. His trial was conducted along with other members who were not children. This was held to be illegal. The plea of child offender was not raised before the trial court or the High Court. The Supreme Court, therefore, confirmed the conviction but set aside the sentence imposed on him.⁹⁸

[s 53.18] Cases of no leniency.—

In a multiple murder case, it was argued that the accused had donated to the social organisations and that he was not a hardened criminal and not a menace to the society and at any rate by wiping him out the crime cannot be wiped out. The Supreme Court observed that the accused was involved in "organised criminal activity" and he had acquired social status through crime. The accused had no regard for the value of human life. It was held that there were no mitigating circumstances. The main cause of his conviction was illicit arrack business and brothel. The fact that for this reason he became the victim of police cruelty was also considered to be not a mitigating circumstance.⁹⁹ In a double murder case, the accused was awarded death sentence but the execution was postponed. It was held that pain, agony and horror suffered by the prisoner after he was informed about execution was no ground for substituting death sentence.¹⁰⁰ Where the accused constructed a water tank which collapsed due to use of low quality material resulting in the death of several persons and the accused was sentenced to the maximum of two years of R.I. provided under section 304A, it was held that the sentence could not be reduced merely because the matter was more than seven years old and that it would also be a grave injustice to the victims of the crime.¹⁰¹ Where the accused formed an unlawful assembly with the common object of killing three members of a family and one of the accused killed all the three on the spot one after the other in few minutes while others caught hold of the victims, the sentence of life imprisonment awarded to them under sections 302/149 was confirmed but the High Court observed that it was a fit case to award the maximum penalty of death sentence as the accused had acted like a butcher in a slaughter house.¹⁰² Where the accused were convicted under section 328 r/w. section 34 for robbing a simple innocent lady of 50 years by administering a stupefying drug through sugarcane juice, the Court refused to take a lenient view and reduce the sentence.¹⁰³ Where the accused committed a high-handed and broad daylight robbery on a public road, the Court declined to take a lenient view.¹⁰⁴ Voluntary intoxication by itself neither absolves the offender of the consequences of his act nor does it makes him liable for lesser offence.¹⁰⁵ The mere fact that the accused inflicted a single injury resulting in death is not sufficient in itself to convert the offence from one under sections 300–304, Part II.¹⁰⁶ When the victim has sustained a grievous injury on a vital portion of the body and the injury is life-threatening imposition of sentence of six days only which was the period already undergone by the accused in confinement is too lenient. However, as the parties have forgotten their differences and are living peacefully since 25 years, the Court taking into consideration the aggravating as well as mitigating factors under the facts of this case, imposed a sentence of six months' R.I. and a fine of Rs. 25,000/- against the accused.¹⁰⁷

[s 53.19] No leniency—Offences against women.—

Where the accused committed rape on a woman and killed her and it was found that he had behaved like an animal, it was held that it was not a fit case for showing leniency.¹⁰⁸ Where in a case of bride burning, the mother-in-law of the victim was sentenced to life imprisonment, the Supreme Court refused to show any leniency on the ground that the accused mother-in-law had remained in jail for more than a decade. The Court observed that it would be a travesty of justice if sympathy was shown when a cruel act like bride burning is committed. It is rather strange that the mother-in-law who herself is a woman should resort to killing another woman. Undue sympathy would be harmful to the cause of justice.¹⁰⁹ Where the accused himself killed his wife by burning and made his two children motherless, no lenient view could be taken on the ground that he had two children.¹¹⁰

[s 53.20] Enhancement of sentence.—

Where in a group clash due to old enmity, the accused killed ten persons of a community indiscriminately within a span of two hours and accused took the leading part, sentence of life imprisonment imposed upon him was enhanced to death penalty in the facts and circumstances of the case but life imprisonment awarded to the co-accused under sections 302/149 was confirmed.¹¹¹

[s 53.21] Guidelines for sentencing policy.—

Currently, India does not have a structured sentencing guidelines that have been issued either by the legislature or the judiciary. However, the Courts have framed certain guidelines in the matter of imposition of sentence. The Courts will have to take into account certain principles while exercising their wide discretion in sentencing, such as proportionality, deterrence and rehabilitation. In a proportionality analysis, it is necessary to assess the seriousness of an offence in order to determine the commensurate punishment for the offender.¹¹² Justice demands that Courts should impose punishment befitting the crime so that the Courts reflect public abhorrence of the crime.¹¹³ Law regulates social interests, arbitrates conflicting claims and demand. Undoubtedly, there is a cross-cultural conflict where living law must find answer to the new challenges and the Courts are required to mould the sentencing system to meet the challenges.¹¹⁴

The principle governing the imposition of punishment will depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. However, the sentence should be appropriate, adequate, just, proportionate and commensurate with the nature and gravity of the crime and the manner in which the crime is committed. The gravity of the crime, motive for the crime, nature of the crime and all other attending circumstances have to be borne in mind while imposing the sentence.¹¹⁵ An offence, which affects the morale of the society, should be severely dealt with. Socio-economic status, religion, race, caste or creed of the accused and the victim although may not be wholly irrelevant, should be eschewed in a case of this nature (abduction and rape of minor), particularly when Parliament itself has laid down minimum sentence.

One of the principles that the judiciary had all along kept in its mind that rape being a violation with violence of the private person of a woman causes mental scar, thus, not only a physical injury but also a deep sense of some deathless shame is also inflicted.¹¹⁶

The Court cannot afford to be casual while imposing the sentence, inasmuch as both the crime and the criminal are equally important in the sentencing process. The Courts must see that the public does not lose confidence in the judicial system. Imposing inadequate sentences will do more harm to the justice system and may lead to a state where the victim loses confidence in the judicial system and resorts to private vengeance.¹¹⁷

6. Whipping.—This form of punishment is now abolished.

7. Detention in reformatories.—Juvenile offenders sentenced to imprisonment may be sentenced to, and detained in, a Reformatory School for a period of three–seven years.¹¹⁸

[s 53.22] Detention during trial.—

Every confinement of a person and every restraint of the liberty of a free man is imprisonment. Thus, "imprisonment" would include under trial detention. "Under trial detention of a prisoner is undoubtedly an imprisonment."¹¹⁹

[s 53.23] Postponement of sentence.—

Where all the members of the family of the deceased were convicted and nobody was left to take care of his daughter, the Court upheld the sentence of the daughter's grandmother but granted her six months' time to arrange for the daughter and then to surrender to serve the sentence.^{120.}

[s 53.24] Community Service for Avoiding Jail Sentence.—

Convicts in various countries, now, voluntarily come forward to serve the community, especially in crimes relating to motor vehicles. Graver the crime greater the sentence. But, serving the society actually is not a punishment in the real sense where the convicts pay back to the community which he owes. Conduct of the convicts will not only be appreciated by the community, it will also give a lot of solace to him, especially in a case where because of one's action and inaction, human lives have been lost. In the facts and circumstances of the case, where six human lives were lost, Court felt to adopt this method would be good for the society rather than incarcerating the convict further in jail. The Court ordered to do community service for two years, which will be arranged by the Ministry of Social Justice and Empowerment within two months. On default, the convict will have to undergo simple imprisonment for two years.^{121.}

[s 53.25] Probation.—

Probation of Offenders Act, 1958 ('PO Act') is a milestone in the progress of the modern liberal trend of reform in the field of penology. It is the result of the recognition of the doctrine that the object of the criminal law is more to reform the individual offender than to punish him. Broadly stated that the PO Act distinguishes offenders below 21 years of age and those above that age, and offenders who are not guilty of having committed an offence punishable with death or that imprisonment for life and those who are guilty of a lesser offence. While in the case of offenders who are above the age of 21 years absolute discretion is given to the Court to release them after admonition or on probation of good conduct, subject to the conditions laid down in the appropriate provisions of the PO Act. In case of offender below the age of 21 years, an injunction is issued to the Court not to sentence them to imprisonment unless it is satisfied that, having regard to the circumstances of the case, including the nature of the offence and the character of the offenders, it is not desirable to deal with them under sections 3 and 4 of the PO Act.^{122.} The PO Act introduced a very basic change in the criminal law of the country. At the same time, Courts were also to be careful about the impact on the society consequent on letting offenders on probation. Indiscriminate application of provisions of the PO Act to anti-social and white collar offenders may have an adverse effect on the security of the society. Application of the PO Act is specifically barred in some cases.^{123.} Provisions of the PO Act should be applied having regard to the nature of offence and age, character and antecedents of the offender.^{124.}

1. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "Secondly—Transportation" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

2. Clause "Thirdly" omitted by Act 17 of 1949, section 2 (w.e.f. 6-4-1949).

3. Shivaji v State of Maharashtra, 1973 Cr LJ 1783 : AIR 1973 SC 2622 [LNIND 1973 SC 249] .
4. Inder Singh v State, AIR 1978 SC 1091 : 1978 Cr LJ 766 (SC), see also Ram Prasad, 1980 Cr LJ 10 : AIR 1980 SC 83 [LNIND 1979 SC 404] ; Ashok Kumar, 1980 Cr LJ 444 : AIR 1980 SC 636 [LNIND 1980 SC 36] .
5. Alister Anthony Pereira v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1160 : (2012) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 953 : AIR 2012 SC 3802 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] .
6. State of Punjab v Bawa Singh, 2015 Cr LJ 1701 .
7. UOI v Kuldeep Singh, AIR 2004 SC 827 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] : (2004) 2 SCC 590 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] ; State of MP v Ghanshyam Singh, JT 2003 (Supp.1) SC 129 : 2003 (8) SCC 13 [LNIND 2003 SC 772] ; Jashubha Bharatsinh Gohil v State of Gujarat, JT 1994 (3) SC 250 [LNIND 1994 SC 415] : 1994 (4) SCC 353 [LNIND 1994 SC 415] .
8. BG Goswami v Delhi Administration, 1974 (3) SCC 85 [LNIND 1973 SC 194] : AIR 1973 SC 1457 [LNIND 1973 SC 194] : 1973 SCC (Cr) 796 1974 Cr LJ 243 .
9. TK Gopal alias Gopi v State of Karnataka, AIR 2000 SC 1669 [LNIND 2000 SC 826] : (2000) 6 SCC 168 [LNIND 2000 SC 826] : JT 2000 (6) SC 177 [LNIND 2000 SC 826] : 2000 Cr LJ 2286 : Sunil Batra (I) v Delhi Administration, AIR 1978 SC 1675 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : (1978) 4 SCC 494 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : 1979 (1) SCR 392 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : (1978 Cr LJ 1741) ; Sunil Batra (II) v Delhi Administration, AIR 1980 SC 1579 : (1980) 3 SCC 488 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : 1980 (2) SCR 557 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : (1980 Cr LJ 1099) ; Charles Sobraj v Superintendent, Central Jail, Tihar, AIR 1978 SC 1514 [LNIND 1978 SC 218] : (1978 Cr LJ 1534) and Francis Coralie Mullin v The Administrator, Union Territory of Delhi, (1981) 1 SCC 608 [LNIND 1981 SC 27] : AIR 1981 SC 746 [LNIND 1981 SC 27] : 1981 (2) SCR 516 [LNIND 1981 SC 27] : (1981 Cr LJ 306) etc.
10. Karamjit Singh v State, AIR 2000 SC 3467 [LNIND 2000 SC 707] : (2001) 9 SCC 161 [LNIND 2000 SC 707] .
11. Dhannajoy Chatterjee v State of WB, (1994) (2) SCC 220 [LNIND 1994 SC 34] : 1994 (3) RCR (Cr) 359 (SC).
12. Attorney General of India v Lachma Devi, 1986 Cr LJ 364 : AIR 1986 SC 467 .
13. Murray and Co v Ashok Kr Newatia, AIR 2000 SC 833 [LNIND 2000 SC 159] : (2000) 2 SCC 367 [LNIND 2000 SC 159] .
14. Karamjit Singh v State, AIR 2000 SC 3467 [LNIND 2000 SC 707] : (2001) 9 SCC 161 [LNIND 2000 SC 707] .
15. Mohammad Giasuddin v State of AP, (1977) 3 SCC 287 [LNIND 1977 SC 211] : AIR 1977 SC 1926 [LNIND 1977 SC 211] .
16. State of Gujarat v Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat, (1998) 7 SCC 392 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] : AIR 1998 SC 3164 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] : JT 1998 (6) SC 530 : 1998 Cr LJ 4561 .
17. Gurdeep Singh alias Deep v State, AIR 1999 SC 3646 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : (2000) 1 SCC 498 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : JT 1999 (7) SC 191 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : 1999 Cr LJ 4573 .
18. State Tr PS Lodhi Colony New Delhi v Sanjeev Nanda, (2012) 8 SCC 450 [LNIND 2012 SC 459] : 2012 Cr LJ 4174 : AIR 2012 SC 3104 [LNIND 2012 SC 459] .
19. UOI v Kuldeep Singh, AIR 2004 SC 827 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] : (2004) 2 SCC 590 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] .
20. Sahdev v Jaibar, (2009) 11 SCC 798 [LNIND 2009 SC 476] : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 215.
21. State of Karnataka v Krishnappa, 2000 Cr LJ 1793 : AIR 2000 SC 147 .
22. Mahesh v State of MP, AIR 1987 SC 1346 ; State of Punjab v Rakesh Kumar, AIR 2009 SC 391 [LNIND 2008 SC 1729] .
23. Gurdeep Singh alias Deep v State, AIR 1999 SC 3646 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : (2000) 1 SCC 498 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : JT 1999 (7) SC 191 [LNIND 1999 SC 837] : 1999 Cr LJ 4573 .

24. Mohd Arif v The Registrar, Supreme Court of India, 2014 Cr LJ 4598 .
25. State of HP v Nirmala Devi, AIR 2017 SC 1981 [LNIND 2017 SC 189] .
26. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
27. Alister Anthony Pareira v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2012 SC 3802 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 953 : 2012 Cr LJ 1160 .
28. State of HP v Nirmala Devi, AIR 2017 SC 1981 [LNIND 2017 SC 189] .
29. Alister Anthony Pareira v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1160 : (2012) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 953 : AIR 2012 SC 3802 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] .
30. Sahdev v Jaibar, (2009) 11 SCC 798 [LNIND 2009 SC 476] : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 215.
31. Sahdev v Jaibar, (2009) 11 SCC 798 [LNIND 2009 SC 476] : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 215.
32. Alister Anthony Pareira v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1160 : (2012) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 953 : AIR 2012 SC 3802 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] .
33. State of MP v Saleem alias Chamaru, 2005 (5) SCC 554 [LNIND 2005 SC 1070] 61.
34. C Muniappan v State of TN, (2010) 9 SCC 567 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] : AIR 2010 SC 3718 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] : (2010) 10 SCR 262 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1402.
35. Dinesh v State of Rajasthan, 2006 (3) SCC 771 [LNIND 2006 SC 151] : AIR 2006 SCW 1123 : AIR 2006 SC 1267 [LNIND 2006 SC 151] .
36. Gurmukh Singh v State of Haryana, JT 2009 (11) SC 122 : 2009 (11) Scale 688 [LNIND 2009 SC 1725] .
37. Jameel v State of UP, 2010 Cr LJ 2106 : (2010) 12 SCC 532 [LNIND 2009 SC 1960] : AIR 2010 SC (Supp) 303 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 582.
38. UOI v Kuldeep Singh, AIR 2004 SC 827 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] : (2004) 2 SCC 590 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] . Meaning of Judicial discretion explained.
39. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
40. State of HP v Nirmala Devi, AIR 2017 SC 1981 [LNIND 2017 SC 189] .
41. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
42. State v Narayan Bisoi, 1975 Cr LJ 1399 (Ori).
43. Javed Ahmed, 1983 Cr LJ 960 : AIR 1983 SC 594 [LNIND 1983 SC 119] : (1983) 3 SCC 39 [LNIND 1983 SC 119] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 559; see also Henry Westmuller, 1985 Cr LJ 1079 : AIR 1985 SC 823 [LNIND 1985 SC 105] : (1985) 3 SCC 291 [LNIND 1985 SC 105] ; Lok Pal Singh, 1985 Cr LJ 1134 (SC) : AIR 1985 SC 823 [LNIND 1985 SC 105] .
44. Munnalal, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 108 (MP).
45. Gauri Shanker Sharma v State of UP, AIR 1990 SC 709 [LNIND 1990 SC 8] : 1990 (2) SCC 502 [LNIND 1990 SC 100] , the acquittal granted by the High Court was set aside and the sentence of 7-year RI restored.
46. State v Balkrishna, 1992 Cr LJ 1872 (Mad).
47. State of UP v MK Anthony, 1985 Cr LJ 493 : AIR 1985 SC 48 . For an account of the perplexities of criminal justice, see S Venugopal Rao, Perplexities of Criminal Justice, (1985) 27 JILI 458. See also Pandurang Dhondu Bhuwad v State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 3177 Bom, domestic servants committing day-light robbery in an apartment resulting in the death of an inmate, life imprisonment, no concession for young age or poverty.
48. Guvala China Venkatesu v State of AP, AIR 1991 SC 1926 : 1991 Cr LJ 2326 .
49. Sevaka Perumal v State of TN, AIR 1991 SC 1463 [LNIND 1991 SC 269] : 1991 Cr LJ 1845 .
50. State of Rajasthan v Sukhpal Singh, (1983) 1 SCC 393 [LNIND 1982 SC 206] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 213 : AIR 1984 SC 207 [LNIND 1982 SC 206] ; Philip Bhimsen Aind v State, (1995) Cr LJ 1694 (Bom).
51. Babarali Ahmedali Sayed v State of Gujarat, 1991 Cr LJ 1269 Guj.

52. TM Joseph v State of Kerala, AIR 1992 SC 1922 : 1992 Cr LJ 3166 . The court referred to its own decision in BC Goswami v Delhi Administration, AIR 1973 SC 1457 [LNIND 1973 SC 194] : 1974 Cr LJ 243 .
53. Ajit Kumar Vasantlal Zaveri v State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 2064 : 1992 Cr LJ 3593 .
54. Gurmukh Singh v State of Haryana, 2010 Cr LJ 450 : AIR 2009 SC 2697 [LNIND 2009 SC 847] .
55. State of MP v Sheikh Shahid, AIR 2009 SC 2951 [LNIND 2009 SC 867] : (2009) 12 SCC 715 [LNIND 2009 SC 867] : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 704.
56. UOI v Kuldeep Singh, AIR 2004 SC 827 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] : (2004) 2 SCC 590 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] .
57. Jitendra v State of Govt of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2018 SC 5253 [LNIND 2018 SC 537] .
58. Bachan Singh v State of Punjab, 1980 Cr LJ 636 : AIR 1980 SC 898 [LNIND 1980 SC 260] . The minimum sentence awardable under section 302 being life imprisonment, it has been held that the sentence cannot be reduced. Dori v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 3139 (All); Dadasaheb Misal v State of Maharashtra, 1987 Cr LJ 1512 (Bom). See Triveniben v State of Gujarat, 1990 Cr LJ 273 (Guj); Sham Sunder v Puran, (1990) 4 SCC 731 [LNIND 1990 SC 994] : 1991 SCC (Cr) 38 : 1990 Cr LJ 2600 ; Kannan v State of TN, 1989 Cr LJ 825 : AIR 1989 SC 396 [LNIND 1982 SC 73] : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 81 .
59. Laxman Naskar v State of WB, 2000 Cr LJ 4017 : AIR 2000 SC 2762 [LNIND 2000 SC 1180] .
60. State of Gujarat v Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 4561 : AIR 1998 SC 3164 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] .
61. For an example of early release see Iqbal Singh v State of Punjab, 1990 Cr LJ 1460 .
62. Act No. 13 of 2013 w.e.f 2 April 2013.
63. Mohd Arif v The Registrar, Supreme Court of India, 2014 Cr LJ 4598 : (2014) 9 SCC 737 [LNIND 2014 SC 769] .
64. R S Joshi v Ajit Mills, AIR 1977 SC 2279 [LNIND 1977 SC 260] : 1977 SCC (Tax) 536 : (1978) 1 SCJ 239 .
65. State of Maharashtra v Chandra Prakash Keshavdeo, 1991 Cr LJ 3187 (Bom).
66. Kapoor Lal v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 2159 (All).
67. Rajbir v State of Haryana, 1985 Cr LJ 1495 : 1985 Guj LH 117 : AIR 1985 SC 1278 . Referred to in Dhansukh Chhotalal Joshi v State of Gujarat, 1990 Cr LJ 2333 to reduce the sentence of a 19 year- old boy convicted under section 304-II to that already undergone who was a member of a party which caused death without any intention to do so.
68. State of Gujarat v Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat, (1998) 7 SCC 392 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] : AIR 1998 SC 3164 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] See the box.
69. Phool Kumari v Office of the Superintendent Central Jail, Tihar New Delhi, (2012) 8 SCC 183 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 410] : 2012 Cr LJ 4261 : AIR 2012 SC 3198 [LNINDORD 2012 SC 410] .
70. Constitution Bench in GV Godse v State, AIR 1961 SC 600 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] and Naib Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 855 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] .
71. State of Gujarat v Hon'ble High Court of Gujarat, (1998) 7 SCC 392 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] : AIR 1998 SC 3164 [LNIND 1998 SC 920] : JT 1998 (6) SC 530 : 1998 Cr LJ 4561 .
72. Bhuvan Mohan Patnaik v State of AP, (1975) 3 SCC 185 [LNIND 1974 SC 269] : AIR 1974 SC 2092 [LNIND 1974 SC 269] .
73. State of Maharashtra v Jethmat Himatmal Jain, 1994 Cr LJ 2613 (Bom).
74. Chanda Lal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1992 SC 597 : 1992 Cr LJ 523 .
75. Ramanlal Baldevdas Shah v State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 3164 : AIR 1992 SC 1916 . See also State of Karnataka v Bhojappa Hanamanthappa, 1994 Cr LJ 1543 .

76. Sushil Kumar Sanghi v State, 1995 Cr LJ 3457 (Del).
77. Babloo v State of MP, 1995 Cr LJ 3534 (MP). Jaya Mala v Home Secy, Govt of J&K, AIR 1982 SC 1297 [LNIND 1982 SC 109] : 1982 Cr LR (SC) 441 relied upon.
78. Pratapsingh Rathod v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 790 (Bom). Incident of causing stab wound taking place 24 years back and the injury being of simple nature, the sentence was reduced into one already undergone, Pritam Singh v State, 1996 Cr LJ 7 (Del).
79. Rasananda Bindhani v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 121 (Ori).
80. BY Deshmukh v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1108 (Bom), relying on in Re Vadivel Padayachi, 1972 Cr LJ 1641 (Mad).
81. Panchu Parida v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 953 (Ori). The court referred to Ippili Trinadha Rao v State of AP, 1984 Cr LJ 1254 .
82. State of Orissa v Gangadhar Behuria, 1992 Cr LJ 3814 (Ori).
83. Dayaram v State of MP, 1992 Cr LJ 3154 (MP).
84. Madhuri Mukund Chitnis v Mukund Martand Chitnis, 1992 Cr LJ 111 (Bom).
85. Kashiram v Sonvati, 1992 Cr LJ 760 (MP).
86. MS Sheshappa v State of Karnataka, 1994 Cr LJ 3372 (Kant).
87. SC Bahri v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2020 : 1994 Cr LJ 3271 .
88. State v Banwari Lal, 1996 Cr LJ 1078 (Raj).
89. Manish Jalan v State of Karnataka, JT 2008 (7) SC 643 [LNIND 2008 SC 1396] .
90. Dilip S Dahanukar v Kotak Mahindra Co Ltd, ((2007) 6 SCC 528 [LNIND 2007 SC 451] 65) See also Alister Anthony Pareira v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1160 : (2012) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 953 : AIR 2012 SC 3802 [LNIND 2012 SC 15] .
91. State Tr PS Lodhi Colony New Delhi v Sanjeev Nanda, (2012) 8 SCC 450 [LNIND 2012 SC 459] : 2012 Cr LJ 4174 : AIR 2012 SC 3104 [LNIND 2012 SC 459] .
92. Akhil Kumar v State of MP, 1992 Cr LJ 2029 (MP).
93. Madhukar Chandar v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3281 (Bom).
94. Joshi v State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 143 (Ker).
95. Sarup Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 1995 SC 2452 : 1995 Cr LJ 4168 .
96. Raja Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1993 Cr LJ 1016 (Raj).
97. Lal Diwan v State of UP, 1995 Cr LJ 3899 (All).
98. Umesh Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 2111 [LNIND 2000 SC 871] : 2000 Cr LJ 6167 .
99. Shankar v State of TN, (1994) 4 SCC 478 [LNIND 1994 SC 377] : 1994 Cr LJ 3071 .
100. Sharomani Akali Dal (Mann) v State of JK, 1993 Cr LJ 927 (J&K).
101. Bhimabhai Kalabhai v State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 2585 (Guj).
102. Arjunan v State, 1993 Cr LJ 3113 (Mad).
103. Madhukar Damu Patil v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1062 (Bom).
104. Jaivir Singh v State of UP, 1996 Cr LJ 1494 (All).
105. Dedekula Khabala Saheb v State of AP, 1996 Cr LJ 2196 (AP).
106. Gochipathula Samudralu v State of AP, 1992 Cr LJ 2488 (AP).
107. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
108. Jagat Bahadur v State of HP, 1994 Cr LJ 3396 (HP).
109. Paniben v State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 1817 [LNIND 1992 SC 248] : 1992 Cr LJ 2919 .
110. Venkappa K Chowdari v State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 15 (Kant).
111. Jodha Khoda Rabari v State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 3298 (Guj).
112. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
113. Jameel v State of UP, 2010 Cr LJ 2106 : (2010) 12 SCC 532 [LNIND 2009 SC 1960] : AIR 2010 SC (Supp) 303 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 582.

114. UOI v Kuldeep Singh, AIR 2004 SC 827 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] : (2004) 2 SCC 590 [LNIND 2003 SC 1056] .
115. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
116. State of MP v Babu Natt, (2009) 2 SCC 272 [LNIND 2008 SC 2471] : (2009) 1 SCC (Cr) 713 : AIR 2009 SC 1810 [LNIND 2008 SC 2471] : (2009) 1 Ker LJ 686 : 2009 Cr LJ 1722 .
117. State of Rajasthan v Mohan Lal, AIR 2018 SC 3564 .
118. Act VIII of 1897, section 8. Where the accused was a child of 14 at the time of the incident and, therefore, the benefit of being sent to an approved school under the U.P. Children Act (1 of 1952) would have been available to him but he became a man of 28 by the time of the final judgment, and, therefore, not fit for the school, his conviction was sustained and the sentence reduced to already undergone. Pachrangi v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 3232 (All), relying on Bhoop Ram v State of UP, 1989 All Cr R 276 : 1990 Cr LJ 2671 : AIR 1990 SC 1329 [LNIND 1990 SC 277] .
119. Prahlad G Gajbhiye v State of Maharashtra, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2555 at p 2561 (Bom).
120. Harkori v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 814 : AIR 1998 SC 2821 [LNIND 1997 SC 1368] .
121. State Tr PS Lodhi Colony New Delhi v Sanjeev Nanda, (2012) 8 SCC 450 [LNIND 2012 SC 459] : 2012 Cr LJ 4174 : AIR 2012 SC 3104 .
122. Rattan Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 444 [LNIND 1964 SC 135] : 1964 (7) SCR 676 [LNIND 1964 SC 135] : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 360 ; DalbirSingh v State of Haryana, AIR 2000 SC 1677 [LNIND 2000 SC 810] : 2000 (5) SCC 82 [LNIND 2000 SC 810] : 2000 Cr LJ 2283 .
123. Nalinakshan v Rameshan, 2009 Cr LJ 1703 (Ker).
124. MCD v State of Delhi, 2005 (4) SCC 605 [LNIND 2005 SC 445] : AIR 2005 SC 2658 [LNIND 2005 SC 445] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 1322 : 2005 Cr LJ3077; Sitaram Paswan v State of Bihar, 2005 (13) SCC 110 [LNIND 2005 SC 703] : AIR 2005 SC 3534 [LNIND 2005 SC 703] : 2005 Cr LJ 4135 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

125. [[s 53A] Construction of reference to transportation.

- (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) and sub-section (3), any reference to "transportation for life" in any other law for the time being in force or in any instrument or order having effect by virtue of any such law or of any enactment repealed shall be construed as a reference to "imprisonment for life".
- (2) In every case in which a sentence of transportation for a term has been passed before the commencement of the [Code of Criminal Procedure \(Amendment\) Act, 126. \[1955\]](#) (26 of 1955), the offender shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for the same term.
- (3) Any reference to transportation for a term or to transportation for any shorter term (by whatever name called) in any other law for the time being in force shall be deemed to have been omitted.
- (4) Any reference to "transportation" in any other law for the time being in force shall,—
 - (a) if the expression means transportation for life, be construed as a reference to imprisonment for life;
 - (a) if the expression means transportation for any shorter term, be deemed to have been omitted.]

COMMENT—

This section has been inserted by Act XXVI of 1955. It deals with a sentence of transportation wherever it occurs in a statute. After this amendment of the Code 'transportation' as a sentence has been done away with as a punishment.

125. Ins. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

126. Subs. by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch. II, for "1954" (w.e.f. 17-9-1957).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

125. [[s 53A] Construction of reference to transportation.

- (1) Subject to the provisions of sub-section (2) and sub-section (3), any reference to "transportation for life" in any other law for the time being in force or in any instrument or order having effect by virtue of any such law or of any enactment repealed shall be construed as a reference to "imprisonment for life".
- (2) In every case in which a sentence of transportation for a term has been passed before the commencement of the [Code of Criminal Procedure \(Amendment\) Act, 126. \[1955\]](#) (26 of 1955), the offender shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for the same term.
- (3) Any reference to transportation for a term or to transportation for any shorter term (by whatever name called) in any other law for the time being in force shall be deemed to have been omitted.
- (4) Any reference to "transportation" in any other law for the time being in force shall,—
 - (a) if the expression means transportation for life, be construed as a reference to imprisonment for life;
 - (a) if the expression means transportation for any shorter term, be deemed to have been omitted.]

COMMENT—

This section has been inserted by Act XXVI of 1955. It deals with a sentence of transportation wherever it occurs in a statute. After this amendment of the Code 'transportation' as a sentence has been done away with as a punishment.

125. Ins. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

126. Subs. by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch. II, for "1954" (w.e.f. 17-9-1957).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 54] Commutation of sentence of death.

In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, ^{127.} [the appropriate Government] may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

COMMENT—

The law governing suspension, remission and commutation of sentence is both statutory and constitutional.^{128.} The stage for the exercise of this power generally speaking is post-judicial, i.e., after the judicial process has come to an end. After the judicial function ends, the executive function of giving effect to the judicial verdict commences. Constitutional power under Article 72/161 would override the statutory power contained in sections 432 and 433 and the limitation of section 433A of the Code as well as the power conferred by sections 54 and 55, IPC, 1860.^{129.} No convict has a fundamental right of remission or shortening of sentence. The State in exercise of its executive power of remission must consider each individual case keeping in view the relevant factors. The power of the State to issue general instructions, so that no discrimination is made, is also permissible in law.^{130.} Exercise of executive clemency is a matter of discretion and yet subject to certain standards. It is not a matter of privilege.^{131.} A right to be considered for remission, keeping in view the constitutional safeguards of a convict under Articles 20 and 21 of the Constitution of India, must be held to be a legal one. Such a legal right emanates from not only the Prisons Act but also from the Rules framed thereunder.^{132.} The power of remission vested in the Government under section 433A Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\) is not in conflict with Articles 72 and 162 of the Constitution.^{133.} Granting of pardon is in no sense an overturning of a judgment of conviction, but rather it is an executive action that mitigates or sets aside the punishment for a crime. It eliminates the effect of conviction without addressing the defendant's guilt or innocence.^{134.} It is open to the President in the exercise of the power vested in him by Article 72 of the Constitution to scrutinize the evidence on the record of the criminal case and come to a different conclusion from that recorded by the Court in regard to the guilt of, and sentence imposed on, the accused.^{135.}

[s 54.1] Delay in Execution whether entitle commutation of Death sentence to Life Imprisonment.—

In TV Vatheeswaran's case, [AIR 1983 SC 361 \[LNIND 1983 SC 43\] : 1983 SCR \(2\) 348](#)^{136.} a two-Judge Bench of SC considered whether the accused, who was convicted for an offence of murder and sentenced to death, kept in solitary confinement for about eight years was entitled to commutation of death sentence. It was held that delay exceeding two years in the execution of a sentence of death should be considered sufficient to entitle the person under sentence of death to invoke Article 21 and demand the quashing of the sentence of death.^{137.} But a three-Judge in Sher Singh v State of Punjab,^{138.} held that though prolonged delay in the execution of a death sentence is unquestionably an important consideration for determining whether the sentence should be allowed to be commuted, no hard and fast rule that "delay exceeding two years in the execution of a sentence of death should be considered sufficient to entitle the person under sentence of death to invoke Article 21 and demand the quashing of the sentence of death" can be laid down as has been done in Vatheeswaran Javed Ahmed v State of Maharashtra,¹³⁹ re-iterated the proposition laid down in Vatheeswaran (supra) case and doubted the competence of the three-Judge Bench to overrule the Vatheeswaran Case. The conflicting views are finally settled by the Constitution Bench in Triveni Ben v State of Gujarat.¹⁴⁰ It overruled Vatheeswaran (supra) holding that undue long delay in execution of the sentence of death will entitle the condemned person to approach this Court under Article 32 but the Court will only examine the nature of delay caused and circumstances that ensued after sentence was finally confirmed by the judicial process and will have no jurisdiction to reopen the conclusions reached by the Court while finally maintaining the sentence of death. Court, however, may consider the question of inordinate delay in the light of all circumstances of the case to decide whether the execution of sentence should be carried out or should be altered into imprisonment for life. No fixed period of delay could be held to make the sentence of death inexecutable and to this extent the decision in Vatheeswaran case cannot be said to lay down the correct law. In Madhu Mehta v UOI,^{141, 142} Supreme Court commuted the death sentence on the ground that the mercy petition was pending for eight years after disposal of the criminal appeal by Supreme Court.

[s 54.1.1] Devender Singh Bhullar and Mahendra Das. —

In Devender Pal Singh Bhullar v State of NCT of Delhi,¹⁴³ the convict appealed to the President for clemency in 2003. The President, after a lapse of over eight years, dismissed his mercy plea in 2011. Bhullar had sought commutation of his death penalty to life sentence by the Supreme Court on the ground that there was inordinate delay by the President over his plea for clemency. A two-Judge Bench¹⁴⁴ by order dated 12 April 2013 dismissed his plea, by holding that the rule enunciated in Sher Singh's case (supra), Triveniben's case (supra) and some other judgments that long delay may be one of the grounds for commutation of the sentence of death into life imprisonment cannot be invoked in cases where a person is convicted for offence under TADA or similar statutes. Two weeks later in Mahendra Nath Das v UOI,¹⁴⁵ the same Bench held that the convict's death sentence could be commuted to life imprisonment because much of the inordinate delay of 12 years in the rejection of his mercy petition by the President was unexplained, and therefore, inexcusable.

[s 54.2] Modification of death sentence to a particular period with the further direction that the convict must not be released from prison for the rest of his life or before actually serving out the term. —

It was in Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka,¹⁴⁶ the three-Judge Bench held that there is a good and strong basis for the Court to substitute a death sentence by life imprisonment or by a term in excess of 14 years and further to direct that the convict must not be released from the prison for the rest of his life or for the actual term as specified in the order, as the case may be. But a two-Judge Bench in *Sangeet v State of Haryana*¹⁴⁷ in which it was held that:

a reading of some recent decisions delivered by this Court seems to suggest that the remission power of the appropriate Government has effectively been nullified by awarding sentences of 20 years, 25 years and in some cases without any remission. Is this permissible? Can this Court (or any Court for that matter) restrain the appropriate Government from granting remission of a sentence to a convict? What this Court has done in Swamy Shraddananda and several other cases, by giving a sentence in a capital offence of 20 years or 30 years imprisonment without remission, is to effectively injunct the appropriate Government from exercising its power of remission for the specified period. In our opinion, this issue needs further and greater discussion, but as at present advised, we are of the opinion that this is not permissible. The appropriate Government cannot be told that it is prohibited from granting remission of a sentence. Similarly, a convict cannot be told that he cannot apply for a remission in his sentence, whatever the reason. In this case, though the Division Bench raised a doubt about the decision of a three-Judge Bench in Swamy Shraddananda (supra), yet the same has not been referred to a larger Bench.

In Sahib Hussain @ Sahib Jan v State of Rajasthan,¹⁴⁸ another two-Judge Bench reiterated the position held in Swamy Shraddananda (supra) by holding that the observations in Sangeet (supra) are not warranted. In Gurvail Singh @ Gala v State of Punjab,¹⁴⁹ another two Judge also termed the remarks in Sangeet (supra) were 'unwarranted' and opined that if the two-Judge Bench was of the opinion that earlier judgments, even of a larger Bench were not justified, the Bench ought to have referred the matter to the larger Bench.

[s 54.3] Cases where the death sentence was modified to a particular period (or life) with further direction to avoid premature release

1. Subhash Chander v Krishan Lal ¹⁵⁰.
2. Shri Bhagwan v State of Rajasthan ¹⁵¹.
3. Ram Anup Singh v State of Bihar ¹⁵².
4. Mohd. Munna v UOI ¹⁵³.
5. Jayawant Dattatraya Suryarao v State of Maharashtra ¹⁵⁴.
6. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi ¹⁵⁵.
7. Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka ¹⁵⁶.
8. Haru Ghosh v State of WB ¹⁵⁷.
9. Ramraj v State of Chattisgarh ¹⁵⁸.
10. Neel Kumar @ Anil Kumar v The State of Haryana ¹⁵⁹.
11. Sandeep v State of UP ¹⁶⁰.
12. Gurvail Singh @ Gala v State of Punjab ¹⁶¹.
13. Brajendra Singh v State of MP ¹⁶².
14. State of UP v Sanjay Kumar ¹⁶³.

¹²⁷. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Central Government or the Provincial Government of the Province within which the offender shall have been sentenced". The words in italics were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for "the Government of India or the Government of the place".

128. The Law Commission of India in its 41st report proposed that sections 54, 55 and 55A may be omitted from the IPC and their substance incorporated in Section 402 Criminal Procedure Code- See State (Govt of NCT of Delhi) v Prem Raj, (2003) 7 SCC 121 [LNIND 2003 SC 632] : JT 2003 (8) SC 17 [LNIND 2003 SC 632] .
129. Ashok Kumar v UOI, AIR 1991 SC 1792 [LNIND 1990 SC 319] : (1991) 3 SCC 498 [LNIND 1991 SC 288] .
130. State of Haryana v Mahender Singh, (2007) 13 SCC 606 [LNIND 2007 SC 1295] : 2008 Cr LJ 444 : (2009) 1 SCC (Cr) 221.
131. Epuru Sudhakar v Govt of AP, (2006) 8 SCC 161 [LNIND 2006 SC 807] : AIR 2006 SC 3385 [LNIND 2006 SC 807] .
132. State of Mysore v H Srinivasmurthy, (1976) 1 SCC 817 [LNIND 1976 SC 29] : AIR 1976 SC 1104 [LNIND 1976 SC 29] .
133. Maru Ram v UOI, AIR 1980 SC 2147 [LNIND 1980 SC 446] : 1981 SCR (1) 1196.
134. Devender Pal Singh Bhullar v State of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2013 SC 1975 [LNIND 2013 SC 1281] : (2013) 6 SCC 195 [LNIND 2008 SC 2975] .
135. Kehar Singh v UOI, AIR 1989 SC 653 [LNIND 1988 SC 586] : (1989) 1 SCC 204 [LNIND 1988 SC 586] .
136. Overruled in Triveni Ben v State of Gujarat, AIR 1989 SC 1335 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] : (1989) 1 SCC 678 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] .
137. In Ediga Annamma's case, (1974 (3) SCR 329), two years was considered sufficient to justify interference with the sentence of death. In Bhagwan Baux's case (AIR 1978 SC 34), two and a half years and in Sadhu Singh's case (AIR 1978 SC 1506), three and a half years were taken as sufficient to justify altering the sentence of death into one of imprisonment for life, See also KP Mohammed v State of Kerala, (1985) 1 SCC (Cr) 142 : 1984 Supp SCC 684.
138. Sher Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 465 [LNIND 1983 SC 89] : (1983) 2 SCC 344 [LNIND 1983 SC 89] .
139. Javed Ahmed v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1985 SC 231 [LNIND 1984 SC 310] : (1985) 1 SCC 275 [LNIND 1984 SC 310] .
140. Triveni Ben v State of Gujarat, AIR 1989 SC 1335 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] : (1989) 1 SCC 678 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] : JT 1989 (1) SC 314 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] : 1990 Cr LJ 1810 : (1989) 1 SCC (Cr) 248.
141. Madhu Mehta v UOI, (1989) 3 SCR 775 [LNIND 1989 SC 390] .
142. See also Daya Singh v UOI, (1991) 3 SCC 61 [LNIND 1991 SC 231] .
143. Devender Pal Singh Bhullar v State of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2013 SC 1975 [LNIND 2013 SC 1281] : (2013) 6 SCC 195 [LNIND 2008 SC 2975] .
144. GS Singhvi and S J Mukhopadhaya, JJ.
145. Mahendra Nath Das v UOI, (2013) 6 SCC 253 [LNIND 2013 SC 522] : 2013 (6) Scale 591 [LNIND 2013 SC 522] .
146. Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka, 2008 (13) SCC 767 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : AIR 2008 SC 3040 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : 2008 Cr LJ 3911; Also see State of UP v Sanjay Kumar, (2012) 8 SCC 537 [LNIND 2012 SC 416] .
147. Sangeet v State of Haryana, AIR 2013 SC 447 [LNIND 2012 SC 719] : (2013) 2 SCC 452 [LNIND 2012 SC 719] : 2013 Cr LJ 425 .
148. Sahib Hussain @ Sahib Jan v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ 2359 : 2013 (6) Scale 219 [LNIND 2013 SC 474] .
149. Gurvail Singh @ Gala v State of Punjab, 2013 (10) Scale 671 [LNIND 2013 SC 1147] .

150. Subhash Chander v Krishan Lal, (2001) 4 SCC 458 [LNIND 2001 SC 853] .
151. Shri Bhagwan v State of Rajasthan, (2001) 6 SCC 296 [LNIND 2001 SC 1234] .
152. Ram Anup Singh v State of Bihar, (2002) 6 SCC 686 [LNIND 2002 SC 482] .
153. Mohd Munna v UOI, (2005) 7 SCC 417 [LNIND 2005 SC 701] .
154. Jayawant Dattatraya Suryarao v State of Maharashtra, (2001) 10 SCC 109 [LNIND 2001 SC 2510] .
155. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] .
156. Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka, AIR 2008 SC 3040 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : 2008 (13) SCC 767 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : 2008 Cr LJ 3911 .
157. Haru Ghosh v State of WB, (2009) 15 SCC 551 [LNIND 2009 SC 1734] .
158. Ramraj v State of Chattisgarh, (2010) 1 SCC 573 [LNIND 2009 SC 2093] .
159. Neel Kumar @ Anil Kumar v The State of Haryana, (2012) 5 SCC 766 [LNIND 2012 SC 298] .
160. Sandeep v State of UP, (2012) 6 SCC 107 [LNIND 2012 SC 306] .
161. Gurvail Singh @ Gala v State of Punjab, (2013) 2 SCC 713 [LNIND 2013 SC 94] .
162. Brajendra Singh v State of MP, (2012) 4 SCC 289 [LNIND 2012 SC 159] .
163. State of UP v Sanjay Kumar, (2013)8 SCC 537 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 55] Commutation of sentence of imprisonment for life.

In every case in which sentence of ^{164.}[imprisonment] for life shall have been passed, ^{165.}[the appropriate Government] may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding fourteen years.

COMMENT—

In the absence of an order under section 55 IPC, 1860 or section 433\(b\) Cr PC, 1973 a life convict cannot be released even after expiry of 14 years, for a sentence of life imprisonment means rigorous imprisonment for the rest of convict's life.^{166.} It is now conclusively settled by a catena of decisions that the punishment of imprisonment for life handed down by the Court means a sentence of imprisonment for the convict for the rest of his life.^{167.} However, Supreme Court has been, for quite some time, conscious of the liberal approach and sometimes discriminatory too, taken by the States in exercise of their power under sections 432 and 433 of Cr PC, 1973 in remitting or commuting sentences. In Jagmohan Singh v State of UP,^{168.} Court had expressed concern about such approach made by the States in remitting life sentences that led to the amendment in Cr PC introducing section 433A by Act 45 of 1978. Under section 433A of Cr PC, 1973 a sentence of imprisonment for life is imposed for an offence for which death is one of the punishments or where a death sentence is commuted to life under section 433, he shall not be released unless he has served 14 years of imprisonment.

It appears that the provision has been generally understood to mean that life sentence would only be 14 years of incarceration. Taking judicial notice of such a trend, the Supreme Court has, in cases where imposition of death sentence would be too harsh and imprisonment for life (the way it is understood as above) too inadequate, in several cases, has adopted different methods to ensure that the minimum term of life imprisonment ranges from at least 20 years to the end of natural life. However, in some cases, the Court had also been voicing concern about the statutory basis of such orders.^{169.} In the case of State of Rajasthan v Jamil Khan,^{170.} the Supreme Court opined that:

We are of the view that it will do well in case a proper amendment under section 53 of IPC is provided, introducing one more category of punishment - life imprisonment without commutation or remission. Dr. VS Malimath, J, in the Report on 'Committee of Reforms of Criminal Justice System', submitted in 2003, had made such a suggestion but so far no serious steps have been taken in that regard. There could be a provision for imprisonment till death without remission or commutation.

[s 55.1] The power of High Court to commute.—

Exercise of power under section 433 is an executive discretion. The High Court in exercise of its revisional jurisdiction had no power conferred on it to commute the sentence imposed where a minimum sentence was provided for offence. The mandate of section 433 Cr PC, 1973 enables the Government in an appropriate case to commute the sentence of a convict and to prematurely order his release before expiry of the sentence as imposed by the Courts.¹⁷¹ In State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v Prem Raj,¹⁷² Supreme Court was called upon to consider whether in a case involving conviction under section 7 read with section 13\(1\)\(d\) of the Prevention of Corruption Act 1988, the High Court could commute the sentence of imprisonment on deposit of a specified amount by the convict and direct the State Government to pass appropriate order under section 433\(c\) Cr PC, 1973. It was held that the question of remission lay within the domain of the appropriate government and it was not open to the High Court to give a direction of that kind even if the High Court could give such a direction, it could only direct consideration of the case of premature release by the Government and could not have ordered the premature release of the respondent itself. The right to exercise the power under section 433 Cr PC, 1973 vests in the Government and has to be exercised by the Government in accordance with the rules and established principles. The impugned order of the High Court cannot, therefore, be sustained and is hereby set aside.¹⁷³

[s 55.2] Power to commute, when minimum sentence is provided in the Statute.—

Punishment has a penological purpose. Reformation, retribution, prevention, and deterrence are some of the major factors in that regard. Parliament is the collective conscience of the people. If it has mandated a minimum sentence for certain offences, the Government being its delegate, cannot interfere with the same in exercise of their power for remission or commutation. Neither section 432 nor section 433 of Cr PC, 1973 hence contains a non-obstante provision. Therefore, the minimum sentence provided for any offence cannot be and shall not be remitted or commuted by the Government in exercise of their power under sections 432 or 433 of the Cr PC, 1973. Wherever the Indian Penal Code or such penal statutes have provided for a minimum sentence for any offence, to that extent, the power of remission or commutation has to be read as restricted; otherwise the whole purpose of punishment will be defeated and it will be a mockery on sentencing.¹⁷⁴

¹⁶⁴. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for transportation (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

¹⁶⁵. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "the Provincial Government of the Province within which the offender shall have been sentenced". The words in italics were substituted by the A.O. 1937, for the Government of India or the Government of the place.

¹⁶⁶. Naib Singh v State of Punjab, 1983 Cr LJ 1345 : AIR 1983 SC 855 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] : 1983 Cr LR (SC) 348 : (1983) 2 SCC 454 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 536. The provisions of these sections are subject to the overriding power conferred by Articles 72 and 161 of the Constitution of India. Ashok Kumar v UOI, AIR 1991 SC 1792 [LNIND 1990 SC 319] : 1991 Cr LJ 2483 , where the court also emphasised that imprisonment for life means imprisonment for the full span of life. Affirming, Gopal Vinayak Godse v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1961 SC 600 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] : (1961) 3 SCR 440 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 736 . In the absence of an order the section is not applicable because there can be no order by inference or implication, Sat Pal v State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 1218 [LNIND 1992 SC 526] : 1993 Cr LJ 314 : (1992) 4 SCC 172 [LNIND 1992 SC 526] .

167. Gopal Vinayak Godse v The State of Maharashtra, (1961) 3 SCR 440 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] (Constitution Bench); Dalbir Singh v State of Punjab, (1979) 3 SCC 745 [LNIND 1979 SC 281] ; Maru Ram v UOI, (1981) 1 SCC 107 [LNIND 1980 SC 446] (Constitution Bench); Naib Singh v State of Punjab, (1983) 2 SCC 454 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] ; Ashok Kumar alias Golu v UOI, (1991) 3 SCC 498 [LNIND 1991 SC 288] ; Laxman Naskar (Life Convict) v State of WB, (2000) 7 SCC 626 [LNIND 2000 SC 1180] ; Zahid Hussein v State of WB, (2001) 3 SCC 750 [LNIND 2001 SC 692] ; Kamalanantha v State of TN, (2005) 5 SCC 194 [LNIND 2005 SC 337] ; Mohd Munna v UOI, (2005) 7 SCC 416 [LNIND 2005 SC 701] and CA Pious v State of Kerala, (2007) 8 SCC 312 [LNIND 2007 SC 1070] .

168. Jagmohan Singh v State of UP, (1973) 1 SCC 20 [LNIND 1972 SC 477] .

169. Sangeet v State of Haryana, AIR 2013 SC 447 [LNIND 2012 SC 719] : (2013) 2 SCC 452 [LNIND 2012 SC 719] : 2013 Cr LJ 425 .

170. State of Rajasthan v Jamil Khan, 2013 (12) Scale 200 [LNIND 2013 SC 883] .

171. Delhi Administration (Now NCT of Delhi) v Madan Lal, 2002 (6) Supreme 77 [LNIND 2002 SC 533] .

172. State (Govt of NCT of Delhi) v Prem Raj, (2003) 7 SCC 121 [LNIND 2003 SC 632] .

173. State of Punjab v Kesar Singh, 1996 (5) SCC 495 [LNIND 1996 SC 1091] .

174. State of Rajasthan v Jamil Khan, 2013 (12) Scale 200 [LNIND 2013 SC 883] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

175. [[s 55A] Definition of "appropriate Government".

In sections 54 and 55 the expression "appropriate Government" means,—

- (a) in cases where the sentence is a sentence of death or is for an offence against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the Union extends, the Central Government; and
- (b) in cases where the sentence (whether of death or not) is for an offence against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the State extends, the Government of the State within which the offender is sentenced.]

COMMENT—

This section was substituted for the old section by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

The appropriate Government empowered to remit the sentence of a person convicted of offences under sections 489-A to 489-D of the IPC, 1860 is the Central Government not the State Government.^{176.}

^{175.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for section 55A. Earlier section 55A was inserted by the A.O. 1937.

^{176.} GV Ramanaiah v Superintendent of Central Jail, Rajahmundry, AIR 1974 SC 31 [LNIND 1973 SC 300] : (1974) 3 SCC 531 [LNIND 1973 SC 300] ; Hanumant Dass v Vinay Kumar, AIR 1982 SC 1052 : (1982) 2 SCC 177 -the appropriate Government is the Government of the State where the conviction took place and not the Government of the State where the offence was committed (Section 432\(7\) Cr PC).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

175. [[s 55A] Definition of "appropriate Government".

In sections 54 and 55 the expression "appropriate Government" means,—

- (a) in cases where the sentence is a sentence of death or is for an offence against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the Union extends, the Central Government; and
- (b) in cases where the sentence (whether of death or not) is for an offence against any law relating to a matter to which the executive power of the State extends, the Government of the State within which the offender is sentenced.]

COMMENT—

This section was substituted for the old section by the Adaptation of Laws Order 1950.

The appropriate Government empowered to remit the sentence of a person convicted of offences under sections 489-A to 489-D of the IPC, 1860 is the Central Government not the State Government.^{176.}

^{175.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for section 55A. Earlier section 55A was inserted by the A.O. 1937.

^{176.} GV Ramanaiah v Superintendent of Central Jail, Rajahmundry, AIR 1974 SC 31 [LNIND 1973 SC 300] : (1974) 3 SCC 531 [LNIND 1973 SC 300] ; Hanumant Dass v Vinay Kumar, AIR 1982 SC 1052 : (1982) 2 SCC 177 -the appropriate Government is the Government of the State where the conviction took place and not the Government of the State where the offence was committed (Section 432\(7\) Cr PC).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 56] Sentence of Europeans and Americans to penal servitude. Proviso as to sentence for term exceeding ten years but not for life.

[Rep. by the Criminal Law (Removal of Racial Discriminations) Act, 1949 (17 of 1949), sec. 2 (w.e.f. 6-4-1949).]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 57] Fractions of terms of punishment.

In calculating fractions of terms of punishment, ^{177.}[imprisonment] for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to ^{178.}[imprisonment] for twenty years.

COMMENT—

Section 57 of the IPC, 1860 does not in any way limit the punishment of imprisonment for life to a term of 20 years. Section 57 is only for calculating fractions of terms of punishment and provides that imprisonment for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to imprisonment for 20 years. The object and purpose of section 57 will be clear by simply referring to sections 65, 116, 119, 129 and 511 of the IPC, 1860.^{179.} The accused has thus no right to be released after a period of 20 years. The remissions granted under the rules made under the Prison Act or under the Jail Manual are merely administrative orders of the appropriate Government and fall exclusively within the discretion of the Government under section 401 (now section 432) Cr PC, 1973. In the case of a prisoner who is convicted in one State but transferred to the jail of another State to serve out the sentence, the appropriate Government to grant remission would be the Government of the State where the accused was convicted and not that of the transferee Government.^{180.}

[s 57.1] Life imprisonment.—

Life imprisonment means imprisonment for the whole of a convict's natural life. It does not automatically expire on his serving sentence of 14 years or 20 years, unless, of course, the sentence is remitted or commuted by the Government in accordance with the law^{181.} The Court said that life imprisonment means imprisonment for the whole of the remaining period of the convict's life. The fact that the West Bengal Correctional Services Act 1992, equates life imprisonment with imprisonment for 20 years does not entitle the convict to automatic release on expiry of such term of imprisonment including remission.^{182.}

[s 57.2] Punishment for attempt Under Section 511 when the offence attempted is punishable with Life imprisonment.—

Section 57 of the IPC, 1860 provides that in calculating fractions of terms of punishment, imprisonment for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to imprisonment for 20 years. In view of this, for the offence of attempt to commit rape punishable under section 376(2)(a) read with section 511 maximum sentence would be rigorous imprisonment for ten years.^{183.}

-
177. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, sec. 117 and Sch., for "transportation" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).
178. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).
179. Swamy Shraddananda (2) v State of Karnataka, 2008 (13) SCC 767 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : AIR 2008 SC 3040 [LNIND 2008 SC 1488] : 2008 Cr LJ 3911 .
180. State of MP v Ratan Singh, 1976 Cr LJ 1192 : AIR 1976 SC 1552 [LNIND 1976 SC 215] ; see also Naib Singh v State of Punjab, (1983) 2 SCC 454 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] : AIR 1983 SC 855 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] : 1983 Cr LJ 1345 ; Gopal Vinayak Godse, AIR 1961SC 600 : (1961) 1 Cr LJ 736 : (1961) 63 Bom LR 517 [LNIND 1961 SC 11] SC.
181. Life Convict, Laxman Naskar v State of WB, AIR 2000 SC 2762 [LNIND 2000 SC 1180] : 2000 Cr LJ 4017 .
182. See the comments under section 45 and section 55.
183. Chandrakant Vithal Pawar v State of Maharashtra, 2011 Cr LJ 4900 (Bom); Syed Ghouse Alias Babu v State of AP, 2009 Cr LJ 311 (AP)(DB).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 58] Offenders sentenced to transportation how dealt with until transported.

Rep. by the [Code of Criminal Procedure \(Amendment\) Act, 1955 \(26 of 1955\), sec. 117 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 59] Transportation instead of imprisonment.

Rep. by the [Code of Criminal Procedure \(Amendment\) Act, 1955 \(26 of 1955\), sec. 117 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 60] Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple.

In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

COMMENT—

Life imprisonment means rigorous imprisonment for life.¹⁸⁴ A distinction between 'imprisonment for life' and 'imprisonment for a term' has been maintained in the Indian Penal Code in several of its provisions. Second, by its very terms section 60 is applicable to a case where 'an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description' and it is only in such case that it is competent for the Court to direct that 'such imprisonment shall be either wholly rigorous or wholly simple or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple'. And it is clear that whenever an offender is punishable with 'imprisonment for life' he is not punishable with 'imprisonment which may be of either description', in other words section 60 would be inapplicable. The position in law as regards the nature of punishment involved in a sentence of imprisonment for life is well settled and the sentence of imprisonment for life has to be equated to rigorous imprisonment for life.¹⁸⁵

¹⁸⁴. Mohd Munna v UOI, (2005) 7 SCC 417 [LNIND 2005 SC 701] : AIR 2005 SC 3440 [LNIND 2005 SC 701].

¹⁸⁵. Naib Singh case, (1983 (2) SCC 454 [LNIND 1983 SC 116] : 1983 SCC (Cr) 536.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 61] Sentence of forfeiture of property.

Rep. by the [Indian Penal Code \(Amendment\) Act, 1921 \(XVI of 1921\), sec. 4.]

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 62] Forfeiture of property in respect of offenders punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment.

Rep. by the [Indian Penal Code \(Amendment\) Act, 1921 \(XVI of 1921\), sec. 4.]

COMMENT—

These sections were deleted by the Indian Penal Code \(Amendment\) Act of 1921. They imposed the sentence of forfeiture of property. The Court recommended reintroduction of these sections because they have become necessary to combat the cancerous growth of corruption. These provisions would have a determined effect on those who are bent upon to accumulate wealth at the cost of the society by misusing their position of power.¹⁸⁶

¹⁸⁶. Shobha Suresh Jumani v Appellate Tribunal, Forfeited Property, [AIR 2001 SC 2288 \[LNIND 2001 SC 1184\]](#): 2001 Cr LJ 2583 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 63] Amount of fine.

Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited, but shall not be excessive.

COMMENT—

A fine is fixed with due regard to circumstances of the case in which it is imposed and the condition of life of the offender. When the legislature has not fixed any upper limit for the quantum of fine in respect of a particular offence, the Court has freedom to fix any amount but then the Court must see that the fine imposed is not excessively high or repulsively low. Financial capacity of the accused, enormity of the offence and extent of damage caused to the victim of the offences etc. are relevant considerations in fixing up the amount.^{187.}

[s 63.1] Fine not to be harsh or excessive.—

The general principle of law running through sections 63 to 70 is that the amount of fine should not be too harsh or excessive. Where a substantial term of imprisonment is inflicted, an excessive fine should not be imposed except in exceptional cases.^{188.} Section 63 does not prescribe any limit to the amount of fine, but it should not be excessive. In the present case having regard to the gravity of the offence and the illegal gains made by the accused, the fine imposed to the tune of Rs. 60 crores was held to be not excessive.^{189.}

[s 63.2] Applicability in other Statutes.—

Sections 63–70 IPC, 1860 and provision of Cr PC, 1973 relating to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine would apply to all cases wherein fines have been imposed on an offender unless 'the Act, Regulation, Rules or Bye-law contains an express provision to the contrary'.^{190.}

^{187.} Sebastian v State of Kerala, 1992 Cr LJ 3642 (Ker) : 1992 \(3\) Crimes 864 (Ker)

^{188.} Shahejadhkhan Maheubkhan Pathan v State of Gujarat, JT 2012 \(10\) SC 8 [LNIND 2012 SC 630] : 2012 \(10\) Scale 21 [LNIND 2012 SC 630] : AIR 2012 \(SCW\) 5875 (In this judgment the SC quoted the previous edition of this book). See also Shantilal v State of MP, (2007) 11 SCC 243 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] : 2008 Cr LJ 386 .

189. Association of Victims of Uphaar Tragedy v Sushil Ansal, AIR 2017 SC 976 .

190. Shantilal v State of MP, (2007) 11 SCC 243 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] : 2008 Cr LJ 386 : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 1.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 64] Sentence of imprisonment for non-payment of fine.

191. [In every case, of an offence punishable with imprisonment as well as fine,¹ in which the offender is sentenced to a fine, whether with or without imprisonment, and in every case of an offence punishable 192.[with imprisonment or fine, or] with fine only, in which the offender is sentenced to a fine,] it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct by the sentence that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall suffer imprisonment for a certain term, in which imprisonment shall be in excess of any other imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced or to which he may be liable under a commutation of a sentence.

COMMENT—

The term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence. It is a penalty which a person incurs on account of non-payment of fine. The sentence is something which an offender must undergo unless it is set aside or remitted in part or in whole either in appeal or in revision or in other appropriate judicial proceedings or "otherwise". A term of imprisonment ordered in default of payment of fine stands on a different footing. A person is required to undergo imprisonment either because he is unable to pay the amount of fine or refuses to pay such amount. He, therefore, can always avoid to undergo imprisonment in default of payment of fine by paying such amount. It is, therefore, not only the power, but also the duty of the Court to keep in view the nature of offence, circumstances under which it was committed, the position of the offender and other relevant considerations before ordering the offender to suffer imprisonment in default of payment of fine.^{193.} A default sentence is no punishment under law. It is only a method of enforcement of the direction for payment of amounts directed to be paid as fine. Wherever the Criminal Court has the jurisdictional competence to impose a fine, sections 64–70, IPC, and section 30 Cr PC, 1973 stipulate that the Court can recover the same by imposition of a default sentence. The jurisdiction to impose a default sentence is only incidental to the power to impose a fine and the duty of the Court to recover the same.^{194.} The wording of the section is not happy, but the Legislature intended by it to provide for the award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine in all cases in which fine can be imposed to induce the offender to pay the fine.

The cases falling under this section are:—

Where the offence is punishable with (a) imprisonment with fine, or (b) imprisonment or fine, or (c) fine only, and the offender is sentenced to (i) imprisonment, or (ii) fine, or both, the Court may sentence the offender to a term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine. A term of imprisonment for non-payment of fine is not a substantive sentence. It is only a penalty for the default. It cannot be added to the substantive sentence so as to see whether the maximum imprisonment that could be awarded for the offence is not being exceeded.^{195.}

1. 'Imprisonment as well as fine.'—Magistrates cannot award compensation in addition to fine.^{196.}

The full Bench of Madras High Court held that imprisonment in default of payment of fine cannot be directed to run concurrently with substantive sentence because both the sentences are distinct in view of sections 53 and 64 IPC, 1860.^{197.}

[s 64.1] Sentence and penalty distinguished.—

The term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence. It is penalty incurred for non-payment of fine. A sentence is a term of imprisonment, which the offender has to undergo unless it is remitted in a further judicial proceeding or otherwise. A term of imprisonment on default in payment of fine stands on a different footing. The further imprisonment is due to non-payment by refusal or otherwise. The convict can pay the amount and get rid of further imprisonment.^{198.}

[s 64.2] Fine and Compensation.—

There exists a distinction between fine and compensation, although, in a way it seeks to achieve the same purpose. An amount of compensation can be directed to be recovered as a 'fine' but the legal fiction raised in relation to recovery of fine only, it is in that sense 'fine' stands on a higher footing than compensation awarded by the Court.^{199.}

[s 64.3] Power of Magistrate to impose Sentence of imprisonment in default of fine.—

As per section 30 of Cr PC, 1973 the Court of a Magistrate may award such term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine as is authorised by law: provided that the term is not in excess of the powers of the Magistrate under section 29 Cr PC, 1973; and shall not, where imprisonment has been awarded as part of the substantive sentence, exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which the Magistrate is competent to inflict as punishment for the offence otherwise than as imprisonment in default of payment of the fine. The imprisonment awarded may be in addition to a substantive sentence of imprisonment for the maximum term awardable by the Magistrate under section 29 of Cr PC, 1973. The default sentence is not to be in excess to the limitations imposed under section 30 Cr PC, 1973.^{200.}

[s 64.4] Default sentence on non-payment of Compensation.—

Undoubtedly, there is no specific provision in the Code which enables the Court to sentence a person who commits breach of the order of payment of compensation. But in Hari Singh v Sukhbir Singh,^{201.} Supreme Court held that since the imposition of compensation under section 357\(3\) Cr PC, 1973 was on account of social concern, the Court could enforce the same by imposing sentence in default, particularly when no mode had been prescribed in the Code for recovery of sums awarded as compensation in the event the same remained unpaid. The position is re-iterated in Sugnathi Suresh Kumar v Jagdeeshan.^{202.} The provisions of sections 357(3) and 431 Cr PC, 1973 when read with section 64 IPC, 1860 empower the Court, while making an order for payment of compensation, to also include a default sentence in case of non-payment of the same.^{203.}

191. Subs. by Act 8 of 1882, section 2, for "In every case in which an offender is sentenced to a fine".
192. Ins. by Act 10 of 1886, section 21(2).
193. Shahejadkhan Mahebubkhan Pathan v State of Gujarat, 2012 (10) Scale 21 [LNIND 2012 SC 630] : (2013) 1 SCC 570 [LNIND 2012 SC 630] : JT 2012 (10) SC 8 [LNIND 2012 SC 630] : Shantilal v State of MP, (2007) 11 SCC 243 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] : 2008 Cr LJ 386 : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 1.
194. C Ganga v Lakshmi Ammal, 2008 Cr LJ 3359 (Ker).
195. P Balaraman v State of TN, 1991 Cr LJ 166 Mad at pp 176-177.
196. Dilip S Dahanukar v Kotak Mahindra Co Ltd, (2007) 6 SCC 528 [LNIND 2007 SC 451] : 2007 Cr LJ 2417 : 2007 (4) SCR1122 : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 209.
197. Donatus Tony Ikwanusi v The Investigating Officer, NCB 2013 Cr LJ 1938 (Mad FB) : 2013 (2) CTC1. See also Sukumaran v State, 1993 Cr LJ 3228 (Ker) ; Madappen Muhassin v State of Kerala, 2016Cr LJ 4792 (Ker).
198. Shantilal v State of MP, (2007) 11 SCC 243 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] : (2008) 1 SCC Cri 1 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] .
199. Dilip S Dahanukar v Kotak Mahindra Co Ltd, (2007) 6 SCC 528 [LNIND 2007 SC 451] : 2007 Cr LJ 2417 : 2007 (4) SCR1122 : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 209.
200. Kuna Maharana v State, 1996 Cr LJ 170 (Ori).
201. AIR 1988 SC 2127 [LNIND 1988 SC 411] : (1988) 4 SCC 551 [LNIND 1988 SC 411] .
202. Sugnathi Suresh Kumar v Jagdeeshan, AIR 2002 SC 681 [LNIND 2002 SC 1622] : (2002) 2 SCC 420 [LNIND 2002 SC 1622] .
203. Vijayan v Sadanandan, (2009) 6 SCC 652 [LNIND 2009 SC 1119] : 2009 Cr LJ 2957 : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 296; C Ganga v Lakshmi Ammal, 2008 Cr LJ 3359 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 65] Limit to imprisonment for non-payment of fine, when imprisonment and fine awardable.

The term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned in default of payment of a fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which is the maximum fixed for the offence, if the offence be punishable with imprisonment as well as fine.

COMMENT—

This section applies to all cases where the offence is 'punishable with imprisonment as well as fine', i.e., cases where fine and imprisonment can be awarded, and also those where the punishment may be either fine or imprisonment, but not both. The only cases that it does not apply to are those dealt with in section 67 where fine only can be awarded.²⁰⁴ Section 33 (now 30) of the Cr PC, 1973 acts as a corollary to this section. Thus under section 65, IPC, 1860 the imprisonment in default of fine cannot exceed one-fourth of the maximum term of imprisonment that can be awarded for the offence. Thus, where the High Court altered the conviction of the appellant to one under section 419 read with section 109 IPC, from a conviction recorded by the trial Court under sections 420/511, 467, 468 and 471 read with section 120B IPC, and awarded a sentence of two years' rigorous imprisonment while maintaining the fine of Rs. 3,000 and by implication the default imprisonment of two years as awarded by the trial Court, it was held that, though the trial Court's order regarding two years' imprisonment in default of payment of fine was quite in order in view of the fact that the five offences for which the trial Court recorded a conviction were each punishable with seven years' imprisonment and the fine of Rs. 3,000 was only a part of the cumulative sentence for the commission of those five offences, yet the sentence of three years' imprisonment in default of payment of fine became illegal the moment the High Court altered the conviction to one under section 419 read with section 109 IPC, as under these sections the accused could be sentenced to a maximum of three years' imprisonment and, therefore, the default imprisonment could under no circumstance exceed nine months, that is, one-fourth of the maximum sentence of three years that could be awarded under section 419, IPC.²⁰⁵ While a Magistrate's powers are specifically limited by section 33\(old\) Cr PC they must also be exercised so as not to contravene section 65 IPC.²⁰⁶ Section 326, IPC is punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine. However, because of section 29\(2\), Cr PC the learned Magistrate, First Class, cannot impose the maximum amount of imprisonment prescribed by this section; he also cannot, by resorting to section 65, IPC, award a period of imprisonment, in default of payment of fine, on the erroneous assumption that he has the power to award the maximum sentence prescribed by section 326, IPC.²⁰⁷ Section 65 IPC that puts a limit of imprisonment for default sentence upto one-fourth of the term of imprisonment, the grievance against higher default sentence, if any, can be only by the accused and not by the State.²⁰⁸

-
204. Yakoob Sahib v State, (1898) 22 Mad 238.
205. Ram Jas v State of UP, 1974 Cr LJ 1261 : AIR 1974 SC 1811 [LNIND 1970 SC 363] ; see also Partap Kumar, 1976 Cr LJ 818 (P&H).
206. Chhajulal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1972 SC 1809 [LNIND 1972 SC 179] : (1972) 3 SCC 411 [LNIND 1972 SC 179] . See Shantilal v State of MP, (2007) 11 SCC 243 [LNIND 2007 SC 1171] : 2008 Cr LJ 386 : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 1 in which the period of three years imprisonment for default of fine was reduced to six months.
207. Bidhan Bisoi v State of Orissa, 1989 Cr LJ 1038 (Ori).
208. Association of Victims of Uphaar Tragedy v Sushil Ansal, AIR 2017 SC 976 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 66] Description of imprisonment for non-payment of fine.

The imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of a fine may be of any description to which the offender might have been sentenced for the offence.

COMMENT—

The imprisonment in default of payment of a fine may be either rigorous or simple.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 67] Imprisonment for non-payment of fine when offence punishable with fine only.

If the offence be punishable with fine only,²⁰⁹ [the imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of the fine shall be simple, and] the term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of fine, shall not exceed the following scale, that is to say, for any term not exceeding two months when the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty rupees, and for any term not exceeding four months when the amount shall not exceed one hundred rupees, and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case.

COMMENT—

This section refers solely to cases in which the offence is punishable with fine only and has no application to an offence punishable either with imprisonment or with fine, but not with both. Such offences are governed by section 65. For a consideration under this section of the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substances Act (61 of 1985), section 21 of which imposes a fine and imprisonment in default, see Daulat Raghunath Derale v State of Maharashtra.²¹⁰

[s 67.1] Default sentence on non-payment of Maintenance.—

The sentence is imposed under section 125\(3\) of Cr PC, 1973 only as a mode of enforcement of the direction to pay the amount of maintenance and not as a punishment. The Supreme Court was considering the question whether the default sentence, if undergone shall wipe off the liability.²¹¹ It is impermissible to impose a sentence of rigorous imprisonment on a defaulter under section 125\(3\) Cr PC, 1973. Only a sentence of simple imprisonment can be imposed under section 125\(3\) of Cr PC, 1973.²¹²

²⁰⁹ Ins. by Act 8 of 1882, section 3.

²¹⁰ Daulat Raghunath Derale v State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 817 .

²¹¹ Kuldip Kaur v Surinder Singh, (AIR 1989 SC 232 [LNIND 1988 SC 987]) : 1989 Cr LJ 794 . It was held that the purpose of sending him to jail is not to wipe out the liability which he has refused to discharge. A sentence of jail is no substitute for the recovery of the amount of monthly allowance which has fallen in arrears.

²¹² Moideenkutty Kunhankutty Haji v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 3402 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 68] Imprisonment to terminate on payment of fine.

The imprisonment which is imposed in default of payment of a fine shall terminate whenever that fine is either paid or levied by process of law.

COMMENT—

The person sentenced to pay a fine must deposit the fine forthwith, but may be, permitted to deposit it after some time in the discretion of the Court. Even in that event he must deposit the amount before the period specifically fixed by the Court and if he does not do so, he immediately incurs the liability of being sent to prison. It would be the duty of the Court to arrest him and confine him into the prison. Only when such confinement in the prison has commenced that the accused can have a legal right to deposit the amount whereupon section 68 IPC, 1860 would come into operation and his imprisonment would terminate.²¹³ The time given by the High Court or the Sessions Judges in appeal or revision for payment of fine merely means that the realisation is deferred till the time granted. However, this cannot take away the rights of the convicts as provided under section 68 and section 69 of the IPC, 1860. If the convict offers to deposit the fine imposed on him beyond the period provided, the Courts cannot refuse to accept the same. It must apply the provisions of section 68 and section 69 of the IPC, 1860.²¹⁴ The period to deposit the amount of fine cannot be extended by the High Court under section 482 Cr PC, 1973 and the petitioners can avail the remedy of provisions of section 68 of IPC, 1860.²¹⁵

²¹³. Ram Lakhan v State, 1986 Cr LJ 617 (All); Usman v State of UP, 2007 Cr LJ 3868 (All).

²¹⁴. State of Assam v Bir Bahadur Singh, 2005 Cr LJ 4345 (Gau).

²¹⁵. Prahalad Singh v State of MP, 2009 Cr LJ 3161 (MP); Ram Lakhan v State, 1986 Cr LJ 617 (All).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 69] Termination of imprisonment on payment of proportional part of fine.

If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.

ILLUSTRATION

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred rupees and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

COMMENT—

If the fine imposed on an accused is paid or levied while he is imprisoned for default of payment, his imprisonment will immediately terminate: and if a proportion of the fine be paid during the imprisonment, a proportional abatement of the imprisonment will take place. The Court has, however, no power to refund fine. If the time limit had been set by the Court for payment of fine and the fine amount is not paid within the time so fixed, then it goes without saying that the petitioner-accused has to either surrender before the Court or the prosecuting agency will be in a position to arrest him and produce before Court for his detention in prison for undergoing the default sentence.²¹⁶ In case of default in payment of fine accused not obeying specific directions as to making payment and postponing payment without surrendering into Court. Accused is guilty of abuse of process of Court.²¹⁷

²¹⁶. Prahalad Singh v State of M P, 2009 Cr LJ 3161 (MP).

²¹⁷. Ram Lakhan v The State, 1986 Cr LJ 617 (All).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 70] Fine leviable within six years, or during imprisonment. Death not to discharge property from liability.

The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

COMMENT—

Imprisonment in default of fine does not liberate the offender from his liability to pay the full amount of fine imposed on him. Such imprisonment is not a discharge or satisfaction of the fine but is imposed as a punishment for non-payment or contempt or resistance to the due execution of the sentence. The offender cannot be permitted to choose whether he will suffer in his person or his property. His person will cease to be answerable for the fine. Nevertheless, his property will for a time continue to do so. The bar of six years may save the property of the accused but not his personal arrest. The liability for any sentence of imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine continues after the expiration of six years.²¹⁸ Any proceeding taken after six years to recover the fine by sale of immoveable property of the offender is time-barred.²¹⁹ The limitation starts from the date of passing of the sentence of conviction by the trial Court and not the date of dismissal of the appeal or revision preferred by the accused.²²⁰ The property of the accused is liable for the payment of fine even if he has undergone imprisonment in default of fine and as such even on death of the offender does not discharge any property which would after his death, be legally liable for his debts due from him (including liability) to discharge the fine.²²¹

The expression "levy" in this section means "to seize" for the purpose of collecting the fine or to enforce execution for a certain sum and not actual realisation.²²² Any stay or suspension obtained from the higher Court has to be excluded in computing the period of six years' limitation under section 70 IPC.²²³ Section 70 says that State shall levy fine within six years from the date of sentence. What is contemplated is that the State shall commence recovery proceedings within six years; and, need not be completed it within six years of the sentence. Therefore, once a distress warrant is issued within six years of the sentence, the plea of limitation is out of bounds for the sentence.²²⁴

²¹⁸. Ganu Sakharam, (1884) Unrep. Cr C 207.

²¹⁹. Collector of Broach v Ochhavlal Bhikalal, (1940) 43 Bom LR 122, (1941) Bom 147. State v Krishna Pillai Madhavan Pillai, 1953 Cr LJ 1265

220. Palakdhari Singh, AIR 1962 SC 1145 [LNIND 1962 SC 17] : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 256 .
221. P R Anjanappa v Yurej Agencies Pvt Ltd, 2004 Cr LJ 2565 (Kar).
222. Ramaswamy, (1962) 64 Bom LR 440 : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 152
223. Mahtab Singh v State of UP, 1979 Cr LJ 1077 : AIR 1979 SC 1263 [LNIND 1978 SC 186] .
224. Mahtab Singh, Supra; see also Brahameshwar Prasad Sinha, 1983 Cr LJ 8 (Pat).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 71] Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences.

Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

225. [Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences.]

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for fifty years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating.
- (b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes, and A intentionally strikes Y, here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z, and to another for the blow given to Y.

COMMENT—

The section says that where an offence is made up of parts, each of which constitutes an offence, the offender should not be punished for more than one offence unless expressly provided. Where an offence falls within two or more separate definitions of offences; or where several acts of which one or more than one would, by itself or themselves, constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the offender should not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences. The section governs the whole Code and regulates the limit of punishment in cases in which the greater offence is made up of two or more minor offences. It is not a rule of adjective law or procedure, but a rule of substantive law regulating the measure of punishment, and it does not, therefore, affect the question of conviction, which relates to the province of procedure. Section 71 IPC, 1860 as well as section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 talk only of punishment and not of conviction. Thus, conviction of the accused in respect of the same act for two different offences is quite legal.²²⁶ The section contemplates separate punishments for an offence against the same law and not under different laws. Where offences are committed under two separate enactments, section 71 IPC, 1860 is not helpful to the accused and as such, two separate sentences cannot be questioned by pressing section 71 into service.²²⁷ In order to attract provisions of Article 20\(2\) of the Constitution, i.e., doctrine of autrefois acquit or section 300 Cr PC, 1973 or section 71 IPC, 1860 or section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897 ingredients of the offences in the earlier case as well as in the latter case must be the same and not different. The test to ascertain whether the two offences are the same is not identity of the allegations but the identity of the ingredients of the offence.²²⁸

The rules for assessment of punishment are laid down in sections 71 and 72 of the IPC, 1860 and section 31 of the Cr PC, 1973. Section 31 of the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that when a person is convicted at one trial of two or more offences, the Court may, subject to the provisions of section 71 of the IPC, 1860, sentence him, for such offences, to the several punishments prescribed therefor which such Court is competent to inflict; and in the case of consecutive sentences, it shall not be necessary for the Court, by reason only of the aggregate punishment for the several offence being in excess of the punishment which it is competent to inflict on conviction of a single offences, to send the offender for trial before a higher Court. It, therefore, enhances the ordinary powers of sentences given to Magistrates by section 29, Cr PC, 1973; but in order to bring a case within the purview of this section, the accused must have been convicted of two or more offences in the same trial, and the sentence for any one of these offences should not exceed the limits of their ordinary powers. The limits fixed by this section refer to sentences passed simultaneously, or upon charges which are tried simultaneously. Sentences of imprisonment passed under it may run concurrently. When an accused is convicted at one trial of two or more offences, section 31\(1\) of Cr PC, 1973 vests discretion in Court to direct that punishment shall run concurrently. Court may sentence the accused for such offences to several punishments prescribed therefor, and such punishment would consist of imprisonment to commence, one after expiration of other in such order as the Court may direct, subject to limitation contained in section 71 of IPC, 1860.²²⁹

[s 71.1] Illustration (a).—

"A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for 50years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating." It is to be noted that the whole beating is considered to constitute one offence while each of the blows also amounted to the offence of voluntarily causing hurt. It can be said, therefore, that while the obtaining of money by cheating on the presentation of an individual bill did constitute the offence of cheating the obtaining of the entire money in pursuance of the terms of the single contract and the single conspiracy entered into also constituted the offence of cheating. When the accused could not be punished with the punishment for more than one such offence it cannot be the intention of law that the accused be charged with each of the offences, which were in a way included in the complete offence made up by the entire course of conduct of the accused in pursuance of the conspiracy.²³⁰

[s 71.2] Section 71 IPC and section 220 Cr PC.—

Section 71 of the IPC, 1860 has to be read in conjunction with section 220 of the Cr PC, 1973. It should, however, be remembered that section 220 Cr PC, 1973 contains only rules of criminal pleading in regard to joinder of charges and does not deal with the sentence to be passed on the charges of the offences mentioned in the several illustrations thereunder. Sub-section (5) of section 220 Cr PC, 1973 makes this position abundantly clear. A joint reading of section 71 IPC, 1860 and section 220 Cr PC, 1973 clearly shows that clause (2) of section 71 IPC, 1860 approximates sub-section (3) of section 220 Cr PC, 1973 and clause (3) of section 71 IPC, 1860 corresponds to sub-section (4) of section 220 Cr PC, 1973. It, therefore, follows that the embargo on separate sentence under section 71 IPC, 1860 applies only to cases falling within sub-sections (3) and (4) of section 220 Cr PC, 1973 and not under, for example, sub-section (1) of that section.²³¹ Thus in cases covered by illustrations (i), (j) and (k) to sub-section (3) and illustration (m) to sub-section (4) of section 220 Cr PC, though the offences mentioned therein could be tried together and conviction recorded in regard to each one of them, yet no separate sentences could be passed in view of the embargo contained in section 71 IPC, 1860. Similarly, where the accused was convicted and sentenced under section 147 IPC, 1860 a separate sentence under section 143 IPC, 1860 could not be passed.²³² In the same way when an accused is convicted for a more serious offence, e.g., under section 148 IPC, 1860 a separate sentence under section 147 IPC, 1860 is not only uncalled for but illegal.²³³ It, therefore, means that cases falling under sub-section (1) of section 220 Cr PC, 1973 where several distinct offences are committed in course of the same transaction, the accused cannot only be tried and convicted of all of them at one trial but even separate sentences can be passed in regard to each one of them. Thus, where a person commits lurking house-trespass by night (section 457 IPC, 1860) and also commits theft (section 380 IPC, 1860) in course of the same transaction, he can be convicted and sentenced separately for both of them.²³⁴ Though the offence under section 420, IPC, 1860 and offence under section 138, N.I. Act are very distinct and their ingredients are different, still both the offences were committed during the same transaction; accused could have been charged and tried for both the offences during single trial as per section 220, Cr PC, 1973. However, from the language of section 220, it appears to be enabling provision whereby two or more different offences may be tried together by the Court and not mandatory.²³⁵

[s 71.3] CASES.—

1. It was contended that the accused having caused the evidence of the two offences under sections 330 and 348 to disappear, committed two separate offences under section 201 and are punishable accordingly. Taking a strict view of the matter, it must be said that by the same act the appellants committed two offences under section 201. The case is not covered either by section 71 of the IPC, 1860 or by section 26 of the General Clauses Act, and the punishment for the two offences cannot be limited under those sections. But, normally, no Court should award two separate punishments for the same act constituting two offences under section 201. The appropriate sentence under section 201 for causing the evidence of the offence under section 330 to disappear should be passed, and no separate sentence need be passed under section 201 for causing the evidence of the offence under section 348 to disappear.²³⁶ Where death was caused by rash and negligent driving of a truck and the accused could be convicted under sections 279 and also under sections 304A, it was held that a separate sentence under sections 279 could not be imposed.²³⁷

[s 71.4] Rioting and grievous hurt.—

The illustration (a) to section 71 IPC makes it clear that where only an offence is made up of many parts, and then only, the offender shall not be punished for more than one such offence. When the offences are separate and distinct and do not constitute parts of one offence, the accused can be convicted separately for each one of the offences. Therefore, the argument that the sentence both under sections 148 and 324, IPC is opposed to section 71, IPC is not acceptable.²³⁸

The provisions of section 31 of the Code of Criminal Procedure have to be read subject to the provisions of this section and that where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, the offender shall not be punished with more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for anyone of such offences.^{239.}

3. Same facts constituting different offences.—It has been held that although the act of the petitioner is only one, namely plying of overloaded vehicle on the public road, he had committed two distinct offences punishable under two different enactments, namely (i) violation of the terms of permit and certificate of registration granted by the authorities which is punishable under the Motor Vehicles Act, 1988 and (ii) causing damage to the public property which is punishable under the Prevention of Damage to Public Property Act, 1984. Hence, the claim of the petitioner that he is being punished more than once for the same offence violating Article 20\(2\) of the Constitution of India is neither factually correct nor legally tenable as he is being proceeded against for two distinct offences punishable under two separate Acts and no parallel procedure for the same offence is being adopted.^{240.} Prosecution under sections 5 and 6 of Rajasthan Sati \(Prevention\) Act 1987 not barred since section 5 makes the commission of an act an offence and punishes the same while the provisions of section 6 are preventive in nature and make provision for punishing contravention of prohibitory order so as to make the prevention effective. The two offences have different ingredients.^{241.}

4. An act giving rise to an offence and an aggravated form of the same offence.—Section 457 makes punishable lurking house trespass by night or house breaking by night in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment and if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the punishment is higher. Section 380 makes punishable a theft committed in a dwelling house. The two offences do not, in our opinion, fall under section 71 and, therefore, the conviction under both the sections is not illegal.^{242.}

^{225.} Added by Act 8 of 1882, sec. 4.

^{226.} Ramanaya v State, 1977 Cr LJ 467 (Pat).

^{227.} Re Natarajan, 1976 Cr LJ 1502 (Mad); see also Sukhnandan v State, \(1917\) 19 Cr LJ 157 .

^{228.} Mahendrabhai v State of Gujarat, AIR 2012 SC 2844 [LNIND 2012 SC 1473] : \(2012\) 7 SCC 621 [LNIND 2012 SC 1473] : 2012 Cr LJ 2432 .

^{229.} Satnam Singh Puransing Gill v State of Maharashtra, 2009 Cr LJ 3781 .

^{230.} Banwarilal Jhunjhunwala v UOI, AIR 1963 SC 1620 [LNIND 1962 SC 382] : 1963 (Supp2) SCR 338 : 1963 Cr LJ 529 .

^{231.} Nirichan, 12 M. 36; Kalidas, 38 C 453 : Wazir, 10A 58.

^{232.} Poovappa, 1981 Cr LJ NOC 107 (Kant).

^{233.} Re Thangavelu, 1972 Cr LJ 390 (Mad).

^{234.} Udai Bhan, 1962 \(2\) Cr LJ 251 : AIR 1962 SC 1116 [LNIND 1962 SC 37] ; see also Ramanaya v State, 1977 Cr LJ 467 (Pat).

^{235.} Sharan P Khanna v Oil & Natural Gas Corp Ltd, 2010 Cr LJ 4256 (Bom).

236. Roshan Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 1413 [LNIND 1964 SC 339] : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 426 .
See also Nafe Singh v State of Haryana, (1971) 3 SCC 934 : (1972) 1 SCC (Cr) 182; Kharkan v State of UP, AIR 1965 SC 83 [LNIND 1963 SC 205] : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 116 .
237. Kantilal Shivabhai v State of Gujarat, 1990 Cr LJ 2500 (Guj).
238. Angadi Chennaiah v State of AP, 1985 Cr LJ 1366 (AP).
239. Puranmal, AIR 1958 SC 935 [LNIND 1958 SC 89] : 1958 Cr LJ 1432 .
240. Vikash Kumar Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2011 Pat 72 [LNINDORD 2011 PAT 7073] .
241. State of Rajasthan v Hat Singh, 2003 (2) SCC 152 [LNIND 2003 SC 7] : AIR 2003 SC 791 [LNIND 2003 SC 7] .
242. Udai Bhan v State of UP, AIR 1962 SC 1116 [LNIND 1962 SC 37] : 1962 Cr LJ 251 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 72] Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.

In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences, he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

COMMENT—

This provision is intended to prevent an offender whose guilt is fully established from eluding punishment on the ground that the evidence does not enable the tribunal to pronounce with certainty under what penal provision his case falls. The section applies to cases in which the law applicable to a certain set of facts is doubtful. The doubt must be as to which of the offences the accused has committed, not whether he has committed any. Moreover, this rule would apply even if one of the alternatives were an offence of murder.^{243.}

^{243.} Sahel Singh, 3 Cr LJ 364; see also Nesti Mondal, AIR 1940 Pat 289 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 73] Solitary confinement.

Whenever any person is convicted of an offence for which under this Code the Court has power to sentence him to rigorous imprisonment, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding three months in the whole, according to the following scale, that is to say—a time not exceeding one month if the term of imprisonment shall not exceed six months;

a time not exceeding two months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed six months and ^{244.}[shall not exceed one] year;

a time not exceeding three months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed one year.

COMMENT—

Solitary confinement amounts to keeping the prisoner thoroughly isolated from any kind of contact with the outside world. It is inflicted in order that a feeling of loneliness may produce wholesome influence and reform the criminal. This section gives the scale according to which solitary confinement may be inflicted. Where the petitioner, an undertrial prisoner, who was arrested in connection with the assassination of a former Prime Minister was put in a separate cell only as a precautionary measure, to ensure his non-mingling with other prisoners and for his security, it was held that it did not amount either to solitary confinement or cellular confinement.^{245.} The well-known principle of law is that the convict carrying death punishment is not deemed to be 'prisoner under sentence of death' unless death sentence becomes final, conclusive and beyond judicial scrutiny. Such convict is handed over to the jail authority to be kept in safe and protected custody with purpose that he may be available for execution of the sentence eventually confirmed. This custody is different from custody of a convict suffering from simple or rigorous imprisonment. Therefore, he cannot be kept in Cell or solitary confinement which itself is a separate punishment.^{246.}

[s 73.1] Convicts on death row.—

The question about solitary confinement or keeping condemned prisoner alone under strict guard as provided in various jail manual has been considered in depth by the Constitution Bench in Sunil Batra v Delhi Administration^{247.} and Triveniben v State of Gujarat.^{248.} In Batra's case, it has been held that if the prisoner under sentence of death is held in jail custody, punitive detention cannot be imposed upon him by jail authorities except for prison offences. When a prisoner is committed under a warrant for jail custody under section 366\(2\) Cr PC, 1973 and if he is detained in solitary confinement which is a punishment prescribed by section 73, IPC, 1860 it will amount to imposing punishment for the same offence more than once which would be violative of Article

20(2). Practice of keeping prisoners in condemned cell before confirmation is a pre-constitutional practice and such practices should be avoided. Therefore, practice adopted in the jail until now cannot be a ground of putting the petitioners in solitary confinement or separate condemned cells.²⁴⁹.

The Supreme Court in *Shatrughan Chauhan v UOI*²⁵⁰. held that to be 'under sentence of death' means 'to be under a finally executable death sentence'. The Court, in this case also issued guidelines for safeguarding the rights of the death row convicts.

244. Subs. by Act 8 of 1882, section 5, "for be less than a".

245. Perrarivalan v IG of Prisons, Madras, 1992 Cr LJ 3125 (Mad).

246. Anand Mohan v State of Bihar, 2008 Cr LJ 1273 (Pat).

247. Sunil Batra v Delhi Administration, AIR 1978 SC 1675 [LNIND 1978 SC 215] : 1978 Cr LJ 1741 .

248. Triveniben v State of Gujarat, AIR 1989 SC 1335 [LNIND 1989 SC 885] : 1990 Cr LJ 1810 .

Also see Kishor Singh Ravinder Dev v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1981 SC 625 [LNIND 1980 SC 436] : (1981) 1 SCC 503 [LNIND 1980 SC 436] .

249. Acharaparambath Pradeepan v State of Kerala, 2004 Cr LJ 755 (Ker).

250. Shatrughan Chauhan v UOI, 2014 Cr LJ 1327 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

[s 74] Limit of solitary confinement.

In executing a sentence of solitary confinement, such confinement shall in no case exceed fourteen days at a time, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods; and when the imprisonment awarded shall exceed three months, the solitary confinement shall not exceed seven days in any one month of the whole imprisonment awarded, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods.

COMMENT—

Solitary confinement if continued for a long time is sure to produce mental derangement.

The section limits the solitary confinement, when the substantive sentence exceeds three months, to seven days in any one month. Solitary confinement must be imposed at intervals. A sentence inflicting solitary confinement for the whole imprisonment is illegal, though not more than 14 days is awarded.²⁵¹

²⁵¹. Nyan Suk Mether, (1869) 3 Beng LR 49.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

252.[[s 75] Enhanced punishment for certain offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII after previous conviction.

Whoever, having been convicted, ¹ –

- (a) by a Court in ^{253.}[India], of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, ^{254.}[]

^{255.} []

shall be guilty of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with like imprisonment for the like term, shall be subject for every such subsequent offence to ^{256.}[imprisonment for life], or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years.]

COMMENT—

Principle.—This section does not constitute a separate offence but only imposes a liability to enhanced punishment. What section 75 IPC, 1860 contemplates is that where a person who has been, previously convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII (which deals with offences relating to coin and Government stamps) or Chapter XVII. (which relates to offences against property) with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or up-wards, is once again found guilty of a similar offence, he shall be liable to enhanced punishment which may extend to imprisonment for life or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years. The section is concerned with a previous conviction for a similar offence but it does not postulate that in respect of the previous conviction, the punishment imposed should have been one of not less than three years. All that it posits is that the previous conviction should have been in respect of an offence punishable with a term of imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, but it does not lay down that the offender should have been actually punished with such a term of imprisonment.^{257.} It does not apply to offences under other Acts.^{258.}

1. 'Having been convicted'.—A plain reading of this provision goes to show that the previous conviction ought to be for offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII and the sentence imposed is three years or more than that. If the sentence is less than three years or the offence does not fall within any of the two Chapters then section 75, IPC, 1860 would not be applicable. If any authority is required then reference may be made to Re Kamya,^{259.} wherein it has been held that the minimum required for enhancement of punishment under section 75, IPC, 1860 is that the previous conviction of the accused should have resulted in punishment of three years or more.^{260.} Section 75 is invoked for enhancement of the sentence and that can come only at the time the sentence is to be imposed. The fact that the accused is an old offender is not to be taken note of by the Court at the trial. Only at the conclusion of the trial after entering the conviction, that question can be taken up for imposing the sentence.²⁶¹ Simply because the provisions of section 75 of the Indian Penal Code are attracted in a particular case, is no ground for inflicting the extreme punishment provided in that section. The provisions of this section are only permissive and not obligatory. They do confer jurisdiction on the Courts to inflict enhanced punishment but then that jurisdiction is to be exercised in a judicial manner after taking into consideration the circumstances and the factors narrated above.²⁶² Section 75, IPC, 1860 does not prescribe that a severe sentence should be imposed for repetition of any crime by an offender. It does not prescribe a minimum sentence for any event. It does not say that a convict of a petty theft committed without any violence should be given a severe sentence if he had half a dozen previous convictions for like offences to his credit.²⁶³

[s 75.1] Clause (a).—

For the application of this section it is not necessary to show that the previous sentence was for three years or upwards. What is required is that the previous conviction was for an offence punishable under Chapter XII or XVII, for which sentence of imprisonment could have been three years or upwards. The key word being "punishable" the actual sentence awarded for the first offence is not of any consequence so long the offence was punishable with imprisonment for three years or upwards.²⁶⁴ It is also necessary to remember that the conviction for the earlier offence must remain in operation on the date of conviction for second offence. Thus if the previous conviction is set aside on appeal, the accused cannot be awarded enhanced punishment under this section.²⁶⁵ Non-applicability of section 75, IPC has nothing to do with the proof or guilt of the main offence. If section 75, IPC is found to be inapplicable then it would not mean that the finding of guilt for certain offences recorded by the Magistrate will also go away. The conviction for the offences would stand and the accused would be liable to be sentenced for the main offence and the sentence cannot be enhanced with the aid of section 75, IPC, 1860.²⁶⁶

[s 75.2] Section 75 and Section 236 of Cr PC.—

Under section 236 (310 of old Code) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and under section 75 of the Indian Penal Code, it is enough if the person concerned has been earlier convicted. It is not necessary that the sentence should be in force. Bearing in mind that section 75 of the IPC and section 236 (310 of old code) of the Code of Criminal Procedure deal with persons with previous conviction and the previous sentence need not necessarily be in force when the subsequent offence is committed—it would be clear that the latter section is intended to be applicable only to cases to which section 75 of the Indian Penal Code applies.²⁶⁷

²⁵². Subs. by Act 3 of 1910, section 2, for section 75.

²⁵³. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, sec. 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

²⁵⁴. The word "or" omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

255. Clause (b) omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
256. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).
257. Re Sugali Nage Naik, 1965 (1) Cr LJ 508 .
258. Manaklal Jhamaklal v State, 1966 Cr LJ 1139 (MP).
259. Re Kamy, AIR 1960 AP 490 [LNIND 1959 AP 115] : 1960 Cr LJ 1302 .
260. Jagdish v State of Rajasthan, 1991 Cr LJ 2989 (Raj).
261. State v Tampikannu, AIR 1970 Ker 251 [LNIND 1969 KER 110] .
262. Daulat Singh v The State of HP, 1981 Cr LJ 1347 (HP).
263. Kalarikkal Narayana Panicker Accused v State of Kerala, 1976 Cr LJ 410 .
264. Ghisulal v State of MP, 1977 Cr LJ 88 (MP).
265. Dilip Kumar Sharma, AIR 1976 SC 133 [LNIND 1975 SC 412] : 1976 Cr LJ 184 .
266. Jagdish v State of Rajasthan, 1991 Cr LJ 2989 (Raj).
267. Pratap v State of UP, AIR 1973 SC 786 [LNIND 1972 SC 595] : (1973) 3 SCC 690 [LNIND 1972 SC 595] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER III OF PUNISHMENTS

252.[[s 75] Enhanced punishment for certain offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII after previous conviction.

Whoever, having been convicted, ¹ –

- (a) by a Court in ^{253.}[India], of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, ^{254.}[]

^{255.} []

shall be guilty of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with like imprisonment for the like term, shall be subject for every such subsequent offence to ^{256.}[imprisonment for life], or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years.]

COMMENT—

Principle.—This section does not constitute a separate offence but only imposes a liability to enhanced punishment. What section 75 IPC, 1860 contemplates is that where a person who has been, previously convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII (which deals with offences relating to coin and Government stamps) or Chapter XVII. (which relates to offences against property) with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or up-wards, is once again found guilty of a similar offence, he shall be liable to enhanced punishment which may extend to imprisonment for life or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years. The section is concerned with a previous conviction for a similar offence but it does not postulate that in respect of the previous conviction, the punishment imposed should have been one of not less than three years. All that it posits is that the previous conviction should have been in respect of an offence punishable with a term of imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards, but it does not lay down that the offender should have been actually punished with such a term of imprisonment.^{257.} It does not apply to offences under other Acts.^{258.}

1. 'Having been convicted'.—A plain reading of this provision goes to show that the previous conviction ought to be for offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII and the sentence imposed is three years or more than that. If the sentence is less than three years or the offence does not fall within any of the two Chapters then section 75, IPC, 1860 would not be applicable. If any authority is required then reference may be made to Re Kamya,^{259.} wherein it has been held that the minimum required for enhancement of punishment under section 75, IPC, 1860 is that the previous conviction of the accused should have resulted in punishment of three years or more.^{260.} Section 75 is invoked for enhancement of the sentence and that can come only at the time the sentence is to be imposed. The fact that the accused is an old offender is not to be taken note of by the Court at the trial. Only at the conclusion of the trial after entering the conviction, that question can be taken up for imposing the sentence.²⁶¹ Simply because the provisions of section 75 of the Indian Penal Code are attracted in a particular case, is no ground for inflicting the extreme punishment provided in that section. The provisions of this section are only permissive and not obligatory. They do confer jurisdiction on the Courts to inflict enhanced punishment but then that jurisdiction is to be exercised in a judicial manner after taking into consideration the circumstances and the factors narrated above.²⁶² Section 75, IPC, 1860 does not prescribe that a severe sentence should be imposed for repetition of any crime by an offender. It does not prescribe a minimum sentence for any event. It does not say that a convict of a petty theft committed without any violence should be given a severe sentence if he had half a dozen previous convictions for like offences to his credit.²⁶³

[s 75.1] Clause (a).—

For the application of this section it is not necessary to show that the previous sentence was for three years or upwards. What is required is that the previous conviction was for an offence punishable under Chapter XII or XVII, for which sentence of imprisonment could have been three years or upwards. The key word being "punishable" the actual sentence awarded for the first offence is not of any consequence so long the offence was punishable with imprisonment for three years or upwards.²⁶⁴ It is also necessary to remember that the conviction for the earlier offence must remain in operation on the date of conviction for second offence. Thus if the previous conviction is set aside on appeal, the accused cannot be awarded enhanced punishment under this section.²⁶⁵ Non-applicability of section 75, IPC has nothing to do with the proof or guilt of the main offence. If section 75, IPC is found to be inapplicable then it would not mean that the finding of guilt for certain offences recorded by the Magistrate will also go away. The conviction for the offences would stand and the accused would be liable to be sentenced for the main offence and the sentence cannot be enhanced with the aid of section 75, IPC, 1860.²⁶⁶

[s 75.2] Section 75 and Section 236 of Cr PC.—

Under section 236 (310 of old Code) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and under section 75 of the Indian Penal Code, it is enough if the person concerned has been earlier convicted. It is not necessary that the sentence should be in force. Bearing in mind that section 75 of the IPC and section 236 (310 of old code) of the Code of Criminal Procedure deal with persons with previous conviction and the previous sentence need not necessarily be in force when the subsequent offence is committed—it would be clear that the latter section is intended to be applicable only to cases to which section 75 of the Indian Penal Code applies.²⁶⁷

²⁵². Subs. by Act 3 of 1910, section 2, for section 75.

²⁵³. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, sec. 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

²⁵⁴. The word "or" omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

²⁵⁵. Clause (b) omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

²⁵⁶. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

²⁵⁷. Re Sugali Nage Naik, 1965 \(1\) Cr LJ 508 .

258. Manaklal Jhamaklal v State, 1966 Cr LJ 1139 (MP).
259. Re Kamy, AIR 1960 AP 490 [LNIND 1959 AP 115] : 1960 Cr LJ 1302 .
260. Jagdish v State of Rajasthan, 1991 Cr LJ 2989 (Raj).
261. State v Tampikannu, AIR 1970 Ker 251 [LNIND 1969 KER 110] .
262. Daulat Singh v The State of HP, 1981 Cr LJ 1347 (HP).
263. Kalarikkal Narayana Panicker Accused v State of Kerala, 1976 Cr LJ 410 .
264. Ghisulal v State of MP, 1977 Cr LJ 88 (MP).
265. Dilip Kumar Sharma, AIR 1976 SC 133 [LNIND 1975 SC 412] : 1976 Cr LJ 184 .
266. Jagdish v State of Rajasthan, 1991 Cr LJ 2989 (Raj).
267. Pratap v State of UP, AIR 1973 SC 786 [LNIND 1972 SC 595] : (1973) 3 SCC 690 [LNIND 1972 SC 595] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 76] Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound, by law.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is, or who by reason of a mistake of fact ¹ and not by reason of a mistake of law ² in good faith believes himself to be, bound by law³ to do it.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.
- (b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due enquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

COMMENT.—

Sections 76 and 79 are based on the maxim ignorantia facti doth excusat and ignorantia juris non excusat. Section 76 excuses a person who has done what by law is an offence, under a misconception of facts, leading him to believe in good faith that he was commanded by law to do it. See Comment on section 79, infra.

This section and sections 77, 78 and 79 deal with acts of a person bound or justified by law. This section as well as sections 78 and 79 deal with acts of a person under a mistake.

1. 'Mistake of fact'.—See Comment under section 79, infra.

2. 'Mistake of law'.—See Comment under section 79, infra.

3. 'In good faith believes himself to be, bound by law'.—In order to entitle a person to claim the benefit of this section it is necessary to show the existence of a state of facts which would justify the belief in good faith, interpreting the latter expression with reference to section 52, that the person to whom the order was given was bound by law to obey it. Thus, in the case of a soldier, the Penal Code does not recognize the mere duty of blind obedience to the commands of a superior as sufficient to protect him from the penal consequences of his act. But in certain circumstances a soldier receives absolute protection under section 132 of the Cr PC, 1973.

For illegal acts, however, neither the orders of a parent nor a master nor a superior will furnish any defence. Nothing but fear of instant death is a defence for a policeman who tortures anyone by order of a superior. The maxim respondeat superior has no application to such a case.⁶ The net position appears to be that if superior order is in conformity with the law no further question arises and the subordinate officer is protected by section 76 IPC, 1860, if he carries out that order. It is only when the order is not in accordance with the law but the subordinate officer who carries out that order in good faith, on account of a mistake of fact and not on ground of mistake of law, believes himself to be bound by law to carry out such an order, that a further question arises as to whether the subordinate officer will not still get protection of section 76 IPC, 1860, because of his mistake of fact. Thus, where the order was legal in the circumstances of the case, e.g., where the police patrol party opened fire under the order of the Deputy Commissioner of Police after it had been attacked on a dark night and an Assistant Commissioner of Police had been injured as a result of such attack, really no question arose for the application of section 76 IPC, 1860, as the order was both legal and justified by the circumstances of the case.⁷ The Indian law as contained in sections 76 and 79 of the Penal Code appears to be the same as in England. This point has, however, not been clearly decided in any case including the decision of the Supreme Court in Shew Mangal Singh's case.⁸ There are, however, enough indications in Shew Mangal Singh's case and in sections 76 and 79 IPC, 1860, that if the subordinate due to a mistake of fact and not due to a mistake of law honestly believed that he was bound or justified by law in carrying out the superior order which though not manifestly illegal was nevertheless illegal, perhaps he would still get the benefit of superior order. Obedience to an illegal order can only be used in mitigation of punishment but cannot be used as a complete defence.⁹ If on account of any abnormal reaction, the employee has committed suicide, the conduct of the complainant or of higher officer of taking departmental action by way of resorting to legal remedy or enforcement of law, cannot be termed as leaving no option to the delinquent employee but to commit suicide and, therefore, cannot be said as abetment or incitement to suicide under such circumstances. In any case any action for resorting to legal remedy for grievances or for enforcement of law in exercise of powers or purported exercise of power cannot be said to contain any element of criminality unless such action is ex facie without any competence, authority or jurisdiction.¹⁰

[s 76.1] Protection of private persons assisting police.—

Private persons who are bound to assist the police under section 42 of the Cr PC, 1973 will be protected under this section.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, [AIR 2004 SC 1966 \[LNIND 2004 SC 1370\]](#) : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
6. Latifkhan v State, (1895) 20 Bom 394; Gurdit Singh, (1883) PR No. 16 of 1883.
7. State of WB v Shew Mangal Singh, 1981 Cr LJ 1683 : [AIR 1981 SC 1917 \[LNIND 1981 SC 355\]](#) : (1981) 4 SCC 2 [LNIND 1981 SC 355] .
8. Shew Mangal Singh, Supra.
9. Chaman Lal, (1940) 21 Lah 521.
10. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.^{2.}

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.^{3.}

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.^{4.} Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.^{5.}

[s 77] Act of Judge when acting judicially.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be, given to him by law.

COMMENT.—

Under this section a Judge is exempted not only in those cases in which he proceeds irregularly in the exercise of a power which the law gives him, but also in cases where he, in good faith, exceeds his jurisdiction and has no lawful powers. It protects judges from criminal process just as the Judicial Officers Protection Act, 1850, saves them from civil suits. Judicial Officers' Protection Act affords protection to two broad categories of acts done or ordered to be done by a judicial officer in his judicial capacity. In the first category fall those acts which are within the limits of his jurisdiction. The second category encompasses those acts which may not be within the jurisdiction of the judicial officer, but are, nevertheless, done or ordered to be done by him, believing in good faith that he had jurisdiction to do them or order them to be done.¹¹

A Collector who exercises powers of enquiry and award under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 is not acting judicially because he is not a judge. He is not entitled to the protection of section 77.¹² Regional Provident Fund Commissioner while passing order under section 7-A of 1952 Act is entitled to get protection as envisaged under section 77 of IPC, 1860 and section 3\(1\) of Judges \(Protection\) Act, 1985.¹³

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.

3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).

4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

11. Rachapudi Subba Rao v Advocate General, (1981) 2 SCC 577 [LNIND 1980 SC 481] : AIR 1981 SC 755 [LNIND 1980 SC 481] .

12. Surendera Kumar Bhatia v Kanhaiya Lal, (2009) 12 SCC 184 [LNIND 2009 SC 209] : AIR 2009 SC 1961 [LNIND 2009 SC 209] .

13. E S Sanjeeva Rao v CBI, Mumbai, 2012 Cr LJ 4053 (Bom).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 78] Act done pursuant to the judgment or order of Court.

Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order of, a Court of Justice; if done whilst such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act in good faith believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

COMMENT.—

This section is merely a corollary to section 77. It affords protection to officers acting under the authority of a judgment, or order of a Court of Justice. It differs from section 77 on the question of jurisdiction. Here, the officer is protected in carrying out an order of a Court which may have no jurisdiction at all, if he believed that the Court had jurisdiction; whereas under section 77 the Judge must be acting within his jurisdiction to be protected by it.

Mistake of law can be pleaded as a defence under this section.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 79] Act done by a person justified or by mistake of fact believing himself justified, by law.

Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law¹, or who by reason of a mistake of fact² and not by reason of a mistake of law³ in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law, in doing it.

ILLUSTRATION

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder. A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the fact, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self-defence.

COMMENT.—

Distinction between Sections 76 and 79.—The distinction between section 76 and this section is that in the former a person is assumed to be bound, and in the latter to be justified, by law; in other words, the distinction is between a real or supposed legal obligation and a real or supposed legal justification, in doing the particular act. Under both (these sections) there must be a bona fide intention to advance the law, manifested by the circumstances attending the act which is the subject of charge; and the party accused cannot allege generally that he had a good motive, but must allege specifically that he believed in good faith that he was bound by law (section 76) to do as he did, or that being empowered by law (section 79) to act in the matter, he had acted to the best of his judgment exerted in good faith.¹⁴

1. Any person who is justified by law.—Jurisprudentially viewed, an act may be an offence, definitionally speaking but a forbidden act may not spell inevitable guilt if the law itself declares that in certain special circumstances it is not to be regarded as an offence. The chapter on General Exceptions operates in this province. Section 79 makes an offence a non-offence. When? Only when the offending act is actually justified by law or is bona fide believed by mistake of fact to be so justified.¹⁵ It is easy to see that if the act complained of is wholly justified by law, it would not amount to an offence at all in view of the provisions of section 79 of the IPC, 1860. Many cases may however arise wherein acting under the provisions of the Police Act or other law conferring powers on the police, the police officer or some other person may go beyond what is strictly justified in law. Though section 79 of the IPC, 1860 will have no application to such cases, section 53 of the Police Act will apply. But section 53 applies to only a limited class of persons. So, it becomes the task of the Court, whenever any question whether this section applies or not arises to bestow particular care on its decision. In doing this it has to ascertain first, what act is complained of and then to examine, if there is any provision of the Police Act or other law conferring powers on the police, under which it may be said to have been done or intended to be done. The Court has to remember in this connection that an act is not "under" a provision of law merely because the point of time at which it is done coincides with the point of time when some act is done in the exercise of the powers granted by the provision or in performance of the duty imposed by it. To be able to say that an act is done "under" a provision of law, one must discover the existence of a reasonable relationship between the provisions and the act. In the absence of such a relation the act cannot be said to be done "under" the particular provision of law.¹⁶ But unless there is a reasonable connection between the act complained of and the powers and duties of the office, it cannot be said that the act was done by the accused officer under the colour of his office.¹⁷ In Bhanuprasad Hariprasad Dave's case,¹⁸ wherein the allegations against the police officer was of taking advantage of his position and attempting to coerce a person to give him a bribe. The plea of colour of duty was negatived by the Supreme Court. In Prof. Sumer Chand v UOI, [1994 \(1\) SCC 64 \[LNIND 1993 SC 665\]](#) Supreme Court on facts endorsed the opinion of the High Court that the act of the Police Officer complained of fell within the description of 'colour of duty'. The argument is irresistible that if the performance of the act which constitutes the offence is justified by law, i.e.,

by some other provision, then section 79 exonerates the doer because the act ceases to be an offence. Likewise, if the act were done by one 'who by reason of a mistake of fact in good faith believes himself to be justified by law in doing it' then also, the exception operates and the bona fide belief, although mistaken, eliminates the culpability. If the offender can irrefutably establish that he is actually justified by law in doing the act or, alternatively, that he entertained a mistake of fact and in good faith believed that he was justified by law in committing the act, then, the weapon of section 79 demolishes the prosecution.¹⁹

2. 'Mistake of fact'.—Under this section, although an act may not be justified by law, yet if it is done under a mistake of fact, in the belief in good faith that it is justified by law it will not be an offence. Such cases are not uncommon where the Courts in the facts and circumstances of the particular case have exonerated the accused under section 79 on the ground of having acted in good faith under the belief, owing to a mistake of fact that he was justified in doing the act which constituted an offence. As laid down in section 52 of the IPC, 1860, nothing is said to be done or believed in good faith which is done or believed without due care and attention. The question of good faith must be considered with reference to the position of the accused and the circumstances under which he acted. 'Good faith' requires not logical infallibility but due care and attention. The question of good faith is always a question of fact to be determined in accordance with the proved facts and circumstances of each case.²⁰

'Mistake' is not mere forgetfulness.²¹ It is a slip "made, not by design, but by mischance."²² Under sections 76 and 79 a mistake must be one of fact and not of law. At common law an honest and reasonable belief in the existence of circumstances, which, if true, would make the act for which a prisoner is indicted an innocent act has always been held to be a good defence. Honest and reasonable mistake stands in fact on the same footing as absence of the reasoning faculty, as in infancy, or perversion of that faculty, as in lunacy.²³ It may be laid down as a general rule that an alleged offender is deemed to have acted under that state of facts which he in good faith and on reasonable grounds believed to exist when he did the act alleged to be an offence.²⁴ Ignorantia facti doth excusat, for such ignorance many times makes the act itself morally involuntary.²⁵ Where a man made a thrust with a sword at a place where, upon reasonable grounds, he supposed a burglar to be, and killed a person who was not a burglar, it was held that he had committed no offence.²⁶ In other words, he was in the same situation as far as regards the homicide as if he had killed a burglar. The accused while guarding his maize field shot an arrow at a moving object in the bona fide belief that it was a bear and in the process caused the death of a man who was hiding there. It was held that he could not be held liable for murder as his case was fully covered by section 79 as well as section 80 IPC, 1860.²⁷ Similarly, where the accused while helping the police stopped a cart which they in good faith believed to be carrying smuggled rice but ultimately their suspicion proved to be incorrect, it was held that they could not be prosecuted for wrongful restraint under section 341 as their case was covered by section 79 IPC, 1860.²⁸ Section 79 makes an offence a non-offence. Thus, where the Board of Censors, acting within their jurisdiction and on an application made and pursued in good faith sanctions the public exhibition of a film, the producer and the connected agencies do enter the statutory harbour and are protected from prosecution under section 292 IPC, 1860, because section 79 of the Code exonerates them at least in view of their bona fide belief that the certificate is justificatory.²⁹

3. 'Mistake of law'.—Mistake in point of law in a criminal case is no defence. Mistake of law ordinarily means mistake as to the existence or otherwise of any law on a relevant subject as well as mistake as to what the law is.³⁰

Ignorance of the municipal law of the Kingdom, or of the penalty thereby inflicted upon offenders, doth not excuse any, that is of the age of discretion and compos mentis, from the penalty of the breach of it; because every person of the age of discretion and compos mentis is bound to know the law, and presumed so to do.^{31.}

If any individual should infringe the statute law of the country through ignorance or carelessness, he must abide by the consequences of his error; it is not competent to him to aver in a Court of Justice that he was ignorant of the law of the land, and no Court of Justice is at liberty to receive such a plea.^{32.}

The maxim ignorantia juris non excusat, in its application to criminal offences, admits of no exception, not even in the case of a foreigner who cannot reasonably be supposed in fact to know the law of the land.^{33.} The legal presumption that everyone knows the law of the land is often untrue as a matter of fact. But then why such a presumption subsists? The reason for this seems to be nothing but expediency; otherwise there is no knowing of the extent to which the excuse of ignorance of law might be carried. Indeed, it might be urged almost in every case.^{34.} This rule of expediency has been put to use even in a case where the accused could not have possibly known the law in the circumstances in which he was placed. Thus, a person who was on the high seas and as such could not have been cognizant of a recently passed law might be convicted for contravening it.^{35.}

Whenever the question of justification of an offence either due to mistake of fact or mistake of law arises, the guiding rules are: (1) that when an act is in itself plainly criminal, and is more severely punishable if certain circumstances co-exist, ignorance of the existence of such circumstances is no answer to a charge for the aggravated offence. (2) That where an act is prima facie innocent and proper, unless certain circumstances co-exist, then ignorance of such circumstances is an answer to the charge. (3) That the state of the defendant's mind must amount to absolute ignorance of the existence of the circumstance which alters the character of the act, or to a belief in its non-existence. (4) Where an act which is in itself wrong is, under certain circumstances, criminal, a person who does the wrong act cannot set up as a defence that he was ignorant of the facts which turned the wrong into a crime. (5) Where a statute makes it penal to do an act under certain circumstances, it is a question upon the wording and object of the particular statute, whether the responsibility of ascertaining that the circumstances exist is thrown upon the person who does the act or not. In the former case his knowledge is immaterial.^{36.}

[s 79.1] Ignorance of statute newly passed.—

Although a person commits an act which is made an offence for the first time by a statute so recently passed as to render it impossible that any notice of the passing of the statute could have reached the place where the offence has been committed, yet his ignorance of the statute will not save him from punishment.^{37.} For an Indian law to operate and be effective in the territory where it operates namely, the territory of India, it is not necessary that it should either be published, or be made known outside the country.^{38.}

[s 79.2] Act of State.—

An act of State is an act injurious to the person or to the property of some person who is not at the time of that act a subject of the Government; which act is done by any representative of the Government's authority, civil or military, and is either previously sanctioned or subsequently ratified by the Government. The doctrine as to acts of State can apply only to acts which affect foreigners, and which are done by the orders or with the ratification of the Government. As between the State and its subjects there can be no such thing as an act of State. Courts of law are established for the express purpose of limiting public authority in its conduct towards individuals.

Persons carrying out an act of State under proper orders will be protected by the Penal Code, in the same way as if they were carrying out a lawful order under the municipal law. To support a plea of this nature two things are essential:—

- (1) that the defendant had authority to act on behalf of the State in the matter; and
- (2) that in so acting, he was professing to act as a matter of policy, outside the law, and not as a matter of right within the law.

[s 79.3] Protection of private persons.—

Private persons acting under sections 38, 43, 72 and 73 of the Cr PC, 1973 will be protected under this section.

[s 79.4] Fake Encounters. —

Unprovoked firing by appellants who were police officials caused death of two persons and grievous gun-shot injuries to another person. Seven police officers admitted firing into the vehicle. But the defence case was that they had done so only on the direction of ACP, a superior officer. The Supreme Court held that it cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be claimed by anybody that a case of murder would fall within the expression 'colour of duty'.^{39.}

[s 79.5] CASES.—Mistake of fact.—

Good Defence.—Where an accused owing to a defect in his vision and the effect of a fall bona fide believed that his son of whom he was very fond was a tiger and caused fatal injuries to him with an axe in a moment of delusion, he was protected under this section, and his act being done under a bona fide mistake, he could not be convicted of an offence of murder.^{40.} Once the Board of Censors, acting within their jurisdiction and on an application made and pursued in good faith, sanctions the public exhibition of a film, the producer and connected agencies enter the statutory harbour and are protected because section 79 exonerates them in view of the bona fide belief that the certificate is justificatory.^{41.}

[s 79.6] English case.—

The accused was convicted of bigamy, having gone through the ceremony of marriage within seven years after she had been deserted by her husband. She believed in good faith and on reasonable grounds that her husband was dead. It was held that a bona fide belief on reasonable grounds in the death of the husband at the time of the second marriage afforded a good defence to the indictment, and that the conviction was wrong.^{42.} Where the question was whether the accused was to be held liable for injuring a person whom he thought was belabouring another when in fact he was only trying to immobilise a person who had attempted to rob a woman, the Court said that if W was labouring under a mistake of fact as to the circumstances when he committed the alleged offence, he was to be judged according to his mistaken view of the facts regardless of whether his mistake was reasonable or unreasonable. The reasonableness or otherwise of the belief was only material to the question of whether the belief was in fact held by the defendant at all.⁴³

[s 79.7] Bad defence.—

Deceased attempted to steal coconut from the garden of which accused was a watchman. Accused contended that, he while discharging his duties as a watchman in good faith and under mistake of fact inflicted an injury which unfortunately resulted in the death of the victim. Explaining the applicability of section 79, Supreme Court held that there was no mistake of fact which could even if existed or found true could warrant or justify in law, the imposition of such a serious injury as found inflicted on the victim.⁴⁴ A police-officer saw a horse tied up in B's premises and because it happened to resemble one which his father had lost a short time previously, he jumped at once to the conclusion that B had either stolen the horse himself, or purchased it from the thief, and compelled B to account for his possession. The officer found that B had bought the animal from one S; so he sent for S, charged him with the theft, and compelled him to give bail whilst an investigation was pending. The officer never sent for the supposed owner of the horse, or took the trouble of getting any credible information as to whether it was his father's horse or not. It was held that the police-officer had not acted in good faith, that is, with due care and attention and that this section did not protect him.⁴⁵ The accused struck a person with a full force lathi blow thinking that he was a thief and he had to do so to safeguard his property. The incident took place outside the house near a pond. The place was away from the house. There being no occasion for private defence of property and the blow being given on the head with severity, it was held that the accused was liable to be convicted under section 304 Part II. He was sentenced to three years RI.⁴⁶

[s 79.8] English case.—

The accused took an unmarried girl under the age of 16 years out of the possession, and against the will, of her father. The defence of the accused was that he was bona fide and reasonably believed that the girl was older than 16. It was held that the taking of the girl was unlawful the defence was bad.⁴⁷ This case may be distinguished from Tolson's case, in which a woman married believing her husband to be dead. There the conduct of the woman was not in the smallest degree immoral, but was, on the other hand, perfectly natural and legitimate.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
14. 1st Rep. section 114, p 219.
15. Raj Kapoor v Laxman, AIR 1980 SC 605 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : (1980) 2 SCC 175 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 (2) SCR 512 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 Cr LJ 436 ; Jayantilal K Katakia v P Govindan Nair, AIR 1981 SC 1196 : (1981) 2 SCC 423 .
16. State of AP v N Venugopal, AIR 1964 SC 33 [LNIND 1963 SC 159] .
17. State of Maharashtra v Narhar Rao, AIR 1966 SC 1783 [LNIND 1966 SC 85] ; State of Maharashtra v Atma Ram, AIR 1966 SC 1786 [LNIND 1978 SC 193] .
18. Bhanuprasad Hariprasad Dave v State of Gujarat, AIR 1968 SC 1323 [LNIND 1968 SC 119] .
19. Raj Kapoor v Laxman, AIR 1980 SC 605 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : (1980) 2 SCC 175 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 (2) SCR 512 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 Cr LJ 436 .
20. State of Orissa v Bhagaban Barik, AIR 1987 SC 1265 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] : (1987) 2 SCC 498 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] .
21. Per Lord Esher, MR, in Barrow v Isaacs, (1891) 1 QB 417 , 420.
22. Per Lord Russell, CJ, in Sandford v Beal, (1899) 65 LJQB 73 , 74, 73 LT 406.
23. Per Cave, J, in Tolson, (1889) 23 QBD 168 , 181.
24. Per Stephen, J, in Ibid., p 188.
25. 1 Hale PC pp 42, 43.
26. Levett, (1839) Cro Car 538.
27. State of Orissa v Khora Ghasi, 1978 Cr LJ 1305 (Ori).
28. Keso Sahu v Saligram, 1977 Cr LJ 1725 (Ori).
29. Raj Kapoor v Laxman, 1980 Cr LJ 436 : AIR 1980 SC 605 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] .
30. Tustipada Mandal, (1950) Cut 75.
31. 1 Hale PC 42.
32. Fischer, (1891) 14 Mad 342, 354, FB.
33. Esop, (1836) 7 C & P 456.
34. Bilbie v Lumley, (1802) 2 East 469.
35. Bailey v Bailey, (1800) Russ & Ry 1; C & J cases, see also State of Maharashtra v MH George, 1965 (1) Cr LJ 641 : AIR 1965 SC 722 [LNIND 1964 SC 208] .
36. Tustipada Mandal, (1950) Cut. 75.
37. Bailey's Case, (1800) Russ. & Ry 1.
38. Mayer Hans George, (1964) 67 Bom LR, 583 : AIR 1965 SC 722 [LNIND 1964 SC 208] : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 641 .
39. Satyavir Singh Rathi v State Thr. CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1748 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : (2011) 6 SCC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] : 2011 Cr LJ 2908 : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 782 : (2011) 6 SCR 138 [LNIND 2011 SC 475] .
40. Chirangi, (1952) Nag 348.
41. Raj Kapoor v Laxman, AIR 1980 SC 605 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : (1980) 2 SCC 175 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 (2) SCR 512 [LNIND 1979 SC 492] : 1980 Cr LJ 436 .
42. Tolson, (1889) 23 QBD 168 .
43. R. v Williams, (1987) 3 All ER 411 Ch, following dictum of LAWTON LJ in R. v Kimber, (1983) 1 All ER 320 . See also Beckford v R, (1987) 3 All ER 425 PC, where the same test was applied in a situation in which a person acted in self defence under a mistaken, but honestly held belief, that the person whom he shot dead was a dangerous gunman.
44. Pitchai v State, (2004) 13 SCC 579 : (2006) 1 SCC(Cr) 505 See also Nagraj v State of Mysore, AIR 1964 SC 269 [LNIND 1963 SC 153] : 1964 (3) SCR 671 [LNIND 1963 SC 153] : 1964 Cr LJ 161 .

45. Sheo Surun Sahai v. Mohomed Fazil Khan, (1868) 10 WR (Cr) 20.
46. State of Orissa v Bhagbhan Barik, (1987) 2 SCC 498 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] : AIR 1987 SC 1265 [LNIND 1987 SC 366] : 1987 Cr LJ 1115 . The Court relied on Russel On Crimes, 76 (vol 1).
47. Prince, (1875) LR 2 CCR 154.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 80] Accident in doing a lawful act.

Nothing is an offence which is done by accident¹ or misfortune, and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

ILLUSTRATION

A is at work with a hatchet; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

COMMENT.—

This section exempts the doer of an innocent or lawful act in an innocent or lawful manner and without any criminal intention or knowledge from any unforeseen evil result that may ensue from accident or misfortune.⁴⁸ To claim the benefit of this provision it has to be shown:

- (1) that the act in question was without any criminal intention or knowledge;
- (2) that the act was being done in a lawful manner by lawful means; and
- (3) that act was being done with proper care and caution.⁴⁹

1. 'Accident'.—An effect is said to be accidental when the act by which it is caused is not done with the intention of causing it, and when its occurrence as a consequence of such act is not so probable that a person of ordinary prudence ought, under the circumstances in which it is done, to take reasonable precautions against it.⁵⁰ An accident is something that happens out of the ordinary course of things.⁵¹ The idea of something fortuitous and unexpected is involved in the word 'accident'.⁵² Where two brothers were sleeping together and one of them while in a state of semi-sleep felt that somebody was throttling him, picked up the dao, kept on the head of the bed, and administered a blow which was received by his sleeping brother who died, there being neither intention nor motive, the accused was let off under this section. His act was not voluntary.⁵³

An injury is said to be accidentally caused whensoever it is neither wilfully nor negligently caused.⁵⁴ Where the accused fired a shot at his assailant who escaped but four other persons were injured and one of them unfortunately expired, it was held that the accused was not liable for the fatal injury to an innocent person as his case fell within the scope of section 80 read with sections 96 and 100, IPC, 1860.⁵⁵ Shooting with an unlicensed gun does not debar an accused from claiming immunity under this section.⁵⁶

[s 80.1] Medical Negligence.—

To prosecute a medical professional for negligence under criminal law it must be shown that the accused did something or failed to do something which in the given facts and circumstances no medical professional in his ordinary senses and prudence would have done or failed to do. The hazard taken by the accused doctor should be of such a nature that the injury which resulted was most likely imminent.⁵⁷ In Dr. Suresh Gupta v Govt. of NCT of Delhi,⁵⁸ the Apex Court held that where the medical practitioner failed to take appropriate steps, viz., "not putting a cuffed endotracheal tube of proper size" so as to prevent aspiration of blood blocking respiratory passage, the act attributed to him may be described as negligent act but not so reckless as to make him criminally liable. In Kusum Sharma v Batra Hospital and Medical Research Centre,⁵⁹ the Supreme Court reiterated the legal position after taking survey of catena of case law. In the context of issue pertaining to criminal liability of a medical practitioner, it is laid down that the prosecution of a medical practitioner would be liable to be quashed if the evidence on record does not project substratum enough to infer gross or excessive degree of negligence on his/her part. The criminal liability cannot be fastened on the Medical Practitioner unless the negligence is so obvious and of such high degree that it would be culpable by applying the settled norms.^{60.}

[s 80.2] CASES.—

Deceased allegedly dashed by offending tractor and crushed by its wheels. The Steering bolt of steering wheel was evidently broken all of a sudden. Offending vehicle became free and was out of control. Incident was merely an accident and not an act of rashness or negligence on the part of the accused.^{61.} Where the act of the accused is itself of criminal nature, the protection of this section cannot be availed. In this case, the accused picked up his gun, unlocked it, loaded it with cartridges, aimed at the chest of the victim from a close range of 4–5 feet and shot it. Quite naturally this section was held to be not applicable. There could be no suggestion of an accident.^{62.} Where the Death is caused by shooting an arrow under bona fide belief that object aimed at was an animal, accused is entitled to the benefit under sections 79 or 80.^{63.} The accused was attacked when he was asleep at night by his brother who tried to strangle him. Apprehending imminent death, the accused aimed a blow at his assailant brother with a piece of bamboo on which he could lay hand and the blow accidentally struck the head of his intervening father as a result of which he ultimately died. It was held that the accused exercised his lawful right of self- defence and the blow fell on the head of his father by accident and misfortune and he was fully protected by sections 80 and 106. His conviction under section 304 Part II was set aside.^{64.}

[s 80.3] Burden of Proof.—

The prosecution alleges that the accused intentionally shot the deceased; but the accused pleads that, though the shots emanated from his revolver and hit the deceased, it was by accident, that is, the shots went off from the revolver in the course of a struggle in the circumstances mentioned in section 80 of the IPC, 1860 and hit the deceased resulting in his death. The Court then shall presume the absence of circumstances bringing the case within the provisions of section 80 of the IPC, 1860, that is, it shall presume that the shooting was not by accident, and that the other circumstances bringing the case within the exception did not exist. But this presumption may be rebutted by the accused by adducing evidence to support his plea of accident in the circumstances mentioned therein. This presumption may also be rebutted by admissions made or circumstances elicited by the evidence led by the prosecution or by the combined effect of such circumstances and the evidence adduced by the accused. But the section does not in any way affect the burden that lies on the prosecution to prove all the ingredients of the offence with which the accused is charged and that burden never shifts.^{65.}

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
48. Sukhdev Singh v Delhi State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), (2003) 7 SCC 441 [LNIND 2003 SC 728] : AIR 2003 SC 3716 [LNIND 2003 SC 728] , if either of these elements is missing, the act is not to be excused on the ground of accident.
49. Atmendra v State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 2838 : AIR 1998 SC 1985 [LNIND 1998 SC 386] (SC).
50. Stephen's Digest of Criminal Law, 9th Edn, Article 316.
51. Fenwick v Schmalz, (1868) LR 3 CP 313, 316. Atmendra v State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 2838 : AIR 1998 SC 1985 [LNIND 1998 SC 386] (SC); Sita Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 287 (Raj), the accused labourer was digging earth by spade, another labourer came close to him to remove the soil and became the victim of one spade blow of which he died. It was held that the act of the accused came neither within section 302 nor section 304. It fell within section 304A being an act of criminal negligence. Sentence imposed upon him was reduced to the period already undergone.
52. Per Lord Halsbury in Hamilton, Fraser & Co v Pandorf & Co, (1887) 12 AC 518 , 524.
53. Patreswar Basumatary v State of Assam, 1989 Cr LJ 196 (Gau).
54. 10th Parl Rep 16.
55. Raja Ram, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 85 (All); see also Khora Ghasi, 1978 Cr LJ 1305 (Ori) under section 79 ante.
56. Rangaswamy, (1952) Nag 93.
57. Jacob Mathew v State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 [LNIND 2005 SC 587] : 2005 (6) SCC 1 [LNIND 2005 SC 587] in this case SC issued guidelines regarding the prosecution of Doctors for medical Negligence; See comments in section 304A.
58. Dr. Suresh Gupta v Govt. of NCT of Delhi, (2004) 6 SCC 422 [LNIND 2004 SC 744] : 2004 AIR SCW 4442 : AIR 2004 SC 4091 [LNIND 2004 SC 744] .
59. Kusum Sharma v Batra Hospital and Medical Research Centre, 2010 (3) SCC 480 [LNIND 2010 SC 164] .
60. Dr. Saroja Patil v State of Maharashtra, 2011 Cr LJ 1060 (Bom).
61. Mahadev v State of MP, 2006 Cr LJ 4246 (MP).
62. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
63. State of Orissa, v Khora Ghasi, 1978 Cr LJ 1305 ; State of MP v Rangaswami 1952 Cr LJ 1191 .
64. Girish Saikia v State of Assam, 1993 Cr LJ 3808 (Gau).
65. K M Nanavati v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1962 SC 605 [LNIND 1961 SC 362] : 1962 (Supp1) SCR 567 : 1962 Cr LJ 521 ; Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 81] Act likely to cause harm, but done without criminal intent, and to prevent other harm.

Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention¹ to cause harm, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such a case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, the captain of a steam vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B, with twenty or thirty passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only two passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in incurring the risk of running down the boat C.
- (b) A, in a great fire, pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention in good faith of saving human life or property. Here, if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act. A is not guilty of the offence.

COMMENT.—

An act which would otherwise be a crime may in some cases be excused if the person accused can show that it was done only in order to avoid consequences which could not otherwise be avoided, and which, if they had followed, would have inflicted upon him or upon others whom he was bound to protect inevitable and irreparable evil, that no more was done than was reasonably necessary for that purpose, and that the evil inflicted by it was not disproportionate to the evil avoided.⁶⁶ As in self-defence so in the prevention of harm the accused is faced with two choices both resulting in some harm and of sheer necessity to avoid a greater harm he has to commit an act which would otherwise be an offence. The test really is like this: there must be a situation in which the accused is confronted with a grave danger and he has no choice but to commit the lesser harm may be even to an innocent person, in order to avoid the greater harm. Here the choice is between the two evils and the accused rightly chooses the lesser one.⁶⁷

1. 'Without any criminal intention'.—Under no circumstances can a person be justified in intentionally causing harm; but if he causes the harm without any criminal intention, and merely with the knowledge that it is likely to ensue, he will not be held responsible for the result of his act, provided it be done in good faith to avoid or prevent other harm to person or property.

'Criminal intention' simply means the purpose of design or doing an act forbidden by the criminal law without just cause or excuse. An act is intentional if it exists in idea before it exists in fact, the idea realizing itself in the fact because of the desire by which it is accompanied. The motive for an act is not a sufficient test to determine its criminal character. By a motive is meant anything that can contribute to give birth to, or even to prevent, any kind of action. Motive may serve as a clue to the intention; but although the motive is pure, the act done under it may be criminal. Purity of motive will not purge an act of its criminal character.

Where an offence depends upon proof of intention the Court must have proof of facts sufficient to justify in coming to the conclusion that the intention existed. No doubt one has usually to infer intention from conduct, and one matter that has to be taken into account is the probable effect of the conduct. But that is never conclusive.⁶⁸

Where the positive evidence against the accused is clear, cogent and reliable, the question of motive is of no importance.⁶⁹

[s 81.1] Mens rea.—

It is a well settled principle of common law that mens rea is an essential ingredient of criminal offence. A statute can exclude that element, but it is a sound rule of construction adopted in England and also accepted in India to construe a statutory provision creating an offence in conformity with the common law rather than against it unless the statute expressly or by necessary implication excludes mens rea. There is a presumption that mens rea is an essential ingredient of a statutory offence; but this may be rebutted by the express words of a statute creating the offence or by necessary implication. But the mere fact that the object of a statute is to promote welfare activities or to eradicate grave social evils is in itself not decisive of the question whether the element of guilty mind is excluded from the ingredients of the offence. It is also necessary to enquire whether a statute by putting a person under strict liability helps him to assist the State in the enforcement of the law; can he do anything to promote the observance of the law? Mens rea by necessary implication can be excluded from a statute only where it is absolutely clear that the implementation of the object of a statute would otherwise be defeated and its exclusion enables those put under strict liability by their act or omission to assist the promotion of the law. The nature of mens rea that will be implied in a statute creating an offence depends upon the object of the Act and the provisions thereof.⁷⁰

It is, however, held that mens rea is an essential ingredient in every offence except in three cases:

- (1) cases not criminal in any real sense but which in the public interest are prohibited under a penalty;
- (2) public nuisance; and
- (3) cases criminal in form but which are really only a summary mode of enforcing a civil right.

The maxim actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea has, however, no application in its technical sense to the offences under the Penal Code, as the definitions of various offences contain expressly a proposition as to the state of mind of the accused. In other words, each offence under the Code except offences like waging war (section 121), sedition (section 124A), kidnapping and abduction (sections 359, 363) and counterfeiting coins (section 232) prescribes a mens rea of a specific kind which is not exactly the same as mens rea in the sense of being a guilty mind under the common law. Thus, throughout the web of the IPC, 1860 the doctrine of mens rea runs as a running thread in the form of "intentionally", "voluntarily", "knowingly", "fraudulently", "dishonestly" and the like. It is, therefore, not entirely correct to say that the doctrine of mens rea is inapplicable to the offence under the Penal Code. What the Code requires is not negation of mens rea but mens rea of a specific kind and this may differ from offence-to-offence.

In this section and in sections 87, 88, 89, 91, 92, 93, 95, 100, 104 and 106, 'harm' can only mean physical injury.^{71.}

As to the doctrine of compulsion and necessity, see comment on section 94, infra.

[s 81.2] CASES.—

Where a Chief Constable not in his uniform came to a fire and wished to force his way past the military sentries placed round it, was kicked by a sentry, it was held that as the sentry did not know who he was, the kick was justifiable for the purpose of preventing much greater harm under this section and as a means of acting up to the military order.^{72.} A person placed poison in his toddy pots, knowing that if taken by a human being it would cause injury, but with the intention of thereby detecting an unknown thief who was in the habit of stealing the toddy from his pots. The toddy was drunk by and caused injury to some soldiers who purchased it from an unknown vendor. It was held that the person was guilty under section 328, and that this section did not apply.^{73.} Where a Village Magistrate arrested a drunken person whose conduct was at the time a grave danger to the public, it was held that he was not guilty of an offence by reason of the provisions of this section or sections 96 or 105.^{74.}

[s 81.3] English cases.—

A man who, in order to escape death from hunger, kills another for the purpose of eating his flesh, is guilty of murder; although at the time of the act he is in such circumstances that he believes and has reasonable ground for believing that it affords the only chance of preserving his life. At the trial of an indictment for murder it appeared that the prisoners D and S, seamen, and the deceased, a boy between 17 and 18, were cast away in a storm on the high seas, and compelled to put into an open boat; that the boat was drifting on the ocean and was probably more than 1,000 miles from land; that on the 18th day, when they had been seven days without food and five days without water, D proposed to S that lots should be cast who should be put to death to save the rest, and that they afterwards thought it would be better to kill the boy that their lives should be saved; that on the 20th day, D with the assent of S, killed the boy, and both D and S fed on his flesh for four days; that at the time of the act there was no sail in sight nor any reasonable prospect of relief; that under these circumstances there appeared to the prisoners every probability that unless they then or very soon fed upon the boy, or one of themselves, they would die of starvation. It was held that upon these facts there was no proof of any such necessity as could justify the prisoners in killing the boy, and that they were guilty of murder.^{75.} A and B, swimming in the sea after shipwreck, get hold of a plank not large enough to support both; A pushes off B, who is drowned. This, in the opinion of Sir James Stephen, is not a crime as A thereby does B no direct bodily harm but leaves him to his chance of getting another plank. According to Archbold this is not a law now. In R v Martin,^{76.} the defendant, charged with driving whilst disqualified, sought to raise necessity as a defence but on the trial judge ruling, in effect, that necessity was no defence to an 'absolute' offence, he changed his plea to guilty. The circumstances on which the defendant sought to rely were that his wife's son (the defendant's stepson) was late for work and accordingly in danger of losing his job, and that this had made his wife so distraught that she threatened to commit suicide unless he drove her son to work. There was medical evidence available indicating that it was likely that his wife would have attempted suicide had he not driven her son to work. The Court of Appeal, quashing the conviction, held that the trial judge should have left the defence to the jury. The authorities were now clear, said the Court, and established the following principles. First, the law does recognise a defence of necessity whether arising from wrongful threats of violence to another or from 'objective dangers' (conveniently called duress of circumstances) threatening the defendant or others. Second, the defence is available only if the defendant can be objectively said to be acting reasonably and proportionately to avoid the threat of death or serious injury. Third, it is for the jury to determine whether because of what the defendant reasonably believed he had good cause to fear death or serious injury; and, if so, whether a person of reasonable firmness, sharing the characteristics of the defendant, would have responded as the defendant did.⁷⁷.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
66. Stephen's Digest of Criminal Law, 9th Edn, Article 11.
67. Southwark London Borough Council v Williams, (1971) Ch 734 , (1971) 2 All ER 175 ; Wood v Richards (1971) RTR 201 .
68. Ramchandra Gujar, (1937) 39 Bom LR 1184 , (1938) Bom 114.
69. Gurcharan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1956 SC 460 : 1956 Cr LJ 827 . Kusta Balsu Kandnekar v State of Goa, 1987 Cr LJ 89 Bom.
70. Mayer Hans George, (1964) 67 Bom LR 583 , AIR 1965 SC 722 [LNIND 1964 SC 208] : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 641 . See also Nathulal, AIR 1966 SC 43 [LNIND 1965 SC 97] : 1966 Cr LJ 71 .
71. Veeda Menezes v Yusuf Khan, 1966 Cr LJ 1489 : AIR 1966 SC 1773 [LNIND 1966 SC 107] : 68 Bom LR 629.
72. Bostan, (1892) 17 Bom 626.
73. Dhanial Daji, (1868) 5 BHC (Cr C) 59.
74. Gopal Naidu, (1922) 46 Mad 605 (FB).
75. Dudley and Stephens, (1884) 14 QBD 273 .
76. R v Martin, (1989) 1 All ER 652 CA.
77. Reproduced from All ER Annual Review 1989.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 82] Act of a child under seven years of age.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

COMMENT.—

Under the age of seven years no infant can be guilty of a crime; for, under that age an infant is, by presumption of law, doli incapax, and cannot be endowed with any discretion. If the accused were a child under seven years of age, the proof of that fact would be ipso facto an answer to the prosecution.⁷⁸ It is, therefore, desirable to bring some evidence regarding the age of the accused on the record.⁷⁹

The accused purchased for one anna, from a child aged six years, two pieces of cloth valued at 15 annas, which the child had taken from the house of a third person. It was held that, assuming that a charge of an offence of dishonest reception of property (section 411) could not be sustained owing to the incapacity of the child to commit an offence, the accused was guilty of criminal misappropriation, if he knew that the property belonged to the child's guardians and dishonestly appropriated it to his own use.⁸⁰

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.

3. Musammam Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).

4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

78. Lukhini Agradanini, (1874) 22 WR (Cr) 27, 28.

79. Hiralal, 1977 Cr LJ 1921 : AIR 1977 SC 2236 [LNIND 1977 SC 254] .

80. Makhulshah v State, (1886) 1 Weir 470.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 83] Act of a child above seven years of age and under twelve of immature understanding.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under twelve, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion.

COMMENT.—

Where the accused is a child above seven years of age and under twelve, the incapacity to commit an offence only arises when the child has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct, and such non-attainment would have apparently to be specially pleaded and proved, like the incapacity of a person who, at the time of doing an act charged as an offence, was alleged to have been of unsound mind under this section it has got to be shown that the accused is not only under 12 but has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding. If no evidence or circumstance is brought to the notice of the Court, it will be presumed that the child accused intended to do what he really did. Thus, where a child of 12 or so used a sharp sword in killing a person along with his two brothers and no evidence either of age or immaturity of understanding was led on his behalf, it was held that he committed an offence at least under section 326, IPC, 1860.⁸¹ The Legislature is manifestly referring in this section to an exceptional immaturity of intellect.⁸² What the section contemplates is that the child should not know the nature and physical consequences of his conduct.⁸³ The circumstances of a case may disclose such a degree of malice as to justify the maxim malitia supplet octatam.⁸⁴ Where the accused, a boy over 11 years but below 12 years of age, picked up his knife and advanced towards the deceased with a threatening gesture, saying that he would cut him to bits, and did actually cut him, his entire action can only lead to one inference, namely, that he did what he intended to do and that he knew all the time that a blow inflicted with a kathi (knife) would effectuate his intention.⁸⁵ In the prosecution of an 11-year-old child for throwing a brick at a police vehicle and then running away, the Court said that the justices were not entitled to conclude from his appearance that he was normal in respect of incurring criminal responsibility. The test is whether the child knew that what he was doing was seriously wrong and went beyond childish mischief. Running away was not by itself sufficient to rebut the presumption of doli incapax. A naughty child would run away from a parent or teacher even if what he had done was not criminal.⁸⁶

[s 83.1] CASE.—Theft by child.—

Where a child of nine years of age stole a necklace, worth Rs. 280, and immediately afterwards sold it to the accused for five annas, the accused could be convicted of receiving stolen property, because the act of the child in selling the necklace showed that he had attained a sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion within the meaning of this section.⁸⁷

Section 83 provides that nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under 12, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion. The IPC, 1860 provides no protection from culpable liability on ground of tender age to one who is aged 12 years or more. In a child's life the period between seven and 12 years of age is rather the twilight period of transition to a minimal workable level of understanding of things in the firmament of worldly affairs. And that is why both the IPC, 1860 and the Oaths Act have made special provisions for children below 12 years in respect of matters dependent on a minimal power of understanding.⁸⁸

A claim of juvenility may be raised before any Court and it shall be recognised at any stage, even after final disposal of the case.⁸⁹

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
81. Hiralal, Supra.
82. Lukhini Agradanini, (1874) 22 WR (Cr) 27, 28.
83. Ulla Mahapatra, (1950) Cut 293.
84. Mussamut Aimana, (1864) 1 WR (Cr) 43.
85. Ulla Mahapatra, Supra.
86. A v DPP, (1991) COD 442 (DC).
87. Krishna, (1883) 6 Mad 373.
88. Santosh Roy v State of WB, 1992 Cr LJ 2493 : 1992 (1) Crimes 904 (Cal).
89. Section 7A Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act, 2000. See also Amit Singh v State of Maharashtra, 2011 (8) Scale 439 [LNIND 2011 SC 731] : (2011) 9 SCR 890 [LNIND 2011 SC 731] : (2011) 13 SCC 744 [LNIND 2011 SC 731] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 84] Act of a person of unsound mind.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, ¹ by reason of unsoundness of mind, ² is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. ³

COMMENT.—

To commit a criminal offence, mens rea is generally taken to be an essential element of crime. It is said furiosus nulla voluntus est. In other words, a person who is suffering from a mental disorder cannot be said to have committed a crime as he does not know what he is doing. For committing a crime, the intention and act both are taken to be the constituents of the crime; actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea. Every normal and sane human being is expected to possess some degree of reason to be responsible for his/her conduct and acts unless contrary is proved. But a person of unsound mind or a person suffering from mental disorder cannot be said to possess this basic norm of human behaviour.⁹⁰

[s 84.1] McNaughten Rule and the origin of Section 84 of IPC, 1860.—

Section 84 clearly gives statutory recognition to the defence of insanity as developed by the Common Law of England in a decision of the House of Lords rendered in the case of R v Daniel McNaughten.⁹¹ In that case, the House of Lords formulated the famous Mc Naughten Rules on the basis of the five questions, which had been referred to them with regard to the defence of insanity. The reference came to be made in a case where Mc Naughten was charged with the murder by shooting of Edward Drummond, who was the Pvt Secretary of the then Prime Minister of England Sir Robert Peel. The accused Mc Naughten produced medical evidence to prove that, he was not, at the time of committing the act, in a sound state of mind. He claimed that he was suffering from an insane delusion that the Prime Minister was the only reason for all his problems. He had also claimed that as a result of the insane delusion, he mistook Drummond for the Prime Minister and committed his murder by shooting him. The plea of insanity was accepted and Mc Naughten was found not guilty, on the ground of insanity. The aforesaid verdict became the subject of debate in the House of Lords. Therefore, it was determined to take the opinion of all the judges on the law governing such cases. Five questions were subsequently put to the Law Lords. A comparison of answers to question no. 2 and 3 and the provision contained in section 84 of the IPC, 1860 would clearly indicate that the section is modelled on that answers.⁹²

The essential elements of section 84 are as follows:

- (i) The accused must, at the time of commission of the act be of unsound mind;
- (ii) The unsoundness must be such as to make the accused at the time when he is doing the act charged as offence, incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law.⁹³ Where it is proved that the accused has committed multiple murders while suffering from mental derangement of some sort and it is found that there is (i) absence of any motive, (ii) absence of secrecy, (iii) want of pre-arrangement, and (iv) want of accomplices, it would be reasonable to hold that the circumstances are sufficient to support the inference that the accused suffered from unsoundness of mind.⁹⁴

Though the onus of proving unsoundness of mind is on the accused,⁹⁵ yet it has been held that where during the investigation previous history of insanity is revealed, it is the duty of an honest investigator to subject the accused to a medical examination and place that evidence before the Court and if this is not done, it creates a serious infirmity in the prosecution case and the benefit of doubt has to be given to the accused.⁹⁶ Prosecution is duty bound to subject the accused to a medical examination immediately.⁹⁷ This onus may, however, be discharged by producing evidence as to the conduct of the accused shortly prior to the offence and his conduct at the time or immediately afterwards, also by evidence of his mental condition, his family history and so forth.⁹⁸ Every person is presumed to know the natural consequences of his act. Similarly every person is also presumed to know the law. The prosecution has not to establish these facts.⁹⁹

There are four kinds of persons who may be said to be non compos mentis (not of sound mind): (1) an idiot; (2) one made non compos by illness; (3) a lunatic or a madman; and (4) one who is drunk.

An idiot is one who is of non-sane memory from his birth, by a perpetual infirmity, without lucid intervals; and those are said to be idiots who cannot count twenty, or tell the days of the week, or who do not know their fathers or mothers, or the like. A person made non compos men-us by illness is excused in criminal cases from such acts as are committed while under the influence of his disorder. A lunatic is one who is afflicted by mental disorder only at certain periods and vicissitudes, having intervals of reason. Madness is permanent. Lunacy and madness are spoken of as acquired insanity, and idiocy as natural insanity.¹⁰⁰

[s 84.2] Legal insanity vis-a-vis Medical insanity.—

A distinction is to be made between legal insanity and medical insanity. A Court is always concerned with legal insanity, and not with medical insanity. What sections 84, IPC, 1860 provides is defence of legal insanity as distinguished from medical insanity. A person is legally insane when he is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that what he was doing was wrong or contrary to law.¹⁰¹ Incapacity of the person on account of insanity must be of the nature which attracts the operation of section 84 IPC, 1860.¹⁰² An accused who seeks exoneration from liability of an act under section 84 of the IPC, 1860 is to prove legal insanity and not medical insanity. Expression "unsoundness of mind" has not been defined in the IPC, 1860 and it has mainly been treated as equivalent to insanity. But the term insanity carries different meaning in different contexts and describes varying degrees of mental disorder. Every person who is suffering from mental disease is not ipso facto exempted from criminal liability. The mere fact that the accused is conceited, odd, irascible and his brain is not quite all right, or that the physical and mental ailments from which he suffered had rendered his intellect weak and affected his emotions or indulges in certain unusual acts, or had fits of insanity at short intervals or that he was subject to epileptic fits and there was abnormal behaviour or the behaviour is queer are not sufficient to attract the application of section 84 of the IPC, 1860.¹⁰³ The medical profession would undoubtedly treat the accused as a mentally sick person. However, for the purposes of claiming the benefit of the defence of insanity in law, the appellant would have to prove that his cognitive faculties were so impaired, at the time when the crime was committed, as not to know the nature of the act.¹⁰⁴ Only legal insanity is contemplated under section 84 of IPC, 1860.¹⁰⁵

[s 84.3] 42nd Report of Law Commission of India.—

Law Commission of India re-visited section 84 of the IPC, 1860 in view of the criticism to the M'Naughten Rules in various countries including Britain but came to the conclusion that law of insanity under section 84 of the IPC, 1860 needs no changes in Indian circumstances.¹⁰⁶

Section 84 lays down the legal test of responsibility in cases of alleged unsoundness of mind. There is no definition of "unsoundness of mind" in the Penal Code. The Courts have, however, mainly treated this expression as equivalent to insanity. But the term "insanity" itself has no precise definition. It is a term used to describe varying degrees of mental disorder. So, every person, who is mentally diseased, is not ipso facto exempted from criminal responsibility. A distinction is to be made between legal insanity and medical insanity. A Court is concerned with legal insanity, and not with medical insanity.¹⁰⁷ In this case, the accused was under medical treatment prior to the occurrence. Evidence indicating that he remained mentally fit for about four years after treatment. During the trial also he was sent for treatment and his conduct was normal thereafter. On such facts, it was held, that the accused was not entitled to protection under section 84. The Court also added that where previous history of insanity of the accused comes to light during investigation, the accused must be medically examined and report placed before the Court. Any lapse in this respect would create infirmity in the prosecution case and the accused may become entitled to benefit of doubt.

1. 'At the time of doing it'.—It must clearly be proved that at the time of the committing of the act, the party accused was labouring under such a defect of reason, from disease of the mind, as not to know the nature and quality of the act he was doing, or, if he did know it, that he did not know he was doing what was wrong.¹⁰⁸ If he did know it, he is responsible.¹⁰⁹

In Sheralli Wali Mohammed v State of Maharashtra,¹¹⁰ it was held that:

... it must be proved clearly that, at the time of the commission of the acts, the appellant, by reason of unsoundness of mind, was incapable of either knowing the nature of the act or that the acts were either morally wrong or contrary to law. The question to be asked is, is there evidence to show that, at the time of the commission of the offence, he was labouring under any such incapacity? On this question, the state of his mind before and after the commission of the offence is relevant.

The crucial point of time for deciding whether the benefit of this section should be given or not is the material time when the offence takes place. If at that moment a man is found to be labouring under such a defect of reason as not to know the nature of the act he was doing or that, even if he knew it, he did not know it was either wrong or contrary to law then this section must be applied. In coming to that conclusion, the relevant circumstances, like the behaviour of the accused before the commission of the offence and his behaviour after the commission of the offence, should be taken into consideration.¹¹¹ The accused pushed a child of four years into fire resulting in his death but there was nothing to show that there was any deliberateness or preparation to commit the crime. His act was accompanied by manifestations of unnatural brutality and was committed openly. He neither concealed nor ran away nor tried to avoid detection which showed that he was not conscious of his guilt. It was held that the accused was entitled to benefit of section 84 and his conviction under section 302 was set aside.¹¹² The accused, a young boy brought up by his grandfather, went abroad for further studies. When his parents visited abroad they did not care to see him. His grandfather's death was communicated to him much later. On return to India, he committed offences of brutal nature at random. During the pendency of the session's case, he again continued and completed his engineering course and started a printing press and later he managed a garage and allied industries employing nearly 30 persons. His behaviour before and after the offences was that of a normal man. It was held that he was insane at the time of the offence and was given benefit of section 84.¹¹³ Where the accused was examined by two doctors who certified him to be schizophrenic and his abnormal behaviour was also apparent from the evidence on the record, the Supreme Court held that the acquittal of the accused by the High Court was proper.¹¹⁴

In other words, to get the benefit of section 84 IPC, 1860, it must be shown that at the time of the commission of the act the accused by reason of unsoundness of mind was incapable of either knowing the nature of the act or that the act was either morally wrong or contrary to law and for determining this his state of mind before and after the commission of the offence is most relevant. It would be dangerous to admit the defence of insanity upon arguments derived merely from the character of the crime.¹¹⁵ Thus, the fact that the accused committed the murder over a trifling matter and made a clean breast of his crime would not go to show that he was insane.¹¹⁶

[s 84.4] Lucid intervals.—

A lucid interval of an insane person is not merely a cessation of the violent symptoms of the disorder, but a restoration of the faculties of the mind sufficiently to enable the person soundly to judge the act; but the expression does not necessarily mean complete or perfect restoration of the mental faculties to their original condition. So, if there is such a restoration, the person concerned can do the act with such reason, memory and judgment as to make it a legal act; merely a cessation of the violent symptoms of the disorder is not sufficient.¹¹⁷

2. 'Unsoundness of mind.'—Whether the want of capacity is temporary or permanent, natural or supervening, whether it arises from disease, or exists from the time of birth, it is included in this expression. It is only 'unsoundness of mind' which naturally impairs the cognitive faculties of the mind that can form a ground of exemption from criminal responsibility.¹¹⁸ The nature and extent of the unsoundness of mind required being such as would make the offender incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law.¹¹⁹ Thus, as Stephen says that if a person cuts off the head of a sleeping man because 'it would be great fun to see him looking for it when he woke up', it would obviously be a case where the perpetrator of the act would be incapable of knowing the physical effects of his act.¹²⁰ The accused had killed his wife and his minor children and assaulted his neighbour and the police officer. The evidence showed that he had a history of insanity with at random assault on strangers but his relations with his wife were cordial. It was held that the accused was a man of unsound mind and his conviction under sections 302, 332 and 323 was set aside.¹²¹ The accused caught hold of the legs of a girl of two years of age on the road and struck her on the ground. She sustained head injury and died in the hospital. On the basis of the ocular evidence about the conduct of the accused at the time of the offence and the opinion of the doctor about his state of mind, the accused was acquitted on the ground of insanity.¹²² The accused, a labourer, killed his brother's wife and attempted to kill his mother in a quarrel over money deposited with his mother. Accused assaulted with axe on the vital parts of the victim's body, absconded for three months and immediately after the incident worked as a labourer in another village for 15 days. It was held that the conduct of the accused immediately before, at the time of and after the incident, was wholly inconsistent with the plea of insanity raised by him. The history of earlier mental derangement was not by itself sufficient to bring the case within section 84.¹²³ Where on the day of the crime the accused was seen dancing with a dog on his head and with a broken bottle, but the medical evidence showed that he was a normal man, it was held that defence of insanity was an afterthought.¹²⁴ The mere fact that the accused attempted to escape from the scene of occurrence after killing his wife, belied his plea of insanity.¹²⁵ Where a father and his relatives sacrificed a four-year-old son to propitiate the deity, the Supreme Court held that this does not by itself constitute insanity. Such primitive and inhuman actions must be punished severely so as to deter others from resorting to such barbaric practices.¹²⁶

[s 84.5] Partial delusion.—

Mere abnormality of mind or partial delusion affords no protection under section 84 IPC, 1860.¹²⁷ Whether a person who, under an insane delusion as to the existing facts, commits an offence in consequence thereof, is to be, therefore, excused depends upon the nature of the delusion. If he labours under a partial delusion only, and is not in other respects insane, he must be considered in the same situation as to responsibility as if the facts, with respect to which the delusion exists, were real.¹²⁸ If a person afflicted with insane delusion, in respect of one or more particular subjects or persons, commits a crime, knowing that he was acting contrary to law, but did the act complained of with a view, under the influence of insane delusion, of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury, or of producing some public benefit, he is nevertheless punishable according to the nature of the crime committed.¹²⁹ Where the accused after killing his daughter tried to commit suicide and there was no evidence of psychiatric treatment but only major depression, he was held liable to be convicted.¹³⁰

3. 'Nature of the act, or...what is either wrong or contrary to law!'—If the accused were conscious that an act was done which he ought not to do and if the act was at the same time contrary to the law of the land, he is punishable. His liability will not be diminished if he did the act complained of with a view under the influence of insane delusion of redressing or revenging some supposed grievance or injury or of producing some public benefit, if he knew that he was acting contrary to law.¹³¹ Where the accused, a young man, took a girl of four years on a bicycle to a lonely place near a canal, sexually assaulted her and threw her into the canal, it was held that it was a carefully thought out action and not an act of an insane person.¹³²

Mere absence of motive for a crime, howsoever atrocious it may be, cannot, in the absence of plea and proof of legal insanity, bring the case within this section.¹³³ The mere fact that an act of murder is committed by the accused on a sudden impulse and there is no discoverable motive for the act will not generally afford the Court sufficient basis for accepting the plea of insanity.¹³⁴ Thus, in SW Mohammed's case the Supreme Court held that the mere fact that no motive has been proved why the accused murdered his wife and child or the fact that he made no attempt to run away when the door was broken open would not indicate that he was insane or that he did not have the necessary mens rea for the offence.¹³⁵ In a Madras case, however, the Madras High Court has held that where the accused was insane for some months prior to occurrence and on cordial terms with his wife but suddenly killed the wife in the open courtyard without any ostensible motive and did not even attempt to run away or secret his crime, he had to be given the benefit of section 84, IPC, 1860.¹³⁶ This case can, of course, be distinguished from the above mentioned Supreme Court case on the ground that in the instant case the accused had previous history of insanity which was not fully cured. Prior or subsequent treatment for schizophrenia coupled with the evidence of the doctor that the accused was schizophrenic would entitle the accused to the benefit of section 84 in a charge of murder.¹³⁷ But where the doctor in his evidence merely said unsoundness of mind may have existed from before and that evidence was contradicted by evidence of close relations about sanity of the accused at the time of the occurrence, it was held that the accused could not get the benefit of section 84, IPC, 1860.¹³⁸ There is a difference between medical insanity and legal insanity. By medical insanity is meant the prisoner's consciousness of the bearing of his act on those affected by it and by legal insanity is meant the prisoner's consciousness in relation to himself.¹³⁹ There can be no legal insanity unless the cognitive faculties of the accused are as a result of unsoundness of mind completely impaired. In order to constitute legal insanity unsoundness of mind must be such as to make the offender incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law.¹⁴⁰ Thus, mere abnormality of mind or partial delusion, irresistible impulse or compulsive behaviour of a psychopath affords no protection under section 84 of the IPC, 1860 as the law contained in that section is still squarely based on the outdated M'Naughten Rules of 19th Century England. Thus, in *Siddheswari's case*¹⁴¹. where the accused killed her ailing child of three and there was also some evidence elicited in cross-examination to show that the accused had suffered from some mental derangement two years prior to the incident, it was held that the mere fact the murder was committed on a sudden impulse or as a "mercy killing" was no ground to give her the benefit of section 84 IPC, 1860, even though both euthanasia (mercy killing) and irresistible impulse would entitle the accused in England to get the benefit of diminished responsibility and her crime would be treated as manslaughter (i.e. culpable homicide not amounting to murder). In a latter case too the Gauhati High Court felt that where the accused has made out a prima facie case of irresistible impulse the plea has to be taken into consideration in deciding the question of giving benefit of section 84, IPC, 1860, to the accused.¹⁴²

The position, however, has undergone a sea change in England where the right or wrong test of the M'Naughten Rules no longer dominate this branch of criminal law to the exclusion of mental abnormality falling short of complete insanity as a limited defence establishing a claim to diminished responsibility. Thus, under section 2 of the Homicide Act, 1957 if two Psychiatrists certify that the homicidal act of the accused was influenced by abnormal condition of his mind though not amounting to legal insanity within the meaning of M'Naughten Rules, still he cannot be convicted of murder but his offence will be regarded only as a manslaughter which is equivalent to culpable homicide not amounting to murder under the IPC, 1860. It is hoped that the Indian law too would be changed on this score with due regard to the modern developments in the field of psychology of criminal behaviour.

[s 84.6] CASES. –

Accused, who was a mentally challenged person before the incident, killed three persons and caused injuries to others with an axe. He did not know the implication of his act and indiscriminately went on wielding axe blows, be it a child or a woman and there after he did not even attempt to hide the weapon which he used for committing crime. He was found of unsound mind in his medical examination. Case of accused comes within the four corners of section 84 IPC, 1860.¹⁴³. Where an accused, who was suffering from fever which caused him while suffering from its paroxysms to be bewildered and unconscious, killed his children at being annoyed at their crying, but he was not delirious then, and there was no evidence to show that he was not conscious of the nature of his act, it was held that he was not entitled to protection under this section.¹⁴⁴. But where the accused labouring under a delusion believed his two-month-old infant child to be a devil and danger to himself, his family and to the whole world and, therefore, killed the child with unusual ferocity almost reducing it to a pulp and thereafter without making any attempt to escape told the police party that he had removed a devil from the world, it was held that the accused did not know that what he had done was wrong and as such was entitled to get protection of section 84, IPC, 1860, even when he did not plead insanity in his defence as the prosecution itself disclosed that he was insane.¹⁴⁵. IPC, 1860 Allegation that accused appellant had cut his son, aged about one and a half years, to death and he was intercepted while he was preparing to bury the dead body by digging a pit. Medical evidence shows that the accused was suffering from schizophrenia. Accused was reticent by nature and used to keep himself indoors and interact only when he was compelled to do so. He was not in a normal state of mind at the time of alleged crime. Appellant is entitled to the benefits under section 84 of IPC, 1860.¹⁴⁶. The accused killed three persons and caused injuries to others and there was no previous enmity or motive established. The witnesses stated that he ran from one place to other and on his way he assaulted five persons indiscriminately without any rhyme or reason. The evidence shows that appellant had developed insanity since long and entitled to the benefit of this section.¹⁴⁷ Accused chopped off his wife's head, with a chopper. After the occurrence, in a very unusual and abnormal manner, holding the head and the chopper in each of his hands, he walked down the road and ultimately reached the police station. Though this, by itself, would not be sufficient to come to any conclusion but taken along with the other circumstances of the case would clearly point to the validity of the defence put forward on behalf of the accused.¹⁴⁸

[s 84.7] Epilepsy, Epileptic fits and Section 84.—

Epilepsy usually occurs from early infancy, though it may occur at any period of life. Individuals, who have had epileptic fits for years, do not necessarily show any mental aberration, but quite a few of them suffer from mental deterioration. Religiosity is a marked feature in the commencement, but the feeling is only superficial. Such patients are peevish, impulsive and suspicious, and are easily provoked to anger on the slightest cause. Epileptic psychosis is that which is associated with epileptic fits. This may occur before or after the fits, or may replace them, and is known as pre-epileptic, post-epileptic and masked or psychic phases (psychomotor epilepsy).¹⁴⁹

Where the accused committed the murder without any motive under the influence of an epileptic fits, he was entitled to get the benefit under section 84, IPC, 1860.¹⁵⁰ But if at the time of the crime he was not acting under epileptic automatism, mere past history of epilepsy will not absolve the accused from liability.¹⁵¹

[s 84.8] Irresistible impulse.—

Mere abnormality of mind or partial delusion, irresistible impulse or compulsive behaviour of a psychopath affords no protection under section 84 as the law contained in that section is still squarely based on the outdated M'Naughten Rules of 19th Century. The provisions of section 84 are in substance the same as those laid down in the answers of the Judges to the questions put to them by the House of Lords, in M'Naughten's case. Behaviour, antecedent, attendant and subsequent to the event, may be relevant in finding the mental condition of the accused at the time of the event, but not that remote in time.¹⁵²

[s 84.9] Nervousness.—

The fact that the accused became nervous after raping a six-year-old girl and in that state of mind killed her, was held to be not sufficient to establish insanity. The Court reduced the death sentence to life imprisonment and added that nervous psychosis may become in circumstances a kind of insanity.¹⁵³

[s 84.10] Homicide by 'ganja' smoker.—

In a case of ganja addict before the Supreme Court, the accused had killed his wife and children ranging one –16 years with knife. Death sentence was confirmed by the High Court. The accused had not raised the defence of unsoundness in Courts below. The Supreme Court got the enquiry conducted by police after a plea was raised at the SLP stage. The enquiry report and evidence of family members and other witnesses revealed the addiction and on-going treatment. He was not allowed the benefit of section 84. The state of mind on the day of the incident is the crucial factor. The State of mind on other days is relevant only if such evidence would help determining the state of mind at the crucial moment.^{154.}

[s 84.11] Insane delusion.—

The accused killed two women by cutting their necks with an axe without any reason. Evidence showed that he suffered from similar attacks of disorder earlier too. After the incident he was heard saying that he was haunted by a God to do what he did. The plea of insanity was accepted and the accused was directed to be kept in a mental hospital.^{155.} The accused killed seven persons including his wife and two children with an axe. He also killed the cattle which came his way. There was no provocation. It was brutality simpliciter. The evidence on record showed that he was not of sound mind. The death sentence awarded to him was set aside. He was acquitted under the benefit of this section.^{156.} Mere abnormality or partial delusion, irresistible impulse or compulsive behaviour of a psychopath affords no protection under section 84 of the Penal Code.^{157.}

[s 84.12] Paranoid schizophrenia.—

Paranoid schizophrenia, in the vast majority of cases, starts in the fourth decade and develops insidiously. Suspiciousness is the characteristic symptom of the early stage. Ideas of reference occur, which gradually develop into delusions of persecution. Auditory hallucinations follow which in the beginning, start as sounds or noises in the ears, but afterwards change into abuses or insults.^{158.} In paranoid schizophrenia, the person affected lives in a state of constant fear being haunted by the belief that he is being poisoned, some noxious gases are blown into his room and that all are plotting against him to ruin him. The patient gets very irritated and excited owing to equally painful and disagreeable hallucinations and delusions.^{159.} The accused was convicted for having murdered his wife in a brutal manner. He raised the plea of insanity. It came out from evidence that he was suffering from leprosy and insanity from sometime past. The medical opinion was that he was suffering from paranoid schizophrenia which is a form of paranoid psychosis. The plea was allowed. But he being not in a fit state of mind to judge his own welfare or take care of himself without medical aid, the Court directed him to be detained in safe custody under medical supervision and not to be released till medical evidence of social fitness.^{160.} The evidence on record shows that on the day of the incident, when the appellant was examined by doctors, he was found to be suffering from paranoid schizophrenia. He had delusions and persecutory ideas with no insight in his illness. From this, an inference can reasonably be drawn that the accused was under paranoid delusions at the time that he committed the offence.^{161.}

[s 84.13] Burden of proof.—

The Supreme Court defined the doctrine of burden of proof in the context of the plea of insanity in the following propositions:-

- "(1) The prosecution must prove beyond reasonable doubt that the appellant had committed the offence with the requisite mens rea; and the burden of proving that always rests on the prosecution from the beginning to the end of the trial.
- (2) There is a rebuttable presumption that the appellant was not insane, when he committed the crime, in the sense laid down by section 84 of the IPC, 1860: the appellant may rebut it by placing before the court all the relevant evidence - oral, documentary or circumstantial, but the burden of proof upon him is no higher than that rests upon a party to civil proceedings.
- (3) Even if the appellant was not able to establish conclusively that he was insane at the time he committed the offence, the evidence placed before the court by the appellant or by the prosecution may raise a reasonable doubt in the mind of the court as regards one or more of the ingredients of the offence, including mens rea of the appellant and in that case the court would be entitled to acquit the appellant on the ground that the general burden of proof resting on the prosecution was not discharged".¹⁶².

It has been held that merely because an injured witness, who may legitimately be classified as an interested witness for obvious reasons, may have stated that the appellant was not of unsound mind, cannot absolve the primary duty of the prosecution to establish its case beyond all reasonable doubt explaining why the plea for unsoundness of mind taken by the accused was untenable.¹⁶³.

The burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within the purview of section 84 lies upon the accused under section 105 of the Indian Evidence Act. Under the said section, the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.¹⁶⁴. But the burden on the accused cannot be equivalent with the burden of proof on the prosecution and cannot be rated higher than the burden on a party to a civil proceeding where a finding can be based upon preponderance of probabilities. There is no conflict between the general burden which is always on the prosecution and which never shifts and the special burden which rests on the accused to make out the defence of insanity.¹⁶⁵. Sometimes the facts may in themselves be sufficient to discharge the burden which lies on the accused. This possibility was recognised by the Supreme Court in Ratan Lal v State of MP.¹⁶⁶. The accused-appellant was kept in police custody for ten days and only then it was felt that he needed medical examination. There was no evidence on record to show what his condition was during those ten days and why he was not examined earlier. This conduct on the part of the police, neither to arrange his examination nor permit him to do so, brought about such a gap of time between the incident and examination that his condition at the time of the incident was no longer capable of being precisely determined. As against this police inaction, the defence pointed towards the conduct of the accused before the incident and some statements of witnesses which supported the instable condition of the accused. This was held to be sufficient to discharge the burden which lies on the accused and his acquittal was upheld by the Supreme Court. Going by this case in Tukappa Tamanna Lingardi v State of Maharashtra,¹⁶⁷. the Bombay High Court found evidence of insanity from a narration of the facts themselves. Mere oral statements of witnesses cannot give rise to an inference that the appellant was of unsound mind at the time of commission of offence. Plea of the accused does not come within exception contemplated under section 84 of IPC, 1860.¹⁶⁸. IPC, 1860

Where there was no satisfactory evidence of the previous history of the accused or his subsequent conduct and the only fact on record was that ghastly murders were committed without motive, it was held that the burden of proof as to plea of insanity was not discharged. However, because of the absence of motive, premeditation and any weapon, killings being done with stone pieces, death sentence was converted into life imprisonment.¹⁶⁹. Where, on the other hand, a father killed his son and then danced around, moving towards his house threatening others, facts spoke for themselves so as to discharge the burden of proof as to insanity, the accused was acquitted and ordered to be detained in a mental home.^{170.}

Mere eccentric behaviour, like drowning one's own two and a half-year-old child to death, does not discharge this burden which is essentially on the accused and requires him to show all the ingredients of the defence to the extent at least of making them probable at the time of the commission of the act. Previous history and subsequent conduct are only relevant facts in the determination of the condition at the material time.^{171.}

The mere absence of motive is not sufficient to bring the case within the scope of section 84.^{172.}

[s 84.14] Sentencing.—

The accused was charged with offences under sections 427, 302, 307, 451, etc. Medical evidence showed that he was a person of unsound mind at the time when the offences were committed. The accused, therefore, could not be detained in prison. He was directed to be put in a mental hospital. The authorities were further directed to follow the procedure prescribed by section 335, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\).^{173.}

[s 84.15] Sentencing.—Battered woman syndrome.—

The accused woman pleaded guilty to manslaughter on an indictment for murder. She was a young woman aged 20. She began a sexual relationship with the deceased when she was 14 and began to live with him when she was 16. She had a miscarriage and on two occasions took overdoses. The deceased became violent towards her two or three times each week. She sought psychiatric help and on two occasions came to the attention of the police. In 1998 she decided to end the relationship and there was an argument which developed into a fight. She picked up a knife and waved it at the deceased, telling him to leave. There was a further struggle during the course of which the deceased received a fatal knife wound to his back. She immediately shouted for help and was found in an extremely distressed condition. When she was examined, she was found to be extensively bruised. A psychiatrist who examined her found that she exhibited a number of features of the "battered woman's syndrome", including chronic depressive illness, a feeling of hopelessness and despair, and inability to act effectively or to see an escape from her situation, and feelings of self-blame, shame and a poor sense of self-worth. A second psychiatrist found a degree of clinical depression which amounted to abnormality of mind. She was sentenced to four years' detention in a young offender institution. Her appeal against the sentence was allowed. In the light of the evidence, the Court reached the conclusion that there were in the present case those exceptional circumstances which would allow the Court to take the unusual course of passing a sentence other than custody. The accused woman had been subject from a young age to persistent and prolonged violence from a man older than herself who was domineering and demanding. Since her arrest she had made remarkable progress, and a custodial sentence would be likely to damage and possibly bring to an end that rehabilitation. She had served the equivalent of a sentence of 12 months and it was appropriate to give her the opportunity to continue her progress. The Court accordingly quashed the sentence of four years' detention in a young offender institution and substituted a probation order.^{174.}

[s 84.16] CASES.—Defence not made out.—

Accused came to the house one day prior to the occurrence, demanded money and threatened the deceased of grave consequences and on the next day, when the demand was not fulfilled, he trespassed into the house, pushed away PWs 1 and 2, bolted the door from inside and inflicted repeated aruval blows on the deceased that resulted into her death. All these aspects also show that at the relevant time, he was not insane as claimed by him.¹⁷⁵ Accused committed murder of two persons and caused injuries to another. Testimony of witnesses was found cogent and reliable and there was no material on the basis of which it could be inferred that at the time of commission of offence the accused was of unsound mind to such an extent that by reason of such unsoundness, he was incapable of knowing the nature of the act or knowing that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law, plea of insanity rejected.¹⁷⁶ Mere taking treatment earlier in Mental Hospital itself is not sufficient proof of total insanity of person.¹⁷⁷

The accused killed his wife and daughter with an axe. He attended Kirtan (rendering of religious hymns) a night before. He carried the corpses in a hand-cart and made his statement before the police. His confessional statement was recorded by a competent judicial magistrate. He found no noticeable abnormality of mind or mental disorderliness. Even on his examination under section 313, Cr PC, 1973, he showed a soundness of mind. It was held that he was not entitled to the benefit of section 84.¹⁷⁸

[s 84.17] When to be pleaded.—

The plea cannot be raised for the first time before the Supreme Court for which no foundation was established before.¹⁷⁹

[s 84.18] Investigation of offence vis-à-vis the general exceptions—

The duty cast upon the investigating officer to investigate into the mental condition of the accused is very important. The Supreme Court held that, where during the investigation previous history of insanity is revealed, it is the duty of an honest investigator to subject the accused to a medical examination and place that evidence before the Court and if this is not done, it creates a serious infirmity in the prosecution case and the benefit of doubt has to be given to the accused.¹⁸⁰ The Division Bench of High Court of Kerala observed that even if all the acts constituting an offence as per definition in IPC, 1860 are committed by a person, if an investigating officer finds on investigation that by reason of unsoundness of mind, accused was incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he was doing what is either wrong or contrary to law, as stated in Section 84 IPC, 1860, he shall not file a charge sheet against such person.¹⁸¹ The Court also held that the investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions", acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860.¹⁸² But the Single Bench of the High Court of Kerala, later, held that the ingredients of section 84 can only be taken as a defence during trial and it is not possible to throw out the Final Report in a case on the ground that the concerned accused was suffering from legal insanity.¹⁸³

[s 84.19] Procedure.—

Chapter XXV of Cr PC, 1973 deals with provisions as to accused persons of unsound mind.¹⁸⁴

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
90. State of Rajasthan v Shera Ram, (2012) 1 SCC 602 [LNIND 2011 SC 1192] : AIR 2012 SC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 1192] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 406.
91. R v Daniel McNaughten, 1843 RR 59 : 8ER 718 (HL).
92. Sudhakaran v State of Kerala, (2010) 10 SCC 582 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : AIR 2011 SC 265 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : 2011 Cr LJ 292 .
93. State of Maharashtra v Govind Mhatarba Shinde, 2010 Cr LJ 3586 (Bom).
94. State of Orissa v Duleswar Barik, 2008 Cr LJ 1065 (Ori) relied on Shama Tudu v State, 1987 Cr LJ 618 (Ori).
95. Dahyabhai, 1964 (2) Cr LJ 472 (SC); Lonimohon Das, 1974 Cr LJ 1186 (Gau); Gunadhar Mondal, 1979 Cr LJ NOC 178 (Cal); Kesheorao, 1979 Cr LJ 403 (Bom); Lala Sk., 1983 Cr LJ 1675 (Cal); Balu Ganpat, 1983 Cr LJ 1769 (Bom); Paramal Raman v State of Kerala, 1992 Cr LJ 176 Ker; Bai Bamilaben v State of Gujarat, 1991 Cr LJ 2219 Guj; Shama Tudu v State, 1987 Cr LJ 618 Orissa; Sheralli Walli Md v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1972 SC 2443 : 1972 Cr LJ 1523 ; Qyami Ayatu v State of MP, AIR 1974 SC 216 [LNIND 1973 SC 242] : 1974 Cr LJ 305 . In Shama Tudu v State, 1987 Cr LJ 618 , the Orissa High Court cited the following cases in which the plea of insanity was accepted : Mitu Khadia v State of Orissa, 1983 Cr LJ 385 : 1983 Cut LR (Cr) 108; Khageshwar Pujari v State of Orissa, 1984 Cr LJ 1108 : 1984 (1) Ori LR 142 ; Sundar Bairagi v State, 1984 Cr LJ 124 ; Bata v State, 1985 (2) Ori LR 398 . The plea was negated in the following cases; Nakul Chandra v State of Orissa, 1982 Cr LJ 2158 : (1982) 54 Cut LJ 195; Kusa Majhi v State, (1985) 59 Cut LT 203 : 1985 (1) Crimes 520 : 1985 Cr LJ 1460 : AIR 1985 SC 1409 [LNIND 1985 SC 227] . State of MP v Digvijay Singh, AIR 1981 SC 1740 [LNIND 1978 SC 324] : 1981 Cr LJ 1278 , prosecution case proved.
96. Siddhapal Kamala Yadav, AIR 2009 SC 97 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] : (2009) 1 SCC 124 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] ; Sanna Eranna, 1983 Cr LJ 619 (Kant); M Parvaiah, 1985 Cr LJ 1824 (AP); Kuttappan, 1986 Cr LJ 271 (Ker).
97. State of Maharashtra v Govind Mhatarba Shinde, 2010 Cr LJ 3586 (Bom).
98. State of Maharashtra v Govind Mhatarba Shinde, 2010 Cr LJ 3586 (Bom).
99. Bhikari, AIR 1966 SC 1 [LNIND 1965 SC 57] . Absence of motive is one of the factors to be taken into account. Subbigadu v Emperor, AIR 1925 Mad 1238 [LNIND 1925 MAD 157] : 1926 (27) Cr LJ 46 ; Ujagar Singh v State, AIR 1954 Pepsu 4 : 1953 Cr LJ 1859 . But this is only one factor among others. See Amrit Bhushan Gupta v UOI, AIR 1977 SC 608 [LNIND 1976 SC 458] : 1977 Cr LJ 376 ; Ram Bharose v State of MP, 1974 Jab LJ 348 ; Peeru Singh v State of MP, 1987 Cr LJ 1781 MP.

100. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : JT 2007 (9) SC 110 : 2007 AIR (SCW) 3808 : 2007 (7) SCR 917 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 8 Scale 455 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 509.
101. Kuttappan v State of Kerala, 1986 Cr LJ 271 (Ker).
102. Siddhupal Kamala Yadav, AIR 2009 SC 97 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] : (2009) 1 SCC 124 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992].
103. Surendra Mishra v State of Jharkhand, AIR 2011 SC 67 : (2011) 11 SCC 495 [LNIND 2011 SC 27] : (2011) 3 SCC(Cr.) 232.
104. Sudhakaran v State of Kerala, (2010) 10 SCC 582 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : AIR 2011 SC 265 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : 2011 Cr LJ 292 .
105. State of Maharashtra v Govind Mhatarba Shinde, 2010 Cr LJ 3586 (Bom).
106. Available at : <http://lawcommissionofindia.nic.in/1-50/Report42.pdf> (last accessed in July 2019).
107. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 509 : (2007) 4 KLT 63 [LNIND 1985 KER 300].
108. Third question and answer in M'Naughton's case, (1843) 4 St Tr (NS) 847, 10 Cl & F 200; Tola Ram, (1927) 8 Lah 684. Jaganath Das v State, 1991 Cr LJ (NOC) 32 Cal.
109. Harka v State, (1906) 26 AWN 193. Hari Singh Gond v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 109 [LNIND 2008 SC 1728] : AIR 2009 SC 31 [LNIND 2008 SC 1728] : 2009 Cr LJ 346 : (2008) 3 KLT 969 [LNIND 2008 SC 1728] , Mere abnormality of mind, partial delusion, irresistible impulse or compulsive psychopathic behaviour affords no protection under section 84. It is only unsoundness of mind which naturally impairs the cognitive faculties of mind which can justify exemption under section 84. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] , time factor, time of the offence is crucial.
110. Sheralli Wali Mohammed v State of Maharashtra, (1973) 4 SCC 79 : 1972 Cr LJ 1523 .
111. Govindaswami Padayachi, (1952) Mad 479; Ahmadullah, (1961) 3 SCR 583 [LNIND 1961 SC 29] : (1961) 2 Cr LJ 43 : AIR 1961 SC 998 [LNIND 1961 SC 29] ; Dahyabhai, AIR 1964 SC 1563 [LNIND 1964 SC 88] : 1964 (2) Cr LJ 472 ; followed in Narain v State, 1991 Cr LJ 1610 All, the accused murdering the Imam of a masjid, acquitted because of proven insanity. AG Bhagwat v UT Chandigarh, 1989 Cr LJ 214 P&H, no insanity at the time of attack.
112. Ajaya Mahakud v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 1201 (Ori).
113. S Sunil Sandeep v State of Karnataka, 1993 Cr LJ 2554 (Kant).
114. State of Punjab v Mohinder Singh, (1983) 2 SCC 274 : 1983 SCC (Cr) 402 : 1983 Cr LR (SC) 187 . In a similar acquittal, the HP High Court ordered that the accused be confined to mental hospital so that he would pose no danger to public. Krishan Dutt v State of HP, 1992 Cr LJ 1065 HP.
115. SW Mohammed, 1972 Cr LJ 1523 : AIR 1972 SC 2443 .
116. Oyami Ayatu, 1974 Cr LJ 305 : AIR 1974 SC 216 [LNIND 1973 SC 242] . See also Gunadhar Mondal, 1979 Cr LJ NOC 178 (Cal), Kesheorao 1979 Cr LJ 403 (Bom). Basanti v State, 1989 Cr LJ 415 (Ori), woman jumped into well with her children, rescued, voluntarily explaining her conduct, no insanity. Parapuzha Thamban v State of Kerala, 1989 Cr LJ 1372 (Ker); Munilal Gupta v State, 1988 Cr LJ 627 (Del); Meh Ram v State, 1994 Cr LJ 1897 (Raj).
117. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 509 : (2007) 4 KLT 63 [LNIND 1985 KER 300].
118. Kader Hasyer Shah, (1896) 23 Cal 604 , 607; Kalicharan, (1947) Nag 226.
119. Gedka Goala, (1937) 16 Pat 333.
120. Stephen : History of the Criminal Law, vol II, p 166.

121. Raghu Pradhan v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 1159 (Ori).
122. Brushabha Digal v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 3149 (Ori).
123. Ashok Dattatraya v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 3450 (Bom).
124. Amruta v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1416 (Bom).
125. Tola Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 8 (Raj). For a case of pretended insanity, see Nathu Babu Mhaskar v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2121 (Bom).
126. Paras Ram v State of Punjab, (1981) 2 SCC 508 : 1981 SCC (Cr) 516. Gulab Manik Surwase v State of Maharashtra, 2001 Cr LJ 4302 (Bom) the conduct of assaulting his wife in broad day light within the sight of his relatives and leaving behind the blood stained axe on the spot, the Court said, was a sign of abnormalcy. The accused was given the benefit of doubt. Laxmandas Mangaldas Manikpuri v State of Maharashtra, 1997 Cr LJ 950 (Bom), no trace of insanity in the conduct of the accused either before or after killing his wife. Defence under section 84 not available.
127. Marimuthu v State, 2009 Cr LJ 3633 (Mad).
128. Fourth question and answer in M'Naughton's case (1843) 4 St Tr (NS) 847; Ghatu Pramanik, (1901) 28 Cal 613 .
129. First question and answer in M'Naughton's case, sup. Durga Domar v State of MP, (2002) 10 SCC 193 , the accused killed in ferocious manner 5 children belonging to his close relatives, Courts below sentenced him to death, he could not engage a counsel. In this state of things, the judicial conscience of the Supreme Court compelled it to seek medical opinion regarding the mental condition of the accused.
130. Madesh v State by The Inspector of Police, 2014 Cr LJ 96 (Mad).
131. M'Naughton's case, (1843) 4 St Tr (NS) 847, 10 Cl & F 200.
132. State of Maharashtra v Umesh Krishna Pawar, 1994 Cr LJ 774 (Bom).
133. Kalicharan, (1947) Nag 226.
134. Ganesh Shrawan, (1969) 71 Bom LR 643 .
135. SW Mohammed, 1972 Cr LJ 1523 : AIR 1972 SC 2443 . See also Mitu Khadia, 1983 Cr LJ 1385 (Ori).
136. In the matter of Lakshman, 1973 Cr LJ 110 (Mad).
137. Prakash, 1985 Cr LJ 196 (Bom). Krishan Dutt v State of HP, 1992 Cr LJ 1065 (HP), medical evidence and manner of commission showed insanity, acquittal.
138. Velusamy, 1985 Cr LJ 981 (Mad).
139. Baswant Rao, (1948) Nag 711.
140. Sukru Sa, 1973 Cr LJ 1323 (Ori); Kesheorao, 1979 Cr LJ 403 (Bom); Lala Sk, 1983 Cr LJ 1675 (Cal); Rajan v State, 1984 Cr LJ 874 (Ker); Kusa Majhi, 1985 Cr LJ 1460 (Ori). Sudhir Ch Biswas v State, 1987 Cr LJ 863 Cal.
141. Siddheswari Bora, 1981 Cr LJ 1005 (Gau).
142. State of Assam v Inush Ali, 1982 Cr LJ 1044 (Gau).
143. Sita Ram v State, 2011 Cr LJ 1082 (All); Leena Balkrishna Nair v State of Maharashtra, 2010 Cr LJ 3292 (Bom).
144. Lakshman Dagdu, (1886) 10 Bom 512.
145. Nivrutti, 1985 Cr LJ 449 (Bom).
146. Debeswar Bhuyan v State of Assam, 2012 Cr LJ 274 (Gau). See also Laxman Gagari v State of Orissa, 2012 Cr LJ 44 (Ori).
147. State of Orissa v Kalia Alias Debabrata Maharana, 2008 Cr LJ 3107 (Ori).
148. Kuttappan v State of Kerala, 1986 Cr LJ 271 (Ker).

149. State of Rajasthan v Shera Ram, (2012) 1 SCC 602 [LNIND 2011 SC 1192] : AIR 2012 SC 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 1192] : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 406 relied on Modi, Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, 24th Edn, 2011.
150. Satwant Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 1605 (P & H). R v Sullivan, (1983) 2 All ER 673 , epilepsy is a disease of the mind, but it is not that of madness, though the effect produced on the mind is the same because it is difficult to convict a person who is himself a victim of psychomotor epilepsy.
151. State of MP v Ahamadulla, 1961 (2) Cr LJ 43 : AIR 1961 SC 998 [LNIND 1961 SC 29] .
152. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : JT 2007 (9) SC 110 : 2007 AIR (SCW) 3808 : 2007 (7) SCR 917 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 8 Scale 455 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 3 SCC(Cr) 509; Lok Bahadur Dahal v State of Sikkim, 2012 Cr LJ 4996 (Sik); Marimuthu v State, 2009 Cr LJ 3633 (Mad); Siddhupal Kamala Yadav, AIR 2009 SC 97 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] : (2009) 1 SCC 124 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] ; Ramadhin v State of MP, 1995 Cr LJ 3708 (MP).
153. Riyasat v State of UP, 1993 Cr LJ 2834 (All).
154. Jagdish v State of MP, (2009) 9 SCC 495 [LNINDORD 2009 SC 210] : (2010) 1 SCC(Cr) 21 : AIR 2010 SC (Supp) 373.
155. Niman Sha v MP, 1996 Cr LJ 3395 (MP); Venugopalan Venu v Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 3363 (Ker). Raval Mohanbhatt v State, 1998 Cr LJ 4325 (Guj).
156. State of Jharkhand v Madras Nayak, 2003 Cr LJ NOC 197 : 2003 AIR Jhar HCR 653.
157. Siddhupal Kamala Yadav, AIR 2009 SC 97 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] : (2009) 1 SCC 124 [LNIND 2008 SC 1992] .
158. Shrikant Anandrao Bhosale v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 3399 [LNIND 2002 SC 606] : (2002) 7 SCC 748 [LNIND 2002 SC 606] .
159. Debeswar Bhuyan v State of Assam, 2012 Cr LJ 274 (Gau).
160. Jagannath Das v State, 1991 Cr LJ (NOC) 32 (Cal). SK Nair v State of Punjab, AIR 1997 SC 1537 [LNIND 1996 SC 1829] : 1997 Cr LJ 772 : (1997) 1 SCC 141 [LNIND 1996 SC 1829] , the plea of paranoid, facts established that he understood the implications of the acts at the time of the incident plea not sustainable. Ram Swarup Thakur v State of Bihar, 2000 Cr LJ 426 (Pat), the accused killed his own son of 3 years old for no reason. He was in mental hospital for two years, not a normal man at the time. No evidence from prosecution as to his state of mind. Acquitted. Shrikant Anandrao Bhosale v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 3399 [LNIND 2002 SC 606] : (2002) 7 SCC 748 [LNIND 2002 SC 606] , another case of paranoid schizophrenia, the accused killed his wife in day light, made no attempt to hide or run away, mental unsoundness before or after occurrence was proved. The benefit of section 84 was granted. Also see Sudhakaran v State of Kerala, (2010) 10 SCC 582 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : AIR 2011 SC 265 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : 2011 Cr LJ 292 .
161. Tikaram Krishnalal Pandey v State of Maharashtra, 2013 Cr LJ 2410 (Bom).
162. Dahyabhai Chhaganbhai Thakkar v State of Gujarat, AIR 1964 SC 1563 [LNIND 1964 SC 88] ; Sudhakaran v State of Kerala, (2010) 10 SCC 582 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : AIR 2011 SC 265 [LNIND 2010 SC 1046] : 2011 Cr LJ 292 ; In State of H v Gian Chand, AIR 2001 SC 2075 [LNIND 2001 SC 1124] : (2001) 6 SCC 71 [LNIND 2001 SC 1124] : 2001 Cr LJ 2548 : (2001) 1 SCC(Cr) 980, the Supreme Court set aside the High Court Judgment by holding that the High Court misapplied the Dahyabhai Judgment (Supra).
163. Devidas Loka Rathod v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2018 SC 3093 [LNIND 2018 SC 311] .
164. Gelsing Pida Pawar v State of Maharashtra. 2010 Cr LJ 4097 (Bom); Leena Balkrishna Nair v State of Maharashtra, 2010 Cr LJ 3292 (Bom); Sarat Chandra Sahoo v State of Orissa, 2010 Cr LJ 3084 (Ori)].

165. Shivraj Singh v State of MP, 1975 Cr LJ 1458 , the accused failed to make out his defence. Similar observations occur in State v E Lemon, AIR 1970 Goa 1 : 1970 Cr LJ 36 ; Balogopal Re, 1976 Cr LJ 1978 ; Dulal Nayak v State of WB, 1987 Cr LJ 1561 Cal, striking twice on head with the leg of cot, intention clear. Omkarlal v State of MP, 1987 Cr LJ 1289 MP. TN Lakshmaiah v State of Karnataka, (2002) 1 SCC 219 [LNIND 2001 SC 2360] , the Court has to examine the accused's claim having regard to his entire conduct up to commencement of the proceedings before the trial Court. The accused murdered his wife and son and took the plea that he acted under a spell of insanity. He led no evidence to that effect. Also his conduct was that of a fully conscious man. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] , explanation of the type of burden of proof which lies on the accused; Bihari Lal v State of HP, 2006 Cr LJ 3832 HP, the accused has to prove his mental condition of insanity. He cannot draw any benefit from adverse medical opinion.
166. Ratan Lal v State of MP, AIR 1971 SC 778 [LNIND 1970 SC 487] : 1971 Cr LJ 654 .
167. Tukappa Tamanna Lingardi v State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 2375 (Bom).
168. Kirtanram Mansai Uranv v State of MP, 2011 Cr LJ 4658 (Chh).
169. Bhan Singh v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 1861 (MP).
170. Elkari Shankari v State of AP, 1990 Cr LJ 97 AP. See also Uchhab Sahoo v State of Orissa, 1989 Cr LJ 168 (Ori), evidence created a doubt that the accused might have been under a spell of madness.
171. Narayan Chandra Dey v State, 1988 Cr LJ 387 (Cal). See also Santosh Kumar Sarkar v State, 1988 Cr LJ 1828 Cal.
172. Bapu v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : (2007) 4 KLT 63 [LNIND 1985 KER 300] . There has to be absence of mens rea and not mere absence of motive.
173. Chandrashekar v State, 1998 Cr LJ 2237 (Kant). See also Raval Mohanbhai Laxmanbhai v State, 1998 Cr LJ 4325 .
174. R v Feel (Taramary), (2000) 2 Cr App R (S) 464, [CA (Crim Div)].
175. Mariappan v State of TN, 2013 Cr LJ 2334 (SC) : 2013 (6) Scale 18 .
176. Turam Sundi v State of Jharkhand, 2011 Cr LJ 1872 (Jha); Madhusudan v State of Karnataka, 2011 Cr LJ 215 (Kar); C T Raveenran v State of Kerala, 2011 Cr LJ 14089 (Ker).
177. Nand Lal v State of Rajasthan, 2011 Cr LJ 3686 (Raj); Babasaheb Thombre v State of Maharashtra, 2008 Cr LJ 2935 (Bom)].
178. Dhaneswar Pradhan v State of Assam, 2003 Cr LJ 733 (Gau).
179. PSVLN Sastry v Advocate General HC of AP, (2007) 15 SCC 271 .
180. Apu @ Gajraj Singh v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 8 SCC 66 [LNIND 2007 SC 774] : 2007 (3) RCR (Criminal) 343.
181. Shibu v State of Kerala, 2013 (4) KLJ 300 : 2013 (4) KLT 323 [LNIND 2012 KER 968] (Ker DB).
182. Ibid.
183. Ashok Kumar R v State of Kerala, 2016 Cr LJ 4765 (Ker) : 2016 (4) KHC 232 .
184. Section 328-339.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 85] Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law; provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

COMMENT.—

Under this section a person will be exonerated from liability for doing an act while in a state of intoxication if he at the time of doing it, by reason of intoxication, was

- (1) incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or
- (2) that he was doing what was either wrong or contrary to law;

Provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.^{185.}

Voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for the commission of a crime.^{186.} A person cannot become himself drunk with liquor and commit an offence and then come and say that he had consumed the liquor and, therefore, the benefit of section 85 should be given to him.^{187.} The law pronounces that the obscuration and divestment of that judgment and human feeling which in a sober state would have prevented the accused from offending, shall not, when produced by his voluntary act, screen him from punishment, although he be no longer capable of self-restraint.^{188.} It is also no excuse to say that because of it he failed to resist the impulse to act in a certain way^{189.} or that because of it he acted like an automaton.^{190.}

[s 85.1] Voluntary drunkenness.—when an excuse.—

Nevertheless voluntary drunkenness is a factor which has to be taken into consideration at least in two types of cases, viz.,

(i) where a specific intent is an essential element of an offence charged and the evidence shows that the state of intoxication of the accused is such that he is incapable of forming the specific intent essential to constitute the crime.^{191.} In the Indian context, for example, it would be intent to kill as in clauses 1, 2, and 3 of section 300, IPC, 1860. In such cases, however, even if the accused fails to actually form the specific intent, section 86, IPC, 1860, would impute the necessary guilty knowledge to him and he would, therefore, be liable for culpable homicide not amounting to murder though not of murder.^{192.} Thus, voluntary intoxication amounting to prove incapacity to form the required specific intent would be a limited excuse to reduce an offence of murder (section 302) to one of culpable homicide not amounting murder (section 304, IPC, 1860). This is, however, a question of fact in each case.

In a case of wife-burning, her dying declaration disclosed that her husband consumed liquor, scolded her and then set her afire after pouring kerosene on her. She fought the fire and tried to run away but the accused again caught hold of her and again poured oil and inflamed her. It was held that these circumstances showed that the mental faculties of the accused were not impaired to such an extent that he was prevented from forming the requisite intention to cause death. He was convicted under section 302 and not section 304, Part II.^{193.}

(ii) where habitual drunkenness has resulted in such a diseased condition of the mind that the accused is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. In such a case M'Naughten Rules (section 84, IPC,

1860) would come into play and he would be absolved from liability.¹⁹⁴ The most common example of such an alcoholic disease is "Delirium Tremens" which is produced by prolonged and habitual excessive drinking and results in loss of the faculty of reasoning or serious defect of reasoning. In other words, "insanity, whether produced by drunkenness or otherwise, is a defence to the crime charged."¹⁹⁵

Under this section if a man is made drunk through stratagem or the fraud of others, or through ignorance, or through any other means causing intoxication without the man's knowledge or against his will, he is excused.¹⁹⁶

[s 85.2] CASE.—

The accused ravished a girl of 13 years of age and, in furtherance of the act of rape, placed his hand upon her mouth and his thumb upon her throat, thereby causing death by suffocation. The sole defence was a plea of drunkenness. It was held that drunkenness was no defence unless it could be established that the accused at the time of committing rape was so drunk that he was incapable of forming the intent to commit it (which was not alleged), inasmuch as the death resulted from a succession of acts, the rape and the act of violence causing suffocation, which could not be regarded independently of each other; and that the accused was guilty of murder.¹⁹⁷

Drink is an aggravating feature in the award of sentence. In reference to one of the accused persons there was no evidence to establish that the effect of intoxication was such as to cause him to lack the specific intent for murder, particularly in view of the fact that, on his own admission, he was following instructions given by the other accused and he was able to give the police a lucid account of his actions. The degree of intoxication fell far below that which would preclude the formation of specific intent required for murder.¹⁹⁸

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
 2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
 3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
 4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
 5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
185. Bablu v State of Rajasthan, (2006) 13 SCC 116 [LNIND 2006 SC 1134] : AIR 2007 SC 697 [LNIND 2006 SC 1134] : 2007 Cr LJ 1160 , the Court stated three propositions as to the scope of the section:

- (i) the insanity whether produced by drunkenness or otherwise is a defence to the crime charged;
- (ii) evidence of drunkenness which renders the accused incapable of forming the specific intent essential to constitute the crime should be taken into account with the other facts proved in order to determine whether or not he had this intent; and

- (iii) the evidence of drunkenness falling short of a proved incapacity in the accused to form the intent necessary to constitute the crime and merely establishing that his mind is affected by drink so that he more readily gave to some violent passion, does not rebut the presumption that a man intends the natural consequences of his acts.

186. Chet Ram v State, 1971 Cr LJ 1246 ; (HP) Bodhee Khan, (1866) 5 WR (Cr) 79; Boodh Dass, (1866) PR No. 41 of 1866.

187. Venkappa Kannappa Chowdari v State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 15 (Kar).

188. Mobeni Minji, 1982 Cr LJ NOC 39 (Gau).

189. Director of Public Prosecutions v Beard, \(1920\) AC 479 ; AG for Northern Ireland v Gallagher \(1963\) AC 349 .

190. Brathy v AG for Northern Ireland, \(1963\) AC 386 .

191. Director of Public Prosecutions v Beard, \(1920\) AC 479 ; Ramsingh, (1938) Nag 305; Samman Singh, (1941) 24 Lah 39; DPP v Majewski \(1976\) 2 All ER 142 ; Shankar Jaiswara v State of WB, [\(2007\) 9 SCC 360 \[LNIND 2007 SC 651\]](#) : (2007) 3 SCC Cr 553, the appellant abused the victim in a filthy language, and when told to leave, stabbed him seven times to his death with a sharp weapon, so many wounds shows no loss of self control, witnesses did not testify to the degree of intoxication, in such circumstances it could not be said that there was no intention on the part of the appellant or that he was out of his senses on account of intoxication.

192. Mathai Mathew, 1952 Cr LJ 1304 (TC); Basdev v State of PEPSU, 1956 Cr LJ 919 (2) : [AIR 1956 SC 488 \[LNIND 1956 SC 34\]](#) ; see also R. Deb, Principles of Criminology, Criminal Law and Investigation, 2nd Edn, vol II, pp 604-605.

193. Mavari Surya Satyanaraina v State of AP, \(1995\) 1 Cr LJ 689 .

194. Davis (1881) 14 Cox cc 563; AG for Northern Ireland v Gallagher; DPP v Board, Supra.

195. Basdev, 1956 Cr LJ 919 (at p 922-SC).

196. 1 Hale PC 32.

197. Director of Public Prosecutions v Beard, \(1920\) AC 479 .

198. Sooklal v Trinidad and Tobago, \(1999\) 1 WLR 2011 , [Lord Hope of Craighead, PC].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 86] Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated.

In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, a person who does the act in a state of intoxication shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

COMMENT.—

Offence requiring particular intent or knowledge.—By reading the above section, it is clear that in the first part of the section the words 'intention or knowledge' are mentioned, but in the latter part of the section the word 'knowledge' is only mentioned and the word 'intention' is omitted. In case of voluntary drunkenness, knowledge is to be presumed in the same manner as if there was no drunkenness. If really the Parliament wanted the word 'intention' also to be presumed even in the case of an act done in a drunken state of mind, the said word could have been mentioned in the Second part also, but the same is omitted. Therefore, whether the accused was having intention or not while committing an act cannot be presumed as in case of knowledge.¹⁹⁹ As certain guilty knowledge or intention forms part of the definition of many offences, this section is provided to meet those cases. It says that a person voluntarily intoxicated will be deemed to have the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated. There may be cases in which a particular knowledge is an ingredient, and there may be other cases in which a particular intent is an ingredient, the two not being necessarily always identical. The section does not say that the accused shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same intention as might have been presumed if he had not been intoxicated. Therefore, although there is a presumption so far as knowledge is concerned, there is no such presumption with regard to intention.²⁰⁰ Thus, this section attributes to a drunken man the knowledge of a sober man when judging of his action but does not give him the same intention. This knowledge is the result of a legal fiction and constructive intention cannot invariably be raised.²⁰¹ Drunkenness makes no difference to the knowledge with which a man is credited and if a man knew what the natural consequences of his acts were, he must be presumed to have intended to cause them.²⁰² But this presumption may be rebutted by his showing that at the time he did the act, his mind was so affected by the drink he had taken that he was incapable of forming the intention requisite for making his act the offence charged against him.²⁰³

So far as knowledge is concerned the Court must attribute to the intoxicated man the same knowledge as if he was quite sober but so far as intent or intention is concerned, the Court must gather it from the attending general circumstances of the case paying due regard to the degree of intoxication. If the man was beside his mind altogether for the time being, it would not be possible to fix him with the requisite intention. In other words, where a man goes so deep into drinking that he becomes really incapable of forming the requisite specific intent or knowledge for the offence, then in such a case too section 86 of the Code would impute the requisite knowledge to the accused though not the requisite intention. Thus, where the accused in a state of extreme intoxication caused a fatal injury in the abdomen of his friend but by virtue of his highly intoxicated state of mind was incapable of knowing then as to what he was doing far less forming the requisite intent to kill as envisaged in section 300, IPC, 1860, he could not be convicted under section 302 as he did not have the requisite intent to kill but he could still be convicted under section 304 Part II, IPC, 1860, by virtue of imputed knowledge under section 86, IPC, 1860.²⁰⁴ In this connection see also the discussion under sub-head "voluntary drunkenness: when an excuse" under section 85, ante. But if he had not gone so deep in drinking and from the facts it could be found that he knew what he was about the Court will apply the rule that a man is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act or acts.²⁰⁵

[s 86.1] CASES.—

Accused husband beating his wife and throwing burning lamp on her under influence of liquor. Since he himself consumed the liquor he is not entitled to claim benefit under section 86 of IPC, 1860.²⁰⁶. Act of the accused of walking a distance to the house of a witness and concealing the weapon and his wearing apparels showed that he was conscious and capable of understanding of his act. No evidence as regards the degree of intoxication or any evidence of any attending general circumstances to arrive at a conclusion that accused was beside his mind altogether temporarily at time incident.²⁰⁷. On the basis of evidence in this case, it cannot be said that the accused was so much intoxicated at the time of the incident that he was beside his mind altogether for the time being. He did set his wife on fire, but as soon as her sari started burning he realised the folly of his act and started extinguishing the fire. It shows that he was not so much intoxicated that he was besides his mind altogether. Therefore, the rule that a man is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act can be applied to him also. Conviction under section 302 IPC, 1860 altered to one under section 304\(1\) IPC, 1860.²⁰⁸.

[s 86.2] Sections 85 and 86.—

The reading of sections 85 and 86 together makes it clear that section 86 is an exception to section 85. These provisions show that if the intoxication is induced voluntarily, the act done is an offence even if the person is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that what he is doing is either wrong or contrary to law. This section obviously covers all offences. That is why; it appears that it became necessary to enact section 86 to take care of offences requiring a particular intent or knowledge on the part of the intoxicated offender. The section takes care of such offences and states that if intoxication is involuntary, neither knowledge nor intention in committing the offence will be presumed. If however, it is voluntary only knowledge of the offence on the part of the offender will be presumed but not intention in committing it. What section 86 means and no more as compared to section 85. The degree of intoxication demanded by both sections, however, remains the same. In fact, it is instructive to note that section 84 which exempts persons of unsoundness of mind also expects the degree of unsoundness to the same extent, viz., incapability of knowing the nature of the act or of the knowledge that what is being done either wrong or contrary to law. Hence, the conclusion is inescapable that to avail of the exception under section 86, the degree of intoxication of the offender must be such that he is incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law. Intoxication short of this degree will not entitle the offender to the benefit of the exception.²⁰⁹.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
199. Mavari Surya Satyanaraina v State of AP, 1995 Cr LJ 689 (AP).
200. Dil Mohammad, (1941) 21 Pat 250; Basdev v State of PEPSU, 1956 Cr LJ 919 (2) : AIR 1956 SC 488 [LNIND 1956 SC 34] .
201. Pal Singh, (1917) PR No. 28 of 1917.
202. Judagi Malah, (1929) 8 Pat 911.
203. Samman Singh, (1941) 24 Lah 39.
204. Enrique F Rio v State, 1975 Cr LJ 1337 (Goa).
205. Basdev v State of Pepsu, (1956) SCR 363 [LNIND 1956 SC 34] : AIR 1956 SC 488 [LNIND 1956 SC 34] .
206. Gautam Bhila Ahire v State of Maharashtra,. 2010 Cr LJ 4073 (Bom); Pidika Janu v State of Orissa, 1989 Cr LJ (NOC) 104 ,
207. Shankar Jaiswara v State of WB, (2007) 9 SCC 360 [LNIND 2007 SC 651] : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 553.
208. Babu Sadashiv Jadhav v State of Maharashtra, 1984 Cr LJ 739 (Bom).
209. State of Maharashtra v Ashok Yashwant, 1987 Cr LJ 1416 (Bom).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 87] Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, done by consent.

Nothing which is not intended to cause death, or grievous hurt, and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person, above eighteen years of age, who has given consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

ILLUSTRATION

A and Z agrees to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z, A commits no offence.

COMMENT.—

Consent.—This section protects a person who causes injury to another person above 18 years of age who has given his consent by doing an act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt. It appears to proceed upon the maxim volenti non fit injuria. He who consents suffers no injury. This rule is founded upon two very simple propositions: (1) that every person is the best judge of his own interest and (2) that no man will consent to what he thinks hurtful to himself. Every man is free to inflict any suffering or damage he chooses on his own person and property; and if, instead of doing this himself, he consents to its being done by another, the doer commits no offence. A man may give away his property, and so another who takes it by his permission does not commit theft. He may inflict self-torture or he may consent to suffer torture at the hands of another.

The section does not permit a man to give his consent to anything intended, or known to be likely to cause his own death or grievous hurt.

[s 87.1] Sado-masochistic desires.—

In the absence of a good reason, the victim's consent is no defence and the satisfaction of sado-masochistic desires does not constitute such a good reason. A group of sado-masochistics participated in consensual acts of violence against each other for sexual gratification. They were charged with various offences. They were convicted for causing harm to one member. It is not in public interest that a person should wound or cause actual bodily harm to another for no good reason and without such a reason the victim's consent afforded no defence.^{210.}

[s 87.2] Injection of heroin on request resulting in death.—

The accused appealed against a sentence of five years' imprisonment for manslaughter. The deceased, visited him, at his flat. He had previously drunk a significant quantity of alcohol. He took some heroin and demanded more. At his request the accused injected him with more heroin, resulting in his death. The accused contended that weight should have been given to his admission of responsibility and his guilty plea, the fact that the deceased had insisted upon more heroin, that there was no commercial motive involved in the supply and that he had co-operated in naming the supplier of the heroin.

It was held that it was necessary to take into consideration accused's co-operation in naming the supplier of the heroin and other mitigating factors. The sentence for manslaughter was reduced to three years' imprisonment and the sentence for supplying a Class A drug, from three years' imprisonment to two years.^{211.}

Sections 87 and 88 of the IPC, 1860 do not come into play in the cases where interest of the Society is involved.²¹².

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
210. R v Laskey, (1993) 2 WLR 556 (HL).
211. R v Powell (Jason Wayne), (2002) EWCA Crim 661 : (2002) 2 Cr App R (S) 117, [CA (Crim Div)].
212. Deepa v SI of Police, 1985 Cr LJ 1120 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 88] Act not intended to cause death, done by consent in good faith for person's benefit.

Nothing which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, and who has given a consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm, or to take the risk of that harm.

ILLUSTRATION

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death and intending in good faith, Z's benefit performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

COMMENT.—

The preceding section allows any harm to be inflicted short of death or grievous hurt. This section sanctions the infliction of any harm if it is for the benefit of the person to whom it is caused. No consent can justify an intentional causing of death. But a person for whose benefit a thing is done may consent that another shall do that thing, even if death may probably ensue. If a person gives his free and intelligent consent to take the risk of an operation which, in a large proportion of cases, has proved fatal, the surgeon who operates cannot be punished even if death ensues.²¹³ Again; if a person attacked by a wild beast should call out to his friends to fire, though with imminent hazard to himself, and they were to obey the call, we do not conceive that it would be expedient to punish them, though they might by firing cause his death, and though when they fired they knew themselves to be likely to cause his death.²¹⁴

This section differs from the last section in two particulars—(1) under it any harm except death may be inflicted; (2) the age of the person consenting is not mentioned (but see section 90 under which the age of the consenting party must at least be 12 years).

Persons not qualified as medical practitioners cannot claim the benefit of this section as they can hardly be deemed to act in 'good faith' as that expression is defined in section 52.²¹⁵

[s 88.1] Criminal liability on doctor or surgeon.—

Prosecution has to come out with a case of high degree of negligence on part of doctor. Thus, when a patient agrees to go for medical treatment or surgical operation, every careless act of the medical man cannot be termed as 'criminal.' It can be termed 'criminal' only when the medical man exhibits a gross lack of competence or inaction and wanton indifference to his patient's safety and which is found to have arisen from gross ignorance or gross negligence. Where a patient's death results merely from error of judgment or an accident, no criminal liability should be attached to it. Mere inadvertence or some degree of want of adequate care and caution might create civil liability but would not suffice to hold him criminally liable.²¹⁶ Even if the surgery was done without the consent of the patient or his/her guardian, if it is for the benefit of the patient he is not liable. Section 98 deals with harm caused with the consent of the person injured or someone competent under law to give such consent on his behalf excludes causing of such harm from the category of offence. Here the complainant has given her consent. Section 88 IPC, 1860 provides that harm done for the benefit of the person injured and with his consent will not make the person causing harm liable for criminal offence.²¹⁷

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammam Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
213. RP Dhanda (Dr.) v Bhurelal, 1987 Cr LJ 1316 MP, eye-operation for cataract by qualified doctor with patient's consent resulting in loss of sight.
214. The Works of Lord Macaulay-On the Chapter of General Exceptions Note B.
215. Juggankhan, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 296 (MP).
216. Suresh Gupta v Govt. of NCT of Delhi, AIR 2004 SC 4091 [LNIND 2004 SC 744] : (2004) 6 SCC 422 [LNIND 2004 SC 744] ; Jacob Mathew v State of Punjab, AIR 2005 SC 3180 [LNIND 2005 SC 587] : 2005 (6) SCC 1 [LNIND 2005 SC 587] .
217. Dr. Gopinatha Pillai T M v State of Kerala, 2000 Cr LJ 3682 (Ker); Katcherla Venkata Sunil v Vanguri Seshumamba, 2008 Cr LJ 853 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 89] Act done in good faith for benefit of child or insane person, by or by consent of guardian.

Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind, by or by consent, either express or implied, of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause or be known by the doer to be likely to cause to that person:

Provided—

Provisos.

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or to the attempting to cause death;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity; Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of grievous hurt, or to the attempting to cause grievous hurt, unless it be for the purpose of preventing death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

ILLUSTRATION

A, in good faith, for his child's benefit without his child's consent, has his child cut for the stone by a surgeon. Knowing it to be likely that the operation will cause the child's death, but not intending to cause the child's death. A is within the exception, inasmuch as his object was the cure of the child.

COMMENT.—

This section empowers the guardian of an infant under 12 years or an insane person to consent to the infliction of harm to the infant or the insane person, provided it is done in good faith and is done for his benefit. Persons above 12 years are considered to be capable of giving consent under section 88. The consent of the guardian of a sufferer, who is an infant or who is of unsound mind, shall have the same effect which the consent of the sufferer himself would have, if the sufferer were of ripe age and sound mind.

[s 89.1] Corporal punishment to children.—

Corporal punishment to child, in present days, is not recognized by law. It is an archaic notion that to maintain discipline, child can be punished physically by the teaching staff because of implied consent by the parents or guardian. Now it is recognized social principle that even parents of the child are made to understand the basic human rights of the child and instead of corporal punishment, correctional methods are recognized in law.²¹⁸ But the applicability of sections 88 and 89, IPC, 1860 and administering of corporal punishments on students by the teachers for their benefit, came up for consideration in M Natesan v State of Madras.²¹⁹ It was a case where a boy of 15 years was sent with the progress report to get the signature of his parents in it. But he returned it with a thumb impression of another person, stating that the said thumb impression was that of his mother, which was proved to be wrong. The teacher got agitated and he beat the boy on his right palm with a stick. He did not cry. He, therefore, beat him again, asking him why he did not cry. This resulted in causing three injuries, two superficial and one contusion. The Madras High Court held that:

It cannot be denied that having regard to the peculiar position of a school teacher he must in the nature of things have authority to enforce discipline and correct a pupil put in his charge. To deny that authority would amount to a denial of all that is desirable and necessary for the welfare, discipline and education of the pupil concerned. It can therefore be assumed that when a parent entrusted a child to a teacher, he on his behalf impliedly consents for the teacher to exercise over the pupil such authority. Of course, the person of the pupil is certainly protected by the penal provisions of the Indian Penal Code. But the same code has recognised exceptions in the form of ss. 88 and 89. Where a teacher exceeds the authority and inflicts such harm to the pupil as may be considered to be unreasonable and immoderate, he would naturally lose the benefit of the exceptions. Whether he is entitled to the benefit of the exceptions or not in a given case will depend upon the particular nature, extent and severity of the punishment inflicted.

²²⁰. In K A Abdul Vahid v State of Kerala,²²¹ the Kerala High Court considered the question when a school teacher, beats a student with a cane, who created commotion in the school or showed disobedience to the Rules, whether he could be proceeded against under the provisions of the IPC, 1860 and found that the teacher has acted within the exception conferred on him, under section 88 of IPC, 1860.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, [AIR 2004 SC 1966 \[LNIND 2004 SC 1370\]](#) : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, 1 of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
218. Hasmukhbhai Gokaldas Shah v State of Gujarat, 2009 Cr LJ 2919 (Guj).
219. M Natesan v State of Madras, [AIR 1962 Madras 216 \[LNIND 1961 MAD 136\]](#) : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 727 .
220. Also see Ganesh Chandra Saha v. Jiw Raj Somani, AIR 1965 Calcutta 32 : (1965 (1) Cr LJ 24) .
221. K A Abdul Vahid v State of Kerala, 2004 Cr LJ 2054 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 90] Consent known to be given under fear or misconception.

A consent is not such a consent as is intended by any section of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury, or under a misconception of fact,¹ and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception; or Consent of insane person.

if the consent is given by a person who, from unsoundness of mind, or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent; or Consent of child.

unless the contrary appears from the context, if the consent is given by a person who is under twelve years of age.

COMMENT.—

This section does not define 'consent' but describes what not consent is.

This section says that consent is not a true consent if it is given—

- | | |
|--|---|
| (1) by a person under fear of injury; | and the person obtaining the consent knows or has reason to believe this. |
| (2) by a person under a misconception of fact; | |
| (3) by a person of unsound mind; | and who is unable to understand the nature |
| (4) by a person who is intoxicated; | and consequence of that to which he gives his consent. |
| (5) by a person under 12 years of age | |

Consent is an act of reason, accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing as in balance, the good and evil on each side.²²² Consent means an active will in the mind of a person to permit the doing of the act complained of, and knowledge of what is to be done, or of the nature of the act that is being done, is essential to consent to an act.²²³ An act of helplessness on the face of inevitable compulsions is not consent in law.²²⁴ It requires voluntary participation by victim not only after exercise of intelligence based on knowledge of significance and moral quality of act, but after having fully exercised the choice between resistance and assent.²²⁵ A mere act of helpless resignation in the face of inevitable compulsion, non-resistance and passive giving in cannot be deemed to be consent.²²⁶ The Supreme Court in a long line of cases has given wider meaning to the word 'consent' in the context of sexual offences as explained in various judicial dictionaries. In Jowitt's Dictionary of English Law (Second Edn), vol (1) 1977 at p 422 the word 'consent' has been explained as an act of reason accompanied with deliberation, the mind weighing, as in a balance, the good or evil on either side. It is further stated that consent supposes three things—a physical power, a mental power, and a free and serious use of them and if consent be obtained by intimidation, force, meditated imposition, circumvention, surprise, or undue influence, it is to be treated as a delusion, and not as a deliberate and free act of the mind.²²⁷ Section 90 cannot be considered as an exhaustive definition of consent for the purposes of IPC, 1860. The normal connotation and concept of consent is not intended to be excluded.²²⁸ For determining whether consent given by the prosecutrix was voluntary or under a misconception of fact, no straitjacket formula can be laid down.²²⁹

The factors set out in the first part are from the point of view of the victim. The second part enacts the corresponding provision from the point of view of the accused. It envisages that the accused too has the knowledge or reason to believe that the consent was given by the victim in consequence of fear of injury or misconception of fact. The requirements of both the parts have to be cumulatively satisfied.²³⁰ Submission of the body under the fear of terror cannot be construed as a consented sexual act. Consent for the purpose of section 375 requires voluntary participation not only after the exercise of intelligence based on the knowledge of the significance and moral quality of the act but after having fully exercised the choice between resistance and assent. Whether there was consent or not, is to be ascertained only on a careful study of all relevant circumstances.²³¹ Consent can be obtained under various methods and always necessarily need not be a one which is given voluntarily. For example, if a victim is intoxicated without her knowledge or consent and if the rape is committed while the victim was intoxicated or drunken, it cannot be said that she had voluntarily given the consent. Therefore, such passive consent cannot be treated as a consent as contemplated by section 90 of IPC, 1860.²³² Obtaining consent by exercising deceit cannot be legitimate defence to exculpate an accused.²³³

[s 90.1] Submission to Rape.—

An act of submission does not involve consent- Consent cannot be equated to inability to resist or helplessness.²³⁴ Every consent involves a submission, but every submission is not consent and the mere fact that a woman had submitted to the promise of the accused does not necessarily indicate that her consent existed unless the evidence on record establishes that the sexual act, which the prosecutrix had allowed, was accompanied with deliberation after the mind had weighed, as in a balance, the good and the evil on each side with the existing capacity and power to withdraw the assent according to one's will or pleasure.²³⁵ Where, the accused had sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix by giving false assurance to her that he would marry her and when she became pregnant, he refused to do so, it was evident that he never intended to marry her and procured her consent only for the reason of having sexual relations with her, therefore, the act of the accused fell squarely under the definition of rape as her consent was obtained under a misconception of fact.²³⁶

1. 'Misconception of fact'.—The expression "under a misconception of fact" is broad enough to include all cases where the consent is obtained by misrepresentation; the misrepresentation should be regarded as leading to a misconception of the facts with reference to which the consent is given. In section 3 of the Evidence Act Illustration (d) states that a person has a certain intention is treated as a fact. So, here the fact about which the second and third prosecution witnesses were made to entertain a misconception was the fact that the second accused intended to get the girl married... "thus... if the consent of the person from whose possession the girl is taken is obtained by fraud, the taking is deemed to be against the will of such a person..." Although in cases of contracts a consent obtained by coercion or fraud is only voidable by the party affected by it, the effect of section 90 IPC, 1860 is that such consent cannot, under the criminal law, be availed of to justify what would otherwise be an offence.²³⁷ Consent may be express or implied, coerced or misguided, obtained willingly or through deceit. Consent is an act of reason, accompanied by deliberation, the mind weighing, as in a balance, the good and evil on each side. There is a clear distinction between rape and consensual sex and in a case like this, the Court must very carefully examine whether the accused had actually wanted to marry the victim, or had mala fide motives, and had made a false promise to this effect only to satisfy his lust, as the latter falls within the ambit of cheating or deception. There is a distinction between the mere breach of a promise, and not fulfilling a false promise. Thus, the Court must examine whether there was made, at an early stage a false promise of marriage by the accused; and whether the consent involved was given after wholly, understanding the nature and consequences of sexual indulgence. There may be a case where the prosecutrix agrees to have sexual intercourse on account of her love and passion for the accused, and not solely on account of misrepresentation made to her by the accused, or where an accused on account of circumstances which he could not have foreseen, or which were beyond his control, was unable to marry her, despite having every intention to do so. Such cases must be treated differently. An accused can be convicted for rape only if the Court reaches a conclusion that the intention of the accused was mala fide, and that he had clandestine motives.²³⁸ In order to come within the meaning of misconception of fact, the fact must have an immediate relevance. If a fully grown-up girl consents to the act of sexual intercourse on a promise of marriage and continues to indulge in such activity until she becomes pregnant, it is an act of promiscuity on her part and not an act induced by misconception of fact and it was held that section 90 IPC, 1860 cannot be invoked unless the Court can be assured that from the inception the accused never intended to marry her. Therefore, it depends on case to case that what is the evidence led in the matter. If it is a fully grown-up girl who gave the consent then it is a different case but a girl whose age is very tender and she is giving a consent after persuasion of three months on the promise that the accused will marry her which he never intended to fulfil right from the beginning which is apparent from the conduct of the accused, in our opinion, section 90 can be invoked.²³⁹ A promise to marry without anything more will not give rise to "misconception of fact" within the meaning of section 90, it needs to be clarified that a representation deliberately made by the accused with a view to elicit the assent of the victim without having the intention or inclination to marry her, will vitiate the consent. If on the facts it is established that at the very inception of the making of promise, the accused did not really entertain the intention of marrying her and the promise to marry held out by him was a mere hoax, the consent ostensibly given by the victim will be of no avail to the accused to exculpate him from the ambit of section 375 clause second.²⁴⁰

[s 90.2] CASES.—

The prosecutrix had sexual intercourse with the accused on the representation made by the accused that he would marry her. This was a false promise held out by the accused. Had this promise not been given perhaps, she would not have permitted the accused to have sexual intercourse. It appears that the intention of the accused was, right from the beginning, not honest and he kept on promising that he will marry her, till she became pregnant. This kind of consent obtained by the accused cannot be said to be any consent because she was under a misconception of fact that the accused intends to marry her, therefore, she had submitted to sexual intercourse with him.²⁴¹ In Uday v State of Karnataka,²⁴² the Court considered the following facts: (i) where a girl was of 19 years of age and had sufficient intelligence to understand the significance and moral quality of the act she was consenting to; (ii) she was conscious of the fact that her marriage was difficult on account of caste considerations; (iii) it was difficult to impute to the appellant, knowledge that the prosecutrix had consented in consequence of a misconception of the fact arising from his promise; and (iv) there was no evidence to prove conclusively that the appellant never intended to marry the prosecutrix. On the basis of the above factors, Court held that it did not feel persuaded to hold that consent was obtained by misconception of facts on the part of the victim.

In a case, the prosecutrix had left her home voluntarily, of her own free will to get married to the accused. She was 19 years of age at the relevant time and was, hence, capable of understanding the complications and issues surrounding her marriage to the appellant. According to the version of events provided by her, the prosecutrix had called the accused on a number given to her by him, to ask him why he had not met her at the place that had been pre-decided by them. She also waited for him for a long time, and when he finally arrived she went with him to the Karna Lake where they indulged in sexual intercourse. She did not raise any objection at this stage and made no complaints to anyone. Thereafter, she also went to Kurukshetra with the accused, where she lived with his relatives. Here to, the prosecutrix voluntarily became intimate with the accused. She then, for some reason, went to live in the hostel at Kurukshetra University illegally, and once again came into contact with the accused at the Birla Mandir. Thereafter, she even proceeded with the accused to the old bus-stand in Kurukshetra, to leave for Ambala so that the two of them could get married. However, they were apprehended by the police. If the prosecutrix was in fact going to Ambala to marry the accused, as stands fully established from the evidence on record, the Supreme Court held it fails to understand on what basis the allegation of "false promise of marriage" has been raised by the prosecutrix.^{243.}

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
222. Story, section 222.
223. Lock, (1872) LR 2 CCR 10, 11.
224. Satpal Singh v State of Haryana, 2010 AIR (SCW) 4951 : (2010) 8 SCC 714 [LNIND 2010 SC 666] : 2010 Cr LJ 4283 .
225. Md. Jakir Ali v The State of Assam, 2007 Cr LJ 1615 (Gau).
226. Re, (AIR 1960 Madras 308), Gopi Shanker v State of Rajasthan, (AIR 1967 Rajasthan 159), Bhimrao v State of Maharashtra, (1975 Mah. LJ 660) and Vijayan Pillai v State of Kerala, (1989 (2) KLJ 234) quoted from R v Day, (173 ER 1026) in 1841 approved in Pradeep Kumar v State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3059 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : (2007) 7 SCC 413 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : 2007 Cr LJ 4333 : (2007) 3 SCC(Cr) 407.
227. State of UP v Chhoteylal, AIR 2011 SC 697 [LNIND 2011 SC 73] : (2011) 2 SCC 550 [LNIND 2011 SC 73] in this case, SC elaborately discussed the meaning of consent and quoted from various Indian and foreign authorities.
228. Pradeep Kumar v State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3059 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : (2007) 7 SCC 413 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : 2007 Cr LJ 4333 : (2007) 3 SCC(Cr) 407.
229. Uday v State of Karnataka AIR 2003 SC 1639 [LNIND 2003 SC 228] : (2003) 4 SCC 46 [LNIND 2003 SC 228] : 2003 SCC (Cr) 775.
230. Deelip Singh v State of Bihar, (2005) 1 SCC 88 [LNIND 2004 SC 1123] : AIR 2005 SC 203 [LNIND 2004 SC 1123] .
231. State of HP v Mango Ram, (2000 (7) SCC 224 [LNIND 2000 SC 1144] : 2000 Cr LJ 4027 (SC).
232. KCPeter v State of Kerala, 2011 Cr LJ 3488 (Ker).
233. Karthy @ Karthick v State, 2013 Cr LJ 3765 (SC).
234. Laddoo Singh Alias Harjit Singh v State of Punjab, 2008 Cr LJ 2885 (PH).

235. Bipul Medhi v State of Assam, 2008 Cr LJ 1099 (Gau).
236. State of UP v Naushad, 2014 Cr LJ 540 .
237. Pradeep Kumar v State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3059 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : (2007) 7 SCC 413 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : 2007 Cr LJ 4333 : (2007) 3 SCC(Cr) 407 relied on N Jaladu, Re (ILR (1913) 36 Madras 453 .
238. Deepak Gulati v State of Haryana, AIR 2013 SC 2071 [LNIND 2013 SC 533] : 2013 (7) Scale 383 [LNIND 2013 SC 533] .
239. Jayanti Rani Panda v State of WB, 1984 Cr LJ 1535 (Cal).
240. Pradeep Kumar v State of Bihar, AIR 2007 SC 3059 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : (2007) 7 SCC 413 [LNIND 2007 SC 965] : 2007 Cr LJ 4333 : (2007) 3 SCC(Cr) 407 relied on N Jaladu, Re (ILR (1913) 36 Madras 453).
241. Yedla Srinivasa Rao v State of AP, (2006) 11 SCC 615 [LNIND 2006 SC 785] : (2007) 1 SCC(Cr) 557; Bipul Medhi v State of Assam, 2008 Cr LJ 1099 (Gau); Abhoy Pradhan v State of WB, 1999 Cr LJ 3534 (Cal).
242. Uday v State of Karnataka, AIR 2003 SC 1639 [LNIND 2003 SC 228] : (2003) 4 SCC 46 [LNIND 2003 SC 228] : 2003 SCC (Cr) 775.
243. Deepak Gulati v State of Haryana, AIR 2013 SC 2071 [LNIND 2013 SC 533] : 2013 (7) Scale 383 [LNIND 2013 SC 533] . See also Swapan Chatterjee v State of WB, 2009 Cr LJ 16 (Cal); Karthi @ Karthick v State, 2013 Cr LJ 3765 (SC); Ravi v State, 2010 Cr LJ 3493 (Mad); Vinod Mangilal v State of MP, 2009 Cr LJ 1204 (MP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 91] Exclusion of acts which are offences independently of harm caused.

The exceptions in sections 87, 88 and 89 do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause, or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

ILLUSTRATION

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of any harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore, it is not an offence "by reason of such harm"; and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

COMMENT.—

The section serves as a corollary to sections 87, 88 and 89. It says in explicit terms that consent will only condone the act causing harm to the person giving the consent which will otherwise be an offence. Acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause will not be covered by consent given under sections 87, 88 and 89, e.g., causing miscarriage, public nuisance, offences against public safety, morals, etc. It may be stated here that the illustration given under this section has become somewhat inappropriate as pregnancy can now be terminated under section 3 of Medical Termination of Pregnancy Act, 1971, on a number of grounds and not only on the ground of saving the life of the woman.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 92] Act done in good faith for benefit of a person without consent.

Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, even without that person's consent, if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit: Provided—

Provisos.

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or the attempting to cause death;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity;

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A, a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A, not intending Z's death, but in good faith, for Z's benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.
- (b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith intending Z's benefit. A's ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.
- (c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is no time to apply to the child's guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.
- (d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People below hold out a blanket. A drops the child from the house-top, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of sections 88, 89 and 92.

COMMENT.—

Acts done in good faith.—This section is designed to meet those cases which do not come either under section 88 or under section 89. The principal object of sections 88, 89 and 92 is protection of medical practitioners. Illustrations (a) and (b) exemplify cases in which it is impossible to give consent; illustrations (c) and (d), where legal capacity to consent is wanting.

The author of the Code observes:

There yet remains a kindred class of cases which are by no means of rare occurrence. For example, a person falls down in an apoplectic fit. Bleeding alone can save him, and he is unable to signify his consent to be bled. The surgeon who bleeds him commits an act falling under the definition of an offence. The surgeon is not the patient's guardian, and has no authority from any such guardian, yet it is evident that the surgeon ought not to be punished. Again, a house is on fire. A person snatches up a child too young to understand the danger, and flings it from the house-top, with a faint hope that it may be caught on a blanket below, but with the knowledge that it is highly probable that it will be dashed to pieces. Here, though the child may be killed by the fall though the person who threw it down knew that it would very probably be killed, and though he was not the child's parent or guardian, he ought not to be punished.

In these examples there is what may be called a temporary guardianship justified by the exigency of the case and by the humanity of the motive. This temporary guardianship bears a considerable analogy to that temporary magistracy with which the law invests every person who is present when a great crime is committed, or when the public peace is concerned. To acts done in the exercise of this temporary guardianship, we extend by clause 72 a protection very similar to that which we have given to the acts of regular guardians.²⁴⁴

This section speaks of 'hurt', whereas section 89 speaks of 'grievous hurt', otherwise the terminology of both the sections is almost identical.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
 2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
 3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
 4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
 5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
244. The Works of Lord Macaulay- 'On the Chapter of General Exceptions', Note B.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:—

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 93] Communication made in good faith.

No communication made in good faith is an offence by reason of any harm¹ to the person to whom it is made, if it is made for the benefit of that person.

ILLUSTRATION

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

COMMENT.—

This section protects the innocent without unduly cloaking the guilty.

The communication under this section must be

- (1) made in good faith; and
- (2) for the benefit of the person to whom it is made.

The illustration to this section does not say, however, whether the communication was made to the patient for his benefit.

1. 'Harm'.—In this section 'harm' means an injurious mental reaction.²⁴⁵

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.

3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).

4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

245. Veeda Menezes v Yusuf Khan, 1966 Cr LJ 1489 : AIR 1966 SC 1773 [LNIND 1966 SC 107] : 68 Bom LR 629.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 94] Act to which a person is compelled by threats.

Except murder, and offences against the State punishable with death, nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats, which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death to that person will otherwise be the consequence : Provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, knowing their character, is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do anything that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced, by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law; for example, a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it, is entitled to the benefit of this exception.

COMMENT.—

By this section a person is excused from the consequences of any act, except (1) murder and (2) offences against the State punishable with death, done under fear of instant death; but fear of hurt or even of grievous hurt is not a sufficient justification. Mere menace of future death will not be sufficient.

Murder committed under a threat of instant death is not excused under this section. But 'murder' does not include abetment of murder and such abetment will be excused.²⁴⁶ Abetment of murder and of the offence of causing disappearance of the evidence of murder was excused under this section when it was done under fear of instant death at the hands of the murderers.²⁴⁷

[s 94.1] Doctrine of compulsion and necessity.—

No one can plead the excuse of necessity or compulsion as a defence of an act otherwise penal, except as provided in this section. No man from a fear of consequences to himself has a right to make himself a party to committing mischief on mankind.²⁴⁸

Except where unsoundness of mind is proved or real fear of instant death is proved, the burden of proof being on the prisoner, pressure of temptation is not an excuse for breaking the law.²⁴⁹ Under the English law the defence of duress is available not only in case of fear of instant death but also in case of serious bodily harm.²⁵⁰ Furthermore, such a threat need not be always against the person of the accused.²⁵¹

This defence was not allowed to a person who voluntarily joined a criminal organisation or gang with knowledge that the gang used loaded firearms to carry out robberies on sub-post offices and also that the leader of the gang might bring pressure upon him to participate in such offences. He had accordingly to participate in a robbery under pressure in which the leader shot dead the sub-post master. His appeal against conviction for man slaughter was rejected.²⁵²

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammam Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
246. Umadasi Dasi, (1924) 52 Cal 112 : Karu, (1937) Nag 524. But see R v Howe, (1987) 1 All ER 770 HL, where it was noted that the defence of duress is not available to a person charged with murder whether as a principal in the first degree (the actual killer) or as principal in the second degree (the aider and abettor).
247. Bachchan Lal, 1957 Cr LJ 344 .
248. Maganlal and Motilal, (1889) 14 Bom 115.
249. Devji Govindji, (1895) 20 Bom 215, 222, 223.
250. Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland v Lynch, (1975) 1 All ER 913 -Per House of Lords.
251. Hurley (1967) VR 526.
252. R v Sharp, (1987) 3 All ER 103 CA. Following Lynch v DPP for Northern Ireland, (1975) 1 All ER 913 : (1975) AC 653 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

[s 95] Act causing slight harm.

Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.

COMMENT.—

slight harm or trifles.—The maxim de minimis non curat lex (the law takes no account of trifles) is the foundation of this section. The authors of the Code observe:

Clause 73 [this section] is intended to provide for those cases which, though, from the imperfections of language, fall within the letter of the penal law, are yet not within its spirit, and are all over the world considered by the public, and for the most part dealt with by the tribunals, as innocent. As our definitions are framed, it is theft to dip a pen in another man's ink, mischief to crumble one of his wafers, an assault to cover him with a cloud of dust by riding past him, hurt to incommode him by pressing against him in getting into a carriage. There are innumerable acts without performing which men cannot live together in society, acts which all men constantly do and suffer in turn, and which it is desirable that they should do and suffer in turn, yet which differ only in degree from crimes. That these acts ought not to be treated as crimes is evident, and we think it far better expressly to except them from the penal clauses of the Code than to leave it to the judges to except them in practice.^{253.}

The expression 'harm' has been used in this section in a wide sense including physical injury and hence, this section applies in cases of actual physical injury also. This section applies not only to acts which are accidental but also to deliberate acts which cause harm or are intended to cause harm or known to be likely to cause harm.^{254.} In a campaign by Sarvodaya workers to educate people about the evil of alcohol, liquor shops were picketed to prevent people from going there even if it was at the cost of slight harm; their prosecution under section 341 for causing wrongful restraint was quashed.^{255.} Where the accused locked the complainant inside the factory by pulling down the shutter, it was held that ingredients of the offence under section 342 (wrongful confinement) were established but as the complainant regained his freedom within a very short time and only a minimal harm was caused, the case was clearly covered by section 95.^{256.}

[s 95.1] CASES.—Acts regarded as trivial.—

This section was applied where a person was convicted for taking pods, almost valueless, from a tree standing on Government waste land;^{257.} where the accused committed theft of a cheque of no value^{258.} and where the plaintiff complained of the harm caused to his reputation by the imputation that he was travelling with a wrong ticket.^{259.} So also an offence of misbranding^{260.} and the conduct of a lawyer in using filthy language in course of cross-examination^{261.} were treated as trivial.

Where the record of the trial Court showed that the injury caused was very simple, being in the nature of a scratch, the Court said that the act was so trivial that no person of a sound common sense would regard it as an offence. The prayer of the complainant for conviction of the accused for causing simple hurt under section 323 was liable to be rejected.^{262.}

[s 95.2] Acts not regarded as trivial.—

The top most official of the State Police, indecently behaved with a senior lady IAS Officer, in the presence of gentry and in spite of her raising objections continued with such behaviour. The Supreme Court observed that if it is held, on the face of such allegations that, the ignominy and trauma to which, she was subjected to was so slight that the lady IAS Officer, as a person of ordinary sense and temper, would not complain about the same, sagacity will be the first casualty. In that view of the matter section 95, IPC, 1860 cannot have any manner of application to an offence relating to modesty of woman as under no circumstances can it be trivial.^{263.} Where the Accused caused the deceased to fall down and co-accused threw down a heavy stone on head of deceased, act attributed to accused formed part of a joint yet a murderous assault on deceased. Hence, it is not covered by exception in section 95.²⁶⁴ Where a blow was given across the chest with an umbrella by a dismissed policeman to a District Superintendent of Police because his application to reconsider his case was rejected;²⁶⁵ where the accused tore up a paper which showed a money debt due from him to the prosecutor though it was unstamped, and therefore, not a legal security;²⁶⁶ and where a respectable man was taken by the ear,²⁶⁷ it was held that this section did not apply. An offence under Prevention of Food Adulteration Act, 1954 cannot be regarded as trivial.²⁶⁸

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
253. The Works of Lord Macaulay- 'On the Chapter of General Exceptions', Note B, pp. 109, 110.
254. Veeda Menezes v Yusuf Khan, 1966 Cr LJ 1489 : AIR 1966 SC 1773 [LNIND 1966 SC 107] : 68 Bom LR 629.
255. Narayanan v State of Kerala, 1987 Cr LJ 741 Ker; following Attappa Re, AIR 1951 Mad 759 [LNIND 1950 MAD 178] : 1951 (2) Cr LJ 716 , where it was observed that even if obstruction is caused, if the harm caused is slight, section 95 would apply.
256. Anoop Krishan Sharma v State of Maharashtra, 1992 Cr LJ 1861 (Bom).
257. Kasyabin Ravji, (1868) 5 BHC (Cr C) 35.
258. Ethirajan, 1955 Cr LJ 816 .
259. South Indian Railway Co v Ramakrishna, (1889) 13 Mad 34.
260. Public Prosecutor v K Satyanarayana, 1975 Cr LJ 1127 (AP).
261. Bheema, 1964 (2) Cr LJ 692 (AP).
262. State of Karnataka v M Babu, 2002 Cr LJ 2604 (Kant), the Court discussed the doctrine of triviality.
263. Rupan Deol Bajaj v Kanwar Pal Singh Gill, AIR 1996 SC 309 [LNIND 1995 SC 981] : (1995) 6 SCC 194 [LNIND 1995 SC 981] : JT 1995 \(7\) SC 299 [LNIND 1995 SC 981] : (1995) 5 Scale 670 : 1996 Cr LJ 381 .
264. Athai v State of MP 2010 Cr LJ 995 (MP).
265. Sheo Gholam Lalla, (1875) 24 WR (Cr) 67.
266. Ramasami v State, (1888) 12 Mad 148.
267. Shoshi Bhusan Mukerjee v Walmsley, (1897) 1 CWN.
268. Dist Food Inspector v Kedarnath, 1981 Cr LJ 904 (Gau).; State of Kerala v Vasudevan Nair (Ker) (FB) 1975 FAJ 36 : (1975 Cr LJ 97) ; M/s. Razak Rice And Oil Mills v Bharat Narayan Patnaik, Food Inspector, Berhampur Municipality 1989 Cr LJ 648 (Ori).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 96] Things done in private defence.

Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

COMMENT.—

In a civilised society the defence of person and property of every member thereof is the responsibility of the State. Consequently, there is a duty cast on every person faced with apprehension of imminent danger of his person or property to seek the aid of the machinery provided by the State but if immediately such aid is not available, he has the right of private defence. Right to private defence is a very valuable right and it has been recognized in all civilized and democratic societies within certain reasonable limits. Sections 96–106 of IPC, 1860 codify the entire law relating to right of private defence of person and property including the extent of and the limitation to exercise of such right. When enacting sections 96 to 106 of the IPC, 1860, excepting from its penal provisions, certain classes of acts, done in good faith for the purpose of repelling unlawful aggressions, the Legislature clearly intended to arouse and encourage the manly spirit of self-defence amongst the citizens, when faced with grave danger.²⁶⁹

[s 96.1] Principle.—

The basic principle underlying the doctrine of the right of private defence is that when an individual or his property is faced with a danger and immediate aid from the State machinery is not readily available, that individual is entitled to protect himself and his property.²⁷⁰ The right of private defence is available only to one who is suddenly confronted with the necessity of averting an impending danger not of self-creation. That being so, the necessary corollary is that the violence which the citizen defending himself or his property is entitled to use must not be unduly disproportionate to the injury which is sought to be averted or which is reasonably apprehended and should not exceed its legitimate purpose. The law does not require a law abiding citizen to behave like a coward when confronted with an imminent unlawful aggression. There is nothing more degrading to the human spirit than to run away in face of danger. The right of private defence is thus, designed to serve a social purpose and deserves to be fostered within the prescribed limits. The IPC, 1860 defines homicide in self-defence as a form of substantive right, and therefore, save and except the restrictions imposed on the right of the Code itself, it seems that the special rule of English Law as to the duty of retreating will have no application to this country where there is a real need for defending oneself against deadly assaults. The right to protect one's own person and property against the unlawful aggressions of others is a right inherent in man. The duty of protecting the person and property of others is a duty which man owes to society of which he is a member and the preservation of which is both his interest and duty. It is, indeed, a duty which flows from human sympathy.

As Bentham said:

It is a noble movement of the heart, that indignation which kindles at the sight of the feeble injured by the strong. It is noble movement which makes us forget our danger at the first cry of distress..... It concerns the public safety that every honest man should consider himself as the natural protector of every other.

But such protection must not be extended beyond the necessities of the case; otherwise it will encourage a spirit of lawlessness and disorder. The right has, therefore, been restricted to offences against the human body and those relating to aggression on property. Right of private defence of person and property is recognized in all free, civilised, democratic societies within certain reasonable limits. Those limits are dictated by two considerations: (1) that the same right is claimed by all other members of the society and (2) that it is the State which generally undertakes the responsibility for the maintenance of law and order. The citizens, as a general rule, are neither expected to run away for safety when faced with grave and imminent danger to their person or property as a result of unlawful aggression, nor are they expected, by use of force, to right the wrong done to them or to punish the wrong doer of commission of offences.^{271.}

[s 96.2] Scope.—

Section 96 IPC, 1860 provides that nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence. The section does not define the expression "right of private defence". It merely indicates that nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of such right.^{272.} While providing for exercise of the right, care has been taken in IPC, 1860 not to provide and has not devised a mechanism whereby an attack may be a pretence for killing. A right to defend does not include a right to launch an offensive, particularly when the need to defend no longer survived.^{273.} Just because one circumstance exists amongst the various factors, which appears to favour the person claiming right of self-defence, does not mean that he gets the right to cause the death of the other person. Even the right of self-defence has to be exercised directly in proportion to the extent of aggression.^{274.}

[s 96.3] Test.—

Whether in a particular set of circumstances, a person legitimately acted in the exercise of the right of private defence is a question of fact to be determined on the facts and circumstances of each case. No test in the abstract for determining such a question can be laid down. In determining this question of fact, the Court must consider all the surrounding circumstances. It is not necessary for the accused to plead in so many words that he acted in self-defence. If the circumstances show that the right of private defence was legitimately exercised, it is open to the Court to consider such a plea.^{275.} The means and the force a threatened person adopts at the spur of the moment to ward off the danger and to save himself or his property cannot be weighed in golden scales. It is neither possible nor prudent to lay down abstract parameters which can be applied to determine as to whether the means and force adopted by the threatened person was proper or not. Answer to such a question depends upon host of factors like the prevailing circumstances at the spot; his feelings at the relevant time; the confusion and the excitement depending on the nature of assault on him etc. Nonetheless, the exercise of the right of private defence can never be vindictive or malicious. It would be repugnant to the very concept of private defence.^{276.} A person who is apprehending death or bodily injury cannot weigh in golden scales in the spur of moment and in the heat of circumstances, the number of injuries required to disarm the assailants who were armed with weapons. In moments of excitement and disturbed mental equilibrium it is often difficult to expect the parties to preserve composure and use exactly only so much force in retaliation commensurate with the danger apprehended to him where assault is imminent by use of force, it would be lawful to repel the force in self-defence and the right of private defence commences, as soon as the threat becomes so imminent. Such situations have to be pragmatically viewed and not with high powered spectacles or microscopes to detect slight or even marginal overstepping. Due weightage has to be given to, and hyper technical approach has to be avoided in considering what happens on the spur of the moment on the spot and keeping in view normal human reaction and conduct, where self-preservation is the paramount consideration. But, if the fact situation shows that in the guise of self-preservation, what really has been done is to assault the original aggressor, even after the cause of reasonable apprehension has disappeared, the plea of right of private defence can legitimately be negated. The Court dealing with the plea has to weigh the material to conclude whether the plea is acceptable. It is essentially, as noted above, a finding of fact.²⁷⁷ Situations have to be judged from the subjective point of view of the accused concerned in the surrounding excitement and confusion of the moment, confronted with a situation of peril and not by any microscopic and pedantic scrutiny. In adjudging the question as to whether more force than was necessary was used in the prevailing circumstances on the spot it would be inappropriate, as held by this Court, to adopt tests by detached objectivity which would be so natural in a Court room, or that which would seem absolutely necessary to a perfectly cool bystander. The person facing a reasonable apprehension of threat to himself cannot be expected to modulate his defence step-by-step with any arithmetical exactitude of only that much which is required in the thinking of a man in ordinary times or under normal circumstances.²⁷⁸

Mere use of abusive language does not give rise to private defence. Thus, where the deceased about a month before the murder had tried to outrage the modesty of the wife of the accused and thereafter on the day of the incident cut a rustic joke enquiring whether the accused had not kept buffaloes for drinking milk which led the accused to beat the deceased mercilessly resulting in his death, it was held that giving the most charitable interpretation one could not find a single circumstance which will give the accused the benefit of the right of private defence and the interval between the attempt to outrage the modesty of the accused's wife and the murder being too long he was also not entitled to get the benefit of grave and sudden provocation within the meaning of exception 1 to section 300, IPC, 1860.²⁷⁹ Giving a general view of all the provisions on this right in Munney Khan v State,²⁸⁰ the Supreme Court observed:

The right of private defence is codified in sections 96 to 106, IPC, which have all to be read together in order to have a proper grasp of the scope and limitations of this right. By enacting the sections the authors of the Code wanted to except from the operation of its penal clauses acts done in good faith for the purpose of repelling unlawful aggression.²⁸¹

Summary of Principles regarding Private defence

- (i) Self-preservation is the basic human instinct and is duly recognized by the criminal jurisprudence of all civilized countries. All free, democratic and civilized countries recognize the right of private defence within certain reasonable limits.
- (ii) The right of private defence is available only to one who is suddenly confronted with the necessity of averting an impending danger and not of self-creation.
- (iii) A mere reasonable apprehension is enough to put the right of self-defence into operation. In other words, it is not necessary that there should be an actual commission of the offence in order to give rise to the right of private defence. It is enough if the accused apprehended that such an offence is contemplated and it is likely to be committed if the right of private defence is not exercised.
- (iv) The right of private defence commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension arises and it is co-terminus with the duration of such apprehension.
- (v) It is unrealistic to expect a person under assault to modulate his defence step by step with any arithmetical exactitude.
- (vi) In private defence the force used by the accused ought not to be wholly disproportionate or much greater than necessary for protection of the person or property.
- (vii) It is well settled that even if the accused does not plead self-defence, it is open to consider such a plea if the same arises from the material on record.
- (viii) The accused need not prove the existence of the right of private defence beyond reasonable doubt.

- (ix) The IPC, 1860 confers the right of private defence only when that unlawful or wrongful act is an offence.
- (x) A person who is in imminent and reasonable danger of losing his life or limb may in exercise of self-defence inflict any harm even extending to death on his assailant either when the assault is attempted or directly threatened.

[Darshan Singh v State of Punjab.^{282.}]

All the sections would have to be read together to ascertain whether in the facts and circumstances of the case the accused were entitled to the defence or they exceeded it. Only then one can get a comprehensive view of the scope and limitations of the right.^{283.}

1. Availability or Non-availability of private defence.—Factors to be kept in view.— In order to find whether right of private defence is available or not, the entire incident must be examined with care and viewed in its proper setting. The injuries received by the accused, the imminence of threat to his safety, the injuries caused by the accused and the circumstances whether the accused had time to have recourse to public authorities are all relevant factors to be considered on a plea of private defence.^{284.} The right of private defence is a defence right. It is neither a right of aggression nor a right of reprisal. There is no right of private defence where there is no apprehension of danger. Right of private defence is available only to one who is suddenly confronted with the necessity of averting an impending danger not of self-creation. The necessity must be a present necessity whether real or only apparent.^{285.} It remains a question of fact whether the right has been legitimately exercised.^{286.} Thus, running to house, fetching a sword and assaulting the deceased are by no means a matter of chance. These acts bear stamp of a design to kill and take the case out of the purview of private defence.^{287.} But where the accused was dispossessed of his land by a party of men and he ran to his residence from where he fetched his gun and came back within 15 minutes to fire at and injure them, he was held to be within his rights, but when he went further still and chased and injured a person who was just standing by there and who died, in reference to him the accused had no right of private defence.^{288.} Along with the above factors one has also to remember the following limitations on the right of private defence of person or property:

- (i) that if there is sufficient time for recourse to public authorities, the right are not available;
- (ii) that more harm than that is necessary should not be caused;
- (iii) that there must be a reasonable apprehension of death or grievous hurt or hurt to the person or damage to the property concerned.^{289.} Where on account of some incident, the accused was confronted by three persons; it was held that the superiority in numbers in itself could in all probability have been construed by the accused as an imminent danger to himself thus, giving him the signal to act in exercise of the right of private defence.^{290.}

The need to act must not have been created by the conduct of the accused in the immediate context of the incident which was likely or intended to give rise to that need.^{291.} The Supreme Court reiterated the various principles governing the law of private defence and observed that it was essentially a defensive right and did not include the right to launch an offensive attack, particularly when the need for defence no longer existed.^{292.} A right of private defence given by the Penal Code is essentially one of defence or self-protection and not a right of reprisal or punishment. It is subject to the restrictions indicated in section 99 which are as important as the right itself.^{293.}

[s 96.4] CASES.—Plea of Private Defence rejected.—

After inflicting injuries on person of first deceased, accused persons ran towards second deceased, who was standing ten steps away from place of incident. Further after seeing incident relating to death of first deceased, second deceased started running towards Durga-ki-Dhani and was chased by accused persons and they inflicted lathi blows on his person. Accused had no right to invoke right of self-defence by chasing second deceased and to cause fatal injuries upon him.^{294.} Where the accused were in fact the aggressors and being members of the aggressors party none of the accused can claim right of self-defence.^{295.} Merely because there was a quarrel and some of the accused person sustained injuries, that does not confer a right of private defence extending to the extent of causing death. It has to be established that the accused person were under such grave apprehension about the safety of their life and property that retaliation to the extent done was absolutely necessary. Right of private defence has been rightly discarded.^{296.}

The defence claimed that the place of occurrence was the house of the accused and, therefore, they had acted in self-defence but that was not proved through any leading evidence despite the examination of the accused under section 313 of the Cr PC, 1973, it was held that the right of self-defence was not available to them.^{297.}

[s 96.5] Social nature of defence.—

The right of private defence is not restricted to the particular person who is under attack. It extends to the society as a whole. It is available to any member of the society who rises to the occasion. But it is wholly a social obligation without any legal overtones.^{298.}

[s 96.6] Material that accused may rely on.—

An accused entitled to rely for constructing his private defence on the material on record brought by the prosecution.^{299.} Without formally taking a plea of self-defence, the accused has a right to probalilise such defence on the basis of the prosecution evidence and if he succeeds in his effort, the Court can give him such a benefit.^{300.}

2. Duty to retreat, if any.—It is now well settled that the rule of retreat which Common Law Courts espoused is not relevant under the IPC, 1860. If a man's property is in imminent danger of being impaired or attacked he has the right to resort to such measures as would be reasonably necessary to thwart the attempt to protect his property.^{301.} Under the common law the doctrine of necessity permitted one to defend one's person or property or the person or property of others against an unjustified attack by the use of reasonable force. In determining what was reasonable force, which in the Indian context means minimum force under section 99, IPC, 1860, the common law Courts always insisted if the accused could prevent the commission of crime against him by retreating. On this rule of retreat one would like to ask: if a person is attacked by an armed burglar in his own room, he is expected to run away leaving the burglar to act as he liked.^{302.} In Jaidev's case^{303.} Gajendragadkar, J, as he then was, specifically held that in India there is no rule which expects a man first to run away or at least try to do so before he can exercise his right of private defence. Rather he has every right to stand his own ground and defend himself if there is no time to have recourse to official help. Law does not expect a citizen to be a rank coward or leave his own house at the mercy of the burglar.³⁰⁴ In spite of this clear exposition of the law in Jaidev's case Sarkaria, J, held in Yogendra Morarji's case³⁰⁵. that one must first try to avoid the attack by retreating otherwise one would not be entitled to get the benefit of private defence. It appears that Jaidev's case was not canvassed before the learned judges who decided the latter case. It is submitted with utmost respect that the former view as held in Jaidev's case, appears to be more reasonable and has to be preferred.

3. No Private defence in a free fight.—Where both sides can be convicted for their individual acts, normally no right of private defence is available to either party and they will be guilty of their respective acts.³⁰⁶ Where two parties come armed with determination to measure their strength and to settle a dispute by force and in the ensuing fight both sides receive injuries, no question of right of private defence arises. In such a case of free fight both parties are aggressors and none of them can claim right of private defence.³⁰⁷ In a free fight between two groups resulting in the death of one and injuries to several others both grievous and simple, all the accused participated in the fight. The plea of one of the accused that he joined the fight later and acted in defence of other co-accused was held to be not tenable. The Court observed that his case could not be separated by giving him right of private defence under the benefit of doubt.³⁰⁸ In a sudden fight between two groups in heat of passion death of a man was caused and several others on both the sides were injured. The deceased opened the assault first. It was held that in such fights the question that which party opened attack first is immaterial. Plea of right of self-defence was not allowed to the accused.³⁰⁹ Where two groups forming an unlawful assembly over the possession of land in dispute which was in peaceful possession of neither group, indulged in free fight resulting in the death of two persons of a group, it was held that right of private defence was not available to either group.³¹⁰

The right to voluntary causing of death or any other harm is available against the assailant and not against any other person.³¹¹

4. Injury to accused.—If makes out private defence.—Number of injuries on the accused by itself may not be sufficient to establish the right of private defence.³¹² The number of injuries is not always considered to be a safe criterion for determining who the aggressor was. It can also not be laid down as an unqualified proposition of law that whenever injuries are on the body of the accused person, the presumption must necessarily be raised that the accused person had caused injuries in exercise of the right of private defence. The defence has to further establish that the injury so caused on the accused probalilise the version of the right of private defence.³¹³ Non-explanation of injuries on the person of the accused is a factor of great importance and this fact may induce the Court in judging the veracity of prosecution witnesses with considerable care.³¹⁴ The right of private defence cannot justifiably be raised by showing that one of the accused had suffered some minor injuries and the prosecution had not explained the same.³¹⁵ In a given case it may strengthen the plea of private defence set up by the accused or may create genuine doubt regarding the prosecution case. At the same time it cannot be laid down as an invariable proposition of law that as soon as it is found that the accused had received injuries in the same transaction in which the complainant party was assaulted, the plea of private defence would stand prima facie established and burden would shift on to the prosecution to prove that those injuries were caused to the accused in self-defence by the complainant party.³¹⁶ When the accused turned back from the house of the deceased whom they had visited, the deceased followed them along with his brother and mother and tried to attack them from behind. The accused turned back and shot at him causing death. It was held that the conduct of the accused was justifiable. His acquittal was not interfered with.³¹⁷ Where the deceased along with his father was putting up a fence which was protested by the accused resulting in an altercation, and the accused suddenly dealt a lathi blow on the head of the deceased which proved fatal, it was held that since the accused received injuries as a result of assault by the deceased and his father, the accused had justifiably exercised his right of private defence.³¹⁸ In a case of murder some of the serious injuries found on the person of the accused were not explained and some of the prosecution witnesses also were injured, it was held that it could be said that the accused party had acted in exercise of right of private defence and confirmation of the acquittal of all the accused but one by the High Court was not proper.³¹⁹ Where serious injuries inflicted on the person of the accused could not be explained by the prosecution, the accused could be said to be entitled to the right of private defence. Their conviction under section 300 was held to be not proper.³²⁰

In State of UP v Mukunde,³²¹ the Supreme Court observed that merely on the ground that the prosecution witnesses have not explained the injuries on the accused, their evidence ought not to be rejected if the Court finds it probable that the accused might have acted in exercise of the right of private defence. The Supreme Court also observed in a subsequent case³²² that:

it cannot be held as a matter of law or invariably a rule that whenever an accused sustained an injury in the same occurrence the prosecution is obliged to explain the injury and on the failure of the prosecution to do so, the prosecution case should be disbelieved. Before non-explanation of injuries on the person of the accused by the prosecution witnesses may affect the prosecution case, the court has to be satisfied of the existence of two conditions: (1) that the injuries on the person of the accused were of a serious nature and (ii) such injuries must have been received at the time of the occurrence in question. Non-explanation of injuries assumes greater significance when the evidence consists of interested or partisan witnesses or where the defence gives a version which completes in probability with that of the prosecution.³²³

These rulings were followed in *Kashi Ram v State of MP*³²⁴. The accused persons were alleged to have assaulted the prosecution party, but the prosecution witnesses failed to explain serious injuries including injuries on the vital parts of the body sustained by one of the accused in the same incident. The Court said that this could not be a ground for discarding the prosecution story and for acquittal of all accused persons.

Where the accused had some trivial injuries on non-vital parts but the victim had suffered as many as 19 injuries including some on vital parts which resulted in his death, it could not be believed that the accused had acted in self-defence especially when he was arrested five or six days after the incident but in the intervening time did not care to get himself medically examined. A plea of private defence cannot be based on surmises and speculation.³²⁵

The Supreme Court has also observed that merely because there was a quarrel and the accused persons also sustained injuries, it did not confer a right of private defence to the extent of causing death. Though such right cannot be weighed in golden scales, it has at least to be shown that the accused persons were under such grave apprehension about the safety of their life and property and that the retaliation to the extent actually done was absolutely necessary.³²⁶

The number of injuries is not always a safe criterion for determining as to who was the aggressor. It cannot be stated as a universal rule that whenever injuries are on the body of the accused person, a presumption must necessarily be raised that the accused persons had caused injuries in the exercise of the right of private defence. The defence has further to show that injuries on the accused probalilise the version of the right of private defence.³²⁷ In moments of excitement and disturbed mental equilibrium, parties cannot be expected to preserve composure and use exactly only so much in retaliation as is commensurate with the apprehended danger. Due weightage has to be given to what happened at the spur of the moment at the spot. Things have to be judged pragmatically keeping in view, the normal human reactions and behaviour, self-preservation being the paramount consideration. Microscopic and pedantic scrutiny has to be avoided.^{328.}

[s 96.7] Retaliation.—

The Supreme Court observed:

From a plain reading of the sections (Ss. 96–106) it is manifest that such a right can be exercised only to repel unlawful aggression and not to retaliate. To put it differently, the right is one of defence and not of requital or reprisal. Such being the nature of the right, the High Court could not have exonerated the accused persons of the charges levelled against them by bestowing on them the right to retaliate and attack the complainant party.^{329.}

[s 96.8] Where private defence not pleaded.—

If circumstances show that the right of private defence was legitimately exercised, it is open to the Court to consider such a plea, even if accused had not taken it. A right of private defence need not specifically be taken and in the event the Court on the basis of the materials placed on record is in a position to come to such a conclusion, the Court may act thereupon.^{330.} Where the right of private defence was not pleaded by the accused, but it appeared that the complainant was the aggressor, the Bombay High Court held that the benefit of such defence could still be given to the accused.^{331.} Fact that accused pleaded alibi-itself will not preclude the Court from giving him also the right of private defence if on proper appraisal of evidence and other material on records, Court finds it to be available to him.^{332.} The right of private defence cannot be denied merely because the accused adopted a different line of defence particularly when the evidence adduced by the prosecution would indicate that they were put under a situation where they could reasonably have apprehended grievous hurt even to one of them.^{333.} The Supreme Court endorsed this principle by saying that it is not necessary that the plea of private defence must always be taken by the accused person. Even if the accused does not do so, the Court can consider it if the circumstances show that the right of private defence was legitimately exercised.^{334.}

The accused has not to plead self-defence by examining some witnesses or by making any statement. But there has to be some material available on record to indicate that the accused had attacked the deceased in exercise of the right of self-defence.^{335.}

[s 96.9] In appeal.—

It is permissible for accused to raise that plea at the stage of appeal as the settled legal position is that even if the accused does not plead self-defence, it is open to consider such a plea if the same arises from the material on record.^{336.}

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
269. Darshan Singh v. State of Punjab, (2010) 2 SCC 333 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : (2010) 1 SCR 642 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : AIR 2010 SC 1212 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : 2010 Cr LJ 1393 : (2010) 2 SCC(Cr) 1037.
270. Dharam v State of Haryana. JT 2007 (1) SC 299 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] : AIR 2007 SC 397 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] : 2006 AIR SCW 6298.
271. Darshan Singh v State of Punjab, (2010) 2 SCC 333 : (2010) 1 SCR 642 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : AIR 2010 SC 1212 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : 2010 Cr LJ 1393 : (2010) 2 SCC(Cr) 1037.
272. V Subramani v State of TN, (2005) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] : AIR 2005 SC 1983 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] .
273. Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 1460 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] : (2005) 10 SCC 404 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] .
274. Mano Dutt v State of UP, JT 2012 (2) SC 573 : 2012 (3) Scale 219 [LNIND 2012 SC 160] : (2012) 4 SCC 79 [LNIND 2012 SC 160] .
275. V Subramani v State of TN, (2005) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] : AIR 2005 SC 1983 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] .
276. Dharam v State of Haryana. JT 2007 (1) SC 299 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] : AIR 2007 SC 397 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] : 2006 AIR SCW 6298.
277. Buta Singh v The State of Punjab, 1991 (2) SCC 612 [LNIND 1991 SC 177] : 1991 SCC (Cr) 494 : AIR 1991 SC 1316 [LNIND 1991 SC 177] : 1991 Cr LJ 1464 ; Satya Narain Yadav v Gajanand, (2008) 16 SCC 609 [LNIND 2008 SC 2782] : (2008) 10 Scale 728 [LNIND 2008 SC 2782] .
278. Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 1460 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] : (2005) 10 SCC 404 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] .
279. Dattu Genu, 1974 Cr LJ 446 : AIR 1974 SC 387 [LNIND 1973 SC 357] .
280. Munney Khan v State, AIR 1971 SC 1491 [LNIND 1970 SC 338] : (1970) 2 SCC 480 [LNIND 1970 SC 338] . On the same point, Narasimha Raju v State, 1971 Cr LJ 1066 : (1970) 3 SCC 481 : AIR 1971 SC 1232 ; Mohammad Hameed v State, AIR 1980 SC 108 : 1980 Cr LJ 192 : (1979) 4 SCC 708 . An illustrative situation is Jagdish Chandra v State of Rajasthan, 1987 Cr LJ 649 Raj, in consequence of enimical terms and intemperate nature, one fired at the other, the other returning the fire resulting in death. In the prosecution of the other, this defence was allowed.
281. Plea of self-defence was rejected where the evidence showed that the deceased was unarmed and was not the aggressor. Kuduvakuzinyil Sudhakaran v State, (1995) 1 Cr LJ 721 (Ker). Defence that a stab wound causing death was inflicted on the chest of the deceased with a pen-knife was found to be apparently false because such instrument would not have caused that kind of wound, plea of self defence rejected, Sellamuthu v State of TN, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 2143 (Mad). Hakim Singh v State of MP, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2463 (MP), the deceased was unarmed when fired at, he caused injury only after receiving the gun-shot wound, right of private defence in shooting at him not available. Hukam Chand v State of Haryana, AIR 2002 SC 3671 [LNIND 2002 SC 652] , theory of self-defence, not supported by facts. Jham Singh v State of MP, 2003 Cr LJ 2847 , no injury found on the person of the accused, nor any report made. The plea of private defence was rejected.
282. Darshan Singh v State of Punjab, (2010) 2 SCC 333 : (2010) 1 SCR 642 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : AIR 2010 SC 1212 [LNIND 2010 SC 70] : 2010 Cr LJ 1393 : (2010) 2 SCC(Cr) 1037.

283. Kashi Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2008) 3 SCC 55 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 608 : AIR 2008 SC 1172 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] . Narain Singh v State of Haryana, (2008) 11 SCC 540 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : AIR 2008 SC 2006 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : 2008 Cr LJ 2613 , principles imbibed in sections 96-106 restated. Manubhai Atabhai v State of Gujarat, (2007) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2007 SC 822] : AIR 2007 SC 2437 [LNIND 2007 SC 822] , once the right of private defence is established, conviction is not permissible.
284. Sikandar Singh v State of Bihar, (2010) 7 SCC 477 [LNIND 2010 SC 603] : (2010) 8 SCR 373 : AIR 2010 SC 44023 : 2010 Cr LJ 3854 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 417.
285. Bhanwar Singh v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : AIR 2009 SC 768 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : (2008) 67 AIC 133 . Dharam v State of Haryana, (2007) 15 SCC 241 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] , nature and scope of the right explained. Haren Das v State of Assam, 2012 Cr LJ 1467 (Gau).
286. Thankachan v State of Kerala, (2008) 17 SCC 760 .
287. Biran Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 44 : AIR 1975 SC 87 .
288. Krishanlal v State, 1988 Cr LJ 990 (J&K).
289. Puran Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 1479 : AIR 1975 SC 1674 [LNIND 1975 SC 174] .
290. Shivappa Laxman Savadi v State, 1992 Cr LJ 2845 (Kant). Hari Singh v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1997 SC 1505 [LNIND 1996 SC 1592] : 1997 Cr LJ 733 ; State of Haryana v Mewa Singh, AIR 1997 SC 1407 : 1997 Cr LJ 1906 ; Ram Dhani v State, 1997 Cr LJ 2286 (All); Rizwan v State of Chhatisgarh, AIR 2003 SC 976 [LNIND 2003 SC 72] : 2003 Cr LJ 1226 : (2003) 2 SCC 661 [LNIND 2003 SC 72] .
291. Triloki Nath v State of UP, AIR 2006 SC 321 [LNIND 2005 SC 867] : (2005) 13 SCC 323 [LNIND 2005 SC 867] .
292. Shajahan v State of Kerala, (2007) 12 SCC 96 [LNIND 2007 SC 243] : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 234 : 2007 Cr LJ 229 , extreme enmity between parties result in attacks.
293. Bathu Singh v State of MP, AIR 2004 SC 4279 [LNIND 2004 SC 835] : (2004) 7 SCC 206 .
294. Gopal v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ 1297 , JT 2013 (1) SC 639 [LNIND 2013 SC 37] , 2013 (1) MLJ (Cr) 617 [LNIND 2013 SC 37] , 2013 (1) Scale 445 [LNIND 2013 SC 37] , (2013) 2 SCC 188 [LNIND 2013 SC 37] ; Mukesh Rathore v State of Chhattisgarh, 2010 Cr LJ 1289 (Chh); State of Rajasthan v Brijlal, 2010 Cr LJ 1000 (Raj).
295. Sikandar Singh v State of Bihar (2010) 7 SCC 477 [LNIND 2010 SC 603] : AIR 2010 SC 44023 : (2010) 3 SCC(Cr) 417.
296. Raj Pal v State of Haryana, (2006) 9 SCC 678 [LNIND 2006 SC 282] : (2006) 3 SCC(Cr) 361.
297. Raj Singh v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 2803 : (2015) 6 SCC 268 [LNIND 2015 SC 283] : 2015 (5) Scale 492 [LNIND 2015 SC 283] .
298. Kashi Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2008) 3 SCC 55 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 608 : AIR 2008 SC 1172 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] .
299. Ravishwar Manjhi v State of Jharkhand, (2008) 16 SCC 261 : AIR 2009 SC 1262 [LNIND 2008 SC 2423] .
300. Janardan Singh v State of Bihar, (2009) 16 SCC 269 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 253.
301. Mahabir Choudhary v State of Bihar, 1996 AIR(SC) 1998, 1996 Cr LJ 2860 : 1996 (5) SCC 107 [LNIND 1996 SC 891] .
302. Glanville Williams : Text book on Criminal Law, 1979 Edn, p 460.
303. Jaidev, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 495 : AIR 1963 SC 612 [LNIND 1962 SC 249] .
304. Jaidev, Supra; see also Mohd Khan, 1972 Cr LJ 661 : (1971) 3 SCC 683 [LNIND 1971 SC 540] ; Puran Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 1479 : AIR 1975 SC 1674 [LNIND 1975 SC 174] .

305. Yogendra Morarji, 1980 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1980 SC 660 . This case is against all previous authorities and is wrongly decided (MH Editor).
306. Dr. Mohammad Khalil Chisti v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ 637 (SC) : 2013 (1) MLJ (Cr) 198 [LNIND 2012 SC 801] : (2013) 2 SCC 541 [LNIND 2012 SC 801] ; Gopal v State of Rajasthan, (2013) 2 SCC 188 [LNIND 2013 SC 37] : 2013 Cr LJ 1297 .
307. Onkarnath Singh v State of UP, 1974 Cr LJ 1015 : AIR 1974 SC 1550 [LNIND 1974 SC 154] ; Vishvas v State, 1978 Cr LJ 484 : AIR 1978 SC 414 [LNIND 1978 SC 17] ; Sikhar Behera, 1982 Cr LJ 1167 (Orissa); Munir Ahmad v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1989 SC 705 : 1989 Cr LJ 845 : (1989) 26 ACC 115 : 1989 Supp SCC 377 ; reiterated by the Supreme Court in Paras Nath Singh v State of Bihar, and Hari Krishna Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1988 SC 863 [LNIND 1988 SC 139] : (1988) 2 SCC 95 [LNIND 1988 SC 139] : 1988 Cr LJ 925 . Gajanand v State, 1954 Cr LJ 1746 , AIR 1954 SC 695 , followed, Abdul Hamid v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 431 . See also State of Assam v Upendra Das, 1991 Cr LJ 2930 Gau, relying upon Lakshmasingh v State of Bihar, AIR 1976 SC 2263 : 1976 Cr LJ 1736 . For other cases of free fight and, therefore, acquittal. See Ram Nath v State, 1991 Cr LJ 1825 All; Sonpal v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 1597 All, prosecution not explaining how the event sparked off and how the accused suffered injuries. Nityanand Pasayat v State, 1989 Cr LJ 1547 (Ori), quarrel between two groups. Amir Ali v State of Assam, 1989 Cr LJ 1512 , a case of mutual fight over possession of land in which both sides were injured. The Court added that if a group of 5 assembles in private defence, they are not an unlawful assembly; but if they persist in use of force even after their right is over, they become an unlawful assembly. Chandrasekharan v State of Kerala, 1987 Cr LJ 1715 (Ker); State of Rajasthan v. Sughad Singh, AIR 1994 SC 1593 : 1994 Cr LJ 2188 .
308. Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1993 Cr LJ 2857 : 1993 AIR SCW 2482 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 320.
309. Rohtash v State of Haryana, 1993 Cr LJ 3303 (P&H).
310. Sikhar Behera v State of Orissa, 1993 Cr LJ 3664 : 1993 AIR SCW 3162 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 493. Amerika Rai v State of Bihar, AIR 2011 SC 1379 [LNIND 2011 SC 220] : (2011) 3 SCR 176 [LNIND 2011 SC 220] : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 429 : (2011) 4 SCC 677 [LNIND 2011 SC 220] Ram Kumar v State of Haryana, AIR 1998 SC 1437 [LNIND 1998 SC 231] : 1998 Cr LJ 2049 ; Pammi v Govt. of MP, AIR 1998 SC 1185 [LNIND 1998 SC 200] : 1998 Cr LJ 1617 ; Periasami v State of TN, 1997 Cr LJ 219 : (1996) 6 SCC 457 [LNIND 1996 SC 1552] .
311. Mohammad Iqbal v State of MP, 2012 Cr LJ 337 (Chh).
312. Ranbir Singh v State of Haryana, 2009 Cr LJ 3051 (SC) : (2009) 16 SCC 193 [LNIND 2009 SC 1053] .
313. Sikandar Singh v State of Bihar (2010) 7 SCC 477 [LNIND 2010 SC 603] : (2010) 8 SCR 373 : AIR 2010 SC 44023 : 2010 Cr LJ 3854 : (2010) 3 SCC(Cr) 417; Dashrath Singh v State of UP, (2004) 7 SCC 408 [LNIND 2004 SC 798] ; Bishna v State of WB, AIR 2006 SC 302 [LNIND 2005 SC 873] : (2005) 12 SCC 657 [LNIND 2005 SC 873] , Shriram v State of MP, (2004) 9 SCC 292 [LNIND 2003 SC 1026] .
314. Lacchiram v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 2229 MP, unexplained injuries on the person of the accused. But such injuries do not by themselves afford a defence. Govardhan v State, 1987 Cr LJ 541 (Raj). Ram Kumar v State of Haryana, 1994 Cr LJ 1450 P&H, dispute over water course, accused entered field to divert water, caused innumerable injuries to those who objected and also himself received a few injuries, he was held to be an aggressor having no right of private defence; Velummei v State, 1994 Cr LJ 1738 (Ker), a person entering the house of another for crime is an aggressor, he has no right of private defence. Man Bharan Singh v State of MP, 1996 Cr LJ 2707 (MP), every minor injury on the person of the accused does not require explanation.

315. State of Punjab v Gurlabh Singh, (2009) 13 SCC 556 [LNIND 2009 SC 1262] : AIR 2009 SC 2469 [LNIND 2009 SC 1262]; Radhe v State of Chhattisgarh, (2008) 11 SCC 785 [LNIND 2008 SC 1333] : AIR 2008 SC 2878 [LNIND 2008 SC 1333] : 2008 Cr LJ 3520 , the mere fact of a quarrel and the accused sustaining injuries does not in itself create the right of self-defence to the extent of causing death, there has to be an attack creating apprehension of fatal injury. Such was not the case here.
316. Onkarnath, supra. Injuries to the accused not caused during the course of the same incident, no right of private defence, Munna v State of UP, AIR 1992 SC 278 : 1993 Cr LJ 45 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 757 ; State of Kerala v Mavila Thamban Nambiar, 1993 Cr LJ 1817 (Ker), the accused fell off during the course of struggle and injured himself, those injuries could not give him the right of killing in private defence.
317. State of Punjab v Sohan Singh, AIR 1992 SC 1247 : 1992 Cr LJ 2514 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 312 .
318. Sridhar Das v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 2907 (Ori).
319. Makwana Takhat Singh Ratan Singh v State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 1989 : 1992 Cr LJ 3596 . No explanation of injuries on the person of the accused made, no difference to the acceptance of their plea of self-defence, Hardeep Singh v State, 1996 Cr LJ 3091 (Raj).
320. Arjun v State of MP, 1995 Cr LJ 3797 (MP).
321. State of UP v Mukunde, (1994) 2 SCC 191 [LNIND 1994 SC 71] : 1994 SCC (Cr) 473. Also to the same effect Kasam Abdulla v State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 1422 : AIR 1998 SC 1013 [LNIND 1998 SC 157] , injuries on the person of a accused explained.
322. Thakhaji Hiraji v Thakore Kuber Singh Chaman Singh, (2001) 6 SCC 145 [LNIND 2001 SC 1150] : AIR 2001 SC 2326 : 2001 AIR SCW 2077.
323. The Court also noted the decision in Chandu v State of Maharashtra, (2001) 4 Scale 590 [LNIND 2009 NGP 319] : (2001) 5 Supreme 672; Dev Raj v State of HP, AIR 1994 SC 523 : 1993 AIR SCW 3966 : (1994) Supp 2 SCC 552, such injuries cannot be lightly ignored; Tara Chand v State of Haryana, AIR 1971 SC 1891 : 1971 Cr LJ 1411, the circumstance can also be taken into account in the mitigation of sentence.
324. Kashi Ram v State of MP, AIR 2001 SC 2902 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] . See also State of Rajasthan v Pura, 2000 Cr LJ 2615 (Raj); Dharminder v State of HP, AIR 2002 SC 3097 [LNIND 2002 SC 537] ; Jesu Asir Singh v State, AIR (2007) SC 3015 [LNIND 2007 SC 977] : (2007) Cr LJ 4310 : (2007) 12 SCC 19 [LNIND 2007 SC 977] : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 192.
325. Poosaram, 1984 Cr LJ 1848 (Raj); See also State of Gujarat v Bai Fatima, 1975 Cr LJ 1079 : AIR SC 1478; Rizwan v State of Chhatisgarh, AIR 2003 SC 976 [LNIND 2003 SC 72] , non-explanation of injuries on the accused persons was not taken by itself to give them the benefit of the right of private defence. The Court considered the factors to be taken into account for examining whether the right of private defence must have existed.
326. Radhe v State of Chhatisgarh, (2008) 11 SCC 785 [LNIND 2008 SC 1333] : AIR 2008 SC 2878 [LNIND 2008 SC 1333] .
327. Laxman Singh v Poonam Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 94 [LNIND 2003 SC 767] : (2004) 1 MPLJ 93 : (2004) 1 Mah LJ 317 . James Martin v State of Kerala, (2004) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] : (2004) 1 KLT 513 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] : (2004) 2 MPLJ 231 : 2004 Mah LJ 358 . Shriram v State of MP, (2004) 9 SCC 292 [LNIND 2003 SC 1026] : AIR 2004 SC 491 [LNIND 2003 SC 1026] : 2004 Cr LJ 610 .
328. James Martin v State of Kerala, (2004) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] .
329. Rajesh Kumar v Dharmavir, AIR 1997 SC 3769 [LNIND 1997 SC 445]: 1997 Cr LJ 2242.
330. Ranveer Singh v State of MP (2009) 3 SCC 384 [LNIND 2009 SC 123] : AIR 2009 SC 1658 [LNIND 2009 SC 123] ; Bishna Alias Bhiswadeb Mahato v State of WB, (2005) 12 SCC 657 [LNIND

2005 SC 873] Also see Ravishwar Manjhi v State of Jharkhand, AIR 2009 SC 1262 [LNIND 2008 SC 2423] : (2008) 16 SCC 561 [LNIND 2008 SC 2423] .

331. State v Tanaji Dagadu Chawan, 1998 Cr LJ 4515 (Bom).

332. State of Rajasthan v Shiv Singh Haren Das v State of Assam, 2011 Cr LJ 580 (Raj).

333. Moti Singh v State of Maharashtra, (2002) 9 SCC 494 .

334. V Subramani v State of TN, 2005 Cr LJ 1727 SC : AIR 2005 SC 1983 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] : (2005) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] .

335. Nagaraj v State, 2006 Cr LJ 3724 (Mad—DB).

336. Mehi Lal v State of UP, 2011 Cr LJ 1440 (All).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 97] Right of private defence of the body and of property.

Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend

—

First.—His own body, and the body of any other person, against any offence affecting the human body;

Secondly.—The property, whether movable or immovable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass.

COMMENT.—

This section broadly specifies the offences against which the right of private defence can be exercised. Section 99 provides the limitations. These two sections combined together lay down the principles of the right of private defence.

The first clause of this section provides for the defence of body against any offence affecting the human body. The second provides for the defence of property against an act which amounts to the commission of certain offences.

There is no obligation upon a person entitled to exercise the right of private defence and to defend his person or property, to retire merely because his assailant threatens him with violence.^{337.}

Explaining the genesis of the rule, the Supreme Court has observed:^{338.}

"It is important to bear in mind that self-preservation of one's life is the necessary concomitant of the right of life enshrined in Art. 21 of the Constitution of India, fundamental in nature, sacred, precious and inviolable. The importance and validity of the duty and right to self-preservation has a species in the right of self-defence in criminal law. Centuries ago thinkers of this great land conceived of such right and recognised it."

[s 97.1] Aggressor has no right of private defence.—

The right to defend does not include a right to launch an offensive or aggression.^{339.} The right of private defence does not arise where the accused were the aggressors and the question of exceeding such right also does not arise.^{340.} The Supreme Court added, in this case, that the right of self-defence arises when there is unexpected apprehension and one is taken unawares, or the accused happens to kill accidentally while using reasonable force private defence can be used to ward off unlawful force, or to prevent it, to avoid unlawful detention and to escape from such detention.^{341.}

When the father of the accused was trying to forcibly remove the gate of the thrashing ground of the deceased which was situated on the land of the deceased, his act amounted to an offence of 'mischief'. And, if the deceased while protecting his own property assaulted the father of the accused with a lathi, and the accused killed him in return, the accused could not claim the right of private defence of body of his father.^{342.} In another case of the same kind the father of the accused was trying to pull out the gate of the deceased thrashing mill and on the deceased assaulting him in protection, the accused struck him dead. The right of private defence was not available in the circumstances.^{343.} Where the parties went away from the property over which they were fighting, the death caused at that shifted place was not a justifiable exercise of the right of private defence.^{344.} Where the accused succeeded in establishing their right to the property in dispute through the Court and then went to the field with a view to ask the other party to vacate the premises, it was held that it by itself did not render them to be aggressors for the purpose of denying them the benefit of right of self-defence.^{345.}

Number of injuries is not always the safe criterion for determining who the aggressor is. The fact of injuries on the body of the accused does not by itself create the presumption that the accused was entitled to the right of private defence.^{346.}

[s 97.2] Unlawful assembly.—

So long as an assembly of persons is acting in exercise of the right of private defence it cannot be an unlawful assembly. An assembly though lawful to begin with, may in the course of events become unlawful. So long as the accused persons were acting in exercise of right of private defence, their object was not unlawful and so there was no unlawful assembly but once they exceeded the right, the assembly ceased to be lawful and became an unlawful assembly. There too only such of the members of the assembly who shared the object of doing anything in excess of the exercise of right of private defence, alone would be liable to be punished for the acts committed in prosecution of the common object or for their individual unlawful acts.^{347.}

[s 97.3] Right of private defence to be pleaded.—

In a Supreme Court case it is stated,

It is well settled that even if an accused does not plead self-defence, it is open to the Court to consider such a plea if the same arises from materials on record.^{348.}

But if no plea was entered on behalf of the accused and there were also no circumstances to show that the accused had probably the right of private defence, such a right could not be presumed on behalf of the accused on mere conjectures and surmises.^{349.} A mere bald assertion without any evidence of facts and circumstances does not make out a case of private defence.^{350.} The accused can, however, make out his plea by mere preponderance of probabilities from materials already on record and need not prove it to the hilt.^{351.} Where by preponderance of probabilities the plea of private defence of the accused is plausible, benefit should be extended to the accused.^{352.} Failure on the part of the prosecution to prove that the injuries on the person of the accused were not caused in self-defence, makes the defence of the accused probable and he is entitled to its benefit because he has not to prove his defence beyond reasonable doubt.^{353.} Where the accused set up the plea of self-defence only during trial and not during investigation, it was held that this was not a ground for rejecting the plea.^{354.} The accused on the observation of the High Court that the deceased was stabbed by the appellant, not in pursuance of any pre-planned attack, but being under the impression that the deceased was coming to attack him. The said observation cannot be read out of context to make out a case that the accused acted in self-defence. Such a plea is neither put forth in the statement under section 313 nor brought out in the cross examination of any of the prosecution witnesses.^{355.} It is true that the right of private defence need not specifically be taken and in the event the Court on the basis of the materials on record is in a position to come to such a conclusion, despite some other plea having been raised, that such a case had been made out, it may act thereupon.^{356.}

[s 97.4] CASES.—Defence of person.—

Under circumstances which might have induced the belief that a man was cutting the throat of his wife, their son shot and killed his father. It was held that if the son had reasonable ground for believing and honestly believed that his act was necessary for the defence of his mother, the homicide was excusable.³⁵⁷ Where a girl was being sexually molested and her father hit the assailant resulting in consequential death, it was held that the father was entitled to the right of private defence irrespective of the fact whether the affair was with or without consent because of the girl being a minor.³⁵⁸ Where a man found his wife in compromising position with a person who sprang at the husband and caused him multiple injuries, some of them grievous, the husband thereafter gave a chopper blow resulting in the death of that person, it was held that the husband had not exceeded his right of private defence and was entitled to acquittal.³⁵⁹ Where the father of the accused was being given lathi blows by the complainant party, the accused fired from the licensed gun of his father to defend his father, it was held that he had acted in the exercise of the right of private defence whether the injuries caused to his father were simple or grievous.³⁶⁰ Trespassers on the property of another cannot get any benefit of right of private defence if they are attacked by the person in possession of the property.³⁶¹ However no one including the true owner has a right to dispossess the trespasser by force if the trespasser is in settled possession of the land and in such a case unless he is evicted in due course of law, he is entitled to defend his possession even against the rightful owner. Such possession of the trespasser must extend over a sufficiently long period and acquiesced in by the true owner.³⁶² Though law permits even a trespasser in settled possession to defend his possession but, it does not permit a person to take the law in his own hand to take forcible possession merely because he has obtained a favourable order under section 145 Cr PC, 1973. Such a person cannot claim private defence.³⁶³ Settled possession means such clear and effective physical possession that under the criminal law he, even if he is a trespasser, gets the right to defend his possession of the property against an attack even by the true owner.³⁶⁴ If no party is proved to be in settled possession, the question of exercise of right of private defence does not arise.³⁶⁵ Where the accused were in possession of the property and had grown the paddy, they were entitled to defend their possession by using reasonable force which in the instant case went up to causing of death as the party in possession was attacked and grievous blows were given to them.³⁶⁶ Where the prosecution party attacked the accused, his brothers and others with sharp edged weapons and lathis and when they tried to enter the latter's house, the accused fired at the crowd resulting in the death of a man and injuries to others, it was held that the accused had acted only in the exercise of the right of private defence and he was entitled to complete acquittal.³⁶⁷ Where the accused was fired at to dispel his party from attempting to rescue their friend from illegal police detention and an informer accompanying the police who tried to prevent them from snatching the police gun received fatal injuries, it was held that they were entitled to the right of private defence.³⁶⁸ Where a fatal injury was caused in consequence of hot exchange of words, the right of private defence was held to be not available.³⁶⁹ The Supreme Court has suggested that the number and nature of injuries sustained by the accused and the deceased in any case, may furnish good evidence to consider whether the accused was acting in private defence and, if so, whether he had exceeded his right. In the state of the evidence on record in that case and the number of injuries suffered by the accused, the Court did not accede to the contention that the right was not properly exercised.³⁷⁰

[s 97.5] Defence of another person.—

The right of private defence need not necessarily be exercised for the defence of one's own person; it can be exercised for the defence of the person of another one.^{371.}

[s 97.6] Defence of property.—

Every person in possession of land is entitled to defend his possession against anyone who tries to eject him by force,^{372.} or to steal from it;^{373.} or to do an act which will have the effect of causing injury to it, e.g., cutting of a bund.^{374.} Even if a trespass has been committed, in certain situations, right of private defence can be used to eject the trespassers.^{375.} Where the accused had no right, title, interest or possession of the land in issue, right of private defence of property did not vest in him.^{376.}

Where the complainant party was about 300 feet away from the disputed land and it was further found that the accused had not shown that there was any injury on the person of the accused, it was held that no right of private defence arose in favour of the accused.^{377.}

[s 97.7] Open space.—

Though private defence is available in respect of criminal trespass or mischief as against the property owned by himself or of any other person, but criminal trespass is not enumerated as one of the offences under section 103 IPC, 1860. Therefore, the right of private defence of property will not extend to the causing of death of the person who committed such acts, if the act of trespass is in respect of an open land. Only a house-trespass committed under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt would be the consequence is enumerated as one of the offences under section 103.^{378.} But in another judgment Supreme Court held that there is no law that right of self-defence cannot be exercised in relation to a dispute over an open space.^{379.} Where the trespasser was in settled possession of the field in question, and the party who claimed ownership started ploughing the field, it was held that the trespasser (accused) had the right of private defence of his possession over property and offer resistance, but that he exceeded that right in causing death. His act fell under exception 2 to section 300 and punishable under section 304, Part I.^{380.} Where a goat of the accused entered the field of another and he was trying to take it way, the other struck him with lathi blows and also his companion who came to his rescue. Only then the accused retaliated with lathi blows resulting in death. Supreme Court upheld the acquittal.^{381.} The right is subject to restrictions imposed by section 99, the accused party was in possession of the land, the deceased party wanted to enter into possession forcibly. One of the aggressors was killed and another grievously hurt. The accused that caused the death was held to be guilty of exceeding the right of private defence. The acquittal of the person who caused grievous hurt with a spear was held to be not proper. He was liable to be convicted under section 326.^{382.} Accused having not been in settled possession had no right to self-defence to defend the possession of the property.^{383.} Occurrence took place on the land which was in possession of deceased. Accused cannot take the plea of private defence.^{384.} No right of private defence of property to a person who was not in possession of the property.^{385.}

Where the accused to a certain stage acted in defence of their property but exceeded it in breaking into the room of their victim, striking him with a lathi blow and also his wife and daughter who were also there in the room, the victim subsequently dying, their conviction was shifted from under section 302 to that under section 304 Part 1.³⁸⁶ The right of private defence of property (share in land) was held to have been exceeded when the deceased's side being armed with lathis only, the accused party fired at them with a gun, killing one and injuring others. The right of private defence was not available to them.³⁸⁷

Where the finding of the Courts below was that the accused and his companions were aggressors because they assaulted the victim and his children when they came out to protest against cutting of their by the accused, it was held that the benefit of the right of private defence was not available to the accused.³⁸⁸

Defence of property may create circumstances ripening into the right of defence of person. This is so because even in defending property, the attack and counter-attack is likely to be on person. This was the situation in a case in which the accused while defending land over which they had possession; they became the victim of attack on person with sharp cutting weapons. It became their right to repel the danger of grievous hurt or even death and to use for that purpose reasonably appropriate force. Their right extended to cause death of the aggressors if that could be the only way of saving themselves.³⁸⁹

[s 97.8] CASES.—Exceeding private defence.—

The father of the accused was attacked by the deceased with a lathi and suffered a simple injury on his head, whereupon the accused in order to protect his father administered a fatal blow on the chest of the deceased with a ballam. It was held that though the accused had the right of private defence, he had obviously exceeded it and was, therefore, liable under section 304-Part I, IPC, 1860.³⁹⁰ A somewhat contrary view has, however, been taken by the Supreme Court in a later case where too the accused had exercised his right of private defence against a lathi blow on the head. Thus, in Deo Narain's case it has been held that the accused was justified in using his spear though the other party had aimed only a lathi blow on the head, which being a vulnerable part even a lathi blow could prove dangerous.³⁹¹ It thus, appears that the part of the body against which the attack is directed is more important than the weapon used. Where the deceased attacked the accused with a stick and the accused retaliated by stabbing the former to death his offence fell under section 304-Part I, IPC, 1860, as he had exceeded the right of private defence.³⁹² Evidence on record showed that accused had received many injuries on his person, and exercised right of private defence of person in good faith. He had sustained four injuries on various parts of his body including on vital parts, thus, case would be covered by Exception 2 to section 300 of IPC, 1860. The nature of weapon used, circumstances in which incident took place, injuries on body of accused as well as deceased, showed that there was no premeditation. He had exercised his right of self-defence but having regard to the injuries inflicted by him on deceased, he exceeded same.³⁹³ Where the accused, a person with only one hand was attacked with a bamboo and sustained several injuries and then to ward off further attack gave only one blow with a pen-knife on the aggressor which unfortunately fell on a vital part resulting in his death, it could not be said that he had exceeded his right of private defence. For the accused it was a case of life or death struggle and his case, therefore, squarely fell within the ambit of clauses (1) and (2) of section 100, IPC, 1860, and he could not be held guilty of any offence.³⁹⁴ In a sudden group clash over a house both sides received injuries and one person was killed. There was no prior enmity between two groups and the whole incident developed suddenly. Accused persons received quite a number of injuries, some on vital parts, and the prosecution was not able to explain those injuries. It was held that the accused could not be said to have exceeded the right of private defence. Their conviction was set aside.³⁹⁵ Two armed bullies of a locality raided a flat in a drunken state and demanded money from the inmates with the use of force. This amounted to the crime of extortion giving the inmates the right to defend themselves against the raiders. Both the raiders met their death in the process of the ensuing scuffle, it being not known nor capable of being ascertained who played what roll in the combat. The Supreme Court held that it could not be said of any one of them that he exceeded the right of private defence. Hence, they could not be convicted under section 302 read with section 34.³⁹⁶ The accused using his licenced gun fired only one shot after receiving a severe blow on his head fracturing his skull. It was held that he did not exceed his right of self-defence.³⁹⁷ A person had a lurking suspicion about illicit relations between his elder brother's wife and the accused and he caught hold of the accused when the latter visited their house to meet her. The accused inflicted knife injuries on him to extricate himself but did not inflict any further injury after freeing himself. It was held that the accused had not exceeded the right of private defence and was not guilty under section 307 for attempted murder.³⁹⁸ Where the accused fired a single gunshot at the deceased party to save his uncle who had received serious injuries in the attack made by the deceased party, the gun shot unfortunately proved fatal, the accused could not be said to have exceeded his right of self- defence.³⁹⁹ Where in a murder case over obstruction of water course, the victim assaulted the accused twice and injured him whereupon the accused inflicted a blow on him which proved fatal, the accused could not be said to have exceeded his right of private defence.⁴⁰⁰

A police party was looking for the accused to affect their arrest. The complainant party was helping the police. On being located, the accused party opened fire. The police withdrew after receiving injuries. Two members of the complainant party were killed. Even a runaway complainant was shot down. This showed that the attack continued even when all danger to the accused party had ceased. Thus, they exceeded the right of private defence. Conviction for murder was upheld.⁴⁰¹

Where the death occurred due to the firing resorted to as part of the self-defence, the same would amount to 'culpable homicide not amounting to murder', which was committed without any pre-meditation in a sudden fight, in the heat of passion and upon a sudden quarrel and that the offender could not be said to have taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner, which would normally fall under Exception 4 of section 300 IPC, 1860.⁴⁰²

[s 97.9] Burden on accused to probablise his defence. –

It is for the accused to establish the plea of private defence. He is not required to prove it beyond reasonable doubt. The Court has only to examine probabilities in appreciating the plea. In the present case, the accused had miserably failed to establish or even to probablise his defence. The deceased persons had merely asked them why they had cut the mature crop, when they became the victim of attack. They were unarmed.⁴⁰³ The accused need not take the plea of private defence explicitly. He can succeed in his plea if he is able to bring out from the evidence of the prosecution witness or other evidence of the prosecution witness or other evidence that the apparent criminal act was committed by him in exercise of private defence. The burden on the accused is not as onerous as that which lies on the prosecution. While the prosecution is required to prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt, the accused can discharge his onus by establishing preponderance of probabilities.⁴⁰⁴

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
337. Nareshi Singh, (1923) 2 Pat 595.
338. Surjit Singh v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 336 [LNIND 1996 SC 233] at 342 : AIR 1996 SC 1388 [LNIND 1996 SC 233] .
339. Sikandar Singh v State of Bihar, (2010) 7 SCC 477 [LNIND 2010 SC 603] : AIR 2010 SC 44023 : (2010) 3 SCC(Cr) 417.
340. Kashi Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2008) 3 SCC 55 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] : AIR 2008 SC 1172 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] .
341. Ibid, See also Narain Singh v State of Haryana, (2008) 11 SCC 540 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : AIR 2008 SC 2006 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : 2008 Cr LJ 2613 , for restatement of principles.
342. State of MP v Mohandas, 1992 Cr LJ 101 (MP).
343. State of MP v Mohandas, 1991 Cr LJ 101 (MP).
344. Bhagat Singh v The State, 1992 Cr LJ 221 (All).
345. Jarnail Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 72 : 1992 Cr LJ 3863 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 588 . See also Jaipal v State of Haryana, AIR 2000 SC 1271 [LNIND 2000 SC 448] : 2000 Cr LJ 1778 ; Murali v State of TN, 2001 Cr LJ 470 (SC).
346. V Subramani v State of TN, 2005 Cr LJ 1727 SC : AIR 2005 SC 1983 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] : (2005) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] .
347. Kashi Ram v State of MP, AIR 2001 SC 2902 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] : (2002) 1 SCC 71 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] .
348. Munshi Ram v Delhi Administration, AIR 1968 SC 702 [LNIND 1967 SC 347]: 1968 Cr LJ 806; Rajanikant, (1970) 2 SCC 866 [LNIND 1970 SC 401] : 1970 SCC (Cr) 575 ; State of Rajasthan v Manoj Kumar, 2014 Cr LJ 2420.
349. State of Gujarat v Bai Fatima, 1975 Cr LJ 1079 : AIR 1975 SC 1478 [LNIND 1975 SC 130] .
350. Raza Pasha, 1983 Cr LJ 977 : AIR 1983 SC 575 [LNIND 1983 SC 79] . Sekar v State of TN, 2003 Cr LJ 93 : AIR 2002 SC 3667 [LNIND 2002 SC 628] , the plea of self-defence cannot be based upon surmises and speculation. The Court noted the relevant factors in order to find out whether the right is available or not.
351. Salim Zia, 1979 Cr LJ 323 : AIR 1979 SC 319 ; Yogendra Morarji, 1980 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1980 SC 660 . Mohd. Ramzani v State of Delhi, 1980 Cr LJ 1010 : 1980 SCC (Cr) 907 : AIR 1980 SC 1341 . The burden is on the accused. The Court does not presume the existence of the circumstances which entitle the accused to his defence. Subodh Tewari v State of Assam, 1988 Cr LJ 223 Gau. To the same effect, Savita Kumari v UOI, 1993 AIR SCW 1174 : 1993 Cr LJ 1590 : (1993) 2 SCC 357 [LNIND 1993 SC 87] .
352. Jharmal v State of Haryana, 1995 Cr LJ 3212 : 1994 (2) SCC 551 [LNIND 1994 SC 256] ; Rizwan v State of Chhatisgarh, AIR 2003 SC 976 [LNIND 2003 SC 72] , burden of proof is on the accused is to establish his plea. It is discharged by showing preponderance of probabilities in favour of his plea.

353. Debraj v State of UP, (1993) Supp 2 SCC 552 followed in Maskandar Ali v Assam, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1900 Gau. Where the Court said that the burden is on the accused to prove his plea. But he has not to establish his right beyond all doubt. It is enough that he is able to show on a preponderance of probability that he acted in private defence. Also to the same effect, Dwarka Pd. v State of UP, (1993) AIR SCW 1122 : (1993) Supp. 3 SCC 141.

354. Bahadur Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SC 70 : 1992 Cr LJ 3709 : (1992) 4 SCC 503 .

355. Pulicherla Nagaraju v State of Andhra Pradesh, AIR 2006 SC 3010 [LNIND 2006 SC 621] : (2006) 11 SCC 444 [LNIND 2006 SC 621] .

356. Hafiz v State of UP, (2005) 12 SCC 599 [LNIND 2005 SC 773] .

357. Rose, (1884) 15 Cox 540. Kashiram v State of MP, (2002) 1 SCC 71 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] , incident of gun shot injuries took place near the house of the accused persons. One of them sustained gun shot and other wounds. This created an apprehension of further grievous hurt being caused to the victims. This entitled them to exercise private defence even to the extent of causing death.

358. Yeshwant Rao v State of MP, AIR 1992 SC 1633 : 1992 Cr LJ 2779 .

359. Raghavan Achari v State of Kerala, AIR 1993 SC 203 : 1992 Cr LJ 3857 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 719 .

360. Bhagwan Swaroop v State of MP, AIR 1992 SC 675 [LNIND 1992 SC 112] : 1992 Cr LJ 777 : (1992) 2 SCC 406 [LNIND 1992 SC 112] .

361. Hukam Singh, (1961) 2 Cr LJ 711 : AIR 1961 SC 1541 [LNIND 1961 SC 136] .

362. Munshi Ram, AIR 1968 SC 702 [LNIND 1967 SC 347] : 1968 Cr LJ 806 .

363. Buduka Kalita, 1972 Cr LJ 1627 (Gau).

364. Puran Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 1479 : AIR 1975 SC 1674 [LNIND 1975 SC 174] .

365. State of Orissa v Bhagabat, 1978 Cr LJ 1566 (Orissa).

366. Abdul Kadir v State of Assam, 1985 Cr LJ 1898 : AIR 1986 SC 305 : 1985 SCC (Cr) 501. See also Mehraddin Sheikh v State of WB, 1985 SCC (Cr) 241 : (1985) 2 SCC 448 where the Court said that a factual study of the respective position of the parties is necessary.

367. Nagendra Pal Singh v State of UP, AIR 1993 SC 950 : 1993 Cr LJ 190 : (1993) Supp (3) SCC 197 .

368. State of UP v Niyamat, (1987) 3 SCC 434 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] : AIR 1987 SC 1652 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] : 1987 Cr LJ 1881 .

369. Ramesh Laxman Pardesi v State of Maharashtra, 1987 SCC (Cr) 615 : 1987 Supp SCC 1 .

370. Patori Devi v Amar Nath, (1988) 1 SCC 610 : AIR 1988 SC 560 : 1988 Cr LJ 836 .

371. Kashi Ram v State of MP, AIR 2001 SC 2902 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] : (2002) 1 SCC 71 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] Also see B Parichhat v State of MP, AIR 1972 SC 535 : (1972) 4 SCC 694 : 1972 Cr LJ 322 .

372. Sachee, (1867) 7 WR (Cr) 76 (112). Mohinder Singh v State of Punjab, (1995) 1 Cr LJ 244 (P&H) an attempt to take forcible possession of land resisted, resistance held justified, the Court explained when the right of resistance can extend to causing death. Tanaji Govind Misal v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 174 [LNIND 1997 SC 1211] : 1998 Cr LJ 340 , evidence showed that the property belonged to the complainant party and not to attackers, the owners suffered 51 wounds whereas the attackers received 15 wounds, which were also insignificant. The Court held that the conviction of the accused could not be altered from under section 300 to section 304. Pohap Singh v State of Haryana, 1998 Cr LJ 1564 : AIR 1998 SC 1554 [LNIND 1997 SC 1658] , the accused party received more injuries than those suffered by the deceased's party. The Court said that not the accused but the deceased was the aggressor and the accused acted in self defence.

373. Mokey, (1869) 12 WR (Cr) 15.
374. Birjoo Singh v Khub Lall, (1873) 19 WR (Cr) 66.
375. Triloki Nath v State of UP AIR 2006 SC 321 [LNIND 2005 SC 867] : (2005) 13 SCC 323 [LNIND 2005 SC 867] ; in this case, occurrence took place 300 paces away from the disputed plot - Plea of self defence against property held not available to the accused.
376. AR Yelve v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1718 : AIR 1996 SC 2945 [LNIND 1996 SC 336] ; Ram Pal v State of Haryana, (2009) 7 SCC 614 [LNIND 2009 SC 1264] : AIR 2009 SC 2847 [LNIND 2009 SC 1264] , appellants were not in settled possession of property and as such had no right of private defence to defend possession of that property. They were aggressors coming to place of occurrence fully armed, reversal of acquittal of accused by the High Court was upheld.
377. Panna Lal v State of MP, 2015 Cr LJ 3286 .
378. Jassa Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2002 SC 520 [LNIND 2002 SC 13] : (2002) 2 SCC 481 [LNIND 2002 SC 13] .
379. Kishan Chand v State of UP, (2007) 14 SCC 737 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] : AIR 2008 SC 133 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] .
380. Adhimoolam v State, 1995 Cr LJ 1051 (Mad) following Puran Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1975 SC 1674 [LNIND 1975 SC 174] : (1975) Cr LJ 1479 (SC) where the court cited AIR 1968 SC 702 [LNIND 1967 SC 347] : 1968 Cr LJ 806 as defining the concept of settled possession.
381. Satya Narain Yadav v Gajanand, (2008) 16 SCC 609 [LNIND 2008 SC 2782] : AIR 2008 SC 3284 [LNIND 2008 SC 2782] .
382. State of Haryana v Sher Singh, AIR 2002 SC 3223 [LNIND 2002 SC 1215] .
383. Ram Pat v State of Haryana, (2009) 7 SCC 614 [LNIND 2009 SC 1264] : (2009) 8 SCR 1115 [LNIND 2009 SC 1264] : AIR 2009 SC 2847 [LNIND 2009 SC 1264] .
384. Ashok Kumar v State of TN, AIR 2006 SC 2419 [LNIND 2006 SC 360] : (2006) 10 SCC 157 [LNIND 2006 SC 360] .
385. Daulat Trimbak Shewale v State of Maharashtra, (2004) 10 SCC 715 [LNIND 2004 SC 586] : AIR 2004 SC 3140 [LNIND 2004 SC 586] : 2004 Cr LJ 2825 .
386. Madam v State of MP, (2008) 11 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1390] : AIR 2008 SC 3083 [LNIND 2008 SC 1390] : 2008 Cr LJ 3950 .
387. Narain Singh v State of Haryana, (2008) 11 SCC 540 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : AIR 2008 SC 2006 [LNIND 2008 SC 864] : 2008 Cr LJ 2613 . Following principles stated in James Martin v State of Kerala, (2004) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] : (2004) 1 KLT 513 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] . Salim v State of Haryana, (2008) 12 SCC 705 [LNIND 2008 SC 1613] : (2008) Cr LJ 4327 , finding that one of the parties used force and fire causing death to take possession of land, private defence not available. The Court said that even if the right was there, it was exceeded.
388. AC Gangadhar v State of Karnataka, (2009) 14 SCC 710 [LNIND 1998 SC 506] : AIR 1998 SC 2381 [LNIND 1998 SC 506] .
389. Vajrapu Sambayya Naidu v. State of A.P., (2004) 10 SCC 152 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] : AIR 2003 SC 3706 [LNIND 2003 SC 176] .
390. Parichhat, 1972 Cr LJ 322 : AIR 1972 SC 535 . Dilip Singh v State of Rajasthan, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2439 (Raj) in a dispute over possession of property, one party tried to take forcible possession by committing criminal trespass, they possessed only an agricultural implement, not capable of causing apprehension of death but even so the other party fired at them killing one, held, they exceeded private defence, punishable under section 304-I. Telantle v State of AP, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2302 (AP) number of injuries (18 in this case caused by son on his father) indicated excess of the right of private defence. Thomas George v State of Kerala, AIR 2000 SC 3497 : 2000 Cr LJ 3475 , right of private defence of person, punishment altered from under section 302 to that under section 304, Part II. Sekar v State of TN, 2003 Cr LJ 53 (SC) quarrel over sheepling damaging crop of the victim, owner of the sheep struck him, he fell down and was struck in the neck even after that. Right of private defence exceeded; Madan v State of MP, (2008) 11 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1390] : AIR 2008 SC 3083 [LNIND 2008 SC 1390] : 2008 Cr LJ 3950 , accused persons forced open the wooden door and entered the place where the wife and daughter of one of them were sleeping. They caught hands of the householder and assaulted him with lathis. He later died. The wife and daughter were also assaulted when they tried to intervene. The attackers were also injured to a certain extent and therefore, had the right of private but they exceeded it. Their punishment was altered from under section 302 to section 304 Pt. I.

391. Deo Narain, 1973 Cr LJ 677 (SC) : (1973) 3 SCR 57 [LNIND 1972 SC 572] : AIR 1973 SC 473 [LNIND 1972 SC 572] . See further Laxman Sahu v State of Orissa, 1988 Cr LJ 188 : AIR 1988 SC 83 : 1986 Supp SCC 555 : 1987 SCC (Cr) 173 where a lathi blow inflicted on the forehead caused death without any apparent need for it, the accused was convicted under section 304 part I and the above case was distinguished. See also Sukumar Roy v State of WB, AIR 2006 SC 3406 [LNIND 2006 SC 882] : (2006) 10 SCC 635 [LNIND 2006 SC 882] .

392. Rafiq, 1979 Cr LJ 706 : AIR 1979 SC 1179 ; Yogendra Morarji, 1980 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1980 SC 660 ; see also VC Cheriyan v State, 1982 Cr LJ 2071 (Ker). The accused receiving gun shot injuries, opened fire at the other party killing two persons, entitled to right of private defence but exceeded, convicted under section 304 Part I and not for murder Jagtar Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 2448 [LNIND 1993 SC 11] : 1993 Cr LJ 306 . See also Jasbir Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1993 SC 968 : 1993 Cr LJ 301 : (1993) Supp (2) SCC 760 , diversion of flow of tubewell water by the deceased, accused fired killing him on the spot.

393. Beersingh Jagatsingh v State of Maharashtra, 2013Cr LJ2248 (Bom).

394. Bayadas Bawri, 1982 Cr LJ 213 (Gau).

395. Ram Phal v State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 1979 : 1993 Cr LJ 2603 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 740 . Contra : see Kulwant Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1994 SC 1271 : 1994 Cr LJ 1109 , group clash, injuries on both sides, one died, circumstances did not entitle the exercise of right of self-defence to the accused.

396. Kishore Shambudatta Mishra v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1989 SC 1173 : 1989 Cr LJ 1149 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 399 .

397. Kamal Singh v State of MP, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1834 MP.

398. Krushna Chandra Bisoi v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 1766 (Ori).

399. Sukhdev Singh v State of Punjab, 1995 Cr LJ 3227 (SC).

400. Gurdev Singh v State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 1270 (Raj). State v Bhuri, 1997 Cr LJ 708 (Raj), mother of accused attacked and an injury caused with a sharp weapon, the accused hit back with grand force a lathi blow which fell on the head of the aggressor causing his death, right of private defence exceeded.

401. Ram Avtar v State of UP, 2003 Cr LJ 480 (SC).

402. Rajinder Singh v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 1330 .

403. Abid v State of UP, (2009) 14 SCC 701 [LNIND 2009 SC 1395] .

404. Krishnan v State of TN, AIR 2006 SC 3037 [LNIND 2006 SC 612] : (2006) 11 SCC 304 [LNIND 2006 SC 612] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 98] Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, etc.

When an act, which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence, by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind or the intoxication of the person doing that act, or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

ILLUSTRATIONS

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A; Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were not acting under that misconception.

COMMENT.—

The right of private defence would have lost most of its value if it was not allowed to be exercised against persons suffering from the incapacities mentioned in this section.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 99] Acts against which there is no right of private defence.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act, may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.

Extent to which the right may be exercised.

The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority, if demanded.

COMMENT.—

This section indicates the limits within which the right of private defence should be exercised.

[s 99.1] First clause.—

This clause applies to those cases in which the public servant is acting in good faith under colour of his office, though the particular act being done by him may not be justifiable by law.⁴⁰⁵ Where officers of Delhi Municipal Corporation acting in good faith by virtue of powers delegated to them by the Commissioner attempted to seize the buffalo of the accused with a view to recover arrears of milk tax, the mere fact that no prior notice was issued to the accused as required by the Municipal Act would not make their act entirely outside the law and as such accused had no private defence under section 99 of the Code. The officers had merely erred in exercise of their powers.⁴⁰⁶ The clause applies to a case where an official has done wrongly, what he might have done rightly, but not to cases where the act could not have been done rightly at all by the official concerned.⁴⁰⁷ The clause applies where a public servant acts irregularly in the exercise of his powers, and not where he acts outside the scope of his powers.⁴⁰⁸ Where a police officer acting bona fide under colour of his office arrests a person but without authority, the person so arrested has no right of self-defence against the officer.⁴⁰⁹ If the act of a public servant is ultra vires the right of private defence may be exercised against him.⁴¹⁰ A police-officer, holding a search, without a written authority, cannot be said to be acting 'under colour of his office'.⁴¹¹

[s 99.2] CASES.—Resistance to officer acting without warrant.—

A police-officer attempted without a search-warrant to enter a house in search of property alleged to have been stolen and was obstructed and resisted. It was held that, even though the officer was not strictly justified in searching the house without a warrant, the person obstructing and resisting could not set up the illegality of the officer's proceeding as a justification of his obstruction, as it was not shown that the officer was acting otherwise than in good faith and without malice.⁴¹² Where a raiding party organized by the official of the Municipal Corporation to round up stray cattle within the limits of the Corporation, was attacked when it had rounded up some cattle and was leading the cattle to the cattle pound, it was held that the act of the raiding party was fully justifiable by law and that the accused had no right of private defence.⁴¹³ Where a party was fired at to dispel them from their attempt to rescue their friend from an illegal police detention, it was held that this was sufficient to cause reasonable apprehension in their mind of death or grievous injury.⁴¹⁴

[s 99.3] Illegal attachment does not justify resistance.—

Where articles protected from attachment were attached, it was held that this act did not justify resistance.⁴¹⁵ Where the property of a person was wrongfully attached as the property of certain absconders, it was held that the rightful owner had no right of private defence of his property, as the police-officer was acting in good faith under colour of his office, and that even supposing the order of attachment might not have been properly made, that would in itself not be sufficient ground for such a defence.⁴¹⁶

[s 99.4] Second clause.—

The first clause speaks of acts done by a public servant, this clause, of acts done under the direction of a public servant. It is not necessary that the doer should be a public servant. Explanation 2 must be read conjointly with this clause.

[s 99.5] CASE.—Resistance to execution of warrant.—

Where a police-officer attempted to execute a warrant the issue of which was illegal, it was held that the accused were justified in their resistance.⁴¹⁷

[s 99.6] Third clause.—

The third clause of this section must be read with the first clause of section 105.⁴¹⁸ It places an important restriction on the exercise of the right of defence. The right of private defence being granted for defence only, it must not and cannot legally be exercised when there is time to have recourse to the protection of public authorities. The right of private defence does not take the place of the functions of those public servants who are especially charged with the protection of life and property and the apprehension of offenders, and where the assistance of the public authorities can be procured, the right cannot be lawfully exercised. But the law does not intend that a person must run away to have recourse to the protection of public authorities when he is attacked instead of defending himself.⁴¹⁹ A person in possession cannot be expected to leave his property at the mercy of armed trespassers. Where there is imminent danger to the property and the person in possession apprehends substantial damage thereto, he is entitled to raise his own arms in defence and retaliate to keep away the attack without applying for State aid.⁴²⁰ Where the accused was in rightful possession of the property by virtue of a Court order; under section 145 Cr PC, 1973, he had every right to throw out the complainant party from the land and demolish the construction stealthily put up thereon.⁴²¹ The important considerations which always arise in order to determine whether the action of the accused is covered by the right of private defence are, first, what is the nature of the apprehended danger, and, second, whether there was time to have recourse to the police authorities, always remembering that when both the parties are determined to fight and go up to the land fully armed in full expectation of an armed conflict in order to have a trial of strength the right of private defence disappears.⁴²²

[s 99.7] CASES.—Time to obtain protection of public authorities.—

The accused received information one evening that the complainants intended to go on his land on the following day, and uproot the corn sown in it. At about three o'clock next morning he was informed that the complainants had entered on his land and were ploughing up the corn. Thereupon he at once proceeded to the spot, followed by the remaining accused, and remonstrated with the complainants, who commenced an attack on the accused. In the fight which ensued, both sides received serious injuries, and the leader of the complainants' party was killed. It was held that the complainants being the aggressors, the accused had the right of private defence and that they were not bound to act on the information received on the previous evening and seek the protection of the public authorities, as they had no reason to apprehend a night attack on their property.⁴²³ In a case involving an old land dispute, one party (accused) offered resistance to prevent the other from ploughing the land and on refusal went up to the place where the other was sitting without arms and inflicted stick blows causing death, it was held that the accused was rightly convicted. The Court said that a rightful owner can defend his possession against any attempt to dislodge him, but that once a trespasser has established his foothold; resort should be had to public authorities.⁴²⁴

The right of private defence does not extend to inflicting of more harm than necessary for the purpose of defence. The prosecution party, in this case, had gone to plough the land which was in the possession of the accused (appellant). The latter had time to go and report the matter to appropriate authorities constituted under the law. But instead of so doing, they brutally attacked the other party resulting in the death of three persons. Thus, there was no right of private defence. It was held that there was no warrant for converting the conviction from u/section 302 to section 304 Part II.⁴²⁵

[s 99.8] Fourth clause.—

The right of private defence is restricted to not inflicting more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence. The amount of force necessarily depends on the circumstances of the case, and there is no protection if the harm is caused by excessive violence quite unnecessary to the case.⁴²⁶ For example, a person set by his master to watch a garden or yard is not at all justified in shooting at, or injuring in any way, persons who may come into those premises, even in the night. He ought first to see whether he could not take measures for their apprehension.⁴²⁷ The measure of self-defence must always be proportionate to the quantum of force used by the attacker and which it is necessary to repel.⁴²⁸ In dealing with the question as to whether more force is used than is necessary or than was justified by the prevailing circumstances, it would be inappropriate to adopt tests of detached objectivity of a Court room. The means which a threatened person adopts or the force which he uses should not be weighed in golden scales.⁴²⁹ Though a person exercising his right of private defence is not expected to modulate his defence step by step or tier by tier, yet it is necessary to see that it is not totally disproportionate to the injury sought to be averted, e.g., to ward off a slap one cannot fire a gun. Thus, where the father of the accused was allegedly assaulted with lathis which resulted in simple injuries, the accused was not justified in firing his gun and thereby killing the attacker. In such a case it could not be said that there was a reasonable apprehension of death or grievous hurt within the meaning of clause (1) of section 100, IPC, 1860.⁴³⁰ But at the same time it should also be remembered that if a man has real justification to exercise his right of private defence, he cannot be held liable if he slightly exceeds his right of private defence, e.g., where face to face with a murderous attack he fires two shots in quick succession, for these things cannot be weighed in golden scales.⁴³¹ The right of private defence should not be allowed to be pleaded or availed of as pretext for a vindictive, aggressive or retributive purpose.⁴³²

[s 99.9] CASES.—Justifiable harm.—

A party attempted to rescue a friend from unlawful police detention. Three rounds were fired to dispel them. This caused in their mind a reasonable apprehension of death or injury. They tried to snatch the police gun. A police informer intervened and died of injuries received in the process. The right of private defence was held to be not exceeded.⁴³³ In another case the Supreme Court accepted the defence version that there were four assailants who had come well prepared to assault at the door of their house. In such a situation accused persons could have a reasonable apprehension of death or at least of grievous hurt. It was a case of single gunshot which was not repeated. Therefore, it cannot be said that the accused persons had exceeded their right of private defence in any manner.⁴³⁴

In view of the fact that the accused was pursued, that he only picked up the weapon when he was chased and that he used it only once, his sentence was reduced to three years and nine months.⁴³⁵

[s 99.10] Attack on unarmed persons.—

No right of private defence can exist against an unarmed and unoffending individual,⁴³⁶ where the injury was caused to the victim on the vital parts of the body even though he and the witnesses present at the spot were all unarmed, it was held that the question of acting in self-defence did not arise.⁴³⁷

[s 99.11] Sudden quarrel.—

The right of private defence was held to be not available where the incident of lathi blows causing death took place in the course of a sudden fight.⁴³⁸

[s 99.12] More harm caused than necessary.—

Where a person killed a weak old woman found stealing at night,⁴³⁹. where a person caught a thief in his house at night and deliberately killed him with a pick-axe to prevent his escape,⁴⁴⁰. where a number of persons apprehending a thief committing house-breaking strangled him and subjected him to gross maltreatment when he was fully in their power,⁴⁴¹. and where a heavy and mechanically propelled vehicle like a jeep was used as a means or weapon for the exercise of the right of private defence,⁴⁴². the right of private defence was negated.⁴⁴³. Where the injuries suffered by the accused were of simple nature than those caused by him to the deceased persons and he went even to the extent of preventing a witness from carrying the victim to a hospital, it was held that the accused was an aggressor and was, therefore, not entitled to the right of private defence.⁴⁴⁴. Where, on the other hand, two drunk and armed raiders demanded money from the residents of a flat and in face to face with the inmates who resisted them, lost their lives, it being not known which inmate played what role, the Supreme Court held that it could not be said that more harm was caused than was necessary.⁴⁴⁵. Where the accused caused death in order to repel an attack by a party armed with lethal weapons and which had already caused injuries to the accused, it was held that the accused did not exceed his rights as it was not possible for him to have weighed in golden scales in the heat of the moment the number of injuries required to overcome the attack.⁴⁴⁶. Where the accused continued to assault the deceased even after he fell to the ground, the possibility of causing injuries in exercise of his right of private defence was ruled out.⁴⁴⁷.

Where the accused received an injury on his neck first, the right of private defence was held to have arisen. But it was shown that three injuries were caused in return one of them entering deep into the chest and causing death. The right of private defence was held to have been exceeded. The conviction was modified to one under section 304(1).⁴⁴⁸.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
405. Dalip, (1896) 18 All 246 , 252.
406. Kesho Ram, 1974 Cr LJ 814 : AIR 1974 SC 1158 [LNIND 1974 SC 130] .
407. Bhairo v State, 1941 Kar 324 ; Pagla Baba, (1957) Cr LJ 769 ; Ouseph Varkey, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 592 .
408. Deoman Shamji, (1958) 61 Bom LR 30 .
409. Mohamed Ismail v State, (1935) 13 Ran 754.
410. Jogendra Nath Mukerjee, (1897) 24 Cal 320 ; Tulsiram v State, (1888) 13 Bom 168; Haq Dad, (1925) 6 Lah 392; Achhru Ram, (1925) 7 Lah 104.
411. Ram Parves, (1944) 23 Pat 328.
412. Pukot Kotu, (1896) 19 Mad 349.

413. Kanwar Singh, (1965) 2 Cr LJ 1 : AIR 1965 SC 871 [LNIND 1964 SC 194] .
414. State of UP v Niyamat, 1987 3 SCC 434 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] : AIR 1987 SC 1652 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] : 1989 Cr LJ 1881 . See also Ramji Lal v State of Rajasthan, 1990 Cr LJ 392 Raj, police party arriving at a village at night to recover a woman and to hand her over to her father, the act being illegal and without jurisdiction, this section did not give protection to the police against resistance by villagers.
415. Poomalai Udayan, (1898) 21 Mad 296.
416. Bhai Lal Chowdhry, (1902) 29 Cal 417 .
417. Jogendra Nath Mukerjee, (1897) 24 Cal 320 .
418. Narsang Pathabhai, (1890) 14 Bom 441.
419. Alingal Kunhinayan, (1905) 28 Mad 454.
420. State of Orissa v Rabindranath, 1973 Cr LJ 1686 (FB-Ori).
421. Akonti Bora, 1980 Cr LJ 138 (Gau).
422. Satnarain Das, (1938) 17 Pat 607.
423. Narsang Pathabhai, (1890) 14 Bom 441; Pachkauri, (1897) 24 Cal 686 .
424. Maguni Charan Pradhan v State of Orissa, (1991) 71 Cut LT 710 : (1991) 3 SCC 352 [LNIND 1991 SC 191] : 1991 SCC (Cr) 580 : 1991 Cr LR (SC) 463 .
425. Ritaram Besra v State of Bihar, (2007) 15 SCC 383 .
426. Gokool Bowree, (1866) 5 WR (Cr) 33.
427. John Scutty v State, (1824) 1 C & P 319.
428. Ram Prasad Mahton, (1919) 4 PLJ 289 , 20 Cr LJ 375.
429. Jai Dev, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 495 : AIR 1963 SC 612 [LNIND 1962 SC 249] ; Amjad Khan, 1952 Cr LJ 648 : AIR 1952 SC 165 [LNIND 1952 SC 20] ; Puran Singh; 1975 Cr LJ 1479 : AIR 1975 SC 1674 [LNIND 1975 SC 174] ; followed in Pattu v State of MP, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1970 MP, father and son were entitled to ward off an attack on them while they were digging a water channel on their ground. Hira, 1972 Cr LJ 225 : AIR 1972 SC 244 .
430. State of UP. v Ram Swarup, 1974 Cr LJ 1035 : AIR 1974 SC 1570 [LNIND 1974 SC 472] . Where both parties raised guns in a quarrel but one of them lowered his gun, even so the other fired at him. No occasion for private defence. Conviction for murder upheld, Mohd. Yusuf v State of UP, AIR 1994 SC 1542 [LNIND 1994 SC 126] : (1994) 1 Cr LJ 1631 : 1994 Supp (2) SCC 32 .
431. Amjad Khan, supra; See also Jaidev, supra and Yogendra Morarji, 1980 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1980 SC 660 .
432. Munney Khan, (1970) 2 SCC 480 [LNIND 1970 SC 338] : AIR 1971 SC 1491 [LNIND 1970 SC 338] .
433. State of UP v Nyama, (1987) 3 SCC 434 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] . State of MP v Mishrilal, 2003 Cr LJ 2312 (SC) : (2003) 9 SCC 426 [LNIND 2003 SC 390] , the prosecution party and the accused party cause to be engaged in firing against each other. The father, who was one of the accused, received five injuries dangerous to life. The firing accused apprehended danger to the life of his father and fired in self-defence. The accused did not exceed the right of private defence.
434. State of UP v Gajey Singh, 2009 Cr LJ 2274 : (2009) 11 SCC 414 [LNIND 2009 SC 437] : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 1412.
435. R v Thompson, (2001) 1 Cr App R (S) 72 [CA (Crim Div)].
436. Gurbachan Singh, 1974 Cr LJ 463 : AIR 1974 SC 496 .
437. Baitullah v State of UP, AIR 1997 SC 3946 [LNIND 1997 SC 1322] : 1997 Cr LJ 4644 , Rukma v Jala, AIR 1997 SC 3207 : 1997 Cr LJ 4641 , a case which hanged on appreciation of evidence. Mavila Thamban Nambiar v State of Kerala, AIR 1997 SC 687 [LNIND 1997 SC 24] : (1997) 1 JT

367 private defence not available because the deceased was unarmed, accused persons armed with a pair of scissors. Vishal Singh v State of MP, 1998 Cr LJ 505 : AIR 1998 SC 308 [LNIND 1997 SC 1362], land dispute, revenue record not clear, accused in possession were fully armed, others came in wholly unarmed and became the victim of attack, private defence not allowed to accused.

438. Bihari Rai v State of Bihar, (2008) 15 SCC 778 [LNIND 2008 SC 1927] : AIR 2009 SC 18 [LNIND 2008 SC 1927] : 2009 Cr LJ 340 .

439. Gokool Bowree, (1866) 5 WR (Cr) 33.

440. Durwan Geer, (1866) 5 WR (Cr) 73. See Bag, (1902) PR No. 29 of 1902; Mammun, (1916) PR No. 35 of 1916.

441. Dhununjai Poly, (1870) 14 WR (Cr) 68.

442. Marudevi Avva, 1958 Cr LJ 33 .

443. See also Madan Mohan Pandey v State of UP, AIR 1991 SC 769 ; 1991 Cr LJ 467 : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 603 , where the Supreme Court emphasised that the nature of the weapon and the number of shots fired are helpful circumstances in determining excessive use of the right of private defence. Indiscriminate firing here, held right exceeded. For a general study of the subject see, Stanley Meng Heong Yeo, Rethinking Goodfaith in Excessive Private Defence, (1988) JILI 443.

444. Kanhiyalal v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1989 SC 1515 : 1989 Supp. 2 SCC 263 : 1989 Cr LJ 1482 : 1989 BBCJ 117 : 1990 SCC (Cr) 168.

445. Kishore Shambudatta Mishra v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1989 SC 1173 : 1989 Cr LJ 1149 : 1989 SCC (Cr) 464.

446. Buta Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1991 SC 1316 [LNIND 1991 SC 177] : 1991 Cr LJ 1464 : (1991) 2 SCC 612 [LNIND 1991 SC 177] . Vidya Saran Sharma v Sudarshan Lal, AIR 1993 SC 2476 : 1993 Cr LJ 3135 (SC), accused injured by the deceased, apprehending further danger he hit back with a single blow which proved fatal, acquittal on the ground of private defence; Thakarda Hamirji Gajuji v State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 3966 (Guj).

447. Harabailu Kariappa v State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 321 (Kant). Man Bharan Singh v State of MP, 1996 Cr LJ 2707 (MP) injuries disproportionately severe as against minor injuries, right exceeded, conviction under section 304 Pt. I. Naranjan Singh v Kuldip Singh, 1998 Cr LJ 845 : AIR 1998 SC 1490 [LNIND 1997 SC 1574] , the accused was not shown to be present on the spot and, therefore, the question of his exceeding the right of private defence did not arise. Achhaibar Prasad v State, 1997 Cr LJ 2666 : 1997 All LJ 705, the accused attacked and fired at a police constable in his bid to arrest him. Right of private defence not available to him.

448. Udaikumar Pandharinath Jadhav v State of Maharashtra, (2008) 5 SCC 214 [LNIND 2008 SC 1007] : AIR 2008 SC 2064 [LNIND 2008 SC 1007] : 2008 Cr LJ 2627 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 100] When the right of private defence of the body extends to causing death.

The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in the last preceding section, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant, if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right be of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely:—

First.—Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;

Secondly.—Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault;

Thirdly.—An assault with the intention of committing rape;

Fourthly.—An assault with the intention of gratifying unnatural lust;

Fifthly.—An assault with the intention of kidnapping or abducting;

Sixthly.—An assault with the intention of wrongfully confining a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to apprehend that he will be unable to have recourse to the public authorities for his release.

449. [Seventhly.—An act of throwing or administering acid or an attempt to throw or administer acid which may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such act.]

COMMENT.—

The law authorizes a man who is under a reasonable apprehension that his life is in danger or his body in risk of grievous hurt to inflict death upon his assailant either when the assault is attempted or directly threatened, but the apprehension must be reasonable and the violence inflicted must not be greater than is reasonably necessary for the purpose of self-defence. It must be proportionate to and commensurate with the quality and character of the act it is intended to meet and what is done in excess is not protected. Where the accused was attacked by three persons and sustained an injury on the forehead, a vital part, he had reasonable apprehension of some hurt to be caused to him and had the right of self-defence but had exceeded by causing more harm to his assailants than needed. He was liable under section 304, Part I, and not under section 302.⁴⁵⁰ Where after receiving nine injuries, two on vital parts, the accused fired one shot from his gun which hit fatally an innocent person, the right of private defence extending to cause death was still available to the accused. His conviction under section 304, Part I was set aside.⁴⁵¹ Where the complainant's party had deliberately gathered near the house of the accused and scolded them and caused injuries to his father, the accused was held justified in exercising the right of private defence to defend his father and his conviction under section 300 was set aside.⁴⁵² It is the reasonable apprehension of death or grievous hurt that gives rise to the right of private defence under clauses (1) and (2) of section 100, IPC, 1860., and it has got nothing to do with the actual injury that the person exercising the right of private defence has suffered, which may or may not be grievous.⁴⁵³ Where the accused fails to make out a case of reasonable apprehension, he cannot claim the right of private defence.⁴⁵⁴ Where the life of the accused was not endangered by the ladies armed with broom sticks and 'chappals', the accused was not entitled to stab one of the ladies to death in exercise of right of private defence.⁴⁵⁵

The extended right of private defence to the extent of causing death of the assailant arises only if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right is of one of the kinds mentioned in this section.⁴⁵⁶ Following some earlier rulings, the Supreme Court has re-emphasised that the mere fact of the accused sustaining some injuries in the course of the same transaction does not make it out conclusively that the accused had the occasion to cause death in private defence.⁴⁵⁷ Where the attacking party chanced to get at the wife of the accused and the latter pounced upon them with a weapon attacking one of them which was warded off, another came forward and the accused successfully struck him and he died, the accused was held to be within his rights.⁴⁵⁸ As against this where two were fighting with lathis and the brother of one of them, who was outside the danger, struck a lathi blow to the other killing him, he was held to be guilty under section 304-I.⁴⁵⁹ In a communal tension, both sides pelted stones. The accused fired a gun shot causing death of a person of the other group though no one had sustained any injury as a result of pelting of stones by the other group. It was held that the accused had no occasion to act under the right of private defence.⁴⁶⁰

In order to justify the act of causing death of assailant, the accused has simply to satisfy the Court that there was reasonable apprehension of death or grievous hurt. Question whether the apprehension was reasonable or not is a question of fact depending upon the facts and circumstances of each case and no straitjacket formula can be prescribed in this regard. Weapon used, the manner and nature of assault and other surrounding circumstances should be taken into account while evaluating whether the apprehension was justified or not. In the instant case, accused G was assaulted on head by a sharp-edged weapon which caused a bone-deep injury. As per the defence version there were four assailants who had come well prepared at the door of accused's house to commit assault. Reasonable apprehension of death or at least of grievous hurt, therefore, could not be ruled out. In such a situation, if single gunshot was fired it could not be said that the accused persons had exceeded their right of private defence in any manner.⁴⁶¹

[s 100.1] 'Abducting'.—

On a plain reading of clause fifth of this section, there does not seem to be any reason for holding that the word 'abducting' used in the clause means anything more than what is defined as "abduction" in section 362. All that the clause requires is that there should be an assault which is an offence against the human body and that assault should be with the intention of abducting, and whenever these elements are present the clause will be applicable.⁴⁶² Thus, a woman could not be taken away by force even by her own husband from a paramour's house and if in these circumstances the paramour and his brother killed the husband to prevent her abduction by the husband, they would be protected by sub-clause (5) of section 100 of the Penal Code.⁴⁶³ Here law seems to be contrary to our social conscience, but this interpretation is perfectly in accord with the language of section 100, IPC, 1860, and the decision of the Supreme Court in *Viswanath's case*⁴⁶⁴ where too the husband was put to death by a clean stab by his brother-in-law as he was trying to take away his wife by force from his father-in-law's house and in the process had merely dragged his unwilling wife to some distance.

[s 100.2] Rescuing woman-folk from attack on modesty.—

The accused heard the cries for help of his widowed sister-in-law. He ran to her house with gandasa. He found the attacker grappling with her and trying to outrage her modesty. The accused saved her from his clutches and inflicted a gandasa blow while he was going to run away. The act of the accused was held to have been done in the exercise of the right of private defence. The accused was acquitted.⁴⁶⁵

[s 100.3] CASES.—Exceeding the right.—

The accused was being chased. He assaulted the chaser. The latter died. The injuries found on the person of the deceased were more grievous than those on the body of the accused. It was held that the accused exceeded his right of private defence his conviction was altered from under section 300 to one under section 304, Part I.⁴⁶⁶ Whenever accused-party sustains injuries in the same occurrence and when the injuries are grievous in nature it is incumbent upon the prosecution to explain the injuries on the person of the accused.⁴⁶⁷ Where the accused might have acted on self-defence in the beginning, but once the deceased was. The prosecution party consisted of four members. They carried blunt weapons. They assembled in front of the house of the accused. They came as aggressors. The accused suffered a bone deep injury on his head. The accused fired a single gunshot which caused death of one of the members on the prosecution side. The Court held that the right of private defence was not exceeded. The accused was given the benefit of doubt.⁴⁶⁸

Where the victim was throwing broken bricks at the accused who received simple injuries and the accused fired at him with his gun, it was held that he exceeded the right of private defence. There was no justification for using the gun in such as to cause death. Conviction under section 304 Part I was restored.⁴⁶⁹ The right of private defence was not allowed to be claimed merely on the ground that there was a quarrel and the accused sustained injuries in the course of it.⁴⁷⁰

[s 100.4] No danger.—

Two friends were sitting together and consuming liquor. They quarrelled and exchanged blows. One of them inflicted two knife wounds on vital parts of the body of the other. The victim had posed no danger to the attacker, nor did he have any weapons with him. The plea of self-defence was held to be not available. The accused was convicted for murder.⁴⁷¹ The deceased came to his land and asked the accused party to get the land measured and also tried to dislodge a pole fixed by them. There was no imminent danger to person or property from any act of the deceased. No injuries caused to anybody. It was held that there was no right of self-defence in the exercise of which the deceased could have been killed.⁴⁷²

[s 100.5] Private defence.—

The accused was without any arms when the quarrel started. His action of picking up a stick lying on the ground and hitting the deceased on his head with it showed that he was trying to save himself from the attack by the deceased and his son. The accused was acquitted because the circumstances made it obvious that he was acting in self-defence.⁴⁷³

[s 100.6] Burden of proof.—

The right of private defence is a plea which is available to the accused by the burden of proving the same is on him.⁴⁷⁴ Proof by preponderance of probabilities is sufficient.⁴⁷⁵ The burden of proving the right of private defence is not as onerous as that of the prosecution to prove its case. Preponderance of probabilities in favour of the defence is enough to discharge the burden.⁴⁷⁶ While the prosecution is required to prove its case beyond reasonable doubt, the accused need not establish his plea of self-defence to the hilt and may discharge onus by showing preponderance of probabilities in favour of that plea on basis of material on record, injuries received by an accused, imminence of threat to his safety, injuries caused by accused and circumstances whether accused had time to have recourse to public authorities were held to relevant factors. But number of injuries is not always considered to be a safe criterion for determining who the aggressor was. Whenever injuries are on the body of the accused person, presumption need not necessarily be raised that accused person had caused injuries in his defence. Defence has to further to show that injuries so caused on accused probabilise version of private defence. Non-explanation of injuries sustained by the accused at about the time of occurrence or in course of the altercation is a very important circumstance but mere non-explanation may not affect prosecution case in all cases.⁴⁷⁷.

The burden stands discharged by showing preponderance of probabilities in favour of the plea of the accused either by himself adducing positive evidence or by referring to circumstances transpiring from prosecution evidence itself. Proof beyond reasonable doubt is not required. The Court can consider the plea even if not taken by the accused if the material on record makes it available for consideration.⁴⁷⁸.

[s 100.7] Acid Attack (Clause 7).—

The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right against an act of throwing or administering acid or an attempt to throw or administer acid which may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such act. This new category of offence (acid attacks) to which a right to private defence is inserted by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013⁴⁷⁹. on the recommendation of Justice Verma Committee.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammam Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
449. Ins. by Act 13 of 2013, section 2 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).
450. Scaria v State of Kerala, AIR 1995 SC 2342 : 1995 Cr LJ 3990 .
451. Wassan Singh v State of Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 878 : (1996) 1 SCC 458 [LNIND 1995 SC 1195] ; Ghurey Lal v State of UP, (2008) 10 SCC 450 [LNIND 2008 SC 1535] ; Dattu Shamrao Valake v State of Maharashtra, 2005 Cr LJ 2555 : AIR 2005 SC 2331 [LNIND 2005 SC 383] : (2005) 11 SCC 261 [LNIND 2005 SC 383] .
452. Shive Chand v State of UP, 1995 Cr LJ 3869 (All).

453. Raja Ram, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 85 (All); See also Abdul Kadir v State of Assam, 1985 Cr LJ 1898 : AIR 1986 SC 305 : 1985 Supp SCC 603 .
454. Vishvas v State, 1978 Cr LJ 484 : AIR 1978 SC 414 [LNIND 1978 SC 17] . Where there is no right of private defence, e.g. causing death of a person in order to prevent him from exercising lawful rights on lawfully held land, it would be punishable as murder, Asha Ram v State of Rajasthan, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2431 (Raj).
455. Vishnu Narayan Moger v State of Karnataka, 1996 Cr LJ 1121 (Kant). Right of self-defence not available where the accused came prepared for fight and attack on unarmed victim, Baj Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1953 : 1995 Cr LJ 3605 .
456. Ram Saiya, (1948) All 165 . See also Kishore Shambudatta Mishra v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1989 SC 1173 : 1989 Cr LJ 1149 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 399 , discussed under the preceding section. Also Raza Pasha v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1793 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : (1984) 4 SCC 441 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : 1984 SCC (Cr) 605, the person shot at from house top and killed was outside the house at that time, held that there was no occasion for private defence, conviction under section 302. Wassan Singh v State of Punjab, (1996) 1 SCC 458 [LNIND 1995 SC 1195] : 1996 Cr LJ 878 , the accused surrounded by a number of assailants who were all inflicting injuries on him, he shot at them hitting an innocent person who died, right of private defence not lost thereby.
457. Paras Nath Singh v State of Bihar and Hare Krishna Singh v State of Bihar, 1988 Cr LJ 925 : AIR 1988 SC 863 [LNIND 1988 SC 139] : (1988) 2 SCC 95 [LNIND 1988 SC 139] , relying on Onkar Nath Singh v State of UP, AIR 1974 SC 1550 [LNIND 1974 SC 154] : 1974 Cr LJ 1015 : (1975) 3 SCC 276 [LNIND 1974 SC 154] : 1975 SCC (Cr) 884. But injuries suffered by the accused must be explained to be not caused in the same episode and if the information as to injuries on the accused is suppressed by the prosecution, the case becomes doubtful. Prem Singh v State of HP, 1989 Cr LJ 1903 HP. Dispute over turn for irrigation, both sides injured, the fact of injuries on the accused suppressed and FIR also filed after delay, acquittal, Desa Singh v Punjab, 1996 Cr LJ 3381 (P&H). Another similar dispute and death in mutual fight, State of Haryana v Karan Singh, 1996 Cr LJ 3698 (P&H).
458. Purna Chandra Barik v State of Orissa, 1988 Cr LJ 731 Orissa. Where the finding of the High Court was that the accused, a police sub-inspector, was assaulted by the deceased and his companions and he used firearms causing death under the apprehension that otherwise he would be killed, this finding was held by the Supreme Court to be neither perverse nor palpably erroneous, State of Punjab v Ajaib Singh, AIR 1995 SC 975 [LNIND 1995 SC 136] : (1995) 2 Cr LJ 1456 : (1995) 2 SCC 486 [LNIND 1995 SC 136] . Warding off two successive attacks by the complainant party, clause 'firstly' and 'secondly' were held to be attracted, Raj Singh v State of Punjab, (1995) 1 Cr LJ 680 P&H.
459. Sudhir Mahanta v State of Orissa, 1980 Cr LJ 1918 Orissa. Kesha v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1993 SC 2651 : 1993 Cr LJ 3674 : 1995 Supp (3) SCC 743 , accused causing death without any reasonable apprehension of death or grievous hurt to himself, punishment for exceeding the right of private defence. Bajinath Mahton v State of Bihar, 1993 Cr LJ 2833 : AIR 1993 SC 2323 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 1 , right of private defence exceeded in a group clash. Dular Mahto v State of Bihar, AIR 1993 SC 927 : 1993 Cr LJ 165 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 467 , excesses in a group clash. Babu Ram v State of Haryana, 1993 Cr LJ 3788 (P&H), the case is of doubtful validity because aggressors were given the benefit of the right of private defence.
460. Parshottam Lal Ji Waghela v State of Gujarat, 1992 Cr LJ 2521 : 1992 Supp (3) SCC 194 . In a direct confrontation, there was the possibility of the accused becoming apprehensive of danger to himself and his family, he fired only one round, plea of private defence sustained, Harish Kumar v MP, 1996 Cr LJ 3511 : AIR 1996 SC 3433 [LNIND 1996 SC 1027] .

461. State of UP v Gajey Singh, (2009) 11 SCC 414 [LNIND 2009 SC 437] : 2009 Cr LJ 2274 : (2009) 3 All LJ 647.
462. Vishwanath v State of UP, 1960 Cr LJ 154 , (1960) 1 SCR 646 [LNIND 1959 SC 150] : AIR 1960 SC 67 [LNIND 1959 SC 150] .
463. Nankau v State, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 116 (All).
464. Vishwanath, supra.
465. Bhadar Ram v State of Rajasthan, 2000 Cr LJ 1174 (Raj). Badan Nath v State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 2268 (Raj), causing injury to save daughter from being raped.
466. Suresh Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1773 [LNIND 1999 SC 324] : 1999 Cr LJ 2585 ; Shankar Balu Patil v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 450 : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 591, the nature of injuries upon the accused and those upon the deceased clearly showed that the accused exceeded the right of private defence. Conviction under section 304 Pt. I and seven years imprisonment justified.
467. Manphool Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2018 SC 3995 .
468. Gajey Singh v State of UP, 2001 Cr LJ 2838 (All); State of UP v Laeeq, 1999 Cr LJ 2877 at p 2879 : AIR 1999 SC 1742 [LNIND 1999 SC 476] , no allegation of any fear, no right of private defence. Ram Dhani v State, 1997 Cr LJ 2286 (All), the accused exceeded the right of private defence in causing death in circumstances in which justification for causing death was not available to him.
469. Shingara Singh v State of Haryana, (2003) 12 SCC 758 [LNIND 2003 SC 945] : AIR 2004 SC 124 [LNIND 2003 SC 945] : 2004 Cr LJ 828 . Anil Kumar v State of UP, 2004 All LJ 3779 : 2005 SCC (Cr) 178, the accused receiving minor injuries fired at the deceased to cause death, private defence exceeded.
470. Chacko v State of Kerala, (2004) 12 SCC 269 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] : AIR 2004 SC 2688 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] : (2004) 1 KLT 884 [LNIND 2004 SC 86] .
471. Inacio Manual Miranda v State of Goa, 1999 Cr LJ 422 (Bom); State of MP v Ramesh, 2005 Cr LJ 652 SC : AIR 2006 SC 204 [LNIND 2005 SC 881] : (2005) 13 SCC 247 [LNIND 2005 SC 881] , the plea of private defence cannot be based on surmises and conjectures, and guess work. Father asked his son to get his gun and shoot because they were irresponsible, death and injuries caused, conviction for murder because there was no danger which could create the right of private offence.
472. Dhaneswar Mahakud v State of Orissa, 2006 Cr LJ 2113 SC : AIR 2006 SC 1727 [LNIND 2006 SC 252] : (2006) 9 SCC 307 [LNIND 2006 SC 252] .
473. Krishanan v State of TN, 2006 Cr LJ 3907 : AIR 2006 SC 3037 [LNIND 2006 SC 612] : (2006) 11 SCC 304 [LNIND 2006 SC 612] .
474. Kishan Chand v State of UP, (2007) 14 SCC 737 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] : AIR 2008 SC 133 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] : (2007) 6 All LJ 658.
475. V Subramani v State of TN, 2005 Cr LJ 1727 : AIR 2005 SC 1983 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] : (2005) 10 SCC 358 [LNIND 2005 SC 224] .
476. Dharminder v State of HP, AIR 2002 SC 3097 [LNIND 2002 SC 537] .
477. Dharam v State of Haryana, (2007) 15 SCC 241 [LNIND 2006 SC 1108] . Raghibir Singh v State of Haryana, (2008) 16 SCC 33 [LNIND 2008 SC 2228] : AIR 2009 SC 1223 [LNIND 2008 SC 2228] : (2009) 73 AIC 93 , right of private defence not made out on facts.
478. James Martin v State of Kerala, (2004) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] , Laxman Singh v Poonam Singh, (2004) 10 SCC 94 [LNIND 2003 SC 767] : AIR 2003 SC 3204 [LNIND 2003 SC 767] , Kulwant Singh v State of Punjab, (2004) 9 SCC 257 [LNIND 2004 SC 105] : AIR 2004 SC 2875 [LNIND 2004 SC 105] , right of private defence could not be proved. Bagdi Ram v State of MP, (2004) 12 SCC 302 [LNIND 2003 SC 1047] : AIR 2004 SC 387 [LNIND 2003 SC 1047] : 2004 Cr LJ

632 , no right of private defence to use dangerous arms when the other side was absolutely unarmed.

479. Act 13 of 2013, section 2 (w.e.f. 3-2-2013).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 101] When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

If the offence be not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

COMMENT.—

Any harm short of death can be inflicted in exercising the right of private defence in any case which does not fall within the provisions of section 100. Thus, where only some mischief was caused to the factory and some brickbats were thrown by agitating workers, the owner of the factory was not justified in killing a worker by firing a shot from his revolver. As there was no apprehension of death or grievous hurt to his person, the accused could not get the benefit of clauses (1) and (2) of section 100 or section 103, IPC, 1860. He had only a limited right of private defence to cause any other harm than death within the meaning of section 101, IPC, 1860, and as such having exercised his right of private defence he was liable to be convicted under section 304-Part I, IPC, 1860.⁴⁸⁰ The accused was hit by a single brickbat or a stone piece and suffered a simple head-injury. After sometime he fired at the unarmed assailant causing grievous injury to his abdomen. The Supreme Court held that keeping in mind his simple hurt and the time gap between that and the gunshot wound caused by him, his action was a retaliation rather than act of private defence. His conviction under section 326 was accordingly upheld.⁴⁸¹ The right of private defence was held to have been exceeded where a member of the opposite side was killed after snatching his pistol.⁴⁸² The person who died came along with his brothers to stage a fight with the accused because of an earlier act of insult on the part of the accused. A single stab wound was administered to him, which fell upon his lower abdomen, of which he died. The accused and his wife were also injured in the process. It was held that the accused had not exceeded his right of private defence.⁴⁸³

When dealing with questions relating to right of private defence of the body this section and section 100 should be read together.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .

2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.

3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).

4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).

480. Mahinder Paul v State, 1979 Cr LJ 584 : AIR 1979 SC 577 [LNIND 1978 SC 389] ; See also Yogendra Morarij, 1980 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1980 SC 660 .

481. State of J&K v Hazara Singh, 1980 Cr LJ 1501 : 1981 SCC (Cr) 537 : AIR 1981 SC 451 .

482. Ghunnu v State of UP, 1980 Cr LJ \(NOC\) 15 : AIR 1980 SC 864 : 1980 All LJ 397 : 1979 SCC (Cr) 438. See also Chuhar Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1991 SC 1052 : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 455 : 1991 SCC (Cr) 1066, where the circumstances did not justify causing death by gun shot injuries. Bandlamuddi Atchuta Ramaiah v State of AP, AIR 1997 SC 496 : 1996 Cr LJ 4463 death of neighbour caused at a time when there was no apprehension of loss of life or property. Right exceeded. Conviction under section 304 Part I.

483. Ramchandran v State, 1994 Cr LJ 2741 (Mad); Sri Kumar Sharma v State of Bihar, 2003 Cr LJ 2258 (Pat), right of private defence found justified, hence, acquittal.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 102] Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of the body.

The right of private defence of the body commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body arises from an attempt or threat to commit the offence though the offence may not have been committed; and it continues as long as such apprehension of danger to the body continues.

COMMENT.—

This section indicates when the right of private defence of the body commences and till what time it continues. The right commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body arises from an attempt, or threat, or commit the offence, although the offence may not have been committed, but not until that there is that reasonable apprehension. The right lasts so long as the reasonable apprehension of the danger to the body continues.⁴⁸⁴ It commences and continues as long as danger to body lasts. The extent to which the exercise of the right will be justified will depend not on the actual danger but on whether there was reasonable apprehension of such danger. There must be an attempt or threat and consequent thereon an apprehension of danger; but it is not a mere idle threat, or every apprehension of a rash or timid mind, that will justify the exercise of the right. Reasonable ground for the apprehension is requisite. Suppose the threat to proceed from a woman or child and to be addressed to a strong man, in such a case there could hardly be a reasonable apprehension. Present and imminent danger seems to be meant.⁴⁸⁵ The person exercising a right of private defence must consider whether the threat to his person or his property is real and immediate. If he reaches the conclusion reasonably that the threat is immediate and real, he is entitled to exercise his right. In the exercise of his right, he must use force necessary for the purpose and he must stop using the force as soon as the threat has disappeared. So long as the threat lasts and the right of private defence can be legitimately exercised; if the danger is continuing, the right is there; if the danger or the apprehension about it has ceased to exist there is no longer the right of private defence.⁴⁸⁶ Right commences, as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body arises from an attempt, or threat, or commit the offence, although the offence may not have been committed but not until that there is that reasonable apprehension. The right lasts so long as the reasonable apprehension of the danger to the body continues.⁴⁸⁷ There is no right to inflict punishment on the wrong-doer for his past act after the apprehension has ceased to exist. The right of defence ends with the necessity for it. So where the deceased was fleeing for his life, there was no justification to shoot him down. This would be a sheer case of murder and nothing else.⁴⁸⁸ Where the testimony of the independent witness showed that the accused chased one of the deceased who fled away from the scene of occurrence and killed him, they could not be said to have right of private defence as regards the killing of such deceased.⁴⁸⁹ Though the nature of apprehension depends upon the nature of weapon intended to be used or used, it cannot be said that as the complainant's party had only used lathi, the accused was not justified in using his spear especially when a blow with a lathi was aimed at a vulnerable part like the head.⁴⁹⁰

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.

3. Musammam Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
484. Sekar v State, AIR 2002 SC 3667 [LNIND 2002 SC 628] : (2002) 8 SCC 354 [LNIND 2002 SC 628] .
485. M&M 78; James Martin v State of Kerala, (2004) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] : (2004) 1 KLT 513 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] , explanation of the starting point of the right and its end point.
486. Jai Dev v State of Punjab, 1963 (1) Cr LJ 495 : AIR 1963 SC 612 [LNIND 1962 SC 249] .
487. Laxman Singh v Poonam Singh, AIR 2003 SC 3204 [LNIND 2003 SC 767] : (2004) 10 SCC 94 [LNIND 2003 SC 767] ; Bishna v State of WB, AIR 2006 SC 302 [LNIND 2005 SC 873] : (2005) 12 SCC 657 [LNIND 2005 SC 873] ; Babulal Bhagwan Khandare v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2005 SC 1460 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] : (2005) 10 SCC 404 [LNIND 2004 SC 1203] .
488. State of UP v Ramswarup, 1974 Cr LJ 1035 : AIR 1974 SC 1570 [LNIND 1974 SC 472] ; Onkarnath, 1974 Cr LJ 1015 : AIR 1974 SC 1550 [LNIND 1974 SC 154] .
489. State of UP v Roop Singh, AIR 1996 SC 215 : 1996 Cr LJ 410 .
490. Deo Narain, 1973 Cr LJ 677 : AIR 1973 SC 473 [LNIND 1972 SC 572] . See also Sarejerac Sahadeo Gaikwad v State, 1997 Cr LJ 3839 (Bom).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 103] When the right of private defence of property extends to causing death.

The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the wrong-doer, if the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right, be an offence of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely:—

First.—Robbery;

Secondly.—House-breaking by night;

Thirdly.—Mischief by fire committed on any building, tent or vessel, which building, tent or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property;

Fourthly.—Theft, mischief, or house-trespass, under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

State Amendments

Karnataka.—The following amendments were made by Karnataka Act No. 8 of 1972, s. 2 (w.e.f. 7-10-1972).

In its application to the State of Karnataka in s. 103(1) in clause Thirdly—

- (i) after the words "mischief by fire", insert the words "or any explosive substance";
- (ii) after the words "as a human dwelling, or", insert the words "as a place of worship or".

(2) after clause Fourthly, insert the following clause, namely:—

Fifthly.—Mischief by fire or any explosive substance committed on any property used or intended to be used for the purpose of Government or any local authority, statutory body or company owned or controlled by Government or railway or any vehicle used or adapted to be used for the carriage of passengers for hire or reward.

Maharashtra.—The following amendments were made by Maharashtra Act No. 19 of 1971, s. 26 (w.e.f. 31-12-1971).

In its application to the State of Maharashtra, In section 103, add the following at the end, namely:—

"Fifthly.—Mischief by fire or any explosive substance committed on any property used or intended to be used for the purposes of Government or any local authority, statutory body, company owned or controlled by Government, railway or tramway, or on any vehicle used or adapted to be used, for the carriage of passengers for hire or reward."

Uttar Pradesh.—The following amendments were made by U.P. Act No. 29 of 1970, s. 2, w.e.f. 17-7-1970.

In its application to the State of Uttar Pradesh, In section 103, after clause Fourthly, add the following clause, namely:—

Fifthly.—Mischief by fire or any explosive substance committed on—

- (a) Any property used or intended to be used for the purpose of Government, or any local authority or other corporation owned or controlled by the Government, or
- (b) any railway as defined in clause (4) of section 3 of the Indian Railways Act, 1890 or railways stores as defined in the Railways Stores (Unlawful Possession) Act, 1955,;or

(c) any transport vehicle as defined in clause (33) of section 2 of the Motor Vehicles Act, 1939.

COMMENT.—

Death caused in defence of property.—Section 100 enumerates the cases in which the right of private defence of the body extends to the causing of death; this section enumerates the cases in which it extends to the causing of death in defence of property.

A person employed to guard the property of his employer is protected by sections 97, 99, 103 and 105 if he causes death in safeguarding his employer's property when there is reason to apprehend that the person whose death has been caused was about to commit one of the offences mentioned in this section or to attempt to commit one of those offences. A person whose duty it is to guard a public building is in the same position, that is to say, it is his duty to protect the property of his employer and he may take such steps for this purpose as the law permits. The fact that the property to be guarded is public property does not extend the protection given to a guard. Therefore, a police constable on guard duty at a magazine or other public building is not entitled to fire at a person merely because the latter does not answer his challenge.⁴⁹¹ The deceased, none of whom was in possession of any dangerous weapons, were harvesting crop on a plot of land with peaceful intention under the protection of police. The accused who claimed the crops did not approach the authorities for redress, although they had time to do so, sent away the police constables by a ruse and then attacked the deceased with guns and other dangerous weapons and shot them down at close range. It was held by the Supreme Court that the acts of the deceased did not amount to robbery and that the accused had no right of private defence of property.⁴⁹² The accused was in possession of the plots which were under litigation. Finding his opponent, a blind man, getting the plots ploughed, the accused asked him to stop ploughing. On this, 8–10 persons armed with spears and 'lathis' proceeded towards him. The accused fired a shot from his gun causing death of his opponent, the blind man. The Court observed that a blind villager could not be thought of going to take possession of the plots without mobilising enough man power to deal with resistance likely to be put up by his adversary. It was held that in the circumstances the right of private defence of the person became available to the accused.⁴⁹³

In the words of the Supreme Court, the High Court committed an error in relation to the plea of self-defence raised on behalf of the accused to the effect that the incident took place at an open space. There is no law that the right of self-defence cannot be exercised in relation to an open space.⁴⁹⁴ Reasonable force may be used in defence of property. It would not in general be reasonable to kill in defence of property alone.⁴⁹⁵

[s 103.1] Trespasser.—

The right of private defence of property extending to causing of death is not available in cases of trespass on open land.⁴⁹⁶

[s 103.2] Causing death while on patrol duty.—

The accused constable killed his head constable. The accused was doing his patrolling duty at the time on a bridge. He claimed to have fired at somebody whom he saw with firearm near the value tower, which was neither used for human dwelling nor for custody of property. He did not plead that he entertained apprehension of death or grievous hurt. The Court said that the plea of private defence extending to the causing of death was not tenable.⁴⁹⁷

[s 103.3] CASES.—

The accused did not close his flour mill on the day of "Bharat Bandh", organized by some political parties. The activists entered the mill and demanded closure. They were armed with sharp-edged weapons. They threatened and assaulted the person who was operating the mill. He fired at them resulting in death of two persons and also injuring some innocent people. His property was set on fire. It was held that the acts of the accused were within the reasonable limits of the right of private defence. His conviction was set aside.⁴⁹⁸

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
491. Jamuna Singh, (1944) 23 Pat 908.
492. Gurdatta Mal, AIR 1965 SC 257 [LNIND 1964 SC 30] : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 242 . Champer v State of Orissa, 1988 Cr LJ 1882 Orissa, wherein a land dispute, death was caused in excess of the right of private defence. Mahabir Choudhary v State of Bihar, AIR 1996 SC 1998 [LNIND 1996 SC 891] : 1996 Cr LJ 2860 , causing death in response to mischief to property, there being no fear of death or grievous hurt, held right exceeded. Ram Bilas Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 530 [LNIND 2001 SC 2789] , irrigation dispute, appellants came with pre-determination and also more armed and did more harm than necessary. They were not entitled to any benefit under the section or to the benefit of section 300, exception 2.
493. Chandra Shekhar Tiwari v State, 1993 Cr LJ 2159 (All).
494. Kishan Chand v State of UP, (2007) 14 SCC 737 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] : AIR 2008 SC 133 [LNIND 2007 SC 1190] : (2007) 6 All LJ 658.
495. Kashi Ram v State of Rajasthan, (2008) 3 SCC 55 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] : AIR 2008 SC 1172 [LNIND 2008 SC 187] .
496. Jassa Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2002 SC 520 [LNIND 2002 SC 13] : 2002 Cr LJ 563 ; Puttan v State of TN, AIR 2000 SC 3405 (2) : 2000 SCC (Cr) 1504, the circumstances showed that the accused were entitled to private defence of property. But procurement of a lethal weapon, and the number of injuries inflicted by him showed that the accused crossed all frontiers of private defence. Conviction was altered to one under section 304 Part I. Gokula v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 4053 : AIR 1998 SC 3016 [LNIND 1998 SC 743] , two persons seen on the land were not shown to be trespassers, there was no question of any justification for causing their death in defence of property. The accused convicted for murder. Another similar case, Jotram v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1492 (Raj); Arjunan v State of TN, 1997 Cr LJ 2327 (Mad), in a sudden quarrel over the right to cut a tree, the accused gave a blow of the wooden reaper on the head of the deceased causing death, the tree stood on the land of the deceased and was in his actual physical possession, the right of private defence not available to the accused. See also Govind Singh v State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 1562 (Raj), no proof of trespassing cattle, yet attack and killing, conviction under section 304, Part II.

497. Bhupendra Singh A Chudasama v State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 3790 [LNIND 1997 SC 1378] : 1998 Cr LJ 57 .

498. James Martin v State of Kerala, \(2004\) 2 SCC 203 [LNIND 2003 SC 1097] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 104] When such right extends to causing any harm other than death.

If the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, be theft, mischief, or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the wrong-doer of any harm other than death.

COMMENT.—

This section applies in cases where an injury (but not death) is inflicted on the offender in the course of his committing the offences of theft, mischief, or criminal trespass by the person exercising the right of private defence. But the section does not apply to a case where death has been caused in exercise of the supposed right of private defence.⁴⁹⁹ Even so where the accused had killed a person by exceeding his right of private defence of property under this section, his case would fall within the ambit of Exception-II to section 300 IPC, 1860, and his offence would amount to culpable homicide not amounting to murder. He could not, therefore, be punished with a sentence of death. In the instant case the sentence was altered to one of life imprisonment.⁵⁰⁰

Sections 101 and 104 restrict the right of private defence in certain cases to voluntarily causing hurt or grievous hurt. Section 101 is a corollary to section 100, and this section to section 103.

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
 2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
 3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
 4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
 5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
- ⁴⁹⁹. Ramram Mahton, (1947) 26 Pat 550.
- ⁵⁰⁰. Jai Bhagwan v State of Haryana, AIR 1999 SC 1083 [LNIND 1999 SC 116] : 1999 Cr LJ 1634 accused party was in possession of the land into which the other party entered for tilling it. The mother of the accused exhorted them and they murderously assaulted the deceased. The act amounted to criminal trespass within the meaning of section 411. The right of self-defence to the extent of causing death did not exist. The offence of murder was made out. State of UP v Laeeq, AIR 1999 SC 1942 [LNIND 1999 SC 447] : 1999 Cr LJ 2879 exceeding the right of private defence, punishment under section 304.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 105] Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property.

The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences.

The right of private defence of property against theft continues till the offender has effected his retreat with the property or either the assistance of the public authorities is obtained, or the property has been recovered.

The right of private defence of property against robbery continues as long as the offender causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or as long as the fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant personal restraint continues.

The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief.

The right of private defence of property against house-breaking by night continues as long as the house-trespass which has been begun by such house-breaking continues.

COMMENT.—

This section indicates when the right of defence of property commences and till what period it continues. It is similar to section 102.

[s 105.1] First clause.—

The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to property commences. Before such apprehension commences the owner of the property is not called upon to apply for protection to the public authorities. The right commences not when the actual danger to the property commences but when there is reasonable apprehension of danger.^{501.}

[s 105.2] Second clause.—

The right of private defence of property against theft continues till (1) the offender has affected his retreat with the property, or (2) the assistance of public authorities is obtained, or (3) the property has been recovered.^{502.} An offender is to be considered as having affected his retreat when he has once got off having escaped immediate pursuit not having been made. A recapture of the plundered property, while it is in course of being carried away, is authorized, for the taking and retaking is one transaction. But when the offence has been committed and the property removed, a recapture after an interval of time by the owner or by other persons on his behalf, however justifiable, cannot be deemed an exercise of the right of defence of property. The recovery which the section contemplates seems to be a recovery either immediate or made before the offender has reached his final retreat.^{503.} Where the appellants followed up tracks purporting to be those of their stolen cattle, and prior to the arrival of the police (for whose assistance one of their party had ridden away) proceeded to the complainants' village and fired at them, it was held that the appellants' right of private defence of their property had been put an end to by the successful retreat of the thieves, and that their alleged rediscovery of the cattle in the complainants' possession could not revive that right.^{504.}

[s 105.3] Third clause.—

A rightful owner in peaceful possession of his land is entitled to defend his property against any person or persons who threaten to dispossess him. The law does not expect any cowardice on his part when there is real and imminent danger to his property from outside sources. Thus, a rightful owner is entitled to throw out, by using such force as would in the circumstances of the case appear to be reasonable necessary, any person who tries to invade his right to peaceful possession of his property. But if the trespasser has settled in the possession of the property, the recourse which the rightful person must adopt, is to recover possession in accordance with law and not by force. In such a case the trespasser would be entitled to defend his possession even against a rightful owner if the latter tries to evict him by use of force. But no hard and fast rule can be laid down in this behalf because much would depend on the facts of each case.^{505.}

[s 105.4] Fourth clause.—

In the case of criminal trespass and mischief the right of private defence ceases to exist as soon as the commission of these offences ceases.^{506.}

[s 105.5] Fifth clause.—

The right of private defence against house-breaking continues only so long as the house-trespass continues; hence, where a person followed a thief and killed him in the open, after the house-trespass had ceased, it was held that he could not plead the right of private defence.^{507.}

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
3. Musammat Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
501. Chakradhar, (1964) 2 Cr LJ 696 .
502. Punjabrao, (1945) Nag 881.
503. M & M 81; Amar Singh, AIR 1968 Raj 11 [LNIND 1966 RAJ 160] .
504. Mir Dad, (1925) 7 Lah 21.

505. Maguni Charan Pradhan v State of Orissa, (1991) 3 SCC 352 [LNIND 1991 SC 191] : 1991 (2) Crimes 261 (SC).

506. Rajesh Kumar v Dharamvi, 1997 Cr LJ 2242 : AIR 1997 SC 3769 [LNIND 1997 SC 445] , the accused came to the place of occurrence and attacked the complainant after the latter had already damaged the outer door of the house. It was held that the accused had no right of private defence.

507. Balakee Jolahed, (1868) 10 WR (Cr) 9; Gulbadan v State, (1885) PR No. 25 of 1885.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IV GENERAL EXCEPTIONS

THIS chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations.

The word 'offence' in this chapter denotes a thing punishable under the Code or under any special or local law when it satisfied the conditions laid down in section 40 of the Code.

The "general exceptions" contained in sections 76–106 make an offence a non-offence. The "general exceptions" enacted by Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) are of universal application and for the sake of brevity of expression, instead of repeating in every section that the definition is to be taken subject to the exceptions, the Legislature by section 6 IPC, 1860 enacted that all the definitions must be regarded as subject to the general exceptions. Therefore, general exceptions are part of definition of every offence contained in IPC, 1860, but the burden to prove their existence lied on the accused.¹

The following acts are exempted under the Code from criminal liability:–

1. Act of a person bound by law to do a certain thing (section 76).
2. Act of a Judge acting judicially (section 77).
3. Act done pursuant to an order or a judgment of a Court (section 78).
4. Act of a person justified, or believing himself justified, by law (section 79).
5. Act caused by accident (section 80).
6. Act likely to cause harm done without criminal intent to prevent other harm (section 81).
7. Act of a child under seven years (section 82).
8. Act of a child above seven and under 12 years, but of immature understanding (section 83).
9. Act of a person of unsound mind (section 84).
10. Act of an intoxicated person (section 85) and partially exempted (section 86).
11. Act not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent of the sufferer (section 87).
12. Act not intended to cause death done by consent of sufferer (section 88).
13. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a child or an insane person by or by the consent of guardian (section 89).
14. Act done in good faith for the benefit of a person without consent (section 92).
15. Communication made in good faith to a person for his benefit (section 93).
16. Act done under threat of death (section 94).
17. Act causing slight harm (section 95).

18. Act done in private defence (sections 96–106).

The above exceptions, strictly speaking, come within the following seven categories:–

1. Judicial acts (section. 77, 78).
2. Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).
3. Accident (section 80).
4. Absence of criminal intent (sections 81–86, 92–94).
5. Consent (sections 87, 90).
6. Trifling acts (section 95).
7. Private defence (sections 96–106).

Onus of proving exception lies on accused.—When a person is accused of any offence, the burden of proving the existence of circumstances bringing the case within any of the general exceptions in the Penal Code, or within any special exception or proviso contained in any other part of the same Code, or in any law defining the offence, is upon him, and the Court shall presume the absence of such circumstances.²

Although the law lays down that the onus of proving circumstances which give the benefit of a general exception to an accused person lies on him, and in the absence of evidence the presumption is against the accused, this does not mean that the accused must lead evidence. If it is apparent from the evidence on the record, whether produced by the prosecution or by the defence, that a general exception would apply, then the presumption is removed and it is open to the Court to consider whether the evidence proves to its satisfaction that the accused comes within the exception.³

Applicability of General exceptions during investigation.—In considering that whether accusation made in the complaint makes out a case for commission of offence or not, the police while reaching the prima facie satisfaction of suspecting the commission of cognizable offence, cannot ignore the general exception as provided under IPC, 1860 as per Chapter IV of IPC, 1860. If on the basis of the allegation made in the complaint, the case is falling in general exceptions, it can be said that the action cannot be termed as an offence.⁴ Investigating officer is bound to investigate and confirm that despite what is contained in the "General Exceptions"; acts committed by accused shall constitute offence under IPC, 1860. This shall be done, by virtue of section 6 of IPC, 1860. In the light of section 6 of IPC, 1860, definition of every offence is to be understood subject to the "General Exceptions". Therefore, investigation shall not confine merely to the acts committed by a person. Depending on facts and circumstances of each case, many other relevant facts also have to be investigated into, in the light of the provisions contained in "General Exceptions". It is only then that an investigating officer will be able to confirm whether the act committed by a person is an offence or not, as defined in IPC, 1860 subject to what is contained in "General Exceptions". Further, the category of self-defence falling in general exception would fall in a different category than the general exceptions, which are provided in the very chapter for exercise of the statutory duty or lawful power either under the mistake of law or fact or mistaken belief of law or fact.⁵

Of the Right of Private Defence

[s 106] Right of private defence against deadly assault when there is risk of harm to innocent person.

If in the exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which reasonably causes the apprehension of death, the defender be so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk.

ILLUSTRATION

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. He cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob, and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

COMMENT.—

This section should be read in the light of section 100. Injury to innocent persons in the exercise of the right of defence is excusable under it.^{508.}

1. Shankar Narayan Bhadolkar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2004 SC 1966 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] : 2004 Cr LJ 1778 : (2005) 9 SCC 71 [LNIND 2004 SC 1370] .
 2. The Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, section 105.
 3. Musammatt Anandi, (1923) 45 All 329 ; Babulal, 1960 Cr LJ 437 (All).
 4. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
 5. A K Chaudhary v State of Gujarat, 2006 Cr LJ 726 (Guj).
- ^{508.} State of Karnataka v Madesha, (2007) 7 SCC 35 [LNIND 2007 SC 918] : AIR 2007 SC 2917 [LNIND 2007 SC 921] , risk of harm to an innocent person in the exercise of the right of private defence. The court examined whether the right could be available to a person who caused the death of a man who had no role to play in the dispute.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 107] Abetment of a thing.

A person abets the doing of a thing, who—

First.—Instigates any person to do that thing; or

Secondly.—Engages with one or more other person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing; or

Thirdly.—Intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.

Explanation 1.—A person who, by wilful misrepresentation, or by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, a thing to be done, is said to instigate the doing of that thing.

ILLUSTRATION

A, a public officer is authorised by a warrant from a Court of Justice to apprehend Z. B, knowing that fact and also that C is not Z, wilfully represents to A that C is Z, and thereby intentionally causes A to apprehend C. Here B abets by instigation the apprehension of C.

Explanation 2.—Whoever, either prior to or at the time of the commission of an act, does anything in order to facilitate the commission of that act, and thereby facilitates the commission thereof, is said to aid the doing of that act.

COMMENTS.—

In common parlance, the word 'abet' means assistance, co-operation and encouragement and includes wrongful purpose. In Corpus Juris Secundum, vol I at p 306, the meaning of the word 'abet' is given as follows:

'To abet' has been defined as meaning to aid; to assist or to give aid; to command, to procure, or to counsel; to countenance; to encourage, counsel, induce, or assist; to encourage or to set another on to commit.

Used with 'aid'. The word 'abet' is generally used with the word 'aid' and similar words.

In order to bring a person abetting the doing of a thing, under any one of the clauses enumerated under section 107, it is not only necessary to prove that the person who has abetted has taken part in the steps of the transactions but also in some way or other he has been connected with those steps of the transactions which are criminal. The offence of abetment depends upon the intention of the person who abets, and not upon the act which is actually done by the person whom he abets.¹

For the purposes of the first two clauses of this section it is immaterial whether the person instigated commits the offence or not or the persons conspiring together actually carry out the object of the conspiracy.² It is only in the case of a person abetting an offence by intentionally aiding another to commit that offence that the charge of abetment against him would be expected to fail when the person alleged to have committed the offence is acquitted of that offence.³ The Court noted that in *Faguna Kanta Nath v State of Assam*⁴ the appellant was tried for an offence under section 165A for having abetted the commission of an offence by an officer, who was acquitted, and it was held that the appellant's conviction for abetment was also not maintainable. But subsequently in Jamuna Singh v State of Bihar,⁵ it was considered not desirable to hold that an abettor cannot be punished if the person actually committing the offence is acquitted. The Court said that the abettor's guilt depends upon the nature of the offence abetted and the manner of abetment. It is only in cases of intentional aiding that the abettor would have to be acquitted with the principal offender.⁶ Following this state of the rulings the Supreme Court ordered the acquittal of the single abettor when the main offender as also all other abettors already stood acquitted.

The Supreme Court has reiterated that before anybody can be punished for abetment of suicide, it must be proved that the death in question was a suicidal death.⁷

The Supreme Court held that the offence of abetment is a separate and independent offence. Where the offence is committed in consequence of the abetment but there is no provision for punishment of such abetment, the abettor is to be punished along with the offender for the original offence.⁸

Abetment is constituted by:

- (1) instigating a person to commit an offence; or
- (2) engaging in a conspiracy to commit it; or
- (3) intentionally aiding a person to commit it.

The offence of abetment by instigation depends upon the intention of the person who abets and not upon the act which is done by the person who has abetted. The abetment may be by instigation, conspiracy or intentional aid as provided under section 107, Indian Penal Code \(IPC\), 1860. However, the words uttered in a fit of anger or omission without any intention cannot be termed as instigation.⁹

[s 107.1] Mens rea.—

In order to proceed against a person for criminal offence under section 107, prosecution must prove the element of mens rea. Negligence or carelessness or the facilitation cannot be termed to be abetment so as to punish the guilty as per the provision of penal laws.¹⁰ In order to constitute abetment, the abettor must be shown to have "intentionally" aided to commission of the crime. Mere proof, that the crime charged could not have been committed without involvement and/or interposition of the alleged abettor is not enough compliance with the requirements of section 107. It is not enough that an act on the part of the alleged abettor happens to facilitate the commission of the crime. Intentional aiding and therefore active complicity is the gist of the offence of abetment under the third paragraph of section 107.¹¹

[s 107.2] Sting operation, mens rea and abetment.—

In typical sting operations, though the operation is carried in the public interest, the same is generally done by instigating the accused. Hence the victim, who is otherwise innocent, is lured into committing a crime on the assurance of absolute secrecy and confidentiality of the transaction raising the potential question as to how such a victim can be held responsible for the crime which he would not have committed but for the enticement. In such circumstances, should the individual, i.e., the sting operator be held criminally liable for commission of the offence that is inherent and inseparable from the process by which commission of another offence is sought to be established? What about the operator who has mens rea or guilty intention to commit the offence? These are puzzling questions when there is an allegation that the sting operator is alleged to have committed the abetment of the offence. The Supreme Court in Rajat Prasad v CBI,¹² observed that a crime does not stand obliterated or extinguished merely because its commission is claimed to be in public interest. At the same time, the criminal intent (mens rea) behind the commission of the act will have to be established before the liability of the person charged with the commission of crime can be adjudged. The Court held that the questions whether the sting operation is a journalistic exercise and any criminal intent can be imputed are to be answered by the evidence of the parties.

(1) Abetment by instigation.—First clause.—A person is said to 'instigate' another to an act, when he actively suggests or stimulates him to the act by any means of language, direct or indirect, whether it takes the form of express solicitation, or of hints, insinuation or encouragement.¹³

[s 107.3] "Instigate" Meaning.—

Instigation is to goad, urge forward, provoke, incite or encourage to do "an act". To satisfy the requirement of "instigation", though it is not necessary that actual words must be used to that effect or what constitutes "instigation" must necessarily and specifically be suggestive of the consequence. Yet a reasonable certainty to incite the consequence must be capable of being spelt out. Where the accused had, by his acts or omission or by a continued course of conduct, created such circumstances that the deceased was left with no other option except to commit suicide, in which case, "instigation" may have to be inferred. A word uttered in a fit of anger or emotion without intending the consequences to actually follow, cannot be said to be instigation. Thus, to constitute 'instigation', a person who instigates another has to provoke, incite, urge or encourage the doing of an act by the other by "goad" or 'urging forward'. The dictionary meaning of the word "goad" is "a thing that stimulates someone into action; provoke to action or reaction ... to keep irritating or annoying somebody until he reacts".¹⁴ The word "instigate" literally means to provoke, incite, urge on or bring about by persuasion to do anything. The abetment may be by instigation, conspiracy or intentional aid as provided in the three clauses of the section.¹⁵ Instigate means the active role played by a person with a view to stimulate another person to do the thing. In order to hold a person guilty of abetting it must be established that he had intentionally done something which amounted to instigating another to do a thing.¹⁶ Instigation may be of an unknown person.¹⁷ A mere acquiescence or permission does not amount to instigation.¹⁸

[s 107.4] Wilful misrepresentation or wilful concealment.—

Explanation 1 to this section says that a person who (1) by wilful misrepresentation, or (2) by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure a thing to be done, is said to instigate the doing of that thing. The illustration is an example of instigation by 'wilful misrepresentation'. Instigation by 'wilful concealment' is where some duty exists which obliges a person to disclose a fact. The explanation to section 107 says that any wilful misrepresentation or wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, may also come within the contours of "abetment".^{19.}

[s 107.5] CASES.—Direct instigation.—

Where, of several persons constituting an unlawful assembly, some only were armed with sticks, and A, one of them, was not so armed, but picked up a stick and used it, B (the master of A), who gave a general order to beat, was held guilty of abetting the assault made by them.^{20.}

[s 107.6] Suicide.—

Abetment involves a mental process of instigating a person or intentionally aiding a person in doing a thing. Without a positive act on the part of the accused to instigate or aid in committing suicide, conviction cannot be sustained.^{21.} Deceased committed suicide by hanging himself because of alleged illicit relationship between his wife and the accused. Accused took the wife of deceased away from the house of her brother and kept her with him for four days. There is definitely a proximity and nexus between the conduct and behaviour of the accused and wife of deceased with that of suicide committed by the deceased.^{22.} Where a married girl committed suicide by burning herself in her in-law's house, her in-laws were held guilty of abetment because they were persistently torturing her for inadequate dowry and had gone to the extent of accusing her of illegitimate pregnancy.^{23.} "All these tortures and taunts", Ray J said,^{24.} "Caused depression in her mind and drove her to take the extreme step of putting an end to her life by sprinkling kerosene oil on her person and setting it afire." In another case of the same kind a husband persistently demanded more money from his wife, quarrelling with her everyday. On the fateful day when she happened to say that death would have been better than this, she heard only this in reply that her husband would feel relieved if she ended her life. Immediately thereafter she set herself on fire. The husband was held guilty of instigating her to commit suicide.^{25.} Mere harassment of wife by husband due to differences per se does not attract section 306 read with section 107, IPC, 1860.^{26.}

Demand of loan amount by accused from deceased itself does not come within the scope of abetment as defined under section 107.^{27.} Goading and intimidating a debtor with a view to pressurising him for repayment of the loan which brought about a suicide by the debtor immediately thereafter, was held as not amounting to abetment of suicide and, therefore, no case under section 306 read with section 34 was made out.^{28.}

The accused told the other person "to go and die". It was held that this would not in itself satisfy the ingredients of instigation. Instigation has to be with mens rea. The suicide was committed two days after the quarrel between the accused and the deceased. This also showed that the suicide was not the direct result of the quarrel. The suicide note indicated that her husband was a frustrated man and given to drinking and suffered from great stress and depression.^{29.}

The accused, a Motor Vehicle Inspector, beat up and abused a driver for not being able to produce necessary papers. The driver committed suicide. The Court said that it was not shown that he was guilty of any act of abetment within the meaning of section 107. The charge against him under section 107 was quashed.³⁰

[s 107.7] Proof.—

In Chitresh Kumar Chopra v State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi),³¹ the Supreme Court reiterated the legal position laid down in its earlier three judge bench judgment in the case of Ramesh Kumar v State of Chhattisgarh,³² and held that where the accused by his acts or continued course of conduct creates such circumstances that the deceased was left with no other option except to commit suicide, an instigation may be inferred. In order to prove that the accused abetted commission of suicide by a person, it has to be established that:

- (i) the accused kept on irritating or annoying the deceased by words, deeds or wilful omission or conduct which may even be a wilful silence until the deceased reacted or pushed or forced the deceased by his deeds, words or wilful omission or conduct to make the deceased move forward more quickly in a forward direction; and
- (ii) that the accused had the intention to provoke urge or encourage the deceased to commit suicide while acting in the manner noted above. Undoubtedly, presence of mens rea is the necessary concomitant of instigation.³³

[s 107.8] Threats.—

Mere threats of involving the family in a false and frivolous case cannot be held to tantamount to instigation. By such threats it cannot be held that the accused instigated the deceased to commit suicide.³⁴

[s 107.9] Test.—

No straight-jacket formula can be laid down to find out as to whether in a particular case there has been instigation which force the person to commit suicide. In a particular case, there may not be direct evidence in regard to instigation which may have direct nexus to suicide. Therefore, in such a case, an inference has to be drawn from the circumstances and it is to be determined whether circumstances had been such which in fact had created the situation that a person felt totally frustrated and committed suicide.³⁵

(2) Abetment by conspiracy.—Second clause.—'Conspiracy' consists in the agreement of two or more [persons] to do an unlawful act or to do a lawful act by unlawful means. So long as such a design rests in intention only, it is not indictable. When two agree to carry it into effect, the very plot is an act in itself, and the act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced, if lawful, is punishable if for a criminal object or for the use of criminal means.³⁶ It is not necessary that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engages in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.³⁷ Where parties concert together, and have a common object, the act of one of the parties, done in furtherance of the common object and in pursuance of the concerted plan, is the act of all.³⁸

Before the introduction of Chapter V-A, conspiracy, except in cases provided for by sections 121A, 311, 400, 401 and 402 of the Code, was a mere species of abetment when an act or an illegal omission took place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and amounted to a distinct offence for each distinct offence abetted by conspiracy.³⁹ For an offence under the second clause of this section a mere combination of persons or agreement is not enough; an act or illegal omission must take place in pursuance of the conspiracy. But for an offence under section 120A a mere agreement is enough if the agreement is to commit an offence.⁴⁰

[s 107.10] Abetment and Conspiracy-Difference between.—

Criminal conspiracy postulates an agreement between two or more persons to do, or cause to be done, an illegal act or an act which is not illegal, by illegal, means. It differs from other offences because mere agreement is made an offence even if no step is taken to carry out that agreement. Though there is close association of conspiracy with incitement and abetment the substantive offence of criminal conspiracy is somewhat wider in amplitude than abetment by conspiracy as contemplated under section 107, IPC, 1860.⁴¹ There is no analogy between section 120B and section 109, IPC, 1860. There may be an element of abetment in a conspiracy, but conspiracy is something more than an abetment. Offences created by sections 109 and 120B, IPC, 1860 are quite distinct and there is no warrant for limiting the prosecution to only one element of conspiracy, that is, abetment when the allegation is that what a person did was something over and above that.⁴²

(3) Abetment by aid.—Third clause.—By act.—A person, it is trite, abets by aiding, when by any act done either prior to, or at the time of the commission of an act, he intends to facilitate and does in fact facilitate the commission thereof, would attract the third clause of section 107 of the IPC, 1860. Doing something for the offender is not abetment. Doing something with knowledge so as to facilitate him to commit the crime or otherwise would constitute abetment.⁴³ In order to constitute abetment by aiding within the meaning of the third paragraph of section 107, IPC, 1860 the abettor must be shown to have intentionally aided the commission of the crime. A person may invite another casually or for a friendly purpose and that may facilitate the murder of the invitee. But unless it is shown that the invitation was extended with a view to facilitate the commission of the murder, it cannot be said that the person extending the invitation had abetted the murder. The language used in the section is "intentionally aids" and therefore, active complicity is the gist of the offence of abetment under the third paragraph of section 107, IPC, 1860.⁴⁴ Abetment includes instigating any person to do a thing or engaging with one or more persons in any conspiracy for the doing of a thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy and in order to the doing of that thing, or intentional aid by any act or illegal omission to the doing of that thing. On facts held, in the instant case, there was no direct evidence to establish that the appellant either aided or instigated the deceased to commit suicide or entered into any conspiracy to aid her in committing suicide.⁴⁵ Where the principal offender killed the victim with a knife provided by the defendant who later claimed that he thought the knife would be used only to threaten, the defendant's conviction for murder was upheld, the Court of Appeal saying that the trial judge was correct to direct the jury that the defendant could be so convicted if he contemplated that the principal offender might kill or cause serious bodily harm to the victim as part of their joint enterprise.⁴⁶ It is not necessary that the abettor should be present at the place of the occurrence. It is also not necessary to show that the secondary party to a conspiracy to murder intended the victim to be killed provided it is proved that he contemplated or foresaw the event as a real or substantial risk. Mere absence from the scene of the crime cannot amount to unequivocal communication of withdrawal from the enterprise. The accused was recruited with certain others by a person to kill his wife. At a predetermined time she was taken to the agreed place and killed. The accused was not present when the killing took place. It was held that he was rightly convicted in that he had lent encouragement and assistance before the commission of the crime.⁴⁷.

[s 107.11] By illegal omission.—

The definition of abetment as given in section 107, IPC, 1860 not only includes instigation but also intentional aiding by an illegal omission.⁴⁸ A lady advocate was attending the chamber of her senior advocate, the accused. On the day of the incident she was talking with the accused at her residence. At that moment in his presence, she poured kerosene on her and set herself on fire. The accused did nothing to save her. It was held that this did not amount to "illegal omission". He was held not guilty of abetment of suicide.⁴⁹.

[s 107.12] Abetment of offences under other laws.—

The offence of aiding and abetting is applicable to all statutory offences unless specifically excluded by statute and accordingly it was held to apply to offences created by the [English] Public Order Act, 1986.⁵⁰ An abetment of an offence under the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 can be made by a non-public servant. Abettors are to be prosecuted through trial under the Prevention of Corruption Act.⁵¹.

[s 107.13] CASES.—By act.—Presence at bigamous marriage.—

Mere presence at the scene of a bigamous marriage without any evidence of instigation aiding or conspiring would not amount to abetment.⁵² Where the accused held the antarpāt (screen) during the performance of a marriage which he knew was a void marriage under section 494, it was held that his act amounted to an act of intentional aid and fell within the purview of the explanation.⁵³.

[s 107.14] Presence at exhibition of blue film.—

While entering into the parlour the accused was not aware of the type of film under exhibition. Immediately after his entry, the police raided the parlour and charge-sheeted him as an abettor of offences under sections 292, 293 and 294 because blue films were under exhibition. Following the Supreme Court decision in Shri Ram v State of UP,⁵⁴ the Court held that something more must be shown than mere presence.

[s 107.15] Rape-Abetment.—

In a case of custodial rape, husband and wife, taken into police custody, were kept in separate rooms. The wife was raped by the head constable while the accused constable kept watch over the husband and did nothing hearing the shrieks of the victim wife. Conviction of the accused constable for abetting commission of rape was upheld.⁵⁵

[s 107.16] Humiliation.—

The accused persons caused constant humiliation to the deceased by accusing him of theft of things belonging to relatives at a marriage occasion. He committed suicide after returning from marriage. The humiliation caused by the accused was held to be not such as to amount to instigation which could have induced the deceased to commit suicide.⁵⁶

[s 107.17] Attempt.—

Merely because the section opens with the words "if any person commits suicide" it cannot be held that in a case of unsuccessful suicide there is no attempt to abet the commission of suicide. Suicide and its attempt on the one hand and abetment of commission of suicide and its attempt on the other are treated differently by law and therefore, the one who abets the commission of an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide cannot be held to be punishable merely under section 309 read with section 116, IPC, 1860. To implement the scheme of law he has got to be held to be punishable under section 306 read with section 511, IPC, 1860. The Supreme Court has never laid down in *Satvir Singh*⁵⁷ that under no circumstance an offence under section 306 read with section 511, IPC, 1860 can be committed. The Supreme Court did not have occasion to consider whether a conviction for an offence of attempt to abet the commission of suicide is punishable under section 306 read with section 511, IPC, 1860.⁵⁸

1. Kartar Singh v State of Punjab, (1994) 3 SCC 569 : 1994 Cr LJ 3139 : (1994) 1 SCC (Cr) 899.
2. Faguna Kanto, 1959 Cr LJ 917 : AIR 1959 SC 673 [LNIND 1959 SC 2].
3. Jamuna Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 553 [LNIND 1966 SC 202] : 1967 Cr LJ 541 .
4. Faguna Kanta Nath v State of Assam, AIR 1959 SC 673 [LNIND 1959 SC 2] : 1959 Supp 2 SCR 1 : 1959 Cr LJ 917 .
5. Jamuna Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1967 SC 553 [LNIND 1966 SC 202] : 1967 Cr LJ 541 .
6. Citing Madan Raj Bhandari v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 SC 436 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] : 1970 Cr LJ 519 where the abettor of inducing miscarriage was acquitted when the person causing miscarriage was acquitted. In Ex-Sepoy Haradhan Chakrabarty v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 1210 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] : (1990) 2 SCC 143 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] , it was held that abetment fails when substantive offence is not established against the principal offender.
7. Wazir Chand v State of Haryana, AIR 1989 SC 378 [LNIND 1988 SC 569] : 1989 Cr LJ 809 : (1989) 1 SCC 244 [LNIND 1988 SC 569] .

8. Kishori Lal v State of MP, (2007) 10 SCC 797 [LNIND 2007 SC 800] : AIR 2007 SC 2457 [LNIND 2007 SC 800] : (2007) 3 Ker LT 259 .
9. State of Punjab v Iqbal Singh, AIR 1991 SC 1532 [LNIND 1991 SC 279] ; Surender v State of Hayana, (2006) 12 SCC 375 [LNIND 2006 SC 1015] ; Kishori Lal v State of MP, AIR 2007 SC 2457 [LNIND 2007 SC 800] ; and Sonti Rama Krishna v Sonti Shanti Sree, AIR 2009 SC 923 [LNIND 2008 SC 2319] .
10. B Ammu v State of TN, 2009 Cr LJ 866 (Mad); Chitresh Kumar Chopra v State (Government of NCT of Delhi), AIR 2010 SC 1446 [LNIND 2009 SC 1663] .
11. Shri Ram v State of UP, AIR 1975 SC 175 [LNIND 1974 SC 349] : 1975 Cr LJ 240 (SC) quoted in Jasobant Narayan Mohapatra v State of Orissa, 2009 Cr LJ 1043 (Ori); Benupani Behera v State, 1992 (1) Ori LR 571 .
12. Rajat Prasad v CBI, 2014 Cr LJ 2941 : 2014 (5) Scale 574 [LNIND 2014 SC 467] .
13. Amiruddin, (1922) 24 Bom LR 534 [LNIND 1922 BOM 98] , 542.
14. Chitresh Kumar Chopra v State (Government of NCT of Delhi), AIR 2010 SC 1446 [LNIND 2009 SC 1663] ; Kishangiri Mangalgiri Goswami v State of Gujarat, (2009) 4 SCC 52 [LNIND 2009 SC 193] : (2009) 1 SCR 672 [LNIND 2009 SC 193] : AIR 2009 SC 1808 2009 Cr LJ 1720.
15. Goura Venkata Reddy v State of AP, (2003) 12 SCC 469 [LNIND 2003 SC 1004] .
16. Rajib Neog v State of Assam, 2011 Cr LJ 399 (Gau).
17. Ganesh D Savarkar, (1909) 12 Bom LR 105 .
18. Ram Singh v State, 1997 Cr LJ 1406 (P&H), the complainant (wife) alleged that her in-laws incited her husband to marry over again. There was no evidence to show that they negotiated or arranged the second marriage, nor of their presence at the time of performance of second marriage. Complaint quashed. See also Darbar Singh v State of Chhattisgarh, 2013 Cr LJ 1612 (Chh).
19. Netai Dutta v State of WB, AIR 2005 SC 1775 [LNIND 2005 SC 208] : (2005) 2 SCC 659 [LNIND 2005 SC 208] ; Amit Kapoor v Ramesh Chander, JT 2012 (9) SC 312 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : 2012 (9) Scale 58 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : (2012) 9 SCC 460 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] .
20. Rasookoollah, (1869) 12 WR (Cr) 51. Where the accused had instigated three persons to commit murder, his conviction under sections 307/109 was upheld. Hemant Kumar Mondal v State of WB, 1993 Cr LJ 82 (Cal).
21. M Mohan v State, Represented by the Deputy Superintendent of Police, (2011) 3 SCC 626 [LNIND 2011 SC 246] : 2011 (3) Scale 78 [LNIND 2011 SC 246] : AIR 2011 SC 1238 [LNIND 2011 SC 246] : 2011 Cr LJ 1900 ; Amalendu Pal v State of WB, (2010) 1 SCC 707 [LNIND 2009 SC 1978] ; Rakesh Kumar v State of Chhattisgarh, (2001) 9 SCC 618 [LNIND 2001 SC 2368] , Gangula Mohan Reddy v State of AP, (2010) 1 SCC 750 [LNIND 2010 SC 3] ; Thanu Ram v State of MP, 2010 (10) Scale 557 [LNIND 2010 SC 962] : (2010) 10 SCC 353 [LNIND 2010 SC 962] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1502; SS Chheena v Vijay Kumar Mahajan, (2010) 12 SCC 190 [LNIND 2010 SC 746] : (2010 AIR SCW 4938); Sohan Raj Sharma v State of Haryana, AIR 2008 SC 2108 [LNIND 2008 SC 845] : (2008) 11 SCC 215 [LNIND 2008 SC 845] .
22. Dammu Sreenu v State of AP, AIR 2009 SC 3728 : (2009) 14 SCC 249 [LNIND 2009 SC 1356] .
23. Gurbachan Singh v Satpal Singh, (1990) 1 SCC 445 [LNIND 1989 SC 475] : AIR 1990 SC 209 [LNIND 1989 SC 475] : 1990 Cr LJ 562 .
24. Ibid, (1990) 1 SCC 445 [LNIND 1989 SC 475] at p 458 : AIR 1990 SC 209 [LNIND 1989 SC 475] : 1990 Cr LJ 562 .
25. Brijlal v Prem Chand, AIR 1989 SC 1661 [LNIND 1989 SC 243] : (1989) Supp 2 SCC 680. But where there was no evidence of dowry demands, self immolation by the married woman within two years of marriage was held to be her personal act. Padmabai v State of MP, 1987 Cr LJ 1573 (MP).

26. Bhagwan Das v Kartar Singh, AIR 2007 SC 2045 [LNIND 2007 SC 650] ; Dayalan Babu v State, 2011 Cr LJ 359 (Mad).

27. Paramjeetsingh Chawala v State of MP, 2007 Cr Lj 3343 (MP).

28. Vedprakash Bhajji v State of MP, 1995 Cr LJ 893 (MP). Netai Dutta v State of WB, 2005 Cr LJ 1737 , no averment that the employer had withheld salary, or of aiding or instigating suicide, proceedings against employer to be quashed.

29. Sanju v State of MP, 2002 Cr LJ 2796 : AIR 2002 SC 1998 [LNIND 2002 SC 357] (Supp).

30. Bura Manohar v State of AP, 2002 Cr LJ 3322 (AP); Central Bureau of Investigation v VC Shukla, 1998 Cr LJ 1905 : AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] ; Bapurao v State of Maharashtra, 2003 Cr LJ 2181 (Bom).

31. Chitresh Kumar Chopra v State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi), 2009 (16) SCC 605 [LNIND 2009 SC 1663] : AIR 2010 SC 1446 [LNIND 2009 SC 1663] .

32. Ramesh Kumar v State of Chhattisgarh, AIR 2001 SC 3837 [LNIND 2001 SC 2368] : (2001) Cr LJ 4724 .

33. State of MP v Shrideen Chhatri Prasad Suryawanshi, 2012 Cr LJ 2106 (MP); Jetha Ram v State of Rajasthan, 2012 Cr LJ 2459 (Raj); Kailash Baburao Pandit v State of Maharashtra, 2011 Cr LJ 4044 (Bom).

34. Vijay Kumar Rastogi v State of Rajasthan, 2012 Cr LJ 2342 (Raj).

35. Praveen Pradhan v State of Uttaranchal, (2012) 9 SCC 734 [LNIND 2012 SC 612] : 2012 (9) Scale 745 : 2012 Cr LJ 4925 .

36. Per Willes J, in Mulcahy, (1868) LR 3 HL 306, 317. See Quinn v Leathem, (1901) AC 495 , 529.

37. Explanation 5 to section 108; Kalil Munda, (1901) 28 Cal 797 .

38. Ameer Khan, (1871) 17 WR (Cr) 15.

39. Tirumal Reddi, (1901) 24 Mad 523, 546.

40. Pramatha Nath v Saroj Ranjan, AIR 1962 SC 876 [LNIND 1961 SC 400] : 1962 (1) Cr LJ 770 . See CBI v VC Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] : (1998) 3 SCC 410 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] ; Abetment by conspiracy not made out.

41. Noor Mohammad Mohd. Yusuf Momin v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1971 SC 885 [LNIND 1970 SC 155] : (1970) 1 SCC 696 [LNIND 1970 SC 155] .

42. State of AP v Kandimalla Subbaiah, AIR 1961 SC 1241 [LNIND 1961 SC 95] : 1962 (1) SCR 194 [LNIND 1961 SC 95] .

43. State of MP v Mukesh, (2006) 13 SCC 197 [LNIND 2006 SC 844] : (2007) 2 SCC (Cr) 680.

44. Shri Ram, 1975 Cr LJ 240 : AIR 1975 SC 175 [LNIND 1974 SC 349] ; See also Trilokchand, 1977 Cr LJ 254 : AIR 1977 SC 666 [LNIND 1975 SC 278] .

45. Rajbabu v State of MP, (2008) 17 SCC 526 [LNIND 2008 SC 1499] : AIR 2008 SC 3212 [LNIND 2008 SC 1499] : 2008 Cr LJ 4301 : (2008) 69 AIC 65 .

46. R v State, (1989) 3 All ER 90 CA. The Court considered the decisions in Chan Wing Sui v R, (1984) 3 All ER 877 and Hyam v DPP, (1974) 2 All ER 41 . Krishan Lal v UOI, 1994 Cr LJ 3472 , intentional aiding.

47. R v Rook, (1993) 1 WLR 1005 (CA).

48. Jamnalal Pande v State of MP, 2010 Cr LJ 538 (MP).

49. Surendra Agnihotri v State of MP, 1998 Cr LJ 4443 (MP).

50. R v Jefferson, The Times, 22 June 1993 (CA).

51. P Nallammal v State, AIR 1999 SC 2556 [LNIND 1999 SC 660] : 1999 Cr LJ 3967 .

52. Muthammal, 1981 Cr LJ 833 (Mad) : 1981 Mad LW (Cr) 80 ; Karuppiah v Nagawalli, 1982 Mad LJ (Cr) 19 : 1982 Cr LJ 1362 : 2004 Cr LJ 4272 (Kar).
53. Malan, (1957) 60 Bom LR 428 .
54. Shri Ram v State of UP, AIR 1975 SC 175 [LNIND 1974 SC 349] : 1975 Cr LJ 240 .
55. Ram Kumar v State of HP, AIR 1995 SC 1965 : 1995 Cr LJ 3621 : 1995 Supp (4) SCC 67 .
56. Neelam v State of AP, 2003 Cr LJ (NOC) 160 (AP) : (2002) 2 Andh LT (Cr) 186 .
57. Satvir Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2001 SC 2828 [LNIND 2001 SC 2168] : (2001) 8 SCC 633 [LNIND 2001 SC 2168] .
58. Berin P Varghese v State, 2008 Cr LJ 1759 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 108] Abettor.

A person abets an offence, who abets either the commission of an offence, or the commission of an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence with the same intention or knowledge as that of the abettor.

Explanation 1.—The abetment of the illegal omission of an act may amount to an offence although the abettor may not himself be bound to do that act.

Explanation 2.—To constitute the offence of abetment it is not necessary that the act abetted should be committed, or that the effect requisite to constitute the offence should be caused.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A instigates B to murder C. B refuses to do so. A is guilty of abetting B to commit murder.
- (b) A instigates B to murder D. B in pursuance of the instigation stabs D. D recovers from the wound. A is guilty of instigating B to commit murder.

Explanation 3.—It is not necessary that the person abetted should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or any guilty intention or knowledge.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, with a guilty intention, abets a child or a lunatic to commit an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence, and having the same intention as A. Here A, whether the act be committed or not, is guilty of abetting an offence.
- (b) A, with the intention of murdering Z, instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to do an act which causes Z's death. B, in consequence of the abetment, does the act in the absence of A and thereby causes Z's death. Here though B was not capable by law of committing an offence, A is liable to be punished in the same manner as if B had been capable by law of committing an offence, and had committed murder, and he is therefore subject to the punishment of death.
- (c) A instigates B to set fire to a dwelling-house. B, in consequence of the unsoundness of his mind, being incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law, sets fire to the house in consequence of A's instigation. B has committed no offence, but A is guilty of abetting the offence of setting fire to a dwelling-house, and is liable to the punishment provided for that offence.
- (d) A, intending to cause a theft to be committed, instigates B to take property belonging to Z out of Z's possession. A induces B to believe that the property belongs to A. B takes the property out of Z's possession, in good faith, believing it to be A's property. B, acting under this misconception, does not take dishonestly, and therefore does not commit theft. But A is guilty of abetting theft, and is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

Explanation 4.—The abetment of an offence being an offence, the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence.

ILLUSTRATION

A instigates B to instigate C to murder Z. B accordingly instigates C to murder Z, and C commits that offence in consequence of B's instigation. B is liable to be punished for his offence with the punishment for murder; and, as A instigated B to commit the offence, A is also liable to the same punishment.

Explanation 5.—It is not necessary to the commission of the offence of abetment by conspiracy that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engages in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.

ILLUSTRATION

A concerts with B a plan for poisoning Z. It is agreed that A shall administer the poison. B then explains the plan to C mentioning that a third person is to administer the poison, but without mentioning A's name. C agrees to procure the poison, and procures and delivers it to B for the purpose of its being used in the manner explained. A administers the poison; Z dies in consequence. Here, though A and C have not conspired together, yet C has been engaged in the conspiracy in pursuance of which Z has been murdered. C has therefore committed the offence defined in this section and is liable to the punishment for murder.

COMMENTS.—

Abetment under the IPC, 1860 involves active complicity on the part of the abettor at a point of time prior to the actual commission of the offence,⁵⁹ and it is of the essence of the crime of abetment that the abettor should substantially assist the principal culprit towards the commission of the offence. Nowhere, concurrence in the criminal acts of another without such participation therein as helps to give effect to the criminal act or purpose, is punishable under the Code.

'Abettor', under this section, means the person who abets (1) the commission of an offence, or (2) the commission of an act, which would be an offence if committed by a person not suffering from any physical or mental incapacity. In the light of the preceding section he must be an instigator or a conspirator or an intentional helper.

Merely because the accused's brother was carrying on criminal activities in her house, the appellant cannot be held guilty unless there is some material to show her complicity.⁶⁰

Explanation 1.—If a public servant is guilty of an illegal omission of duty made punishable by the Code, and a private person instigates him, then he abets the offence of which such public servant is guilty, though the abettor, being a private person, could not himself have been guilty of that offence.

Explanation 2.—The question regarding abettor's guilt depends on the nature of the act abetted and the manner in which abetment was made. Commission of the act abetted is not necessary for the offence of abetment.⁶¹ The offence of abetment is complete notwithstanding that the person abetted refuses to do the thing, or fails involuntarily in doing it, or does it and the expected result does not follow. The offence of abetment by instigation depends upon the intention of the person who abets, and not upon the act which is actually done by the person whom he abets.

Explanation 3.—This explanation makes it clear that the person abetted need not have any guilty intention in committing the act abetted. It applies to abetment generally and there is nothing to indicate that it applies only to abetment by instigation and not to other kinds of abetment.⁶² The offence of abetment depends upon the intention of the person who abets and not upon the knowledge or intention of the person he employs to act for him.

Explanation 4.—This Explanation is to be read as follows: "When the abetment of an offence is an offence the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence". In view of Explanation 4 appended under section 108 of the IPC, 1860 the contention of accused that there cannot be any abetment of an abetment and it is unknown to criminal jurisprudence, holds no water and merits no consideration.⁶³

[s 108.1] Abetment of attempt to commit suicide.—

Section 306 prescribes punishment for abetment of suicide while section 309 punishes attempt to commit suicide. Abetment of attempt to commit suicide is outside the purview of section 306 and it is punishable only under section 309 and read with section 107, IPC, 1860.⁶⁴

[s 108.2] Euthanasia.—

Assisted suicide and assisted attempt to commit suicide are made punishable for cogent reasons in the interest of society. Such a provision is considered desirable to also prevent the danger inherent in the absence of such a penal provision.⁶⁵ But in Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI,⁶⁶ the Supreme Court held that passive euthanasia can be allowed under exceptional circumstances under the strict monitoring of the Court. In March 2018, a five-judge Constitution Bench of the Supreme Court gave legal sanction to passive euthanasia, permitting 'living will' by patients.⁶⁷

[s 108.3] Political murder.—

The accused were poor villagers who were brainwashed and became tools for committing crimes. The leaders who called for revenge were not charge sheeted and they got off scot-free. Even their names were not revealed as they were political head-weight. Such leaders who prompt the followers to commit crimes should be charge sheeted for abetment of offence for murder.

[s 108.4] Abetment is substantive offence.—

The offence of abetment is a substantive one and the conviction of an abettor is, therefore, in no way dependent on the conviction of the principal.⁶⁸ It cannot be held in law that a person cannot ever be convicted of abetting a certain offence when the person alleged to have committed that offence in consequence of the abetment has been acquitted. The question of the abettor's guilt depends on the nature of the act abetted and the manner in which the abetment was made. Under section 107, IPC, 1860 a person abets the doing of an act in either of three ways which can be: instigating any person to do an act; or engaging with one or more person in any conspiracy for the doing of that act; or intentionally aiding the doing of that act. If a person instigates another or engages with another in a conspiracy for the doing of an act which is an offence, he abets such an offence and would be guilty of abetment under section 115 or section 116, IPC, 1860 even if the offence abetted is not committed in consequence of the abetment. The offence of abetment is complete when the alleged abettor has instigated another or engaged with another in a conspiracy to commit the offence. It is not necessary for the offence of abetment that the act abetted must be committed. This is clear from Explanation 2 and illustration (a) thereto, to section 108, IPC, 1860. It is only in the case of a person abetting an offence by intentionally aiding another to commit that offence that the charge of abetment against him would be expected to fail when the person alleged to have committed the offence is acquitted of that offence.⁶⁹

59. Molazim Tewari, (1961) 2 Cr LJ 266 .

60. Marry Perara Lilly v State, (1987) Supp1 SCC 182 : (1988) 1 SCC (Cr) 56.

61. Sundar v State of UP, 1995 Cr LJ 3481 (All), relying on Sukh Ram v State of MP, 1989 SCC (Cr) 357 : [AIR 1989 SC 772 \[LNIND 2016 MP 593\]](#) .

62. Chaube Dinkar Rao, (1933) 55 All 654 .

63. Gundala Reddeppa Naidu v State of AP, 2005 Cr LJ 4702 (AP).

64. Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, [AIR 1996 SC 946 \[LNIND 1996 SC 653\]](#) : (1996) 2 SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] .

65. The Constitution Bench Gian Kaur v State of Punjab, 1996 (2) SCC 648 [LNIND 1996 SC 653] held that both euthanasia and assisted suicide are not lawful in India which overruled the two Judge Bench decision of the Supreme Court in P Rathinam v UOI, [AIR 1994 SC 1844 \[LNIND 1994 SC 1533\]](#) : 1994 (3) SCC 394 [LNIND 1994 SC 1533] . The Court held that the right to life under Article 21 of the Constitution does not include the right to die.

66. Aruna Ramchandra Shanbaug v UOI, (2011) 4 SCC 454 [LNIND 2011 SC 265] : [AIR 2011 SC 1290 \[LNIND 2011 SC 265\]](#) .

67. Common Cause (A Registered Society) v UOI, (2018) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2018 SC 87] .

68. Gallu Saheb v State of Bihar, [AIR 1958 SC 813 \[LNIND 1958 SC 76\]](#) ; Maruti Dada, (1875) 1 Bom 15; Sahib Ditta, (1885) PR No. 20 of 1885.

69. Jamuna Singh v State of Bihar, [AIR 1967 SC 553 \[LNIND 1966 SC 202\]](#) : 1967 Cr LJ 541 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

70.[s 108A] Abetment in India of offences outside India.

A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in 71.[India], abets the commission of any act without and beyond 72.[India] which would constitute an offence if committed in 73.[India].

ILLUSTRATION^{74.}

A, in 75.[India], instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder.]

COMMENTS.—

This section makes an abetment in India by a citizen of India of an act committed in a foreign territory an offence punishable under the IPC, 1860 if it would constitute an offence if committed in India. This illustration has become somewhat obsolete as Goa is now a part of Indian territory and not a foreign country as it was when this illustration was formulated.

70. Added by Act 4 of 1898, section 3.

71. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

72. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

73. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

74. This Illustration is inappropriate as Goa, which was a Portuguese colony at the time of the British imperial enactment now forms part of the Union Territory.—Ed.

75. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

70.[s 108A] Abetment in India of offences outside India.

A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in 71.[India], abets the commission of any act without and beyond 72.[India] which would constitute an offence if committed in 73.[India].

ILLUSTRATION^{74.}

A, in 75.[India], instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder.]

COMMENTS.—

This section makes an abetment in India by a citizen of India of an act committed in a foreign territory an offence punishable under the IPC, 1860 if it would constitute an offence if committed in India. This illustration has become somewhat obsolete as Goa is now a part of Indian territory and not a foreign country as it was when this illustration was formulated.

70. Added by Act 4 of 1898, section 3.

71. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

72. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

73. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

74. This Illustration is inappropriate as Goa, which was a Portuguese colony at the time of the British imperial enactment now forms part of the Union Territory.—Ed.

75. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 109] Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence and where no express provision is made for its punishment.

Whoever abets any offence shall, if the act abetted is committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence.

Explanation.—An act or offence is said to be committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B accepts the bribe. A has abetted the offence defined in section 161.
- (b) A instigates B to give false evidence. B, in consequence of the instigation, commits that offence. A is guilty of abetting that offence, and is liable to the same punishment as B.
- (c) A and B conspire to poison Z. A, in pursuance of the conspiracy, procures the poison and delivers it to B in order that he may administer it to Z. B, in pursuance of the conspiracy, administers the poison to Z in A's absence and thereby causes Z's death. Here B is guilty of murder. A is guilty of abetting that offence by conspiracy, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

COMMENTS.—

Under this section the abettor is liable to the same punishment as that which may be inflicted on the principal offender, (1) if the act of the latter is committed in consequence of the abetment, and (2) no express provision is made in the Code for the punishment of such an abetment. Section 109, IPC, 1860 becomes applicable even if the abettor is not present when the offence abetted is committed provided that he has instigated the commission of the offence or has engaged with one or more other persons in a conspiracy to commit an offence and pursuant to that conspiracy some act or illegal omission takes place or has intentionally aided the commission of an offence by an act or illegal omission.⁷⁶

[s 109.1] Scope.—

This section lays down nothing more than that if the IPC, 1860 has not separately provided for the punishment of abetment as such then it is punishable with the punishment provided for the original offence. Law does not require instigation to be in a particular form or that it should only be in words. The instigation may be by conduct. Whether there was instigation or not, is a question to be decided on the facts of each case. It is not necessary in law for the prosecution to prove that the actual operative cause in the mind of the person abetting was instigation and nothing else, so long as there was instigation and the offence has been committed or the offence would have been committed if the person committing the act had the same knowledge and intention as the abettor. The instigation must be with reference to the thing that was done and not to the thing that was likely to have been done by the person who is instigated. It is only if this condition is fulfilled that a person can be guilty of abetment by instigation. Further, the act abetted should be committed in consequence of the abetment or in pursuance of the conspiracy as provided in the Explanation to section 109. Under the Explanation an act or offence is said to be committed in pursuance of abetment if it is done in consequence of (a) instigation (b) conspiracy or (c) with the aid constituting abetment. Instigation may be in any form and the extent of the influence which the instigation produced in the mind of the accused would vary and depend upon facts of each case. The offence of conspiracy created under section 120A is bare agreement to commit an offence. It has been made punishable under section 120B. The offence of abetment created under the second clause of section 107 requires that there must be something more than mere conspiracy. There must be some act or illegal omission in pursuance of that conspiracy. That would be evident by section 107 (second), "engages in any conspiracy ... for the doing of that thing, if an act or omission took place in pursuance of that conspiracy". The punishment for these two categories of crimes is also quite different. Section 109, IPC, 1860 is concerned only with the punishment of abetment for which no express provision has been made in the IPC, 1860. The charge under section 109 should, therefore, be along with charge for murder which is the offence committed in consequence of abetment. An offence of criminal conspiracy is, on the other hand, an independent offence. It is made punishable under section 120B for which a charge under section 109 is unnecessary and inappropriate.⁷⁷ Section 109 provides that if the act abetted is committed in consequence of abetment and there is no provision for the punishment of such abetment then the offender is to be punished with the punishment provided for the original offence. "Act abetted" in section 109 means the specific offence abetted. Therefore, the offence for the abetment of which a person is charged with the abetment is normally linked with the proved offence.⁷⁸ The commission of the offence of rape in a hut then in possession of the accused was held to be not sufficient in itself to show that the accused abetted the offence.⁷⁹

[s 109.2] Distinct offence.—

Section 109 is by itself creative of an offence though it is punishable in the context of other offences. The accused was charged under sections 300 and 149. The Court said that he could not be convicted under section 300 with the aid of section 109. That would cause great prejudice to the accused in his defence.⁸⁰ The offence for the abetment of which a person is charged with the abetment is normally linked with the proved offence.⁸¹ A plain reading of sections 107–109 of the IPC, 1860 would show that act complained of in order to amount to abetment has to be committed either prior to or at the time of commission of the offences.⁸²

Where the appellant, the wife of a co-accused asked the prosecutrix, aged 15 years to go to the house of the accused and to bring lassi, and when the prosecutrix reached there, the co-accused, who were two in number, bolted the house from inside and committed rape on her, it was held that the appellant was guilty of the offence of abetment.⁸³

[s 109.3] Failure to prevent is not abetment.—

It has been held by the Supreme Court that a failure to prevent the commission of an offence is not an abetment of that offence. The Court said:

Where a person aids and abets the perpetrator of a crime at the very time when the crime is committed, he is a principal of the second degree and section 109 applies. But mere failure to prevent the commission of an offence is not by itself an abetment of that offence. Considering the definition in section 109 strictly, the instigation must have reference to the thing that was done and not to the thing that was likely to have been done by the person who is instigated. It is only if this condition is fulfilled that a person can be guilty of abetment by instigation. Section 109 is attracted even if the abettor is not present when the offence abetted is committed provided that he had instigated the commission of the offence or had engaged with one or more other persons in a conspiracy to commit an offence and pursuant to the conspiracy some act or illegal omission takes place or intentionally induced the commission of an offence by an act or illegal omission. In the absence of direct involvement, conviction for abetment is not sustainable. Section 109 provides that if the act abetted is committed in consequence of abetment and there is no provision for the punishment of such abetment then the offender is to be punished with the punishment provided for the original offence. Section 109 applies even where the abettor is not present. Active abetment at the time of committing the offence is covered by section 109.

The words 'act abetted' as used in section 109 means the specific offence abetted. Mere help in the preparation for the commission of an offence which is not ultimately committed is not abetment within the meaning of section 109. 'Any offence' in section 109 means offence punishable under IPC or any special or local law. The abetment of an offence under the special or local law, therefore, is punishable under section 109. For constituting offence of abetment, intentional and active participation by the abettor is necessary.^{84.}

When a person is charged with the abetment of an offence, it is normally linked with an offence which has been proved.^{85.}

[s 109.4] Procedure.—Failure to frame Charge.—

Section 109, IPC, 1860 is a distinct offence. Accused having faced trial for being a member of an unlawful assembly which achieved the common object of killing the deceased, could in no event be substitutedly convicted for offence under section 302, IPC, 1860 with the aid of section 109, IPC, 1860. There was obviously thus, not only a legal flaw but also a great prejudice to the appellant in projecting his defence.^{86.} Section 109, IPC, 1860 is by itself an offence though punishable in the context of other offences.^{87.}

[s 109.5] Sentence.—

When the act abetted is committed as a consequence of abetment, the abettor should be punished with the punishment provided for the main offence with the help of section 109, IPC, 1860 and even if a charge under section 120B, IPC, 1860 had been framed, no separate sentence under that section is called for.^{88.} No distinction should be made in the quantum of sentence to be awarded to the principal offender and that awarded to the abettor.^{89.}

[s 109.6] Compoundable.—

When an offence is compoundable under section 320 of the Cr PC, 1973, the abetment of such may be compounded in like manner.^{90.}

[s 109.7] CASES.—

Where the accused instigated others to assault with deadly weapons and not to kill, he should be convicted under section 324 read with section 109, IPC, 1860 and not under section 307 read with section 109, IPC, 1860.⁹¹ Where the accused did not participate in the act of rape but kept watch while others were committing the offence, and thereby aided and abetted the commission of the crime instead of preventing it, he was held liable to be convicted under section 376 read with this section and not under section 376 read with section 34.⁹²

[s 109.8] Distinction between sections 109 and 114.—

There is a distinction between section 109 and section 114. Section 114 applies where a criminal first abets an offence to be committed by another person, and is subsequently present at its commission. Active abetment at the time of committing the offence is covered by section 109 and section 114 is clearly intended for an abetment previous to the actual commission of the crime, that is, before the first steps have been taken to commit it.⁹³

76. NMMY Momin, 1971 Cr LJ 793 : AIR 1971 SC 885 [LNIND 1970 SC 155] . Where the accused suffered trial for the substantive offences of causing hurt under sections 328 and 272 by mixing ethyl and methyl alcohol but his direct involvement was not established, section 109 was not permitted to be pushed into service for convicting him for abetment; Joseph v State of Kerala, AIR 1994 SC 34 : 1994 Cr LJ 21 : 1995 SCC (Cr) 165.

77. Arjun Singh v State of HP, AIR 2009 SC 1568 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : (2009) 4 SCC 18 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : (2009) 1 SCR 983 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : 2009 (2) Scale 302 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : 2009 Cr LJ 1332 . See Kehar Singh v The State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] ; Kulwant Singh v State of Bihar, (2007) 15 SCC 670 [LNIND 2007 SC 820] .

78. Amit Kapoor v Ramesh Chander, JT 2012 (9) SC 312 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : 2012 (9) Scale 58 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : (2012) 9 SCC 460 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] .

79. Ashok Nivruti Desai v State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 826 (Bom). Jag Narain Prasad v State of Bihar, 1998 Cr LJ 2553 : AIR 1998 SC 2879 [LNIND 1998 SC 387] , the accused charged with exhorting his son to kill the victim. The court said that it was not believable that an aged person would involve his son into crime for a trivial reason. Mere presence at the spot is not sufficient to involve all the family members who were there. See also Manjula v Muni, 1998 Cr LJ 1476 (Mad).

80. Wakil Yadav v State of Bihar, 1999 Cr LJ 5000 (SC). Arjun Singh v State of HP, (2009) 4 SCC 18 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : AIR 2009 SC 1568 [LNIND 2009 SC 252] : 2009 Cr LJ 1332 , ingredients restated, the offence was not made out in this case.

81. Amit Kapoor v Ramesh Chander, JT 2012 (9) SC 312 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : 2012 (9) Scale 58 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] : (2012) 9 SCC 460 [LNIND 2012 SC 564] ; Kishangiri Mangalgiri Swami v State of Gujarat, 2009 (4) SCC 52 [LNIND 2009 SC 193] .

82. Jasobant Narayan Mohapatra v State of Orissa, 2009 Cr LJ 1043 (Ori).

83. Om Prakash v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 586 : (2015) 2 SCC 84 [LNIND 2014 SC 887] .
84. Kulwant Singh v State of Punjab, (2007) 15 SCC 670 [LNIND 2007 SC 820] .
85. Goura Venkata Reddy v State of AP, (2003) 12 SCC 469 [LNIND 2003 SC 1004] , the appellant (accused) who instigated the other accused was convicted under section 304/109 and not under section 302/109.
86. Wakil Yadav v State of Bihar, (2000) 10 SCC 500 : 1999 AIR SCW 4694.
87. Joseph Kurian Philip Jose v State, (1994) 6 SCC 535 [LNIND 1994 SC 927] : AIR 1995 SC 4 [LNIND 1994 SC 927] : 1995 Cr LJ 502 .
88. State of TN v Savithri, 1976 Cr LJ 37 (Mad).
89. Ashok Nivruti Desai v State of Maharashtra, (1995) 1 Cr LJ 826 (Bom). Vinit v State of Maharashtra, (1994) 2 Cr LJ 1791 (Bom).
90. Section 320(3) Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.
91. Jai Narain, 1972 Cr LJ 469 : AIR 1972 SC 1764 .
92. Nawabkhan v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 1179 MP; Jai Chand v State of HP, 2002 Cr LJ 2301 (HP); Munuswamy v State of TN, 2002 Cr LJ 3916 (SC) : AIR 2002 SC 2994 [LNIND 2002 SC 500] .
93. Kulwant Singh v State of Bihar, (2007) 15 SCC 670 [LNIND 2007 SC 820] ; Mathurala Adi Reddy v State of Hyderabad, AIR 1956 SC 177 : 1956 Cr LJ 341 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 110] Punishment of abetment if person abetted does act with different intention from that of abettor.

Whoever abets the commission of an offence shall, if the person abetted does the act with a different intention or knowledge from that of the abettor, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence which would have been committed if the act had been done with the intention or knowledge of the abettor and with no other.

COMMENTS.—

This section provides that though the person abetted commits the offence with a different intention or knowledge yet the abettor will be punished with the punishment provided for the offence abetted. The liability of the person abetted is not affected by this section.

Explanation 3 to section 108 should be read in conjunction with this section. See illustration (d) to that section.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 111] Liability of abettor when one act abetted and different act done.

When an act is abetted and a different act is done, the abettor is liable for the act done, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had directly abetted it:

Proviso.

Provided* the act done was a probable consequence of the abetment, and was committed under the influence of the instigation, or with the aid or in pursuance of the conspiracy which constituted the abetment.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A instigates a child to put poison into the food of Z, and gives him poison for that purpose. The child, in consequence of the instigation, by mistake puts the poison into the food of Y, which is by the side of that of Z. Here, if the child was acting under the influence of A's instigation, and the act done was under the circumstances a probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had instigated the child to put the poison into the food of Y.
- (b) A instigates B to burn Z's house. B sets fire to the house and at the same time commits theft of property there. A, though guilty of abetting the burning of the house, is not guilty of abetting the theft; for the theft was a distinct act, and not a probable consequence of the burning.
- (c) A instigates B and C to break into an inhabited house at midnight for the purpose of robbery, and provides them with arms for that purpose. B and C break into the house, and being resisted by Z, one of the inmates, murder Z. Here, if that murder was the probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable to the punishment provided for murder.

COMMENTS.—

Liability of abettor when different act done.—This section proceeds on the maxim "every man is presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act". If one man instigates another to perpetrate a particular crime, and that other, in pursuance of such instigation, not only perpetrates that crime, but, in the course of doing so, commits another crime in furtherance of it, the former is criminally responsible as an abettor in respect of such last-mentioned crime, if it is one which, as a reasonable man, he must, at the time of the instigation, have known would, in the ordinary course of things, probably have to be committed in order to carry out the original crime. B and C instigated A to rob the deceased on his return to home after receiving a sum of money; whereupon A killed the deceased. A was convicted of murder and B and C of offences under sections 109, 302.⁹⁴ Where the act contemplated and instigated was no more than a thrashing with a lathi, but one of the assailants suddenly took out a spearhead from his pocket and fatally stabbed the person who was to be thrashed, the others were not held liable for murder or abetment of murder.⁹⁵

94. Mathura Das, (1884) 6 All 491 , 494.

95. Girja Prasad, (1934) 57 All 717 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 112] Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done.

If the act for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding section is committed in addition to the act abetted, and constitutes a distinct offence, the abettor is liable to punishment for each of the offences.

ILLUSTRATION

A instigates B to resist by force a distress made by a public servant. B, in consequence, resists that distress. In offering the resistance, B voluntarily causes grievous hurt to the officer executing the distress. As B has committed both the offences of resisting the distress, and the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, B is liable to punishment for both these offences; and, if A knew that B was likely voluntarily to cause grievous hurt in resisting the distress A will also be liable to punishment for each of the offences.

COMMENTS.—

This section extends the principle enunciated in the preceding section. Under it the abettor is punished for the offence abetted as well as the offence committed. A joint reading of sections 111, 112 and 133 make it abundantly clear that if a person abets another in the commission of an offence and the principal goes further thereafter and does something more which has a different result from that intended by the abettor and makes the offence an aggravated one, the abettor is liable for the consequences of the acts of his principal. The crux of the problem in an enquiry of this sort is whether the abettor as reasonable man at the time of his instigation or intentionally aiding the principal would have foreseen the probable consequences of his abetment.^{96.}

^{96.} Re Irala Palle Ramiah, 1957 Cr LJ 815 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 113] Liability of abettor for an effect caused by the act abetted different from that intended by the abettor.

When an act is abetted with the intention on the part of the abettor of causing a particular effect, and an act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, caused a different effect from that intended by the abettor, the abettor is liable for the effect caused, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had abetted the act with the intention of causing that effect, provided he knew that the act abetted was likely to cause that effect.

ILLUSTRATION

A instigates B to cause grievous hurt to Z. B, in consequence of the instigation causes grievous hurt to Z. Z dies in consequence. Here, if A knew that the grievous hurt abetted was likely to cause death, A is liable to be punished with the punishment provided for murder.

COMMENTS.—

This section should be read in conjunction with section 111. Section 111 provides for the doing of an act different from the one abetted, whereas this section deals with the case when the act done is the same as the act abetted but its effect is different.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 114] Abettor present when offence is committed.

Whenever any person who if absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor, is present when the act or offence for which he would be punishable in consequence of the abetment is committed, he shall be deemed to have committed such act or offence.

COMMENTS.—

This section:

is only brought into operation when circumstances amounting to abetment of a particular crime have first been proved, and then the presence of the accused at the commission of that crime is proved in addition ... Section 114 deals with the case, where there has been the crime of abetment, but where also there has been actual commission of the crime abetted and the abettor has been present thereat, and the way in which it deals with such a case is this. Instead of the crime being still abetment with circumstances of aggravation, the crime becomes the very crime abetted. The section is evidently not punitory. Because participation de facto. ... may sometimes be obscure in detail, it is established by the presumption Juris et de jure that actual presence plus prior abetment can mean nothing else but participation. The presumption raised by s. 114 brings the case within the ambit of s. 34.^{97.}

The meaning of this section is that if the nature of the act done constitutes abetment, then, if present, the abettor is to be deemed to have committed the offence, though in point of fact another actually committed it. The abetment must be complete apart from the mere presence of the abettor.^{98.} The words "who if absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor" clearly show that abetment must be one prior to the commission of the offence and complete by itself.^{99.} Where, for instance, a blow is struck by A, in the presence of, and by the order of, B, both are principals in the transaction. If A instigates B to murder, he commits abetment; if absent, he is punishable as an abettor, and if the offence is committed, then under section 109; if present, he is by this section deemed to have committed the offence and is punishable as a principal. This section applies to cases where a person abets the commission of the offence sometime before at a different place and also remains present at the time the offence is committed.^{100.} But where a person is charged with abetment under this section for aiding in the Commission of an offence, e.g., section 300 IPC, 1860 and the person charged as the principal offender is acquitted on the ground that he had not committed the offence in question, no further question arises regarding abettor's liability.^{101.}

Section 114 is not applicable in every case in which the abettor is present at the commission of the offence abetted. While section 109 is a section dealing generally with abetment, section 114 applies to those cases only in which not only is the abettor present at the time of the commission of the offence but abetment has been committed prior to and independently of his presence.^{102.}

[s 114.1] Sections 34 and 114.—

The distinction between sections 34 and 114 is a very fine one. According to section 34, where a criminal act is done by several persons, in furtherance of the common intention of all, each of them is liable as if it were done by himself alone; so that if two or more persons are present, aiding and abetting in the commission of a murder each will be tried and convicted as a principal, though it might not be proved which of them actually committed the act. Section 114 refers to the case where a person by abetment, previous to the commission of the act, renders himself liable as an abettor, is present when the act is committed, but takes no active part in the doing of it.¹⁰³ A mere direction from one person to another and the carrying out of that direction by the other may be only instigation of the latter's act and may not be a case of a joint act falling under section 34.¹⁰⁴ Accused provided an axe to his son who assaulted the victim leading to his death. It was not a pre-meditated action on the part of main accused and appellant supplied axe instantaneously without considering its pros and cons. Conviction of appellant on charge of abetment (section 114) is not maintainable.¹⁰⁵

1. 'Present'.—It is not necessary that the party should be actually present, an ear or eye witness of the transaction; he is, in construction of law, present, aiding and abetting, if, with the intention of giving assistance, he be near enough to afford it, should occasion arise. A conspirator, who, while his friends enter into a house and loot it, stands and watches outside in pursuance of the common design, does not escape liability under the section.¹⁰⁶ Where, therefore, a person watched at the door of a house while a murder was being committed inside he would be guilty of murder.¹⁰⁷

[s 114.2] Section 376 read with Section 114.—

In order to bring home such conviction under section 376, IPC, 1860 read with section 114, IPC, 1860 there must be evidence on record to show: (a) that there was abetment of rape to be committed; (b) that the abettors have factually abetted the commission of rape; and (c) that they were present at the time when the commission of rape took place.¹⁰⁸

97. Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 52 IA 40, 53 : 27 Bom LR 148, 159 : 52 Cal 197.

98. Krishnaswami Naidu, (1927) 51 Mad 263. See Malanrama v State of Maharashtra, ILR 1958 Bom 700 [LNIND 1957 BOM 189] : 1960 Cr LJ 1189 where it was held in the circumstances of the case that the mere presence of the accused at the ceremony knowing that the offence of bigamy was being committed and the throwing the holy rice over the couple did not amount to abetment of bigamy notwithstanding that one of the accused persons distributed pan after the ceremony. Followed in CS Vardachari v CS Shanti, 1987 Cr LJ 1048 over similar facts.

99. Sital, (1935) 11 Luck 384.

100. Nanboo v Kedar, AIR 1962 MP 91 [LNIND 1961 MP 109].

101. Mahommed Jasimuddin, 1982 Cr LJ 1510 (Gau). See also State v Naroshbhai Haribhai Tandel, 1997 Cr LJ 2783 (Guj).

102. Kulwant Singh v State of Bihar, (2007) 15 SCC 670 [LNIND 2007 SC 820].

103. Jan Mahomed, (1864) 1 WR (Cr) 49; Nga Po Kyone, (1933) 11 Ran 354.

104. MA Reddy v State, AIR 1956 SC 177 : 1956 Cr LJ 341 .
105. Muklesur Rahaman v State, 2010 Cr LJ 4488 . Also see, Kalubhai Maganbhai Vaghela v State of Gujarat, 2009 Cr LJ 2317 (Guj).
106. Khandu v State, (1899) 1 Bom LR 351 , 355.
107. Sidharth v State of Bihar, AIR 2005 SC 4352 [LNIND 2005 SC 752] : (2005) 12 SCC 545 [LNIND 2005 SC 752] : 2005 Cr LJ 4499 : (2006) 1 SCC (Cr) 175. Also see Mukati Prasad Rai alias Mukti Rai v State IR, 2005 SC 1271 : (2004) 13 SCC 144 : (2005) 1 SCC (Cr) 69; Awadh Mahto v State of Bihar, 2007 Cr LJ 342 (Pat).
108. Mangiya v State of Rajasthan, 2000 Cr LJ 4814 (Raj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 115] Abetment of offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life—if offence not committed.

Whoever abets the commission of an offence punishable with death or ^{109.} [imprisonment for life] shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision¹ is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment,² be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

If act causing harm be done in consequence.

and if any act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, and which causes hurt to any person, is done, the abettor shall be liable to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

ILLUSTRATION

A instigates B to murder Z. The offence is not committed. If B had murdered Z, he would have been subject to the punishment of death or ^{110.}[imprisonment for life]. Therefore A is liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and also to a fine; and if any hurt be done to Z in consequence of the abetment, he will be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and to fine.

COMMENT.—

This section punishes the abetment of certain offences which are either not committed at all, or not committed in consequence of abetment or only in part committed.

When more than ten persons are instigated to commit an offence punishable with death, the offence comes under this section as well as under section 117. Abetment under this section need not necessarily be abetment of the commission of an offence by a particular person against a particular person. ^{111.}

1. 'Express provision'.—This refers to sections in which specific cases of abetment of offences punishable with death or imprisonment for life are dealt with. ^{112.}

2. 'Such abetment'.—These words refer to the abetment of the offence specified in the section itself, namely an offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life, and only sections 121 and 131 provide for the punishment of the abetment of such offence. ^{113.}

109. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
110. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
111. Dwarkanath Goswami, (1932) 60 Cal 427 ; Lavji Mandan v State, (1939) 41 Bom LR 980 .
112. Ibid.
113. Lavji Mandan, (1939) 41 Bom LR 980 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 116] Abetment of offence punishable with imprisonment— if offence be not committed.

Whoever abets an offence punishable with imprisonment shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both;

If abettor or person abetted be a public servant whose duty it is to prevent offence.

and if the abettor or the person abetted is a public servant, whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence, the abettor shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B refuses to accept the bribe. A is punishable under this section.
- (b) A instigates B to give false evidence. Here, if B does not give false evidence, A has nevertheless committed the offence defined in this section, and is punishable accordingly.
- (c) A, a police-officer, whose duty it is to prevent robbery, abets the commission of robbery. Here, though the robbery be not committed, A is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for that offence, and also to fine.
- (d) B abets the commission of a robbery by A, a police-officer, whose duty it is to prevent that offence. Here, though the robbery be not committed, B is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence of robbery, and also to fine.

COMMENT—

Where abetted offence not committed.—This section provides for the abetment of an offence punishable with imprisonment. There is no corresponding provision in the Code relating to abetment of an offence punishable with fine only.

Three different states of fact may arise after an abetment—

(1) No offence may be committed. In this case the offender is punishable under sections 115 and 116 for the mere abetment to commit a crime.

(2) The very act at which the abetment aims may be committed, and will be punishable under sections 109 and 110.

(3) Some act different but naturally flowing from the act abetted may be perpetrated, in which case the abettor will fall under the penalties of sections 111, 112 and 113.

[s 116.1] Section 116 and Section 306.—

Section 116, IPC, 1860 is "abetment of offence punishable with imprisonment if offence be not committed". But the crux of the offence under section 306 itself is abetment. In other words, if there is no abetment there is no question of the offence under section 306 coming into play. It is inconceivable to have abetment of an abetment. Hence, there cannot be an offence under section 116 read with section 306, IPC, 1860.¹¹⁴ The Supreme Court has never laid down in *Satvir Singh*¹¹⁵ that under no circumstance an offence under section 306 read with section 511 IPC, 1860 can be committed. The Supreme Court did not have occasion to consider whether a conviction for an offence of attempt to abet the commission of suicide is punishable under section 306 read with section 511, IPC, 1860. Merely because the section opens with the words "if any person commits suicide" it cannot be held that in a case of unsuccessful suicide there is no attempt to abet the commission of suicide. Suicide and its attempt on the one hand and abetment of commission of suicide and its attempt on the other are treated differently by law and, therefore, the one who abets the commission of an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide cannot be held to be punishable merely under section 309 read with section 116, IPC, 1860. To implement the scheme of law he has got to be held to be punishable under section 306 read with section 511, IPC, 1860.¹¹⁶

¹¹⁴. Satvir Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 2001 SC 2828 [LNIND 2001 SC 2168] : (2001) 8 SCC 633 [LNIND 2001 SC 2168] : 2001 Cr LJ 4625 : (2002) 1 SCC (Cr) 48.

¹¹⁵. Supra.

¹¹⁶. Berin P Varghese v State, 2008 Cr LJ 1759 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 117] Abetting commission of offence by the public or by more than ten persons.

Whoever abets the commission of an offence by the public generally or by any number or class of persons exceeding ten, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A affixes in a public place a placard instigating a sect consisting of more than ten members to meet at a certain time and place, for the purpose of attacking the members of an adverse sect, while engaged in a procession. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT—

Abetting by public or more than ten persons.—Abetment has a reference both to the person or persons abetted, and to the offence or offences the commission of which is abetted. This section deals with former, whatever may be the nature of the offence abetted, while section 115 deals with the latter without having regard to the person or persons abetted.^{117.}

Under this section it will be sufficient to show any instigation or other mode of abetment, though neither the effect intended, nor any other effect follows from it. The gravamen of a charge under this section is the abetment itself, the instigation to general lawlessness, not the particular offence of which the commission is instigated.^{118.} The section covers all offences and is a general provision for abetment of any number of persons exceeding ten. When more than ten persons are instigated to commit an offence punishable with death, the offence comes under section 115 as well as this section.^{119.} Abetment of the commission of murder, whether by a single individual or by a class of persons exceeding ten, falls under section 115. In the latter case, it may fall under this section also, but as this section prescribes a lesser punishment, section 115 is the more appropriate provision for such an offence. Although both the sections are applicable, there cannot be separate sentences under the two sections for the same criminal act, and the conviction should properly be under that section which inflicts the higher punishment.^{120.}

[s 117.1] Instigation is essential.—

A mere intention or preparation to instigate is neither instigation nor abetment. In order to constitute an offence under this section by pasting leaflets it is necessary that either the public should have read the leaflets or they should have been exposed to public gaze.^{121.}

-
117. Lavji Mandan v State, (1939) 41 Bom LR 980 .
118. Konda Satyavamma v State, (1931) 55 Mad 90.
119. Dwarkanath Goswami, (1932) 60 Cal 427 .
120. Lavji Mandan, (1939) 41 Bom LR 980 .
121. Parimal Chatterji, (1932) 60 Cal 327 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 118] Concealing design to commit offence punishable with death or imprisonment for life.

Whoever intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence punishable with death or ^{122.}[imprisonment for life],

^{123.}[voluntarily conceals by any act or omission or by the use of encryption or any other information hiding tool, the existence of a design] to commit such offence or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design,

If offence be committed – if offence be not committed.

shall, if that offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or, if the offence be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years; and in either case shall also be liable to fine.

ILLUSTRATION

A, knowing that dacoity is about to be committed at B, falsely informs the Magistrate that a dacoity is about to be committed at C, a place in an opposite direction, and thereby misleads the Magistrate with intent to facilitate the commission of the offence. The dacoity is committed at B in pursuance of the design. A is punishable under this section.

COMMENT—

Concealing design to commit offence.—Sections 118, 119 and 120 all contemplate the concealment of a design by persons other than the accused to commit the offence charged. These sections apply to the concealment of all offences except those which are merely punishable with fine. Under section 107 concealment of a design to commit an offence constitutes an abetment. There must be an obligation on the person concealing the offence to disclose.^{124.} The Cr PC, 1973 creates such obligation in respect of several offences of a serious nature (sections 39 and 40 Cr PC, 1973). The concealment to be criminal must be intentional or at least with knowledge that it will facilitate the commission of an offence.

^{122.} Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

^{123.} Subs. by the Information Technology (Amendment) Act, 2008 (10 of 2009), section 51 (w.e.f. 27 October 2009).

124. Bahadur, (1882) PR No. 34 of 1882.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 119] Public servant concealing design to commit offence which it is his duty to prevent.

Whoever, being a public servant, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence which it is his duty as such public servant to prevent;

125. [voluntarily conceals by any act or omission or by the use of encryption or any other information hiding tool, the existence of a design] to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design;

If offence be committed.

shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both;

If offence be punishable with death, etc.

or, if the offence be punishable with death or 126. [imprisonment for life], with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years;

If offence be not committed.

or if the offence be not committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of such imprisonment or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A, an officer of police, being legally bound to give information of all designs to commit robbery which may come to his knowledge, and knowing that B designs to commit robbery, omits to give such information, with intent to so facilitate the commission of that offence. Here A has by an illegal omission concealed the existence of B's design, and is liable to punishment according to the provisions of this section.

COMMENT—

Public servant concealing design to commit offence.—Section 118 deals with persons who are not public servants. In this section the same principle is extended to public servants but with severe penalty.

125. Subs. by the Information Technology (Amendment) Act, 2008 (10 of 2009), section 51 (w.e.f. 27 October 2009).

126. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER V OF ABETMENT

[s 120] Concealing design to commit offence punishable with imprisonment.

Whoever, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment,

If offence be committed—if offence be not committed.

voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth, and, if the offence be not committed, to one-eighth, of the longest term for such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

COMMENT—

Punishment for concealing design.—The basic principle of this section and section 118 is one and the same. Section 118 deals with offences punishable with death or imprisonment for life; this section deals with offences punishable with imprisonment. All offences except those punishable only with fine are included in these two sections.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1. CHAPTER V-A CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

[s 120A] Definition of criminal conspiracy.

When two or more persons agree to do, or cause to be done,—

- (1) an illegal act, or
- (2) an act which is not illegal by illegal means, such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy:

Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done by one or more parties to such agreement in pursuance thereof.

Explanation.—It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object.

COMMENT—

Criminal conspiracy.—This chapter has introduced into the criminal law of India a new offence, viz., the offence of criminal conspiracy. It came into existence by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1913. Offence of criminal conspiracy is an exception to the general law where intent alone does not constitute crime. It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention.^{2.} Law making conspiracy a crime is designed to curb immoderate power to do mischief which is gained by a combination of the means. The encouragement and support which co-conspirators give to one another rendering enterprises possible which, if left to individual effort, would have been impossible, furnish the ground for visiting conspirators and abettors with condign punishment. The conspiracy is held to be continued and renewed as to all its members wherever and whenever any member of the conspiracy acts in furtherance of the common design. Offence of criminal conspiracy has its foundation in an agreement to commit an offence. A conspiracy consists not merely in the intention of two or more, but in the agreement of two or more to do an unlawful act by unlawful means.^{3.} A criminal conspiracy must be put to action inasmuch as so long a crime is generated in the mind of an accused, it does not become punishable. What is necessary is not thoughts, which may even be criminal in character, often involuntary, but offence would be said to have been committed thereunder only when that take concrete shape of an agreement to do or cause to be done an illegal act or an act which although not illegal by illegal means and then if nothing further is done the agreement would give rise to a criminal conspiracy.^{4.}

[s 120A.1] Ingredients.—

The ingredients of this offence are—

- (1) that there must be an agreement between the persons who are alleged to conspire; and
- (2) that the agreement should be
 - (i) for doing of an illegal act, or
 - (ii) for doing by illegal means an act which may not itself be illegal.⁵ Meeting of minds of two or more persons for doing or causing to be done an illegal act or an act by illegal means is sine qua non of criminal conspiracy.⁶

The most important ingredient of the offence being, the agreement between two or more persons to do an illegal act. In a case where criminal conspiracy is alleged, the court must inquire whether the two persons are independently pursuing the same end or they have come together to pursue the unlawful object. The former does not render them as conspirators but the latter does. For the offence of conspiracy some kind of physical manifestation of agreement is required to be established. The express agreement need not be proved. The evidence as to the transmission of thoughts sharing the unlawful act is not sufficient. A conspiracy is a continuing offence which continues to subsist till it is executed or rescinded or frustrated by choice of necessity. During its subsistence whenever any one of the conspirators does an act or series of acts, he would be held guilty under section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\).⁷

[s 120A.2] Elements of Criminal Conspiracy.—

- (a) an object to be accomplished,
- (b) a plan or scheme embodying means to accomplish that object,
- (c) an agreement or understanding between two or more of the accused persons whereby, they become definitely committed to cooperate for the accomplishment of the object by the means embodied in the agreement, or by any effectual means, and
- (d) in the jurisdiction where the statute required an overt act.⁸

1. Two or more persons needed.—To constitute the offence of conspiracy there must be an agreement of two or more persons to do an act which is illegal or which is to be done by illegal means for one cannot conspire with oneself. In Topandas v State of Bombay,⁹ which has been cited by the Supreme Court with approval in Haradhan Chakrabarty v UOI,¹⁰ it was laid down that "two or more persons must be parties to such an agreement and one person alone can never be held guilty of criminal conspiracy for the simple reason that one cannot conspire with oneself." The question of a single person being convicted for an offence of conspiracy was considered in Bimbardhar Pradhan v The State of Orissa,^{11, 12} and held that It is not essential that more than one person should be convicted of the offence of criminal conspiracy. It is enough if the court is in a position to find that two or more persons were actually concerned in the criminal conspiracy. In the Red fort Attack Case¹³ the Supreme Court found that it was nothing but a well-planned conspiracy, in which apart from sole appellant, some others were also involved and convicted the sole appellant for criminal conspiracy.¹⁴ Under the common law since husband and wife constitute one person there cannot be any conspiracy to commit an offence if husband and wife are the only parties to an agreement.¹⁵ "It seems rather odd that though husband and wife by themselves alone cannot be convicted of an offence of conspiracy for agreeing to commit an offence but if two of them commit the self-same substantive offence they can be convicted of that offence".¹⁶ Fortunately this state of law does not exist in India, where husband and wife by themselves alone can be parties to a criminal conspiracy. Where the husband is a party with some others in a conspiracy and his wife joined him in that with knowledge that he was involved with others to commit an unlawful act, she would be guilty of the conspiracy.¹⁷ Since conspiracy requires at least two persons, where two or more named persons only were charged and all but one of them were acquitted, the remaining accused could not be convicted under section 120B, IPC, 1860, as he could not have conspired with himself.¹⁸ In a similar case before the Supreme Court, a military major was tried for theft of military goods along with nine others who were supposed to have abetted him. He was found guilty along with one more accused and the rest were acquitted. On his appeal, the High Court quashed the judgment of the Court martial because there was no proof that he had removed the wheel drums. He was reinstated. In view of the acquittal and reinstatement of the main accused, the matter of his co-accused came before the Supreme Court. He too was ordered to be acquitted and reinstated.¹⁹ The same rule obtained under the English common law provided two named persons were tried together.²⁰ This rule has now been abolished by section 5(8) of the Criminal Law Act, 1977 which provides that unless conviction of one becomes inconsistent with the acquittal of the other even one of the two conspirators can be convicted, e.g., where one was acquitted for want of sanction or on ground of being an exempted person. The Bombay High Court has taken the same view in a case. Thus, where of the two accused one was a public servant and he had to be acquitted as he was prosecuted without obtaining sanction under section 197, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\), the other could still be convicted on a charge of conspiracy as the acquittal of the other accused was not on facts but on technical ground and in spite of evidence establishing the factum of conspiracy.²¹

The circumstances in which a single person can be tried and convicted have been thus, stated in Kenny:²² "But though there must be plurality of conspirators, it is not necessary that all should be brought to trial together. One person may be indicted, alone, for conspiring with other persons who are not in custody, or who are even unknown to the indictors. Indeed, some of the conspirators may be unknown to the rest, provided all are acting under the directions of one leader. There need not be communication between each conspirator and every other, provided there be a design common to all."²³ Thus, a wife knowing that her husband was involved with others in a conspiracy, agreed with him that she would join the conspiracy and play her part, it was held that she thereby became guilty of conspiracy notwithstanding that the only person with whom she actually concluded the agreement was her husband.²⁴

2. Agreement is gist of the offence.—The gist of the offence is the bare engagement and association to break the law, whether any act be done in pursuance thereof by the conspirators or not.²⁵ Meeting of minds is essential. Mere knowledge or discussion is not sufficient.²⁶ It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention. Not only the intention but the presence of an agreement to carry out the object of the intention, is an offence. The question for consideration in a case is did all the accused had the intention and did they agree that the crime be committed. It would not be enough for the offence of conspiracy when some of the accused merely entertained a wish, howsoever, horrendous it may be, that offence be committed.²⁷ In the absence of an agreement, a mere thought to commit a crime does not constitute the offence.²⁸ The offence of conspiracy is a substantive offence. It renders the mere agreement to commit an offence punishable even if no offence takes place pursuant to the illegal agreement.²⁹ The object in view or the methods employed should be illegal, as defined in section 43, (supra). A distinction is drawn between an agreement to commit an offence and an agreement of which either the object or the methods employed are illegal but do not constitute an offence. In the case of the former, the criminal conspiracy is completed by the act of agreement; in the case of the latter, there must be some act done by one or more of the parties to the agreement to give effect to the object thereof, that is, there must be an overt act. An express agreement need not be proved. Evidence relating to transmission of thoughts leading to sharing of thought relating to the unlawful act is sufficient.³⁰ A wrong judgment or an inaccurate or incorrect approach or poor management by itself, even after due deliberations between Ministers or even with Prime Minister, by itself cannot be said to be a product of criminal conspiracy.³¹ A few bits here and a few bits there on which the prosecution relies cannot be held to be adequate for connecting the accused with the commission of the crime of criminal conspiracy. It has to be shown that all means adopted and illegal acts done were in furtherance of the object of conspiracy hatched. The circumstances relied for the purposes of drawing an inference should be prior in point of time than the actual commission of the offence in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy.³²

The meeting of the minds to form a criminal conspiracy has to be proved by adducing substantive evidence, in cases where the circumstantial evidence is incomplete or vague.³³

[s 120A.3] Actus reus.—

The actus reus in a conspiracy is the agreement to execute the illegal conduct, not the execution of it. It is not enough that two or more persons pursued the same unlawful object at the same time or in the same place; it is necessary to show a meeting of minds, a consensus to give effect to an unlawful purpose. It is not, however, necessary that each conspirator should have been in communication with every other.³⁴

[s 120A.4] Participation.—

It is not necessary that all the conspirators should participate from the inception to the end of the conspiracy; some may join the conspiracy after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them and some others may quit from the conspiracy. All of them cannot be treated as conspirators. Where in pursuance of the agreement the conspirators commit offences individually or adopt illegal means to do a legal act which has a nexus to the object of conspiracy, all of them will be liable for such offences even if some of them have not actively participated in the commission of those offences.³⁵ To constitute a conspiracy, meeting of mind of two or more persons for doing an illegal act or an act by illegal means is the first and primary condition and it is not necessary that all the conspirators must know each and every detail of conspiracy. Neither is it necessary that every one of the conspirators takes active part in the commission of each and every conspiratorial act.³⁶ Even if some steps are resorted to by one or two of the conspirators without the knowledge of the others it will not affect the culpability of those others when they are associated with the object of the conspiracy.³⁷ The rationale is that criminal acts done in furtherance of a conspiracy may be sufficiently dependent upon the encouragement and support of the group as a whole to warrant treating each member as a causal agent to each act. Under this view, which of the conspirators committed the substantive offence would be less significant in determining the defendant's liability than the fact that the crime was performed as a part of a larger division of labour to which the accused had also contributed his efforts.³⁸

[s 120A.5] Overt act.—

No overt act is necessary.³⁹ Where the allegation against the third accused was that he was merely standing nearby when the other accused committed the murder, he cannot be charged for an offence under sections 302/120B, IPC, 1860, in the absence of any other reliable evidence.⁴⁰ In a case where the agreement is for accomplishment of an act which by itself constitutes an offence, then in that event, unless the Statute so requires, no overt act is necessary to be proved by the prosecution because in such a fact-situation criminal conspiracy is established by proving such an agreement.⁴¹ When two agree to carry it into effect, the very plot is an act in itself, and an act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced, if lawful, punishable if for a criminal object or for use of criminal means.⁴² Where the conspiracy alleged is with regard to the commission of a serious crime as contemplated by section 120-B read with the proviso to sub-section (2) of section 120A, then the mere proof of an agreement is enough to bring about conviction under section 120B and the proof of any overt act by the accused or by any of them would not be necessary.⁴³ The illegal act may or may not be done in pursuance of agreement, but the very agreement is an offence and is punishable.⁴⁴

It is not an ingredient of the offence under this section that all the parties should agree to do a single illegal act. It may comprise the commission of a number of acts. Where the accused are charged with having conspired to do three categories of illegal acts, the mere fact that all of them could not be convicted separately in respect of each of the offences has no relevancy in considering the question whether the offence of conspiracy has been committed. They can all be held guilty of the offence of conspiracy to do illegal acts, though for individual offences all of them may not be liable.⁴⁵ Where the agreement between the accused is a conspiracy to do or continue to do something which is illegal, it is immaterial whether the agreement to do any of the acts in furtherance of the commission of the offence do not strictly amount to an offence. The entire agreement must be viewed as a whole and it has to be ascertained as to what in fact the conspirators intended to do or the object they wanted to achieve.⁴⁶ It is not necessary that each member of a conspiracy must know each other or all the details of the conspiracy.⁴⁷ It is also not necessary that every conspirator must have taken part in each and every act done in pursuance of a conspiracy.⁴⁸ It is, however, necessary that a charge of conspiracy should contain particulars of the names of the place or places where it was hatched, persons hatching it, how was it hatched and what the purpose of the conspiracy was.⁴⁹

In the matter⁵⁰ of the assassination of the then Prime Minister of India, Smt. Indira Gandhi, one of the two actual killers and two conspirators were brought to trial. Both the conspirators were away from the scene of the crime. One of them was acquitted by the Supreme Court. His movements after the incident were not properly proved. The documents recovered from his custody did not indicate any agreement between him and the other accused. They only showed his agitated mind which was in the grip of an avenging mood. This is not enough to establish an agreement with anybody. On the other hand, about Kehar Singh, it was shown that he was having secret talks with one of the actual killers, that they were trying all the time to keep themselves away from their wives and children, they avoided the company of the other members of the family and on being asked what they were talking about, they remained mysterious. These facts were sufficient to show that they were planning something secret. This was enough to constitute a prima facie evidence of conspiracy within the meaning of section 10 of the Evidence Act, 1872 and to bring them within the jacket of punishment of all for the act of one.

Privacy and secrecy are more characteristics of a conspiracy, than of a loud discussion in an elevated place open to public view. Direct evidence in proof of a conspiracy is seldom available; offence of conspiracy can be proved by either direct or circumstantial evidence. It is not always possible to give affirmative evidence about the date of the formation of the criminal conspiracy, about the persons who took part in the formation of the conspiracy, about the object, which the objectors set before themselves as the object of conspiracy, and about the manner in which the object of conspiracy is to be carried out, all this is necessarily a matter of inference.⁵¹ Thus, a conspiracy is an inference from circumstances. There cannot always be much direct evidence about it. Conspiracy can be inferred even from the circumstances giving rise to a conclusive or irresistible inference of an agreement between two or more persons to commit an offence.⁵² It is manifest that the meeting of minds of two or more persons is a sine qua non but it may not be possible to establish by direct evidence. Its existence and objective can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances and parties conduct. It is necessary that the incriminating circumstances must form a chain of events, from which a conclusion about the accused's guilt could be drawn. The help of circumstantial evidence is necessary because a conspiracy is always hatched in secrecy. It becomes difficult to locate any direct evidence.⁵³ A businessman was in great need of money for completing the construction of a theatre complex. He was approached by a person who told him that his financier friend would help him with money. This was followed by a number of meetings between him and the team of financiers during which documents were executed and money released in cash which cash was found to be counterfeit currency. Every member of the team was held to be guilty of conspiracy and of cheating under section 420.⁵⁴ Seizure of unexplained currency notes from the possession of a person who claimed to be the owner of the money was held to be not sufficient to connect him with the person who was the main accused of smuggling currency, though he was a relative of the main accused.⁵⁵

Where a bank accountant dishonestly agreed with others to conceal dishonour of cheques purchased by the bank and thus, causing risk to the economic interests of the bank, he was held guilty of conspiring to defraud whatever his motive or underlying purpose might have been (he contended that he acted in the interest of the bank) and even though he had no desire to harm the victim and no loss was actually caused.⁵⁶ Officials of a nationalised bank, in violation of departmental instructions, allowing advance credits on banker's cheques to the account of a customer dealing in securities. Advance credits were allowed before the cheques were sent for clearance and in some cases even before the cheques were received. This allowed the customer to take pecuniary advantage by overdrawing money from his account which he was not entitled to. Public funds were thus, misused. It was held that a criminal conspiracy between bank officials and the customer stood proved. One of them was acquitted because no conclusive evidence could be found against him.⁵⁷

A criminal conspiracy can be proved by circumstantial evidence or by necessary implication. A smaller conspiracy may be the part of a larger conspiracy. It was held on facts that a criminal conspiracy was established when officials of two public sector banks acted in such a way that the transaction appeared to be an inter-banking transaction relating to call money which the borrowing bank was supposed to retain with itself but the transaction was in fact meant to help a private party to use public funds for private purpose.⁵⁸ Where the accused, an LIC agent, was charged with cheating the LIC by entering into conspiracy with the co-accused, a Development Officer, on the allegation that insurance policies were got issued on the basis of fake and forged documents and he received premium commission and bonus in respect of those policies, the accused was entitled to be acquitted because the forging was done by the co-accused without the knowledge and consent of the accused. Bonus, Commission, etc., in respect of those policies were credited to his account only in the normal course.⁵⁹ A 'vaid' and an 'up-vaid' who, in conspiracy with others made bogus medical bills for government servants and got them duly passed through their Ayurvedic Aushadhalaya for payment of 30 per cent of the amount of the bills, were caught in a trap and the tainted money was recovered from the accused. One of the accused died during the pendency of appeal. Conviction of the other under sections 120B/468 was held to be proper.^{60.}

A group of friends went to a club for fun and frolic. One of them (the main accused) suddenly fired at the bar mate for her refusal to serve drinks. The others were unaware of the accused carrying a loaded pistol. They had stayed at the club for about two and a half hours. The Court said that this could not constitute an evidence of conspiracy. The Court also said that the fact that the group members dispersed separately and also helped to retrieve the murder weapon would not suggest conspiracy for murder.^{61.}

[s 120A.6] Same verdict in respect of each not necessary.—

It has been held that the rule that both parties to a conspiracy had to be convicted or acquitted has been abrogated by the Criminal Law Act, 1977 (English). The important question is whether there is a material difference in the evidence against the two.^{62.}

[s 120A.7] Sections 34 and 120A.—

There is not much substantial difference between conspiracy as defined in section 120A and acting on a common intention, as contemplated in section 34. While in the former, the gist of the offence is bare engagement and association to break the law even though the illegal act does not follow, the gist of the offence under section 34 is the commission of a criminal act in furtherance of a common intention of all the offenders, which means that there should be unity of criminal behaviour resulting in something, for which an individual would be punishable, if it were all done by himself alone.^{63.} Another point of difference is that a single person cannot be convicted under section 120A and, therefore, where all the accused except one were acquitted, the Supreme Court ordered his acquittal also,^{64.} whereas under section 34, read with some other specific offence, a single person can be convicted because each is responsible for the acts of all others.

[s 120A.8] Sections 107 and 120A.—

For an offence under this section a mere agreement is enough if the agreement is to commit an offence. But, for an offence under the second clause of section 107 an act or illegal omission must take place in pursuance of the conspiracy and a mere agreement is not enough.^{65.}

3. How proved (section 120A IPC, 1860 and section 10 Evidence Act, 1872-Doctrine of agency).—There is no difference between the mode of proof of the offence of conspiracy and that of any other offence, it can be established by direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence. But section 10 of the Evidence Act introduces the doctrine of agency and if the conditions laid down therein are satisfied, the acts done by one are admissible against the coconspirators. When men enter into an agreement for an unlawful end, they become ad-hoc agents for one another and have made a partnership in crime. The said section reads: "Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them is a relevant fact against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well as for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was party to it."

The section can be analysed as follows: "(1) There shall be a prima facie evidence affording a reasonable ground for a Court to believe that two or more persons are members of a conspiracy; (2) if the said condition is fulfilled, anything said, done or written by any one of them in reference to their common intention will be evidence against the other; (3) anything said, done or written by him should have been said, done or written by him after the intention was formed by any one of them; (4) it would also be relevant for the said purpose against another who entered the conspiracy whether it was said, done or written before he entered the conspiracy or after he left it; and (5) it can only be used against a coconspirator and not in his favour."⁶⁶.

Since conspiracy is often hatched up in utmost secrecy it is mostly impossible to prove conspiracy by direct evidence. It has, oftener than not, to be inferred from the acts, statements and conduct of the parties to the conspiracy.⁶⁷ The circumstances proved before, during and after the occurrence have to be considered to decide about the complicity of the accused.⁶⁸ If it is proved that the accused pursued, by their acts, the same object often by the same means, one performing one part of the act and the other another part of the same act so as to complete it with a view to attainment of the object which they were pursuing, the Court is at liberty to draw the inference that they conspired together to effect that object.⁶⁹ It should, however, be remembered that where there is no direct evidence, for example through the evidence of an approver, and the case for the prosecution is dependent on circumstantial evidence alone, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove and establish such circumstances as would lead to the only conclusion of existence of a criminal conspiracy and rule out the theory of innocence.⁷⁰ Thus, chairman of a large cooperative society cannot be punished vicariously for the acts of others as mens rea cannot be excluded in a criminal case. As a chairman he had to deal with various matters and it would have been impossible for him to look into every detail to find out if someone was committing any criminal breach of trust.⁷¹ Similarly, a case of conspiracy to misappropriate cash entrusted to the accused is not made out merely from the audit report without any evidence of shortage on actual verification of cash as mistakes and even double entries may be made bona fide while preparing the account.⁷² The onus is on the prosecution to prove the charge of conspiracy by cogent evidence, direct or circumstantial.⁷³ One more principle which deserves notice is that the cumulative effect of the proved circumstances should be taken into account in determining the guilt of the accused rather than adopting an isolated approach to each of the circumstances. Of course, each one of the circumstances should be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Lastly, in regard to the appreciation of evidence relating to the conspiracy, the Court must take care to see that the acts or conduct of the parties must be conscious and clear enough to infer their concurrence as to the common design and its execution.⁷⁴

[s 120A.9] Inference of conspiracy.—

It is a matter of common experience that direct evidence to prove conspiracy is rarely available.⁷⁵ Thus, it is extremely difficult to adduce direct evidence to prove conspiracy. Existence of conspiracy and its objective can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances and the conduct of the accused. In some cases, indulgence in the illegal act or legal act by illegal means may be inferred from the knowledge itself.⁷⁶ It can be a matter of inference drawn by the Court after considering whether the basic facts and circumstances on the basis of which inference is drawn have been proved beyond all reasonable doubts and that no other conclusion except that of the complicity of Accused to have agreed to commit an offence is evident.⁷⁷ Accordingly, the circumstances proved before and after the occurrence have to be considered to decide about the complicity of the accused. Even if some acts are proved to have been committed, it must be clear that they were so committed in pursuance of an agreement made between the accused persons who were parties to the alleged conspiracy. Inferences from such proved circumstances regarding the guilt may be drawn only when such circumstances are incapable of any other reasonable explanation. An offence of conspiracy cannot be deemed to have been established on mere suspicion and surmises or inference which are not supported by cogent and acceptable evidence. Inferences from such proved circumstances regarding the guilt may be drawn only when such circumstances are incapable of any other reasonable explanation. To establish a charge of conspiracy knowledge about indulgence in either an illegal act or a legal act by illegal means is necessary. In some cases, intent of unlawful use being made of the goods or services in question may be inferred from the knowledge itself.⁷⁸ This apart, the prosecution has not to establish that a particular unlawful use was intended, so long as the goods or service in question could not be put to any lawful use. Finally when the ultimate offence consists of a chain of actions, it would not be necessary for the prosecution to establish, to bring home the charge of conspiracy, that each of the conspirators had the knowledge of what the collaborator would do.⁷⁹

One of the accused persons, a foreign national, was found staying in the country without valid passport and visa. His movement to various places with the main accused was established. A large quantity of arms and ammunition was recovered from the place occupied by the main accused. The Court said that an inference of criminal conspiracy could be drawn.⁸⁰ The Court also said that the appeal against conviction of the main accused was dismissed would not be sufficient to say that the charge of conspiracy against other accused would be deemed to be proved.⁸¹ Circumstances proved before, during and after the occurrence of the crime have to be considered together to decide about the complicity of the accused.⁸² Circumstantial evidence was based on the recovery of the scooter used by the executant and alleged to have been owned by a co-conspirator, but the recovery was not based on any information given by the accused, but by one witness. The Supreme Court held that no circumstantial evidence was proved against any of the conspirators.⁸³

[s 120A.10] Circumstantial evidence, inference must be backed by evidence.—

Most of the circumstances stated as against the accused were not proved. Merely based on the circumstance that the accused had filed a civil suit against the deceased for restraining him from doing a business he cannot be convicted. Moreover, there was no specific evidence as to who the conspirators were, where and when the conspiracy was hatched, what the specific purpose of such a conspiracy was and whether it was relating to the elimination of the deceased.⁸⁴ The law is well established that conspiracy cannot be proved merely on the basis of inferences. The inferences have to be backed by evidence.⁸⁵

The Court for the purpose of arriving at a finding as to whether the said offence has been committed or not may take into consideration the circumstantial evidence. However, while doing so, it must bear in mind that the meeting of minds is essential and mere knowledge or discussion would not be sufficient.⁸⁶ In Mukesh v State for NCT of Delhi, Criminal Appeal Nos. 607–608 of 2017, (popular as Nirbhaya Case) the criminal conspiracy was proved by the sequence of events and the conduct of the accused.

In the conspiracy for assassination of the former PM (Rajiv Gandhi) one of the accused persons at one point of time in his confessional statement said that he had a strong suspicion that Rajiv Gandhi was the target of the accused persons. The Court said that this suspicion did not make him a member of the conspiracy. His association, however strong with the main conspirators would not make him a member of the conspiracy by itself. But those who were in the thick of the conspiracy, for example, one who purchased the battery for explosion of human body, their conviction for the main offence was proper. But mere association with LTTE was not sufficient nor the fact that messages about arrests were sent by certain persons.^{87.}

[s 120A.11] Contacts through telephone.—

Where the case against the appellants A2 to A4 is that they had hatched a conspiracy with appellant A1 to kill the deceased and the case against A1 was proved as per the 'last seen theory', and to prove the conspiracy the prosecution relied on the circumstance that there were frequent phone calls among the accused some days around the date of murder, and the recovery of some vehicles; the Supreme Court held that the telephonic calls and the recovery may raise suspicion against the accused but mere suspicion by itself cannot take the place of proof.^{88.}

[s 120A.12] Between bank officials.—

Criminal conspiracy was taken to be established when officials of two public sector banks acted in such a way that the transaction in question appeared to be an inter-banking transaction relating to call money which the borrowing bank was supposed to retain with itself. The transaction was in fact formalised for the purpose of helping a private party to use public funds for a private purpose.^{89.}

[s 120A.13] Approval of television serial.—

The accused was the director of Doordarshan. The allegation against him was that he continued a serial which was approved at lower rates by an earlier director. Each director worked at different point of time. They did not work together. Their postings were official postings. It was difficult to infer any conspiracy between them for continuing the telecast. The investigation launched against the director was liable to be quashed.^{90.}

1. Chapter VA (containing sections 120A and 120B) inserted by Act 8 of 1913, section 3.
2. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526].
3. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] relying on Ram Narayan Popli v Central Bureau of Investigation, (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] .

4. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901.
5. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] ; S Arul Raja v State of TN, reported in, 2010 (8) SCC 233 [LNIND 2010 SC 689] ; Mohan Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2011 SC 3534 [LNIND 2011 SC 820] : 2011 Cr LJ 4837 : (2011) 9 SCC 272 [LNIND 2011 SC 820] ; Central Bureau of Investigation Hyderabad v K Narayana Rao, 2012 AIR SCW 5139 : 2012 Cr LJ 4610 : JT 2012 (9) SC 359 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] : (2012) 9 SCC 512 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] : 2012 (9) Scale 228 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] ; Ajay Aggarwal v UOI, (AIR 1993 SC 1637 [LNIND 1993 SC 431] : 1993 AIR SCW 1866 : 1993 Cr LJ 2516) : (1993) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1993 SC 431] .
6. Rajiv Kumar v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 3772 [LNIND 2017 SC 367] .
7. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 Mad LJ (Cr) 532 : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] ; Damodar v State of Rajasthan, (2004) 12 SCC 336 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] ; Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Admn), (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] ; State of Maharashtra v Somnath Thapa, (1996) 4 SCC 659 [LNIND 1996 SC 776] .
8. Ram Narayan Popli v Central Bureau of Investigation, (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] .
9. Topandas v State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] : 1956 Cr LJ 138 : (1955) 2 SCR 881 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] . The ruling in Topandas case, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] and Fakhruddin case, AIR 1967 SC 1326 [LNIND 1966 SC 307] were not followed in Sanichar Sahni v State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 198 [LNIND 2009 SC 1350] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 347, because here only one person was charged under section 120-B and for no other offence, and his co-accused was charged with another offence but not under section 120-B, the court said that the charge was not properly framed. In the earlier cases, more than one were charged with conspiracy, all but one were acquitted, the single one could not be convicted. He was convicted for murder which was proved against him.
10. Haradhan Chakrabarty v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 1210 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] : 1990 Cr LJ 1246 : (1990) 2 SCC 143 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] .
11. See also Thakur H v State of HP, 2013 Cr LJ 1704 (HP).
12. Bimbadhar Pradhan v The State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 469 [LNIND 1956 SC 25] .
13. Mohd Arif v State of NCT of Delhi, JT 2011 (9) SC 563 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 13 SCC 621 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 10 SCR 56 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : 2011 (8) Scale 328 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] .
14. McDowell, (1966) 1 All ER 193 : (1965) 3 WLR 1138 ; Rex v IRC Haulage, (1944) KB 551 : (1944) 1 All ER 691 . Central Bureau of Investigation v VC Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 ; Ajay Kumar Rana v State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 3837 (Pat).
15. Mowji, (1957) All ER 385 : (1957) 2 WLR 277 . See Glanville Williams, Legal Unity of Husband and Wife, 10 Modern LR 16 (1947). "But either spouse may be convicted of inciting the other to commit a crime if such be proved." See Kenny, 450, p 428, Outlines Of Criminal Law, 19th Edn 1966.
16. Cross & Jones : Introduction To Criminal Law, 9th Edn, p 343.
17. R v Charstny, (1991) 1 WLR 1381 (CA).
18. Bhagat Ram, AIR 1972 SC 1502 [LNIND 1972 SC 72] : 1972 Cr LJ 909 ; Tapandas, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] : (1955) 2 SCR 881 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] ; Fakhruddin, AIR 1967 SC 1326 [LNIND 1966 SC 307] : 1967 Cr LJ 1197 ; See also State v Dilbagh Rai, 1986 Cr LJ 138 (Delhi).
19. Relying upon Faguna Kanta Nath v State of Assam, AIR 1959 SC 673 [LNIND 1959 SC 2] : 1959 Cr LJ 90 : 1959 Supp 2 SCR 1, where also the acquittal of the co-accused automatically followed the acquittal of the main accused; Madan Lal Bhandari v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 SC 436 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] : 1970 Cr LJ 519 : (1969) 2 SCC 385 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] : (1970) 1 SCR 688 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] , the nurse causing miscarriage acquitted, the conspirator also acquitted.

20. Plummer v State, (1902) 2 KB 339 ; Coughlan (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 11 .
21. Pradumna, 1981 Cr LJ 1873 (Bom).
22. JE Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law, 428, 19th Edn, 1966.
23. Citing R v Myrick and Ribuffi, (1929) 21 Cr App R 94 TAC.
24. Regina v Chrastry, (1991) 1 WLR 1381 (CA). Kuldeep Singh v State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 479 (SC), the only evidence against one of the accused conspirators was that he was seen moving with others to the house of the deceased. This was held to be not sufficient to make him a part of the conspiracy or participant in murder.
25. Mohammad Ismail, (1936) Nag 152; Bimbadhar Pradhan, (1956) Cut 409 SC; EG Barsay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] : 1962 (2) SCR 195 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] ; Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] , requisites of the offence restated.
26. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1 [LNIND 2009 SC 1652] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 646 : Baldev Singh v State of Punjab, (2009) 6 SCC 564 [LNIND 2009 SC 1151] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 66.
27. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] Mere knowledge, or even discussion, of the plan is not, per se enough; Russell on Crimes, 12th Edn, vol I, quoted in Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Administration), 1988 (3) SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] at 731.
28. R Venkatakrishnan v CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .
29. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] .
30. Esher Singh v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 3030 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] : (2004) 11 SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] . K Hashim v State of TN, AIR 2005 SC 128 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] : (2005) 1 SCC 237 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] , the court enumerated four elements of criminal conspiracy, the essence is an unlawful agreement and it is complete when the agreement is framed. A design resting in mind only does not make out the offence.
31. Subramanian Swamy v A Raja, AIR 2012 SC 3336 [LNIND 2012 SC 498] : 2012 Cr LJ 4443 : (2012) 9 SCC 257 [LNIND 2012 SC 498] (Involvement of finance minister in 2G Spectrum Case) - Criminal conspiracy cannot be inferred on the mere fact that there were official discussions between the officers of the MoF and that of DoT and between two Ministers, which are all recorded. Suspicion, however, strong, cannot take the place of legal proof and the meeting between Shri P Chidambaram and Shri A Raja would not by itself be sufficient to infer the existence of a criminal conspiracy so as to indict Shri P. Chidambaram.
32. Esher Singh v State of AP, 2004 (11) SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] .
33. Gulam Sarbar v State of Bihar, 2014 Cr LJ 34 : (2014) 3 SCC 401.
34. Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2010) 1 SCC(Cr) 159.
35. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] ; State of HP v Krishan Lal Pardhan, (AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709) : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] .
36. K R Purushothaman v State, AIR 2006 SC 35 [LNIND 2005 SC 842] : (2005) 12 SCC 631 [LNIND 2005 SC 842] ; approved in John Pandian v State Rep by Inspector of Police, TN, AIR 2011 SC (Supp) 531 : (2011) 3 SCC(Cr) 550 : 2010 (13) Scale 13.

37. Yash Pal Mittal v State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] : 1978 Cr LJ 189 : (1977) 4 SCC 540 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] .
38. Firozuddin Basheeruddin v State, 2001 (7) SCC 596 [LNIND 2001 SC 1755] .
39. K Hasim v State of TN, AIR 2005 SC 128 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] : 2005 Cr LJ 143 .
40. Raju v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 4425 : 2014 (9) SCJ 453 [LNINDORD 2014 SC 19031] .
41. Sushil Suri v CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1713 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] : (2011) 5 SCC 708 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 764 : (2011) 8 SCR 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] .
42. Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2010) 1 SCC(Cr) 159.
43. SC Bahri v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2020 : 1994 Cr LJ 3271 .
44. Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 Cr LJ 1 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] .
45. EG Barsay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] : 1962 (2) SCR 195 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] .
46. Lennart v State, AIR 1970 SC 549 [LNIND 1969 SC 396] : 1970 Cr LJ 707 .
47. RK Dalmia, AIR 1962 SC 1821 [LNIND 1962 SC 146] : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 805 ; Yashpal v State, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] SC : 1978 Cr LJ 189 .
48. State of HP v Krishanlal Pradhan, AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709 : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] .
49. KS Narayanan, 1982 Cr LJ 1611 (Mad); Krishnalal Naskar, 1982 Cr LJ 1305 (Cal). Mahabir Prasad Akela v State of Bihar, 1987 Cr LJ 1545 Pat, no meeting of minds.
50. (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 CR LJ 1 . AS AGAINST THIS SEE, Param Hans Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 955 [LNIND 1987 SC 253] : 1987 Cr LJ 789 : (1987) 2 SCC 197 [LNIND 1987 SC 253] , murder of Collector by a person whose connection with the jailed co-accused not proved, though the latter had a grudge against the collector for demolishing his temple and detaining him. Reversing the High Court decision, 1986 Pat LJR 688 .
51. Mohd Arif v State of NCT of Delhi, JT 2011 (9) SC 563 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 13 SCC 621 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : 2011 (8) Scale 328 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 10 SCR 56 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] ; NV Subba Rao v State, (2013) 2 SCC 162 [LNIND 2012 SC 1350] : 2013 Cr LJ 953 .
52. MS Reddy v State Inspector of Police ACB Nellore, 1993 Cr LJ 558 (AP). Ammuni v State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 280 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 , the accused administered poison and caused death of the woman and her two children, there was evidence to show that all the four entered into a conspiracy to murder the woman. They were seen hanging around her house. One of the glass tumblers recovered from her place carried the finger prints of one of them. One of them also confessed. Conspiracy proved conviction under sections 300/34, confirmed. Kuldeep Singh v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 3649 [LNIND 2000 SC 724] , accused persons entered into conspiracy to cause death, circumstantial evidence coupled with recoveries. Guilt established. Conviction for murder and conspiracy.
53. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] .
54. Nellai Ganesan v State, 1991 Cr LJ 2157 . See also Khalid v. State, 1990 Cr LJ (NOC) Raj, where the court inferred the fact of agreement from transmission of thoughts sharing the unlawful design, the court observing that neither proof of actual words of communication nor actual physical meeting of persons involved is necessary.
55. KTMS Mohd v UOI, AIR 1992 SC 1831 [LNIND 1992 SC 362] : 1992 Cr LJ 2781 .

56. Wai Yu-Tsang v The Queen, (1991) 3 WLR 1006 PC, applying Welham v DPP, (1961) AC 103 HL(E) and Reg v Allsop, (1976) 64 Cr App R; CA. Shambhu Singh v State of UP, AIR 1994 SC 1559 : 1994 Cr LJ 1584 , the Supreme Court did not interfere in the concurrent finding of the lower courts as to the involvement of the accused in the conspiracy.
57. Mir Naqvi Askari v CBI, AIR 2010 SC 528 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] : (2009) 15 SCC 643 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] . The court also explained the nature of the crime.
58. R Venkatakrishnan v CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] , under the National Housing Bank Act, 1987. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1 [LNIND 2009 SC 1652] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 646; criminal conspiracy by bank officials in relation to Harshad Mehta Securities Scam, illegally extending discounting/ rediscounting facility for bills of exchange by bank officials, conspiracy in relation to persons liable to be convicted, role/conduct necessary to fasten liability.
59. Nand Kumar Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1992 SC 1939 : 992 Cr LJ 3587 : (1992) Supp (2) SCC 111 .
60. Narain Lal Nirala v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1993 SC 118 : 1993 Cr LJ 3911 .
61. State v Siddarth Vashisth (alias Manu Sharma), 2001 Cr LJ 2404 (Del).
62. R v Ashton, (1992) Cr LR 667 (CA).
63. Dinanath, 1939 Nag 644.
64. Vinayak v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1793 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : (1984) 4 SCC 441 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : 1984 SCC (Cr) 605.
65. Pramatha Nath v Saroj Ranjan, AIR 1962 SC 876 [LNIND 1961 SC 400] : (1962) 1 Cr LJ 770 . Further explained by the Supreme Court in Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 Cr LJ 1 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] .
66. State of TN through Superintendent of Police CBI/SIT v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 : JT 1999 (4) SC 106 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] ; Sardar Sardul Singh Caveeshar v State of Maharashtra, (AIR 1965 SC 682 [LNIND 1963 SC 67] : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 608) : (1964) 2 SCR 378 [LNIND 1963 SC 67] See also.
67. Bhagwandas, AIR 1974 SC 898 : 1974 Cr LJ 751 ; Ashok Datta Naik, 1979 Cr LJ NOC 95 (Goa); V Shivanarayan, AIR 1980 SC 439 : 1980 Cr LJ 388 ; Mohd Usman Mohd Hussain, AIR 1981 SC 1062 [LNIND 1981 SC 127] : 1981 Cr LJ 588 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] ; State of UP v Girijashankar Misra, 1985 Cr LJ NOC 79 (Delhi); Subhas, 1985 Cr LJ 1807 (Cal).
68. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 Mad LJ (Cr) 532 : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] ; An offence of criminal conspiracy can also be proved by circumstantial evidence. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901]. In S Arul Raja v State of TN, 2010 (8) SCC 233 [LNIND 2010 SC 689] in which it is held that mere circumstantial evidence to prove the involvement of the appellant is not sufficient to meet the requirements of criminal conspiracy under Section 120A of the (IPC, 1860) A meeting of minds to form a criminal conspiracy has to be proved by placing substantive evidence.
69. Re MD Mendekar, 1972 Cr LJ 978 (Mysore); See also Bhagwandas, supra.
70. DB Naik, 1982 Cr LJ 856 (Bom); Hari Ram, 1982 Cr LJ 294 (HP).
71. Jethsur Surangbhai, AIR 1984 SC 151 [LNIND 1983 SC 329] : 1984 Cr LJ 162 (SC) : (1984) SCC (Cr) 474.
72. Ajoyadha Prashad 1985 Cr LJ 1401 (Ori).
73. State v VC Shukla, 1980 Cr LJ 965 : 1980 Cr LR (SC) 301 . Also VC Shukla v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1980 SC 1382 [LNIND 1980 SC 179] : 1980 SCC (Cr) 561 and 849 (1980) 2 SCC 665 [LNIND 1980 SC 179] . State of HP v Gian Chand, 2000 Cr LJ 949 (HP); Sardari Lal v State of Punjab, 2003 Cr LJ 383 (P&H), State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr)

901; Baldev Singh v State of Punjab, (2009) 6 SCC 564 [LNIND 2009 SC 1151] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 66; Y Venkaiah v State of AP, AIR 2009 SC 2311 [LNIND 2009 SC 513] : (2009) Cr LJ 2834 : (2009) 12 SCC 126 [LNIND 2009 SC 513] . State of MP v Paltan Mallah, 2005 AIR 2005 SC 733 [LNIND 2005 SC 64] : Cr LJ 918 SC : (2005) 3 SCC 169 [LNIND 2005 SC 64] .

74. State (NCT) of Delhi v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580]

75. Charandas Swami v State of Gujarat, 2017 (4) Scale 403 .

76. Rajiv Kumar v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 3772 [LNIND 2017 SC 367] .

77. Charandas Swami v State of Gujarat, 2017 (4) Scale 403 .

78. State of Maharashtra v Som Nath Thapa, AIR 1996 SC 1744 [LNIND 1996 SC 776] : 1996 AIR SCW 1977 : 1996 Cr LJ 2448 : (1996) 4 SCC 649 .

79. State through Central Bureau of Investigation v Dr Anup Kumar Srivastava, AIR 2017 SC 3698 [LNIND 2017 SC 371] .

80. Lal Singh v State of Gujarat, AIR 2001 SC 746 [LNIND 2001 SC 98] : 2001 Cr LJ 978 . The case under the Terrorists and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987. Saju v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 175 [LNIND 2000 SC 1552] , no inference of conspiracy to murder from circumstances proved in the case, Suman Sood v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 2774 [LNIND 2007 SC 647] : (2007) Cr LJ 4080 : (2007) 5 SCC 634 [LNIND 2007 SC 647] , inference regarding conspiracy can be drawn from surrounding circumstances because normally no direct evidence is available.

81. Ibid. The court followed the ruling in Babu Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 3250 [LNIND 1996 SC 860] : 1996 Cr LJ 2503 ; Vijayan v State of Kerala, AIR 1999 SC 1086 [LNIND 1999 SC 159] : 1999 Cr LJ 1638 , it is difficult to establish conspiracy by direct evidence. But there should be material evidence showing the connection between the alleged conspiracy and the act done pursuant to that conspiracy. Firozuddin Basheerudin v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 3488 [LNIND 2001 SC 1755] : 2001 Cr LJ 4215 , conspiracy to eliminate a police informer on whose information contraband gold was seized from the accused persons, chain of circumstances to the point of murder, complete, conviction. State of Kerala v P Suganthan, AIR 2000 SC 3323 [LNIND 2000 SC 1298] : 2000 Cr LJ 4584 , conspiracy to murder the earlier paramour of the concubine, not proved. Hira Lal Hari Lal v CBI, AIR 2003 SC 2545 [LNIND 2003 SC 499] : 2003 Cr LJ 3041 : (2003) 5 SCC 257 [LNIND 2003 SC 499] , difficult to prove conspiracy by direct evidence. An agreement between the parties to do something unlawful has to be proved. The allegation here was that of evasion of customs duty.

82. Chandra Prakash v State of Rajasthan, 2014 Cr LJ 2884 : (2014) 8 SCC 340 [LNIND 2014 SC 346] .

83. Indra Dalal v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 3174 : 2015 (6) SCJ 501 [LNIND 2015 SC 358] .

84. Balkar Singh v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 901 : (2015) 2 SCC 746 [LNIND 2014 SC 950] .

85. Satyavir Singh v State of UP, 2016 Cr LJ 4863 (All), 2015 (91) ALLCC 892.

86. State v Nitin Gunwant Shah, 2015 Cr LJ 4759 : 2016 (1) SCJ 30 [LNIND 2015 SC 529] .

87. State of TN v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 .

88. Kiriti Pal v State of WB, 2015 Cr LJ 3152 : 2015 (3) Crimes 11 (SC).

89. R Venkatkrishanan v CBI, 2010 1 SCC (Cr) 164 : (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .

90. Mahesh Joshi v State, (CBI), 2002 Cr LJ 97 (Kant).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1. CHAPTER V-A CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

[s 120B] Punishment of criminal conspiracy.

- (1) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, ⁹¹[imprisonment for life] or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, shall, where no express provision is made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy, be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.
- (2) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable as aforesaid shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months, or with fine or with both.]

COMMENT—

Earlier to the introduction of sections 120A and B, conspiracy per se was not an offence under IPC, 1860, except in respect of the offence mentioned in section 121A. However, abetment by conspiracy was and still remains to be an ingredient of abetment under the second clause of section 107 of IPC, 1860. The punishment therefore, is provided under various sections, viz., sections 108–117. Whereas under section 120A, the essence of the offence of criminal conspiracy is a bare agreement to commit the offence, the abetment under section 107 requires the commission of some act or illegal omission pursuant to the conspiracy.⁹² Criminal conspiracy is an independent offence. It is punishable separately.⁹³ The punishment for conspiracy is the same as if the conspirator had abetted the offence.⁹⁴ The punishment for a criminal conspiracy is more severe if the agreement is one to commit a serious offence; it is less severe if the agreement is one to commit an act which although illegal is not an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or rigorous imprisonment for more than two years.

Conspiracy to commit an offence is itself an offence and a person can be separately charged with respect to such a conspiracy. There may be an element of abetment in a conspiracy; but conspiracy is something more than abetment. The offences created by section 109 and section 120A are quite distinct and where offences are committed by several persons in pursuance of a conspiracy it is usual to charge them with those offences as well as conspiracy to commit those offences.⁹⁵

This section applies to those who are the members of the conspiracy during its continuance. Conspiracy has to be treated as a continuing offence and whoever is a party to the conspiracy during the period for which he is charged is liable under this section.⁹⁶ A conspiracy is held to be continued and renewed as to encompass all its members wherever and whenever any member of it acts in furtherance of the common design.⁹⁷ The most important ingredient of a criminal conspiracy is an agreement for an illegal act, conspiracy continues to subsist till it is executed or rescinded or frustrated by choice or necessity.⁹⁸ The conspirators' connection with the conspiracy would get snapped after he is nabbed by the police and kept in custody. He would then cease to be the agent of others. In this case (Rajiv assassination) the prosecution could not establish that the accused persons who were under detention continued their conspiratorial contact with those who remained outside. A statement which constitutes prima facie evidence of a conspiracy may amount to an act for which all the members can be held liable.^{99.}

Where the accused conspired with others in awarding a contract when he was in job, he could be held liable for subsequent acts of other conspirators even after his retirement as he contributed his part for furtherance of the conspiracy.^{100.}

For the purpose of establishing or proving the charge of conspiracy, it is not necessary that there should be knowledge of who are other conspirators and of the detailed stages of the conspiracy. The necessary requisite is knowledge of the main object and purpose of the conspiracy.^{101.} A fraud was alleged to have been committed by Government officers in processing and verifying fake bills. It was held that all the officers who dealt with the relevant files at one point of time or the other could not be considered to have taken part in the conspiracy or that they would be guilty of aiding and abetting the offence. Individual acts of criminal misconduct would have to be considered for fastening liability.^{102.}

An accused can be convicted for substantive offence even where he has been acquitted of the charge of conspiracy.^{103.}

[s 120B.1] Sanction for prosecution (section 120B IPC, 1860 and section 196 (Cr PC, 1973)).—

This section has to be read along with section 196(1-A) (2) (Cr PC, 1973), which requires previous sanction of the State Government or the District Magistrate to launch prosecution in respect of a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with less than two years imprisonment. Thus, where the object of the conspiracy was cheating by false personation under section 419, IPC, 1860, which is an offence punishable with a three-year imprisonment, the mere fact that there were other non-cognizable offences for which too the accused had been charged would not vitiate the trial in absence of sanction under section 196(1A)(2), (Cr PC, 1973), as that section is meant to be applicable to a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit an offence punishable with less than two years' imprisonment.^{104.} Where the act in question was not done by the army officer in the discharge of his official duties, it was held that a sanction for his prosecution was not necessary.^{105.}

[s 120B.2] Can a company be prosecuted for Criminal conspiracy.—

A corporation is virtually in the same position as any individual and may be convicted of common law as well as statutory offences including those requiring mens rea. The criminal liability of a corporation would arise when an offence is committed in relation to the business of the corporation by a person or body of persons in control of its affairs. In such circumstances, it would be necessary to ascertain that the degree and control of the person or body of persons is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through that person or the body of persons.^{106.}

[s 120B.3] Signing differently in vakalatnama.—

The fact was that the accused put their signatures in vakalatnama differently from their original ones. It has been alleged by the complainant that the accused petitioners have deliberately and wilfully put their signatures on the vakalatnama in collusion with each other like irresponsible persons in order to gain wrongfully and with a view to cheat and mislead the complainant. It was held that the alleged action of the petitioners in signing their own name on the vakalatnama and filing the same in the Court through their counsel is neither an offence nor prohibited by any law. When the alleged act itself was not illegal, it cannot be said that there was any 'criminal conspiracy' and in absence of the basis for a charge for criminal conspiracy, the petitioners cannot be prosecuted or punished for the offence under section 120-B of the IPC, 1860.¹⁰⁷.

[s 120B.4] Seeking opinion.—

Merely taking someone's opinion, who is an outsider to litigation, before filing the reply in the Court would not undermine the administration of justice in any way and it is not indicative of criminal conspiracy.¹⁰⁸.

[s 120B.5] Hooch Tragedy case.—

In a case, the allegation was that all the accused persons hatched a criminal conspiracy and they created a well-oiled machinery for importing methyl alcohol to make spurious liquor. Accused diluted the spirit by adding water and sold it through their outlets. Many persons died due to the consumption of spurious liquor. Some persons lost their eyesight and number of others sustained grievous injuries. Supreme Court said that the whole business itself was a conspiracy. It may not be the conspiracy to mix the noxious substance but the fact of the matter is that in order to succeed in the business, which itself was a conspiracy, they mixed or allowed to be mixed methanol and used it so freely that ultimately resulted in the tragedy. Conviction is upheld.¹⁰⁹.

[s 120B.6] Corruption cases.—

The prosecution asserted that the appellants A1 to A4 had entered into a conspiracy and in furtherance thereof, A1 who was a public servant, had come to possess assets to the tune of Rs. 66.65 crores, disproportionate to her known sources of income, during the period from 1991 to 1996, when she held the office of the Chief Minister of the State. The Supreme Court in respect to the charge of criminal conspiracy observed that the free flow of money from one account to the other of the respondent's, firms/companies also proved beyond reasonable doubt that all the accused persons had actively participated in the criminal conspiracy to launder the ill-gotten wealth of A1 for purchasing properties in their names.¹¹⁰.

[s 120B.7] Previous sanction.—

No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of any criminal conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the IPC, 1860, (45 of 1860), other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the State Government or the District Magistrate has consented in writing to the initiation of the proceeding: Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of section 195 apply, no such consent shall be necessary.^{111.}

2. Sentence.—Where the accused is charged both under section 109 as well as section 120B, IPC, 1860, and the offence abetted is shown to have been committed as a result of the abetment, the abettor should be punished with the imprisonment provided for the principal offence under section 109, IPC, 1860, and no separate sentence need be recorded under section 120B IPC, 1860.^{112.} Where the charge of conspiracy fails, the individual accused could still be convicted for the offences committed by them and sentenced accordingly.^{113.} Where no jail term was awarded to the principal accused in a conspiracy and he was let off with fine alone, it was held that substantive sentence of imprisonment awarded to the other accused was wrongful and, therefore, they also were ordered to pay fine only.^{114.} Where six of the seven persons accused of criminal conspiracy were acquitted, remaining one accused could not be convicted merely for being the head of the section of the branch where fraud was alleged to have been committed.^{115.} Where the appellant-accused was one of the active members of the criminal conspiracy along with other accused and hatched the plan to kill/eliminate the deceased and in furtherance thereof other accused persons successfully killed/eliminated the deceased and it was not the case of the appellant-accused and nor was urged also that his case fell under Section 120(2) so as to be awarded less sentence as prescribed therein, the conviction and award of life sentence as prescribed under Section 302 read with Section 120B, IPC, 1860 was held proper.^{116.} The accused pleaded guilty to conspiring to cause a public nuisance. He conspired with others to interfere with a premier division football match by means of extinguishing the floodlights while the match was in progress. The object of doing so was to affect bets placed on the match abroad, which depended on the score at the time when the lights were switched off and the match was abandoned. The plan was not put into effect and the accused and others were arrested before the match was due to take place. The accused would have received substantial reward for his role. He was sentenced to four years' imprisonment. His appeal was dismissed. The Court said that the practice of interfering with such an important sporting fixture was something which should be actively discouraged by severe sentences. The sentence could not be described as manifestly excessive.^{117.}

Law relating to Conspiracy as summarised by the Supreme Court in State of TN through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, (AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : JT 1999 (4) SC 106 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124).

1. Under Section 120A, IPC, 1860, offence of criminal conspiracy is committed when two or more persons agree to do or cause to be done an illegal act or legal act by illegal means. When it is legal act by illegal means overt act is necessary. Offence of criminal conspiracy is exception to the general law where intent alone does not constitute crime. It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention. Not only the intention, but there has to be agreement to carry out the object of the intention, which is an offence. The question for consideration in a case is did all the accused had the intention and did they agree that the crime be committed. It would not be enough for the offence of conspiracy when some of the accused merely entertained a wish, howsoever, horrendous it may be, that offence be committed.
2. Acts subsequent to the achieving of object of conspiracy may tend to prove that a particular accused was party to the conspiracy. Once the object of conspiracy has been achieved, any subsequent act, which may be unlawful, would not make the accused a part of the conspiracy like giving shelter to an absconder.

Conspiracy is hatched in private or in secrecy. It is rarely possible to establish a conspiracy by direct evidence. Usually, both the existence of the conspiracy and its objects have to be inferred from the circumstances and the conduct of the accused.

4. Conspirators may, for example, be enrolled in chain A enrolling B, B enrolling C, and so on and all will be members of the single conspiracy if they so intend and agree, even though each member knows only the person who enrolled him and the person whom he enrolls. There may be a kind of umbrella-spoke enrolment, where a single person at the centre doing the enrolling and all the other members being unknown to each other, though they know that there are to be other members. These are theories and in practice it may be difficult to tell whether the conspiracy in a particular case falls into which category. It may, however, even overlap. But then there has to be present mutual interest. Persons may be members of single conspiracy even though each is ignorant of the identity of many others who may have diverse role to play. It is not a part of the crime of conspiracy that all the conspirators need to agree to play the same or an active role.
5. When two or more persons agree to commit a crime of conspiracy, then regardless of making or considering any plans for its commission, and despite the fact that no step is taken by any such person to carry out their common purpose, a crime is committed by each and every one who joins in the agreement. There has thus, to be two conspirators and there may be more than that. To prove the charge of conspiracy it is not necessary that intended crime was committed or not. If committed it may further help prosecution to prove the charge of conspiracy.
6. It is not necessary that all conspirators should agree to the common purpose at the same time. They may join with other conspirators at any time before the consummation of the intended objective, and all are equally responsible. What part each conspirator is to play may not be known to everyone or the fact as to when a conspirator joined the conspiracy and when he left.
7. A charge of conspiracy may prejudice the accused because it is forced them into a joint trial and the Court may consider the entire mass of evidence against every accused. Prosecution has to produce evidence not only to show that each of the accused has knowledge of object of conspiracy but also of the agreement. In the charge of conspiracy Court has to guard itself against the danger of unfairness to the accused. Introduction of evidence against some may result in the conviction of all, which is to be avoided. By means of evidence in conspiracy, which is otherwise inadmissible in the trial of any other substantive offence prosecution tries to implicate the accused not only in the conspiracy itself but also in the substantive crime of the alleged conspirators. There is always difficult in tracing the precise contribution of each member of the conspiracy but then there has to be cogent and convincing evidence against each one of the accused charged with the offence of conspiracy. As observed to Judge Learned Hand that "this distinction is important today when many prosecutors seek to sweep within the dragnet of conspiracy all those who have been associated in any degree whatever with the main offenders".
8. As stated above it is the unlawful agreement and not its accomplishment, which is the gist or essence of the crime of conspiracy. Offence of criminal conspiracy is complete even though there is no agreement as to the means by which the purpose is to be accomplished. It is the unlawful agreement, which is the gravamen of the crime of conspiracy. The unlawful agreement which amounts to a conspiracy need not be formal or express, but may be inherent in and inferred from the circumstances, especially declarations, acts and conduct of the conspirators. The agreement need not be entered into by all the parties to it at the same time, but may be reached by successive actions evidencing their joining of the conspiracy.

9. It has been said that a criminal conspiracy is a partnership in crime, and that there is in each conspiracy a joint or mutual agency for the prosecution of a common plan. Thus, if two or more persons enter into a conspiracy, any act done by any of them pursuant to the agreement is, in contemplation of law, the act of each of them and they are jointly responsible therefor. This means that everything said, written or done by any of the conspirators in execution or furtherance of the common purpose is deemed to have been said, done, or written by each of them. And this joint responsibility extends not only to what is done by any of the conspirators pursuant to the original agreement but also to collateral acts incident to and growing out of the original purpose. A conspirator is not responsible, however, for acts done by a co-conspirator after termination of the conspiracy. The joinder of a conspiracy by a new member does not create a new conspiracy nor does it change the status of the other conspirators, and the mere fact that conspirators individually or in groups perform different tasks to a common end does not split up a conspiracy into several different conspiracies.
10. A man may join a conspiracy by word or by deed. However, criminal responsibility for a conspiracy requires more than a merely passive attitude towards an existing conspiracy. One who commits an overt act with knowledge of the conspiracy is guilty. And one who tacitly consents to the object of a conspiracy and goes along with other conspirators, actually standing by while the other but the conspiracy into effect, is guilty though he intends to take no active part in the crime.

1. Chapter VA (containing sections 120A and 120B) inserted by Act 8 of 1913, section 3.

91. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for transportation for life (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

92. State (NCT) of Delhi v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, 2005 Cr LJ 3950 : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] .

93. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901.

94. Alim Jan Bibi, (1937) 1 Cal 484 . It is not necessary that each and every conspirator must have taken part in the commission of the act. State of HP v Krishanlal Pradhan, AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709 : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] . Govt of NCT of Delhi v Jaspal Singh, (2003) 10 SCC 586 [LNIND 2003 SC 649] , essential requirements of charge under the section. Ram Narayan Popli v CBI, AIR 2003 SC 2748 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] : (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] , statement of ingredients. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, AIR 2003 SC 4427 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] , statement of ingredients and matters of proof.

95. Subbaiah, AIR 1961 SC 1241 [LNIND 1961 SC 95] . See also Mohd Hussain v KS Dalipsinghji, AIR 1970 SC 45 [LNIND 1969 SC 147] : (1970) 1 SCR 130 [LNIND 1969 SC 147] . See also Jagdish Prasad v State of Bihar, 1990 Cr LJ 366 Pat, conspiracy with railway employees to procure allotment of wagons under cover of fake letters. State of Rajasthan v Govind Ram Bagdiya, 2003 Cr LJ 1169 (Raj), the prosecution has to prove the elements of conspiracy. No proof was forthcoming in this case in the matter of allotment of house of any conspiracy among officials to manipulate the system.

96. Abdul Kadar v State, (1963) 65 Bom LR 864 . For an example of a failed prosecution under this section see State of UP v Pheru Singh, AIR 1989 SC 1205 : 1989 Cr LJ 1135 . In Darshan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 554 [LNIND 1983 SC 95] : 1983 Cr LJ 985 : (1983) 2 SCC 411 [LNIND 1983 SC 95] , the Supreme Court considered it to be unbelievable that the accused hatched their plot while taking drinks in the presence of a stranger. For proof of conspiracy it often becomes necessary to convert one of the conspirators into an approver witness and this may require corroboration. See Balwant Kaur v UT Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 [LNIND 1987 SC 738] : 1988 Cr LJ 398 . The absence of one of the conspirators at one of their meetings does not by itself rule out his complicity. Conspiracies are hatched under cover of secrecy. They are generally proved by circumstantial evidence, EK Chandrasenan v State of Kerala, AIR 1995 SC 1066 [LNIND 1995 SC 88] : 1995 Cr LJ 1445 ; Aniceto Lobo v State (Goa, Daman and Diu), AIR 1994 SC 1613 : 1994 Cr LJ 1582 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 311 , conspiracy of three persons, one of whom, being bank employee, took out blank drafts, the other forged signatures and third opened accounts in fictitious names to encash the drafts, all of them were held to be equally guilty of the offence.

97. Esher Singh v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 3030 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] : (2004) 11 SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] .

98. Damodar v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2003 SC 4414 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] : 2003 Cr LJ 5014 : (2004) 12 SCC 336 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] . R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : 2004 Cr LJ 286 : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] , alleged conspiracy was to dispose of by auction the property of a Govt Co at a low price, but the bids made by the alleged conspirators reflected a fair price. Ingredients of the section not made out. Hardeep Singh Sohal v State of Punjab, AIR 2004 SC 4716 [LNIND 2004 SC 902] : (2004) 11 SCC 612 [LNIND 2004 SC 1006] conspiracy for murder not proved. Another charge of conspiracy for murder was rejected in Hem Raj v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 4259 [LNIND 2003 SC 759] : 2003 Cr LJ 4987 : (2003) 12 SCC 241 [LNIND 2003 SC 759] . State of HP v Satya Dev Sharma, (2002) 10 SCC 601 , criminal conspiracy between timber merchants and private landowners and Government officials for falling and misappropriating trees standing on Government land.

99. State of TN v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 . Under TADA (repealed) such confession had the status of evidence. Ram Singh v State of HP, AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : 1997 AIR SCW 1331 : 1997 Cr LJ 4091 , in a murder by some persons, the accused persons assisted them in causing disappearance of the dead body secretly in furtherance of their conspiracy, their conviction under sections 201-120B was held to be proper. Subhash Harnarayanji Laddha v State of Maharashtra, (2006) 12 SCC 545 [LNIND 2006 SC 1088] , conspiracy not proved. Mallanna v State of Karnataka, (2007) 8 SCC 523 [LNIND 2007 SC 1526] , conspiracy not proved.

100. R Balkrishna Pillai v State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 757 (Ker); Devender Pal Singh v State (NCT) of Delhi, 2002 Cr LJ 2034 (SC), acquittal of a co-accused on the ground of non-corroboration of the confessional statement did not have the effect of demolishing the prosecution regarding conspiracy Saju v State of Kerala, 2001 Cr LJ 102 (SC), no evidence to show that the accused was responsible for pregnancy or insisted upon its termination. The accused and co-accused were fellow workers and seemed to be hired killers. They were seen together at the place of the incident both before and after it. That was held to be not sufficient to prove charge of conspiracy against them. State of HP v Jai Lal, AIR 1999 SC 3318 [LNIND 1999 SC 798] : 1999 Cr LJ 4294 State Government scheme of purchasing infected apples from growers and destroying them. Allegations that some of them over charged by inflating weight. But no evidence of experts about overweight, etc., charge not proved. Premlata v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1430 (Raj), a charge-sheet was not quashed where there was evidence to believe that the two accused persons had conspired to produce a document for fulfilling the eligibility criteria for an appointment. Central Bureau of Investigation v VC Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 , the prosecution could not prove that one of the two accused was a party to the conspiracy. Arun Gulab Gawli v State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 4481 (Bom) mere inference cannot invite punishment.

101. Mohd Amin v CBI, (2008) 15 SCC 49 [LNIND 2008 SC 2255] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 693.
102. Soma Chakravarty v State, AIR 2007 SC 2149 [LNIND 2007 SC 632] : (2007) 5 SCC 403 [LNIND 2007 SC 632] .
103. T Shankar Prasad v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 1242 [LNIND 2004 SC 41] : 2004 Cr LJ 884 : (2004) 3 SCC 753 [LNIND 2004 SC 41] .
104. Yashpal v State, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] : 1978 Cr LJ 189 . See also Vinod Kumar Jain v State through CBI, 1991 Cr LJ 669 (Del); State of Bihar v Simranjit Singh Mann, 1987 Cr LJ 999 (Pat).
105. Nirmal Puri (Lt Gen Retd) v UOI, 2002 Cr LJ 158 (Del).
106. Iridium India Telecom Ltd v Motorola Incorporated, AIR 2011 SC 20 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : 2010 AIR (SCW) 6738 : JT 2010 (11) SC 492 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : (2011) 1 SCC 74 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : (2010) 3 SCC(Cr) 1201 : 2010 (11) Scale 417 ; relied on Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2005 SC 2622 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : (2005) 4 SCC 530 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 961.
107. Padam Chand v The State of Bihar, 2016 Cr LJ 4998 (Pat) : 2016 (3) PLJR 258 .
108. Sanjiv Rajendra Bhatt v UOI, 2016 Cr LJ 185 : (2016) 1 SCC 1 [LNIND 2015 SC 596] .
109. Chandran v State, AIR 2011 SC 1594 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] : (2011) 5 SCC 161 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 551 : (2011) 8 SCR 273 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] ; Also see Ravinder Singh @ Ravi Pavar v State of Gujarat, AIR 2013 SC 1915 2013 Cr Lj 1832.
110. State of Karnataka v Selvi J Jayalalitha, 2017 (2) Scale 375 [LNIND 2017 SC 72] : 2017 (1) RCR (Criminal) 802.
111. Section 196(2) of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.
112. State of TN v Savithri, 1976 Cr LJ 37 (Mad).
113. State of Orissa v Bishnu Charan Muduli, 1985 Cr LJ 1573 (Ori).
114. CR Mehta v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2863 (Bom). The Court referred to Rameshwar Dayal v State of UP, 1971 (3) SCC 924 : 1972 SCC (Cr) 172.
115. BN Narasimha Rao v Govt of AP, 1995 Cr LJ 4181 (SC), reversing AP High Court. See also Sayed Mohd Owais v State of Maharashtra, 2003 Cr LJ 303 (Bom).
116. Bilal Hajar v State, AIR 2018 SC 4780 [LNIND 2018 SC 520] .
117. R v Chee Kew Ong, (2001) 1 Cr App R (S) 117 [CA (Crim Div)].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1. CHAPTER V-A CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

[s 120A] Definition of criminal conspiracy.

When two or more persons agree to do, or cause to be done,—

- (1) an illegal act, or
- (2) an act which is not illegal by illegal means, such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy:

Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done by one or more parties to such agreement in pursuance thereof.

Explanation.—It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object.

COMMENT—

Criminal conspiracy.—This chapter has introduced into the criminal law of India a new offence, viz., the offence of criminal conspiracy. It came into existence by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1913. Offence of criminal conspiracy is an exception to the general law where intent alone does not constitute crime. It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention.² Law making conspiracy a crime is designed to curb immoderate power to do mischief which is gained by a combination of the means. The encouragement and support which co-conspirators give to one another rendering enterprises possible which, if left to individual effort, would have been impossible, furnish the ground for visiting conspirators and abettors with condign punishment. The conspiracy is held to be continued and renewed as to all its members wherever and whenever any member of the conspiracy acts in furtherance of the common design. Offence of criminal conspiracy has its foundation in an agreement to commit an offence. A conspiracy consists not merely in the intention of two or more, but in the agreement of two or more to do an unlawful act by unlawful means.³ A criminal conspiracy must be put to action inasmuch as so long a crime is generated in the mind of an accused, it does not become punishable. What is necessary is not thoughts, which may even be criminal in character, often involuntary, but offence would be said to have been committed thereunder only when that take concrete shape of an agreement to do or cause to be done an illegal act or an act which although not illegal by illegal means and then if nothing further is done the agreement would give rise to a criminal conspiracy.⁴

[s 120A.1] Ingredients.—

The ingredients of this offence are—

- (1) that there must be an agreement between the persons who are alleged to conspire; and

- (2) that the agreement should be
 - (i) for doing of an illegal act, or
 - (ii) for doing by illegal means an act which may not itself be illegal.⁵
Meeting of minds of two or more persons for doing or causing to be done an illegal act or an act by illegal means is sine qua non of criminal conspiracy.⁶

The most important ingredient of the offence being, the agreement between two or more persons to do an illegal act. In a case where criminal conspiracy is alleged, the court must inquire whether the two persons are independently pursuing the same end or they have come together to pursue the unlawful object. The former does not render them as conspirators but the latter does. For the offence of conspiracy some kind of physical manifestation of agreement is required to be established. The express agreement need not be proved. The evidence as to the transmission of thoughts sharing the unlawful act is not sufficient. A conspiracy is a continuing offence which continues to subsist till it is executed or rescinded or frustrated by choice of necessity. During its subsistence whenever any one of the conspirators does an act or series of acts, he would be held guilty under section 120-B of the Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\).⁷

[s 120A.2] Elements of Criminal Conspiracy.—

- (a) an object to be accomplished,
- (b) a plan or scheme embodying means to accomplish that object,
- (c) an agreement or understanding between two or more of the accused persons whereby, they become definitely committed to cooperate for the accomplishment of the object by the means embodied in the agreement, or by any effectual means, and
- (d) in the jurisdiction where the statute required an overt act.⁸

1. Two or more persons needed.—To constitute the offence of conspiracy there must be an agreement of two or more persons to do an act which is illegal or which is to be done by illegal means for one cannot conspire with oneself. In Topandas v State of Bombay,⁹ which has been cited by the Supreme Court with approval in Haradhan Chakrabarty v UOI,¹⁰ it was laid down that "two or more persons must be parties to such an agreement and one person alone can never be held guilty of criminal conspiracy for the simple reason that one cannot conspire with oneself." The question of a single person being convicted for an offence of conspiracy was considered in Bimbadhar Pradhan v The State of Orissa,^{11, 12} and held that It is not essential that more than one person should be convicted of the offence of criminal conspiracy. It is enough if the court is in a position to find that two or more persons were actually concerned in the criminal conspiracy. In the Red fort Attack Case¹³ the Supreme Court found that it was nothing but a well-planned conspiracy, in which apart from sole appellant, some others were also involved and convicted the sole appellant for criminal conspiracy.¹⁴ Under the common law since husband and wife constitute one person there cannot be any conspiracy to commit an offence if husband and wife are the only parties to an agreement.¹⁵ "It seems rather odd that though husband and wife by themselves alone cannot be convicted of an offence of conspiracy for agreeing to commit an offence but if two of them commit the self-same substantive offence they can be convicted of that offence".¹⁶ Fortunately this state of law does not exist in India, where husband and wife by themselves alone can be parties to a criminal conspiracy. Where the husband is a party with some others in a conspiracy and his wife joined him in that with knowledge that he was involved with others to commit an unlawful act, she would be guilty of the conspiracy.¹⁷ Since conspiracy requires at least two persons, where two or more named persons only were charged and all but one of them were acquitted, the remaining accused could not be convicted under section 120B, IPC, 1860, as he could not have conspired with himself.¹⁸ In a similar case before the Supreme Court, a military major was tried for theft of military goods along with nine others who were supposed to have abetted him. He was found guilty along with one more accused and the rest were acquitted. On his appeal, the High Court quashed the judgment of the Court martial because there was no proof that he had removed the wheel drums. He was reinstated. In view of the acquittal and reinstatement of the main accused, the matter of his co-accused came before the Supreme Court. He too was ordered to be acquitted and reinstated.¹⁹ The same rule obtained under the English common law provided two named persons were tried together.²⁰ This rule has now been abolished by section 5(8) of the Criminal Law Act, 1977 which provides that unless conviction of one becomes inconsistent with the acquittal of the other even one of the two conspirators can be convicted, e.g., where one was acquitted for want of sanction or on ground of being an exempted person. The Bombay High Court has taken the same view in a case. Thus, where of the two accused one was a public servant and he had to be acquitted as he was prosecuted without obtaining sanction under section 197, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\), the other could still be convicted on a charge of conspiracy as the acquittal of the other accused was not on facts but on technical ground and in spite of evidence establishing the factum of conspiracy.²¹

The circumstances in which a single person can be tried and convicted have been thus, stated in Kenny.²² "But though there must be plurality of conspirators, it is not necessary that all should be brought to trial together. One person may be indicted, alone, for conspiring with other persons who are not in custody, or who are even unknown to the indictors. Indeed, some of the conspirators may be unknown to the rest, provided all are acting under the directions of one leader. There need not be communication between each conspirator and every other, provided there be a design common to all."²³ Thus, a wife knowing that her husband was involved with others in a conspiracy, agreed with him that she would join the conspiracy and play her part, it was held that she thereby became guilty of conspiracy notwithstanding that the only person with whom she actually concluded the agreement was her husband.²⁴

2. Agreement is gist of the offence.—The gist of the offence is the bare engagement and association to break the law, whether any act be done in pursuance thereof by the conspirators or not.²⁵ Meeting of minds is essential. Mere knowledge or discussion is not sufficient.²⁶ It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention. Not only the intention but the presence of an agreement to carry out the object of the intention, is an offence. The question for consideration in a case is did all the accused had the intention and did they agree that the crime be committed. It would not be enough for the offence of conspiracy when some of the accused merely entertained a wish, howsoever, horrendous it may be, that offence be committed.²⁷ In the absence of an agreement, a mere thought to commit a crime does not constitute the offence.²⁸ The offence of conspiracy is a substantive offence. It renders the mere agreement to commit an offence punishable even if no offence takes place pursuant to the illegal agreement.²⁹ The object in view or the methods employed should be illegal, as defined in section 43, (supra). A distinction is drawn between an agreement to commit an offence and an agreement of which either the object or the methods employed are illegal but do not constitute an offence. In the case of the former, the criminal conspiracy is completed by the act of agreement; in the case of the latter,

there must be some act done by one or more of the parties to the agreement to give effect to the object thereof, that is, there must be an overt act. An express agreement need not be proved. Evidence relating to transmission of thoughts leading to sharing of thought relating to the unlawful act is sufficient.³⁰ A wrong judgment or an inaccurate or incorrect approach or poor management by itself, even after due deliberations between Ministers or even with Prime Minister, by itself cannot be said to be a product of criminal conspiracy.³¹ A few bits here and a few bits there on which the prosecution relies cannot be held to be adequate for connecting the accused with the commission of the crime of criminal conspiracy. It has to be shown that all means adopted and illegal acts done were in furtherance of the object of conspiracy hatched. The circumstances relied for the purposes of drawing an inference should be prior in point of time than the actual commission of the offence in furtherance of the alleged conspiracy.³²

The meeting of the minds to form a criminal conspiracy has to be proved by adducing substantive evidence, in cases where the circumstantial evidence is incomplete or vague.³³

[s 120A.3] Actus reus.—

The actus reus in a conspiracy is the agreement to execute the illegal conduct, not the execution of it. It is not enough that two or more persons pursued the same unlawful object at the same time or in the same place; it is necessary to show a meeting of minds, a consensus to give effect to an unlawful purpose. It is not, however, necessary that each conspirator should have been in communication with every other.³⁴

[s 120A.4] Participation.—

It is not necessary that all the conspirators should participate from the inception to the end of the conspiracy; some may join the conspiracy after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them and some others may quit from the conspiracy. All of them cannot be treated as conspirators. Where in pursuance of the agreement the conspirators commit offences individually or adopt illegal means to do a legal act which has a nexus to the object of conspiracy, all of them will be liable for such offences even if some of them have not actively participated in the commission of those offences.³⁵ To constitute a conspiracy, meeting of mind of two or more persons for doing an illegal act or an act by illegal means is the first and primary condition and it is not necessary that all the conspirators must know each and every detail of conspiracy. Neither is it necessary that every one of the conspirators takes active part in the commission of each and every conspiratorial act.³⁶ Even if some steps are resorted to by one or two of the conspirators without the knowledge of the others it will not affect the culpability of those others when they are associated with the object of the conspiracy.³⁷ The rationale is that criminal acts done in furtherance of a conspiracy may be sufficiently dependent upon the encouragement and support of the group as a whole to warrant treating each member as a causal agent to each act. Under this view, which of the conspirators committed the substantive offence would be less significant in determining the defendant's liability than the fact that the crime was performed as a part of a larger division of labour to which the accused had also contributed his efforts.³⁸

[s 120A.5] Overt act.—

No overt act is necessary.³⁹ Where the allegation against the third accused was that he was merely standing nearby when the other accused committed the murder, he cannot be charged for an offence under sections 302/120B, IPC, 1860, in the absence of any other reliable evidence.⁴⁰ In a case where the agreement is for accomplishment of an act which by itself constitutes an offence, then in that event, unless the Statute so requires, no overt act is necessary to be proved by the prosecution because in such a fact-situation criminal conspiracy is established by proving such an agreement.⁴¹ When two agree to carry it into effect, the very plot is an act in itself, and an act of each of the parties, promise against promise, actus contra actum, capable of being enforced, if lawful, punishable if for a criminal object or for use of criminal means.⁴² Where the conspiracy alleged is with regard to the commission of a serious crime as contemplated by section 120-B read with the proviso to sub-section (2) of section 120A, then the mere proof of an agreement is enough to bring about conviction under section 120B and the proof of any overt act by the accused or by any of them would not be necessary.⁴³ The illegal act may or may not be done in pursuance of agreement, but the very agreement is an offence and is punishable.⁴⁴

It is not an ingredient of the offence under this section that all the parties should agree to do a single illegal act. It may comprise the commission of a number of acts. Where the accused are charged with having conspired to do three categories of illegal acts, the mere fact that all of them could not be convicted separately in respect of each of the offences has no relevancy in considering the question whether the offence of conspiracy has been committed. They can all be held guilty of the offence of conspiracy to do illegal acts, though for individual offences all of them may not be liable.⁴⁵ Where the agreement between the accused is a conspiracy to do or continue to do something which is illegal, it is immaterial whether the agreement to do any of the acts in furtherance of the commission of the offence do not strictly amount to an offence. The entire agreement must be viewed as a whole and it has to be ascertained as to what in fact the conspirators intended to do or the object they wanted to achieve.⁴⁶ It is not necessary that each member of a conspiracy must know each other or all the details of the conspiracy.⁴⁷ It is also not necessary that every conspirator must have taken part in each and every act done in pursuance of a conspiracy.⁴⁸ It is, however, necessary that a charge of conspiracy should contain particulars of the names of the place or places where it was hatched, persons hatching it, how was it hatched and what the purpose of the conspiracy was.⁴⁹

In the matter⁵⁰ of the assassination of the then Prime Minister of India, Smt. Indira Gandhi, one of the two actual killers and two conspirators were brought to trial. Both the conspirators were away from the scene of the crime. One of them was acquitted by the Supreme Court. His movements after the incident were not properly proved. The documents recovered from his custody did not indicate any agreement between him and the other accused. They only showed his agitated mind which was in the grip of an avenging mood. This is not enough to establish an agreement with anybody. On the other hand, about Kehar Singh, it was shown that he was having secret talks with one of the actual killers, that they were trying all the time to keep themselves away from their wives and children, they avoided the company of the other members of the family and on being asked what they were talking about, they remained mysterious. These facts were sufficient to show that they were planning something secret. This was enough to constitute a prima facie evidence of conspiracy within the meaning of section 10 of the Evidence Act, 1872 and to bring them within the jacket of punishment of all for the act of one.

Privacy and secrecy are more characteristics of a conspiracy, than of a loud discussion in an elevated place open to public view. Direct evidence in proof of a conspiracy is seldom available; offence of conspiracy can be proved by either direct or circumstantial evidence. It is not always possible to give affirmative evidence about the date of the formation of the criminal conspiracy, about the persons who took part in the formation of the conspiracy, about the object, which the objectors set before themselves as the object of conspiracy, and about the manner in which the object of conspiracy is to be carried out, all this is necessarily a matter of inference.⁵¹ Thus, a conspiracy is an inference from circumstances. There cannot always be much direct evidence about it. Conspiracy can be inferred even from the circumstances giving rise to a conclusive or irresistible inference of an agreement between two or more persons to commit an offence.⁵² It is manifest that the meeting of minds of two or more persons is a sine qua non but it may not be possible to establish by direct evidence. Its existence and objective can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances and parties conduct. It is necessary that the incriminating circumstances must form a chain of events, from which a conclusion about the accused's guilt could be drawn. The help of circumstantial evidence is necessary because a conspiracy is always hatched in secrecy. It becomes difficult to locate any direct evidence.⁵³ A businessman was in great need of money for completing the construction of a theatre complex. He was approached by a person who told him that his financier friend would help him with money. This was followed by a number of meetings between him and the team of financiers during which documents were executed and money released in cash which cash was found to be counterfeit currency. Every member of the team was held to be guilty of conspiracy and of cheating under section 420.⁵⁴ Seizure of unexplained currency notes from the possession of a person who claimed to be the owner of the money was held to be not sufficient to connect him with the person who was the main accused of smuggling currency, though he was a relative of the main accused.⁵⁵

Where a bank accountant dishonestly agreed with others to conceal dishonour of cheques purchased by the bank and thus, causing risk to the economic interests of the bank, he was held guilty of conspiring to defraud whatever his motive or underlying purpose might have been (he contended that he acted in the interest of the bank) and even though he had no desire to harm the victim and no loss was actually caused.⁵⁶ Officials of a nationalised bank, in violation of departmental instructions, allowing advance credits on banker's cheques to the account of a customer dealing in securities. Advance credits were allowed before the cheques were sent for clearance and in some cases even before the cheques were received. This allowed the customer to take pecuniary advantage by overdrawing money from his account which he was not entitled to. Public funds were thus, misused. It was held that a criminal conspiracy between bank officials and the customer stood proved. One of them was acquitted because no conclusive evidence could be found against him.⁵⁷

A criminal conspiracy can be proved by circumstantial evidence or by necessary implication. A smaller conspiracy may be the part of a larger conspiracy. It was held on facts that a criminal conspiracy was established when officials of two public sector banks acted in such a way that the transaction appeared to be an inter-banking transaction relating to call money which the borrowing bank was supposed to retain with itself but the transaction was in fact meant to help a private party to use public funds for private purpose.⁵⁸ Where the accused, an LIC agent, was charged with cheating the LIC by entering into conspiracy with the co-accused, a Development Officer, on the allegation that insurance policies were got issued on the basis of fake and forged documents and he received premium commission and bonus in respect of those policies, the accused was entitled to be acquitted because the forging was done by the co-accused without the knowledge and consent of the accused. Bonus, Commission, etc., in respect of those policies were credited to his account only in the normal course.⁵⁹ A 'vaid' and an 'up-vaid' who, in conspiracy with others made bogus medical bills for government servants and got them duly passed through their Ayurvedic Aushadhalaya for payment of 30 per cent of the amount of the bills, were caught in a trap and the tainted money was recovered from the accused. One of the accused died during the pendency of appeal. Conviction of the other under sections 120B/468 was held to be proper.⁶⁰

A group of friends went to a club for fun and frolic. One of them (the main accused) suddenly fired at the bar mate for her refusal to serve drinks. The others were unaware of the accused carrying a loaded pistol. They had stayed at the club for about two and a half hours. The Court said that this could not constitute an evidence of conspiracy. The Court also said that the fact that the group members dispersed separately and also helped to retrieve the murder weapon would not suggest conspiracy for murder.^{61.}

[s 120A.6] Same verdict in respect of each not necessary.—

It has been held that the rule that both parties to a conspiracy had to be convicted or acquitted has been abrogated by the Criminal Law Act, 1977 (English). The important question is whether there is a material difference in the evidence against the two.^{62.}

[s 120A.7] Sections 34 and 120A.—

There is not much substantial difference between conspiracy as defined in section 120A and acting on a common intention, as contemplated in section 34. While in the former, the gist of the offence is bare engagement and association to break the law even though the illegal act does not follow, the gist of the offence under section 34 is the commission of a criminal act in furtherance of a common intention of all the offenders, which means that there should be unity of criminal behaviour resulting in something, for which an individual would be punishable, if it were all done by himself alone.^{63.} Another point of difference is that a single person cannot be convicted under section 120A and, therefore, where all the accused except one were acquitted, the Supreme Court ordered his acquittal also,^{64.} whereas under section 34, read with some other specific offence, a single person can be convicted because each is responsible for the acts of all others.

[s 120A.8] Sections 107 and 120A.—

For an offence under this section a mere agreement is enough if the agreement is to commit an offence. But, for an offence under the second clause of section 107 an act or illegal omission must take place in pursuance of the conspiracy and a mere agreement is not enough.^{65.}

3. How proved (section 120A IPC, 1860 and section 10 Evidence Act, 1872-Doctrine of agency).—There is no difference between the mode of proof of the offence of conspiracy and that of any other offence, it can be established by direct evidence or by circumstantial evidence. But section 10 of the Evidence Act introduces the doctrine of agency and if the conditions laid down therein are satisfied, the acts done by one are admissible against the coconspirators. When men enter into an agreement for an unlawful end, they become ad-hoc agents for one another and have made a partnership in crime. The said section reads: "Where there is reasonable ground to believe that two or more persons have conspired together to commit an offence or an actionable wrong, anything said, done or written by any one of such persons in reference to their common intention, after the time when such intention was first entertained by any one of them is a relevant fact against each of the persons believed to be so conspiring, as well as for the purpose of proving the existence of the conspiracy as for the purpose of showing that any such person was party to it."

The section can be analysed as follows: "(1) There shall be a prima facie evidence affording a reasonable ground for a Court to believe that two or more persons are members of a conspiracy; (2) if the said condition is fulfilled, anything said, done or written by any one of them in reference to their common intention will be evidence against the other; (3) anything said, done or written by him should have been said, done or written by him after the intention was formed by any one of them; (4) it would also be relevant for the said purpose against another who entered the conspiracy whether it was said, done or written before he entered the conspiracy or after he left it; and (5) it can only be used against a coconspirator and not in his favour."^{66.}

Since conspiracy is often hatched up in utmost secrecy it is mostly impossible to prove conspiracy by direct evidence. It has, oftener than not, to be inferred from the acts, statements and conduct of the parties to the conspiracy.⁶⁷ The circumstances proved before, during and after the occurrence have to be considered to decide about the complicity of the accused.⁶⁸ If it is proved that the accused pursued, by their acts, the same object often by the same means, one performing one part of the act and the other another part of the same act so as to complete it with a view to attainment of the object which they were pursuing, the Court is at liberty to draw the inference that they conspired together to effect that object.⁶⁹ It should, however, be remembered that where there is no direct evidence, for example through the evidence of an approver, and the case for the prosecution is dependent on circumstantial evidence alone, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove and establish such circumstances as would lead to the only conclusion of existence of a criminal conspiracy and rule out the theory of innocence.⁷⁰ Thus, chairman of a large cooperative society cannot be punished vicariously for the acts of others as mens rea cannot be excluded in a criminal case. As a chairman he had to deal with various matters and it would have been impossible for him to look into every detail to find out if someone was committing any criminal breach of trust.⁷¹ Similarly, a case of conspiracy to misappropriate cash entrusted to the accused is not made out merely from the audit report without any evidence of shortage on actual verification of cash as mistakes and even double entries may be made bona fide while preparing the account.⁷² The onus is on the prosecution to prove the charge of conspiracy by cogent evidence, direct or circumstantial.⁷³ One more principle which deserves notice is that the cumulative effect of the proved circumstances should be taken into account in determining the guilt of the accused rather than adopting an isolated approach to each of the circumstances. Of course, each one of the circumstances should be proved beyond reasonable doubt. Lastly, in regard to the appreciation of evidence relating to the conspiracy, the Court must take care to see that the acts or conduct of the parties must be conscious and clear enough to infer their concurrence as to the common design and its execution.⁷⁴

[s 120A.9] Inference of conspiracy.—

It is a matter of common experience that direct evidence to prove conspiracy is rarely available.⁷⁵ Thus, it is extremely difficult to adduce direct evidence to prove conspiracy. Existence of conspiracy and its objective can be inferred from the surrounding circumstances and the conduct of the accused. In some cases, indulgence in the illegal act or legal act by illegal means may be inferred from the knowledge itself.⁷⁶ It can be a matter of inference drawn by the Court after considering whether the basic facts and circumstances on the basis of which inference is drawn have been proved beyond all reasonable doubts and that no other conclusion except that of the complicity of Accused to have agreed to commit an offence is evident.⁷⁷ Accordingly, the circumstances proved before and after the occurrence have to be considered to decide about the complicity of the accused. Even if some acts are proved to have been committed, it must be clear that they were so committed in pursuance of an agreement made between the accused persons who were parties to the alleged conspiracy. Inferences from such proved circumstances regarding the guilt may be drawn only when such circumstances are incapable of any other reasonable explanation. An offence of conspiracy cannot be deemed to have been established on mere suspicion and surmises or inference which are not supported by cogent and acceptable evidence. Inferences from such proved circumstances regarding the guilt may be drawn only when such circumstances are incapable of any other reasonable explanation. To establish a charge of conspiracy knowledge about indulgence in either an illegal act or a legal act by illegal means is necessary. In some cases, intent of unlawful use being made of the goods or services in question may be inferred from the knowledge itself.⁷⁸ This apart, the prosecution has not to establish that a particular unlawful use was intended, so long as the goods or service in question could not be put to any lawful use. Finally when the ultimate offence consists of a chain of actions, it would not be necessary for the prosecution to establish, to bring home the charge of conspiracy, that each of the conspirators had the knowledge of what the collaborator would do.⁷⁹

One of the accused persons, a foreign national, was found staying in the country without valid passport and visa. His movement to various places with the main accused was established. A large quantity of arms and ammunition was recovered from the place occupied by the main accused. The Court said that an inference of criminal conspiracy could be drawn.⁸⁰ The Court also said that the appeal against conviction of the main accused was dismissed would not be sufficient to say that the charge of conspiracy against other accused would be deemed to be proved.⁸¹ Circumstances proved before, during and after the occurrence of the crime have to be considered together to decide about the complicity of the accused.⁸² Circumstantial evidence was based on the recovery of the scooter used by the executant and alleged to have been owned by a co-conspirator, but the recovery was not based on any information given by the accused, but by one witness. The Supreme Court held that no circumstantial evidence was proved against any of the conspirators.⁸³

[s 120A.10] Circumstantial evidence, inference must be backed by evidence.—

Most of the circumstances stated as against the accused were not proved. Merely based on the circumstance that the accused had filed a civil suit against the deceased for restraining him from doing a business he cannot be convicted. Moreover, there was no specific evidence as to who the conspirators were, where and when the conspiracy was hatched, what the specific purpose of such a conspiracy was and whether it was relating to the elimination of the deceased.⁸⁴ The law is well established that conspiracy cannot be proved merely on the basis of inferences. The inferences have to be backed by evidence.⁸⁵

The Court for the purpose of arriving at a finding as to whether the said offence has been committed or not may take into consideration the circumstantial evidence. However, while doing so, it must bear in mind that the meeting of minds is essential and mere knowledge or discussion would not be sufficient.⁸⁶ In Mukesh v State for NCT of Delhi, Criminal Appeal Nos. 607–608 of 2017, (popular as Nirbhaya Case) the criminal conspiracy was proved by the sequence of events and the conduct of the accused.

In the conspiracy for assassination of the former PM (Rajiv Gandhi) one of the accused persons at one point of time in his confessional statement said that he had a strong suspicion that Rajiv Gandhi was the target of the accused persons. The Court said that this suspicion did not make him a member of the conspiracy. His association, however strong with the main conspirators would not make him a member of the conspiracy by itself. But those who were in the thick of the conspiracy, for example, one who purchased the battery for explosion of human body, their conviction for the main offence was proper. But mere association with LTTE was not sufficient nor the fact that messages about arrests were sent by certain persons.⁸⁷

[s 120A.11] Contacts through telephone.—

Where the case against the appellants A2 to A4 is that they had hatched a conspiracy with appellant A1 to kill the deceased and the case against A1 was proved as per the 'last seen theory', and to prove the conspiracy the prosecution relied on the circumstance that there were frequent phone calls among the accused some days around the date of murder, and the recovery of some vehicles; the Supreme Court held that the telephonic calls and the recovery may raise suspicion against the accused but mere suspicion by itself cannot take the place of proof.^{88.}

[s 120A.12] Between bank officials.—

Criminal conspiracy was taken to be established when officials of two public sector banks acted in such a way that the transaction in question appeared to be an inter-banking transaction relating to call money which the borrowing bank was supposed to retain with itself. The transaction was in fact formalised for the purpose of helping a private party to use public funds for a private purpose.^{89.}

[s 120A.13] Approval of television serial.—

The accused was the director of Doordarshan. The allegation against him was that he continued a serial which was approved at lower rates by an earlier director. Each director worked at different point of time. They did not work together. Their postings were official postings. It was difficult to infer any conspiracy between them for continuing the telecast. The investigation launched against the director was liable to be quashed.^{90.}

1. Chapter VA (containing sections 120A and 120B) inserted by Act 8 of 1913, section 3.
2. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526].
3. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] relying on Ram Narayan Popli v Central Bureau of Investigation, (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26].
4. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901.
5. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] ; S Arul Raja v State of TN, reported in, 2010 (8) SCC 233 [LNIND 2010 SC 689] ; Mohan Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2011 SC 3534 [LNIND 2011 SC 820] : 2011 Cr LJ 4837 : (2011) 9 SCC 272 [LNIND 2011 SC 820] ; Central Bureau of Investigation Hyderabad v K Narayana Rao, 2012 AIR SCW 5139 : 2012 Cr LJ 4610 : JT 2012 (9) SC 359 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] : (2012) 9 SCC 512 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] : 2012 (9) Scale 228 [LNIND 2012 SC 569] ; Ajay Aggarwal v UOI, (AIR 1993 SC 1637 [LNIND 1993 SC 431] : 1993 AIR SCW 1866 : 1993 Cr LJ 2516) : (1993) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1993 SC 431].
6. Rajiv Kumar v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 3772 [LNIND 2017 SC 367].
7. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 Mad LJ (Cr) 532 : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] ; Damodar v State of Rajasthan, (2004) 12 SCC 336 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] ; Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Admn), (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] ; State of Maharashtra v Somnath Thapa, (1996) 4 SCC 659 [LNIND 1996 SC 776].
8. Ram Narayan Popli v Central Bureau of Investigation, (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26].
9. Topandas v State of Bombay, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] : 1956 Cr LJ 138 : (1955) 2 SCR 881 [LNIND 1955 SC 78]. The ruling in Topandas case, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] and Fakhruddin case, AIR 1967 SC 1326 [LNIND 1966 SC 307] were not followed in Sanichar Sahni v State of Bihar, (2009) 7 SCC 198 [LNIND 2009 SC 1350] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 347, because here only one person was charged under section 120-B and for no other offence, and his co-accused was charged with another offence but not under section 120-B, the court said that the charge was not properly framed. In the earlier cases, more than one were charged with conspiracy, all but one were acquitted, the single one could not be convicted. He was convicted for murder which was proved against him.

10. Haradhan Chakrabarty v UOI, AIR 1990 SC 1210 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] : 1990 Cr LJ 1246 : (1990) 2 SCC 143 [LNIND 1990 SC 57] .

11. See also Thakur H v State of HP, 2013 Cr LJ 1704 (HP).

12. Bimbardhar Pradhan v The State of Orissa, AIR 1956 SC 469 [LNIND 1956 SC 25] .

13. Mohd Arif v State of NCT of Delhi, JT 2011 (9) SC 563 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 13 SCC 621 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 10 SCR 56 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : 2011 (8) Scale 328 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] .

14. McDowell, (1966) 1 All ER 193 : (1965) 3 WLR 1138 ; Rex v IRC Haulage, (1944) KB 551 : (1944) 1 All ER 691 . Central Bureau of Investigation v VC Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 ; Ajay Kumar Rana v State of Bihar, 2001 Cr LJ 3837 (Pat).

15. Mowji, (1957) All ER 385 : (1957) 2 WLR 277 . See Glanville Williams, Legal Unity of Husband and Wife, 10 Modern LR 16 (1947). "But either spouse may be convicted of inciting the other to commit a crime if such be proved." See Kenny, 450, p 428, Outlines Of Criminal Law, 19th Edn 1966.

16. Cross & Jones : Introduction To Criminal Law, 9th Edn, p 343.

17. R v Charstny, (1991) 1 WLR 1381 (CA).

18. Bhagat Ram, AIR 1972 SC 1502 [LNIND 1972 SC 72] : 1972 Cr LJ 909 ; Tapandas, AIR 1956 SC 33 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] : (1955) 2 SCR 881 [LNIND 1955 SC 78] ; Fakhruddin, AIR 1967 SC 1326 [LNIND 1966 SC 307] : 1967 Cr LJ 1197 ; See also State v Dilbagh Rai, 1986 Cr LJ 138 (Delhi).

19. Relying upon Faguna Kanta Nath v State of Assam, AIR 1959 SC 673 [LNIND 1959 SC 2] : 1959 Cr LJ 90 : 1959 Supp 2 SCR 1, where also the acquittal of the co-accused automatically followed the acquittal of the main accused; Madan Lal Bhandari v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1970 SC 436 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] : 1970 Cr LJ 519 : (1969) 2 SCC 385 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] : (1970) 1 SCR 688 [LNIND 1969 SC 230] , the nurse causing miscarriage acquitted, the conspirator also acquitted.

20. Plummer v State, (1902) 2 KB 339 ; Coughlan (1976) 64 Cr App Rep 11 .

21. Pradumna, 1981 Cr LJ 1873 (Bom).

22. JE Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law, 428, 19th Edn, 1966.

23. Citing R v Myrick and Ribuffi, (1929) 21 Cr App R 94 TAC.

24. Regina v Chrastry, (1991) 1 WLR 1381 (CA). Kuldeep Singh v State of Rajasthan, 2001 Cr LJ 479 (SC), the only evidence against one of the accused conspirators was that he was seen moving with others to the house of the deceased. This was held to be not sufficient to make him a part of the conspiracy or participant in murder.

25. Mohammad Ismail, (1936) Nag 152; Bimbardhar Pradhan, (1956) Cut 409 SC; EG Barsay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] : 1962 (2) SCR 195 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] ; Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] , requisites of the offence restated.

26. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1 [LNIND 2009 SC 1652] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 646 : Baldev Singh v State of Punjab, (2009) 6 SCC 564 [LNIND 2009 SC 1151] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 66.

27. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] Mere knowledge, or even discussion, of the plan is not, per se enough; Russell on

Crimes, 12th Edn, vol I, quoted in Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Administration), 1988 (3) SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] at 731.

28. R Venkatakrishnan v CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .
29. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] .
30. Esher Singh v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 3030 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] : (2004) 11 SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] . K Hashim v State of TN, AIR 2005 SC 128 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] : (2005) 1 SCC 237 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] , the court enumerated four elements of criminal conspiracy, the essence is an unlawful agreement and it is complete when the agreement is framed. A design resting in mind only does not make out the offence.
31. Subramanian Swamy v A Raja, AIR 2012 SC 3336 [LNIND 2012 SC 498] : 2012 Cr LJ 4443 : (2012) 9 SCC 257 [LNIND 2012 SC 498] (Involvement of finance minister in 2G Spectrum Case) - Criminal conspiracy cannot be inferred on the mere fact that there were official discussions between the officers of the MoF and that of DoT and between two Ministers, which are all recorded. Suspicion, however, strong, cannot take the place of legal proof and the meeting between Shri P Chidambaram and Shri A Raja would not by itself be sufficient to infer the existence of a criminal conspiracy so as to indict Shri P. Chidambaram.
32. Esher Singh v State of AP, 2004 (11) SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] .
33. Gulam Sarbar v State of Bihar, 2014 Cr LJ 34 : (2014) 3 SCC 401.
34. Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2010) 1 SCC(Cr) 159.
35. State through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, reported in (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] ; State of HP v Krishan Lal Pardhan, (AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709) : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] .
36. K R Purushothaman v State, AIR 2006 SC 35 [LNIND 2005 SC 842] : (2005) 12 SCC 631 [LNIND 2005 SC 842] ; approved in John Pandian v State Rep by Inspector of Police, TN, AIR 2011 SC (Supp) 531 : (2011) 3 SCC(Cr) 550 : 2010 (13) Scale 13.
37. Yash Pal Mittal v State of Punjab, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] : 1978 Cr LJ 189 : (1977) 4 SCC 540 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] .
38. Firozuddin Basheeruddin v State, 2001 (7) SCC 596 [LNIND 2001 SC 1755] .
39. K Hasim v State of TN, AIR 2005 SC 128 [LNIND 2004 SC 1142] : 2005 Cr LJ 143 .
40. Raju v State of Chhatisgarh, 2014 Cr LJ 4425 : 2014 (9) SCJ 453 [LNIND 2014 SC 19031] .
41. Sushil Suri v CBI, AIR 2011 SC 1713 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] : (2011) 5 SCC 708 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 764 : (2011) 8 SCR 1 [LNIND 2011 SC 494] .
42. Chaman Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 2009 SC 2972 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2009) 11 SCC 721 [LNIND 2009 SC 721] : (2010) 1 SCC(Cr) 159.
43. SC Bahri v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 2020 : 1994 Cr LJ 3271 .
44. Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Administration), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 Cr LJ 1 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] .
45. EG Barsay, AIR 1961 SC 1762 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] : 1962 (2) SCR 195 [LNIND 1961 SC 196] .
46. Lennart v State, AIR 1970 SC 549 [LNIND 1969 SC 396] : 1970 Cr LJ 707 .
47. RK Dalmia, AIR 1962 SC 1821 [LNIND 1962 SC 146] : (1962) 2 Cr LJ 805 ; Yashpal v State, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] SC : 1978 Cr LJ 189 .
48. State of HP v Krishanlal Pradhan, AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709 : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] .

49. KS Narayanan, 1982 Cr LJ 1611 (Mad); Krishnalal Naskar, 1982 Cr LJ 1305 (Cal). Mahabir Prasad Akela v State of Bihar, 1987 Cr LJ 1545 Pat, no meeting of minds.
50. (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 Cr LJ 1 . AS AGAINST THIS SEE, Param Hans Yadav v State of Bihar, AIR 1987 SC 955 [LNIND 1987 SC 253] : 1987 Cr LJ 789 : (1987) 2 SCC 197 [LNIND 1987 SC 253] , murder of Collector by a person whose connection with the jailed co-accused not proved, though the latter had a grudge against the collector for demolishing his temple and detaining him. Reversing the High Court decision, 1986 Pat LJR 688 .
51. Mohd Arif v State of NCT of Delhi, JT 2011 (9) SC 563 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 13 SCC 621 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : 2011 (8) Scale 328 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 10 SCR 56 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] ; NV Subba Rao v State, (2013) 2 SCC 162 [LNIND 2012 SC 1350] : 2013 Cr LJ 953 .
52. MS Reddy v State Inspector of Police ACB Nellore, 1993 Cr LJ 558 (AP). Ammuni v State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 280 : 1998 Cr LJ 481 , the accused administered poison and caused death of the woman and her two children, there was evidence to show that all the four entered into a conspiracy to murder the woman. They were seen hanging around her house. One of the glass tumblers recovered from her place carried the finger prints of one of them. One of them also confessed. Conspiracy proved conviction under sections 300/34, confirmed. Kuldeep Singh v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2000 SC 3649 [LNIND 2000 SC 724] , accused persons entered into conspiracy to cause death, circumstantial evidence coupled with recoveries. Guilt established. Conviction for murder and conspiracy.
53. Yogesh v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2008 SC 2991 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] : 2008 Cr LJ 3872 : (2008) 10 SCC 394 [LNIND 2008 SC 979] .
54. Nellai Ganesan v State, 1991 Cr LJ 2157 . See also Khalid v. State, 1990 Cr LJ (NOC) Raj, where the court inferred the fact of agreement from transmission of thoughts sharing the unlawful design, the court observing that neither proof of actual words of communication nor actual physical meeting of persons involved is necessary.
55. KTMS Mohd v UOI, AIR 1992 SC 1831 [LNIND 1992 SC 362] : 1992 Cr LJ 2781 .
56. Wai Yu-Tsang v The Queen, (1991) 3 WLR 1006 PC, applying Welham v DPP, (1961) AC 103 HL(E) and Reg v Allsop, (1976) 64 Cr App R; CA. Shambhu Singh v State of UP, AIR 1994 SC 1559 : 1994 Cr LJ 1584 , the Supreme Court did not interfere in the concurrent finding of the lower courts as to the involvement of the accused in the conspiracy.
57. Mir Naqvi Askari v CBI, AIR 2010 SC 528 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] : (2009) 15 SCC 643 [LNIND 2009 SC 1651] . The court also explained the nature of the crime.
58. R Venkatakrishnan v CBI, (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] , under the National Housing Bank Act, 1987. Sudhir Shantilal Mehta v CBI, (2009) 8 SCC 1 [LNIND 2009 SC 1652] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 646; criminal conspiracy by bank officials in relation to Harshad Mehta Securities Scam, illegally extending discounting/ rediscounting facility for bills of exchange by bank officials, conspiracy in relation to persons liable to be convicted, role/conduct necessary to fasten liability.
59. Nand Kumar Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1992 SC 1939 : 992 Cr LJ 3587 : (1992) Supp (2) SCC 111 .
60. Narain Lal Nirala v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1993 SC 118 : 1993 Cr LJ 3911 .
61. State v Siddarth Vashisth (alias Manu Sharma), 2001 Cr LJ 2404 (Del).
62. R v Ashton, (1992) Cr LR 667 (CA).
63. Dinanath, 1939 Nag 644.
64. Vinayak v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1984 SC 1793 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : (1984) 4 SCC 441 [LNIND 1984 SC 255] : 1984 SCC (Cr) 605.

65. Pramatha Nath v Saroj Ranjan, AIR 1962 SC 876 [LNIND 1961 SC 400] : (1962) 1 Cr LJ 770 . Further explained by the Supreme Court in Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] : 1989 Cr LJ 1 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] .
66. State of TN through Superintendent of Police CBI/SIT v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 : JT 1999 (4) SC 106 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] ; Sardar Sardul Singh Caveeshar v State of Maharashtra, (AIR 1965 SC 682 [LNIND 1963 SC 67] : 1965 (1) Cr LJ 608) : (1964) 2 SCR 378 [LNIND 1963 SC 67] See also.
67. Bhagwandas, AIR 1974 SC 898 : 1974 Cr LJ 751 ; Ashok Datta Naik, 1979 Cr LJ NOC 95 (Goa); V Shivanarayan, AIR 1980 SC 439 : 1980 Cr LJ 388 ; Mohd Usman Mohd Hussain, AIR 1981 SC 1062 [LNIND 1981 SC 127] : 1981 Cr LJ 588 : (1988) 3 SCC 609 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] ; State of UP v Girijashankar Misra, 1985 Cr LJ NOC 79 (Delhi); Subhas, 1985 Cr LJ 1807 (Cal).
68. Pratapbhai Hamirbhai Solanki v State of Gujarat, (2013) 1 SCC 613 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] : 2012 Mad LJ (Cr) 532 : 2012 (10) Scale 237 [LNIND 2012 SC 1033] ; An offence of criminal conspiracy can also be proved by circumstantial evidence. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901]. In S Arul Raja v State of TN, 2010 (8) SCC 233 [LNIND 2010 SC 689] in which it is held that mere circumstantial evidence to prove the involvement of the appellant is not sufficient to meet the requirements of criminal conspiracy under Section 120A of the (IPC, 1860) A meeting of minds to form a criminal conspiracy has to be proved by placing substantive evidence.
69. Re MD Mendekar, 1972 Cr LJ 978 (Mysore); See also Bhagwandas, supra.
70. DB Naik, 1982 Cr LJ 856 (Bom); Hari Ram, 1982 Cr LJ 294 (HP).
71. Jethsur Surangbhai, AIR 1984 SC 151 [LNIND 1983 SC 329] : 1984 Cr LJ 162 (SC) : (1984) SCC (Cr) 474.
72. Ajoyadha Prashadl 1985 Cr LJ 1401 (Ori).
73. State v VC Shukla, 1980 Cr LJ 965 : 1980 Cr LR (SC) 301 . Also VC Shukla v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1980 SC 1382 [LNIND 1980 SC 179] : 1980 SCC (Cr) 561 and 849 (1980) 2 SCC 665 [LNIND 1980 SC 179] . State of HP v Gian Chand, 2000 Cr LJ 949 (HP); Sardari Lal v State of Punjab, 2003 Cr LJ 383 (P&H), State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 901; Baldev Singh v State of Punjab, (2009) 6 SCC 564 [LNIND 2009 SC 1151] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 66; Y Venkaiah v State of AP, AIR 2009 SC 2311 [LNIND 2009 SC 513] : (2009) Cr LJ 2834 : (2009) 12 SCC 126 [LNIND 2009 SC 513] . State of MP v Paltan Mallah, 2005 AIR 2005 SC 733 [LNIND 2005 SC 64] : Cr LJ 918 SC : (2005) 3 SCC 169 [LNIND 2005 SC 64] .
74. State (NCT) of Delhi v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] .
75. Charandas Swami v State of Gujarat, 2017 (4) Scale 403 .
76. Rajiv Kumar v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 3772 [LNIND 2017 SC 367] .
77. Charandas Swami v State of Gujarat, 2017 (4) Scale 403 .
78. State of Maharashtra v Som Nath Thapa, AIR 1996 SC 1744 [LNIND 1996 SC 776] : 1996 AIR SCW 1977 : 1996 Cr LJ 2448 : (1996) 4 SCC 649 .
79. State through Central Bureau of Investigation v Dr Anup Kumar Srivastava, AIR 2017 SC 3698 [LNIND 2017 SC 371] .
80. Lal Singh v State of Gujarat, AIR 2001 SC 746 [LNIND 2001 SC 98] : 2001 Cr LJ 978 . The case under the Terrorists and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act, 1987. Saju v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 175 [LNIND 2000 SC 1552] , no inference of conspiracy to murder from circumstances proved in the case, Suman Sood v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2007 SC 2774 [LNIND 2007 SC 647] : (2007) Cr LJ 4080 : (2007) 5 SCC 634 [LNIND 2007 SC 647] , inference regarding conspiracy can be drawn from surrounding circumstances because normally no direct evidence is available.

81. Ibid. The court followed the ruling in Babu Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 3250 [LNIND 1996 SC 860] : 1996 Cr LJ 2503 ; Vijayan v State of Kerala, AIR 1999 SC 1086 [LNIND 1999 SC 159] : 1999 Cr LJ 1638 , it is difficult to establish conspiracy by direct evidence. But there should be material evidence showing the connection between the alleged conspiracy and the act done pursuant to that conspiracy. Firozuddin Basheerudin v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 3488 [LNIND 2001 SC 1755] : 2001 Cr LJ 4215 , conspiracy to eliminate a police informer on whose information contraband gold was seized from the accused persons, chain of circumstances to the point of murder, complete, conviction. State of Kerala v P Suganthan, AIR 2000 SC 3323 [LNIND 2000 SC 1298] : 2000 Cr LJ 4584 , conspiracy to murder the earlier paramour of the concubine, not proved. Hira Lal Hari Lal v CBI, AIR 2003 SC 2545 [LNIND 2003 SC 499] : 2003 Cr LJ 3041 : (2003) 5 SCC 257 [LNIND 2003 SC 499] , difficult to prove conspiracy by direct evidence. An agreement between the parties to do something unlawful has to be proved. The allegation here was that of evasion of customs duty.

82. Chandra Prakash v State of Rajasthan, 2014 Cr LJ 2884 : (2014) 8 SCC 340 [LNIND 2014 SC 346] .

83. Indra Dalal v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 3174 : 2015 (6) SCJ 501 [LNIND 2015 SC 358] .

84. Balkar Singh v State of Haryana, 2015 Cr LJ 901 : (2015) 2 SCC 746 [LNIND 2014 SC 950] .

85. Satyavir Singh v State of UP, 2016 Cr LJ 4863 (All), 2015 (91) ALLCC 892.

86. State v Nitin Gunwant Shah, 2015 Cr LJ 4759 : 2016 (1) SCJ 30 [LNIND 2015 SC 529] .

87. State of TN v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 .

88. Kiriti Pal v State of WB, 2015 Cr LJ 3152 : 2015 (3) Crimes 11 (SC).

89. R Venkatkrishanan v CBI, 2010 1 SCC (Cr) 164 : (2009) 11 SCC 737 [LNIND 2009 SC 1653] .

90. Mahesh Joshi v State, (CBI), 2002 Cr LJ 97 (Kant).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1. CHAPTER V-A CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

[s 120B] Punishment of criminal conspiracy.

- (1) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, ⁹¹[imprisonment for life] or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, shall, where no express provision is made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy, be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.
- (2) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable as aforesaid shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months, or with fine or with both.]

COMMENT—

Earlier to the introduction of sections 120A and B, conspiracy per se was not an offence under IPC, 1860, except in respect of the offence mentioned in section 121A. However, abetment by conspiracy was and still remains to be an ingredient of abetment under the second clause of section 107 of IPC, 1860. The punishment therefore, is provided under various sections, viz., sections 108–117. Whereas under section 120A, the essence of the offence of criminal conspiracy is a bare agreement to commit the offence, the abetment under section 107 requires the commission of some act or illegal omission pursuant to the conspiracy.⁹² Criminal conspiracy is an independent offence. It is punishable separately.⁹³ The punishment for conspiracy is the same as if the conspirator had abetted the offence.⁹⁴ The punishment for a criminal conspiracy is more severe if the agreement is one to commit a serious offence; it is less severe if the agreement is one to commit an act which although illegal is not an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or rigorous imprisonment for more than two years.

Conspiracy to commit an offence is itself an offence and a person can be separately charged with respect to such a conspiracy. There may be an element of abetment in a conspiracy; but conspiracy is something more than abetment. The offences created by section 109 and section 120A are quite distinct and where offences are committed by several persons in pursuance of a conspiracy it is usual to charge them with those offences as well as conspiracy to commit those offences.⁹⁵

This section applies to those who are the members of the conspiracy during its continuance. Conspiracy has to be treated as a continuing offence and whoever is a party to the conspiracy during the period for which he is charged is liable under this section.⁹⁶ A conspiracy is held to be continued and renewed as to encompass all its members wherever and whenever any member of it acts in furtherance of the common design.⁹⁷ The most important ingredient of a criminal conspiracy is an agreement for an illegal act, conspiracy continues to subsist till it is executed or rescinded or frustrated by choice or necessity.⁹⁸ The conspirators' connection with the conspiracy would get snapped after he is nabbed by the police and kept in custody. He would then cease to be the agent of others. In this case (Rajiv assassination) the prosecution could not establish that the accused persons who were under detention continued their conspiratorial contact with those who remained outside. A statement which constitutes prima facie evidence of a conspiracy may amount to an act for which all the members can be held liable.^{99.}

Where the accused conspired with others in awarding a contract when he was in job, he could be held liable for subsequent acts of other conspirators even after his retirement as he contributed his part for furtherance of the conspiracy.^{100.}

For the purpose of establishing or proving the charge of conspiracy, it is not necessary that there should be knowledge of who are other conspirators and of the detailed stages of the conspiracy. The necessary requisite is knowledge of the main object and purpose of the conspiracy.^{101.} A fraud was alleged to have been committed by Government officers in processing and verifying fake bills. It was held that all the officers who dealt with the relevant files at one point of time or the other could not be considered to have taken part in the conspiracy or that they would be guilty of aiding and abetting the offence. Individual acts of criminal misconduct would have to be considered for fastening liability.^{102.}

An accused can be convicted for substantive offence even where he has been acquitted of the charge of conspiracy.^{103.}

[s 120B.1] Sanction for prosecution (section 120B IPC, 1860 and section 196 (Cr PC, 1973)).—

This section has to be read along with section 196(1-A) (2) (Cr PC, 1973), which requires previous sanction of the State Government or the District Magistrate to launch prosecution in respect of a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with less than two years imprisonment. Thus, where the object of the conspiracy was cheating by false personation under section 419, IPC, 1860, which is an offence punishable with a three-year imprisonment, the mere fact that there were other non-cognizable offences for which too the accused had been charged would not vitiate the trial in absence of sanction under section 196(1A)(2), (Cr PC, 1973), as that section is meant to be applicable to a case where the object of the conspiracy is to commit an offence punishable with less than two years' imprisonment.^{104.} Where the act in question was not done by the army officer in the discharge of his official duties, it was held that a sanction for his prosecution was not necessary.^{105.}

[s 120B.2] Can a company be prosecuted for Criminal conspiracy.—

A corporation is virtually in the same position as any individual and may be convicted of common law as well as statutory offences including those requiring mens rea. The criminal liability of a corporation would arise when an offence is committed in relation to the business of the corporation by a person or body of persons in control of its affairs. In such circumstances, it would be necessary to ascertain that the degree and control of the person or body of persons is so intense that a corporation may be said to think and act through that person or the body of persons.^{106.}

[s 120B.3] Signing differently in vakalatnama.—

The fact was that the accused put their signatures in vakalatnama differently from their original ones. It has been alleged by the complainant that the accused petitioners have deliberately and wilfully put their signatures on the vakalatnama in collusion with each other like irresponsible persons in order to gain wrongfully and with a view to cheat and mislead the complainant. It was held that the alleged action of the petitioners in signing their own name on the vakalatnama and filing the same in the Court through their counsel is neither an offence nor prohibited by any law. When the alleged act itself was not illegal, it cannot be said that there was any 'criminal conspiracy' and in absence of the basis for a charge for criminal conspiracy, the petitioners cannot be prosecuted or punished for the offence under section 120-B of the IPC, 1860.^{107.}

[s 120B.4] Seeking opinion.—

Merely taking someone's opinion, who is an outsider to litigation, before filing the reply in the Court would not undermine the administration of justice in any way and it is not indicative of criminal conspiracy.^{108.}

[s 120B.5] Hooch Tragedy case.—

In a case, the allegation was that all the accused persons hatched a criminal conspiracy and they created a well-oiled machinery for importing methyl alcohol to make spurious liquor. Accused diluted the spirit by adding water and sold it through their outlets. Many persons died due to the consumption of spurious liquor. Some persons lost their eyesight and number of others sustained grievous injuries. Supreme Court said that the whole business itself was a conspiracy. It may not be the conspiracy to mix the noxious substance but the fact of the matter is that in order to succeed in the business, which itself was a conspiracy, they mixed or allowed to be mixed methanol and used it so freely that ultimately resulted in the tragedy. Conviction is upheld.^{109.}

[s 120B.6] Corruption cases.—

The prosecution asserted that the appellants A1 to A4 had entered into a conspiracy and in furtherance thereof, A1 who was a public servant, had come to possess assets to the tune of Rs. 66.65 crores, disproportionate to her known sources of income, during the period from 1991 to 1996, when she held the office of the Chief Minister of the State. The Supreme Court in respect to the charge of criminal conspiracy observed that the free flow of money from one account to the other of the respondent's, firms/companies also proved beyond reasonable doubt that all the accused persons had actively participated in the criminal conspiracy to launder the ill-gotten wealth of A1 for purchasing properties in their names.^{110.}

[s 120B.7] Previous sanction.—

No Court shall take cognizance of the offence of any criminal conspiracy punishable under section 120B of the IPC, 1860, (45 of 1860), other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, unless the State Government or the District Magistrate has consented in writing to the initiation of the proceeding: Provided that where the criminal conspiracy is one to which the provisions of section 195 apply, no such consent shall be necessary.^{111.}

2. Sentence.—Where the accused is charged both under section 109 as well as section 120B, IPC, 1860, and the offence abetted is shown to have been committed as a result of the abetment, the abettor should be punished with the imprisonment provided for the principal offence under section 109, IPC, 1860, and no separate sentence need be recorded under section 120B IPC, 1860.^{112.} Where the charge of conspiracy fails, the individual accused could still be convicted for the offences committed by them and sentenced accordingly.^{113.} Where no jail term was awarded to the principal accused in a conspiracy and he was let off with fine alone, it was held that substantive sentence of imprisonment awarded to the other accused was wrongful and, therefore, they also were ordered to pay fine only.^{114.} Where six of the seven persons accused of criminal conspiracy were acquitted, remaining one accused could not be convicted merely for being the head of the section of the branch where fraud was alleged to have been committed.¹¹⁵ Where the appellant-accused was one of the active members of the criminal conspiracy along with other accused and hatched the plan to kill/eliminate the deceased and in furtherance thereof other accused persons successfully killed/eliminated the deceased and it was not the case of the appellant-accused and nor was urged also that his case fell under Section 120(2) so as to be awarded less sentence as prescribed therein, the conviction and award of life sentence as prescribed under Section 302 read with Section 120B, IPC, 1860 was held proper.¹¹⁶ The accused pleaded guilty to conspiring to cause a public nuisance. He conspired with others to interfere with a premier division football match by means of extinguishing the floodlights while the match was in progress. The object of doing so was to affect bets placed on the match abroad, which depended on the score at the time when the lights were switched off and the match was abandoned. The plan was not put into effect and the accused and others were arrested before the match was due to take place. The accused would have received substantial reward for his role. He was sentenced to four years' imprisonment. His appeal was dismissed. The Court said that the practice of interfering with such an important sporting fixture was something which should be actively discouraged by severe sentences. The sentence could not be described as manifestly excessive.¹¹⁷

Law relating to Conspiracy as summarised by the Supreme Court in State of TN through Superintendent of Police, CBI/SIT v Nalini, (AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : (1999) 5 SCC 253 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : JT 1999 (4) SC 106 [LNIND 1999 SC 526] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124).

1. Under Section 120A, IPC, 1860, offence of criminal conspiracy is committed when two or more persons agree to do or cause to be done an illegal act or legal act by illegal means. When it is legal act by illegal means overt act is necessary. Offence of criminal conspiracy is exception to the general law where intent alone does not constitute crime. It is intention to commit crime and joining hands with persons having the same intention. Not only the intention, but there has to be agreement to carry out the object of the intention, which is an offence. The question for consideration in a case is did all the accused had the intention and did they agree that the crime be committed. It would not be enough for the offence of conspiracy when some of the accused merely entertained a wish, howsoever, horrendous it may be, that offence be committed.
2. Acts subsequent to the achieving of object of conspiracy may tend to prove that a particular accused was party to the conspiracy. Once the object of conspiracy has been achieved, any subsequent act, which may be unlawful, would not make the accused a part of the conspiracy like giving shelter to an absconder.
3. Conspiracy is hatched in private or in secrecy. It is rarely possible to establish a conspiracy by direct evidence. Usually, both the existence of the conspiracy and its objects have to be inferred from the circumstances and the conduct of the accused.
4. Conspirators may, for example, be enrolled in chain A enrolling B, B enrolling C, and so on and all will be members of the single conspiracy if they so intend and agree, even though each member knows only the person who enrolled him and the person whom he enrolls. There may be a kind of umbrella-spoke enrolment, where a single person at the centre doing the enrolling and all the other members being unknown to each other, though they know that there are to be other members. These are theories and in practice it may be difficult to tell whether the conspiracy in a particular case falls into which category. It may, however, even overlap. But then there has to be present mutual interest. Persons may be members of single conspiracy even though each is ignorant of the identity of many others who may have diverse role to play. It is not a part of the crime of conspiracy that all the conspirators need to agree to play the same or an active role.

5. When two or more persons agree to commit a crime of conspiracy, then regardless of making or considering any plans for its commission, and despite the fact that no step is taken by any such person to carry out their common purpose, a crime is committed by each and every one who joins in the agreement. There has thus, to be two conspirators and there may be more than that. To prove the charge of conspiracy it is not necessary that intended crime was committed or not. If committed it may further help prosecution to prove the charge of conspiracy.
6. It is not necessary that all conspirators should agree to the common purpose at the same time. They may join with other conspirators at any time before the consummation of the intended objective, and all are equally responsible. What part each conspirator is to play may not be known to everyone or the fact as to when a conspirator joined the conspiracy and when he left.
7. A charge of conspiracy may prejudice the accused because it is forced them into a joint trial and the Court may consider the entire mass of evidence against every accused. Prosecution has to produce evidence not only to show that each of the accused has knowledge of object of conspiracy but also of the agreement. In the charge of conspiracy Court has to guard itself against the danger of unfairness to the accused. Introduction of evidence against some may result in the conviction of all, which is to be avoided. By means of evidence in conspiracy, which is otherwise inadmissible in the trial of any other substantive offence prosecution tries to implicate the accused not only in the conspiracy itself but also in the substantive crime of the alleged conspirators. There is always difficult in tracing the precise contribution of each member of the conspiracy but then there has to be cogent and convincing evidence against each one of the accused charged with the offence of conspiracy. As observed to Judge Learned Hand that "this distinction is important today when many prosecutors seek to sweep within the dragnet of conspiracy all those who have been associated in any degree whatever with the main offenders".
8. As stated above it is the unlawful agreement and not its accomplishment, which is the gist or essence of the crime of conspiracy. Offence of criminal conspiracy is complete even though there is no agreement as to the means by which the purpose is to be accomplished. It is the unlawful agreement, which is the gravamen of the crime of conspiracy. The unlawful agreement which amounts to a conspiracy need not be formal or express, but may be inherent in and inferred from the circumstances, especially declarations, acts and conduct of the conspirators. The agreement need not be entered into by all the parties to it at the same time, but may be reached by successive actions evidencing their joining of the conspiracy.
9. It has been said that a criminal conspiracy is a partnership in crime, and that there is in each conspiracy a joint or mutual agency for the prosecution of a common plan. Thus, if two or more persons enter into a conspiracy, any act done by any of them pursuant to the agreement is, in contemplation of law, the act of each of them and they are jointly responsible therefor. This means that everything said, written or done by any of the conspirators in execution or furtherance of the common purpose is deemed to have been said, done, or written by each of them. And this joint responsibility extends not only to what is done by any of the conspirators pursuant to the original agreement but also to collateral acts incident to and growing out of the original purpose. A conspirator is not responsible, however, for acts done by a co-conspirator after termination of the conspiracy. The joinder of a conspiracy by a new member does not create a new conspiracy nor does it change the status of the other conspirators, and the mere fact that conspirators individually or in groups perform different tasks to a common end does not split up a conspiracy into several different conspiracies.

10. A man may join a conspiracy by word or by deed. However, criminal responsibility for a conspiracy requires more than a merely passive attitude towards an existing conspiracy. One who commits an overt act with knowledge of the conspiracy is guilty. And one who tacitly consents to the object of a conspiracy and goes along with other conspirators, actually standing by while the other but the conspiracy into effect, is guilty though he intends to take no active part in the crime.

1. Chapter VA (containing sections 120A and 120B) inserted by Act 8 of 1913, section 3.
91. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for transportation for life (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).
92. State (NCT) of Delhi v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, 2005 Cr LJ 3950 : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] .
93. State of MP v Sheetla Sahai, 2009 Cr LJ 4436 : (2009) 8 SCC 617 : (2009) 3 SCC(Cr) 901.
94. Alim Jan Bibi, (1937) 1 Cal 484 . It is not necessary that each and every conspirator must have taken part in the commission of the act. State of HP v Krishanlal Pradhan, AIR 1987 SC 773 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] : 1987 Cr LJ 709 : (1987) 2 SCC 17 [LNIND 1987 SC 131] . Govt of NCT of Delhi v Jaspal Singh, (2003) 10 SCC 586 [LNIND 2003 SC 649] , essential requirements of charge under the section. Ram Narayan Popli v CBI, AIR 2003 SC 2748 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] : (2003) 3 SCC 641 [LNIND 2003 SC 26] , statement of ingredients. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, AIR 2003 SC 4427 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] , statement of ingredients and matters of proof.
95. Subbaiah, AIR 1961 SC 1241 [LNIND 1961 SC 95] . See also Mohd Hussain v KS Dalipsinghji, AIR 1970 SC 45 [LNIND 1969 SC 147] : (1970) 1 SCR 130 [LNIND 1969 SC 147] . See also Jagdish Prasad v State of Bihar, 1990 Cr LJ 366 Pat, conspiracy with railway employees to procure allotment of wagons under cover of fake letters. State of Rajasthan v Govind Ram Bagdiya, 2003 Cr LJ 1169 (Raj), the prosecution has to prove the elements of conspiracy. No proof was forthcoming in this case in the matter of allotment of house of any conspiracy among officials to manipulate the system.
96. Abdul Kadar v State, (1963) 65 Bom LR 864 . For an example of a failed prosecution under this section see State of UP v Pheru Singh, AIR 1989 SC 1205 : 1989 Cr LJ 1135 . In Darshan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1983 SC 554 [LNIND 1983 SC 95] : 1983 Cr LJ 985 : (1983) 2 SCC 411 [LNIND 1983 SC 95] , the Supreme Court considered it to be unbelievable that the accused hatched their plot while taking drinks in the presence of a stranger. For proof of conspiracy it often becomes necessary to convert one of the conspirators into an approver witness and this may require corroboration. See Balwant Kaur v UT Chandigarh, AIR 1988 SC 139 [LNIND 1987 SC 738] : 1988 Cr LJ 398 . The absence of one of the conspirators at one of their meetings does not by itself rule out his complicity. Conspiracies are hatched under cover of secrecy. They are generally proved by circumstantial evidence, EK Chandrasenan v State of Kerala, AIR 1995 SC 1066 [LNIND 1995 SC 88] : 1995 Cr LJ 1445 ; Aniceto Lobo v State (Goa, Daman and Diu), AIR 1994 SC 1613 : 1994 Cr LJ 1582 : 1993 Supp (3) SCC 311 , conspiracy of three persons, one of whom, being bank employee, took out blank drafts, the other forged signatures and third opened accounts in fictitious names to encash the drafts, all of them were held to be equally guilty of the offence.

97. Esher Singh v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 3030 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] : (2004) 11 SCC 585 [LNIND 2004 SC 329] .

98. Damodar v State of Rajasthan, AIR 2003 SC 4414 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] : 2003 Cr LJ 5014 : (2004) 12 SCC 336 [LNIND 2003 SC 803] . R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : 2004 Cr LJ 286 : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] , alleged conspiracy was to dispose of by auction the property of a Govt Co at a low price, but the bids made by the alleged conspirators reflected a fair price. Ingredients of the section not made out. Hardeep Singh Sohal v State of Punjab, AIR 2004 SC 4716 [LNIND 2004 SC 902] : (2004) 11 SCC 612 [LNIND 2004 SC 1006] conspiracy for murder not proved. Another charge of conspiracy for murder was rejected in Hem Raj v State of Punjab, AIR 2003 SC 4259 [LNIND 2003 SC 759] : 2003 Cr LJ 4987 : (2003) 12 SCC 241 [LNIND 2003 SC 759] . State of HP v Satya Dev Sharma, (2002) 10 SCC 601 , criminal conspiracy between timber merchants and private landowners and Government officials for falling and misappropriating trees standing on Government land.

99. State of TN v Nalini, AIR 1999 SC 2640 [LNIND 1999 SC 1584] : 1999 Cr LJ 3124 . Under TADA (repealed) such confession had the status of evidence. Ram Singh v State of HP, AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : 1997 AIR SCW 1331 : 1997 Cr LJ 4091 , in a murder by some persons, the accused persons assisted them in causing disappearance of the dead body secretly in furtherance of their conspiracy, their conviction under sections 201-120B was held to be proper. Subhash Harnarayanji Laddha v State of Maharashtra, (2006) 12 SCC 545 [LNIND 2006 SC 1088] , conspiracy not proved. Mallanna v State of Karnataka, (2007) 8 SCC 523 [LNIND 2007 SC 1526] , conspiracy not proved.

100. R Balkrishna Pillai v State of Kerala, 1996 Cr LJ 757 (Ker); Devender Pal Singh v State (NCT) of Delhi, 2002 Cr LJ 2034 (SC), acquittal of a co-accused on the ground of non-corroboration of the confessional statement did not have the effect of demolishing the prosecution regarding conspiracy Saju v State of Kerala, 2001 Cr LJ 102 (SC), no evidence to show that the accused was responsible for pregnancy or insisted upon its termination. The accused and co-accused were fellow workers and seemed to be hired killers. They were seen together at the place of the incident both before and after it. That was held to be not sufficient to prove charge of conspiracy against them. State of HP v Jai Lal, AIR 1999 SC 3318 [LNIND 1999 SC 798] : 1999 Cr LJ 4294 State Government scheme of purchasing infected apples from growers and destroying them. Allegations that some of them over charged by inflating weight. But no evidence of experts about overweight, etc., charge not proved. Premlata v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1430 (Raj), a charge-sheet was not quashed where there was evidence to believe that the two accused persons had conspired to produce a document for fulfilling the eligibility criteria for an appointment. Central Bureau of Investigation v VC Shukla, AIR 1998 SC 1406 [LNIND 1998 SC 272] : 1998 Cr LJ 1905 , the prosecution could not prove that one of the two accused was a party to the conspiracy. Arun Gulab Gawli v State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 4481 (Bom) mere inference cannot invite punishment.

101. Mohd Amin v CBI, (2008) 15 SCC 49 [LNIND 2008 SC 2255] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 693.

102. Soma Chakravarty v State, AIR 2007 SC 2149 [LNIND 2007 SC 632] : (2007) 5 SCC 403 [LNIND 2007 SC 632] .

103. T Shankar Prasad v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 1242 [LNIND 2004 SC 41] : 2004 Cr LJ 884 : (2004) 3 SCC 753 [LNIND 2004 SC 41] .

104. Yashpal v State, AIR 1977 SC 2433 [LNIND 1977 SC 304] : 1978 Cr LJ 189 . See also Vinod Kumar Jain v State through CBI, 1991 Cr LJ 669 (Del); State of Bihar v Simranjit Singh Mann, 1987 Cr LJ 999 (Pat).

105. Nirmal Puri (Lt Gen Retd) v UOI, 2002 Cr LJ 158 (Del).
106. Iridium India Telecom Ltd v Motorola Incorporated, AIR 2011 SC 20 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : 2010 AIR (SCW) 6738 : JT 2010 (11) SC 492 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : (2011) 1 SCC 74 [LNIND 2010 SC 1012] : (2010) 3 SCC(Cr) 1201 : 2010 (11) Scale 417 ; relied on Standard Chartered Bank v Directorate of Enforcement, AIR 2005 SC 2622 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : (2005) 4 SCC 530 [LNIND 2005 SC 476] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 961.
107. Padam Chand v The State of Bihar, 2016 Cr LJ 4998 (Pat) : 2016 (3) PLJR 258 .
108. Sanjiv Rajendra Bhatt v UOI, 2016 Cr LJ 185 : (2016) 1 SCC 1 [LNIND 2015 SC 596] .
109. Chandran v State, AIR 2011 SC 1594 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] : (2011) 5 SCC 161 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] : (2011) 2 SCC(Cr) 551 : (2011) 8 SCR 273 [LNIND 2011 SC 358] ; Also see Ravinder Singh @ Ravi Pavar v State of Gujarat, AIR 2013 SC 1915 2013 Cr Lj 1832.
110. State of Karnataka v Selvi J Jayalalitha, 2017 (2) Scale 375 [LNIND 2017 SC 72] : 2017 (1) RCR (Criminal) 802.
111. Section 196(2) of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.
112. State of TN v Savithri, 1976 Cr LJ 37 (Mad).
113. State of Orissa v Bishnu Charan Muduli, 1985 Cr LJ 1573 (Ori).
114. CR Mehta v State of Maharashtra, 1993 Cr LJ 2863 (Bom). The Court referred to Rameshwar Dayal v State of UP, 1971 (3) SCC 924 : 1972 SCC (Cr) 172.
115. BN Narasimha Rao v Govt of AP, 1995 Cr LJ 4181 (SC), reversing AP High Court. See also Sayed Mohd Owais v State of Maharashtra, 2003 Cr LJ 303 (Bom).
116. Bilal Hajar v State, AIR 2018 SC 4780 [LNIND 2018 SC 520] .
117. R v Chee Kew Ong, (2001) 1 Cr App R (S) 117 [CA (Crim Div)].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 121] Waging, or attempting to wage war or abetting waging of war, against the Government of India.

Whoever, wages war¹ against the ¹[Government of India]², or attempts, to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war³, shall be punished with death, or ²[imprisonment for life] ³[and shall also be liable to fine].

⁴.[ILLUSTRATIONS]

- ⁵.[] (a) A joins an insurrection against the ⁶.[Government of India]. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

⁷.[]COMMENT—

Earlier the word used in section 121 was "Queen". After the formation of the republic under the Constitution it was substituted by the expression "Government of India" by the Adaption of Laws Order of 1950. In a republic, sovereignty vests in the people of the country and the lawfully elected government is simply the representative and a manifestation of the sovereign, that is, the people. Thus, the expression "Government of India", as appearing in section 121, must be held to mean the State or interchangeably the people of the country as the repository of the sovereignty of India which is manifested and expressed through the elected Government.⁸

[s 121.1] Waging war against Government.—

The concept of war embedded in section 121 is not to be understood in the international law sense of inter-country war involving military operations by and between two or more hostile countries. Section 121 is not meant to punish prisoners of war of a belligerent nation. Apart from the legislative history of the provision and the understanding of the expression by various High Courts during the pre-independence days, the Illustration to section 121 itself makes it clear that "war" contemplated by section 121 is not conventional warfare between two nations. Organising or joining an insurrection against the Government of India is also a form of war.⁹

Neither the number of persons nor the manner in which they are assembled or armed is material to constitute an offence under this section. The true criterion is the purpose or intention with which the gathering is assembled. The object of the gathering must be to attain by force and violence an object of a general public nature thereby striking directly against the Government's authority.¹⁰

In Md Jamiluddin Nasir v State of WB,¹¹ while enumerating what principles are to be kept in mind in cases, involving application of sections 121, 122, 121A read with section 120B IPC, 1860 as well as section 302 IPC, 1860, the Supreme Court, observed inter alia that not all violent behaviour would fall within the prescription of waging war as contemplated under sections 121, 121A, 122 read with section 120B. It was also found that the object sought to be achieved to make a case for the application of section 121, should be directed against the sovereignty of the State and not merely commission of a crime, even if that happens to be of higher magnitude. The concept of 'waging war' should not be stretched too far. A balanced and realistic approach should be maintained while construing the offence committed, to find out whether it amounts to waging of war against the State.

1. 'Wages war'.—The expression "waging war" means and can only mean waging war in the manner usual in war. In other words, in order to support a conviction on such a charge it is not enough to show that the persons charged have contrived to obtain possession of an armoury and have, when called upon to surrender it, used the rifles and ammunition so obtained against the Government troops. It must also be shown that the seizure of the armoury was part and parcel of a planned operation and that their intention in resisting the troops of the Government was to overwhelm and defeat these troops and then to go on and crush any further opposition with which they might meet until either the leaders of the movement succeeded in obtaining the possession of the machinery of Government or those in possession of it yielded to the demands of their leaders.¹² An illuminating discussion on the issue of "Waging war against the Government of India" is to be found in this Court's decision in State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru.¹³ In para 272 of the judgment P Venkatarama Reddi, J, speaking for the Court, referred to the report of the Indian Law Commission that examined the draft Penal Code in 1847 and quoted the following passage from the report:

We conceive the term 'wages war against the Government' naturally to import a person arraying himself in defiance of the Government in like manner and by like means as a foreign enemy would do, and it seems to us, we presume it did to the authors of the Code that any definition of the term so unambiguous would be superfluous.

The expression, "in like manner and by like means as a foreign enemy", is very significant to understand the nature of the violent acts that would amount to waging war. In "waging war", the intent of the foreign enemy is not only to disturb public peace or law and order or to kill many people. A foreign enemy strikes at the sovereignty of the State, and his conspiracy and actions are motivated by that animus.¹⁴

[s 121.2] New concept of "Waging war" and Caution against using old authorities.—

The concept of war in section 121 which includes insurrection or a civilian uprising should not be understood in the sense of conventional war between two nations or sovereign entities. The normative phenomenon of war as understood in the international sense does not fit into the ambit and reach of section 121. In the Parliament attack case,¹⁵ the Supreme Court held as follows:

while these are the acceptable criteria of waging war, we must dissociate ourselves from the old English and Indian authorities to the extent that they lay down a too general test of attainment of an object of general public nature or a political object. The Supreme Court expressed reservations in adopting this test in its literal sense and construing it in a manner out of tune with the present day. The court must be cautious in adopting an approach which has the effect of bringing within the fold of S.121 all acts of lawless and violent acts resulting in destruction of public properties, etc., and all acts of violent resistance to the armed personnel to achieve certain political objectives. The moment it is found that the object sought to be attained is of a general public nature or has a political hue, the offensive violent acts targeted against the armed forces and public officials should not be branded as acts of waging war. The expression "waging war" should not be stretched too far to hold that all the acts of disrupting public order and peace irrespective of their magnitude and repercussions could be reckoned as acts of waging war against the Government. A balanced and realistic approach is called for in construing the expression "waging war" irrespective of how it was viewed in the long past. An organised movement attended with violence and attacks against the public officials and armed forces while agitating for the repeal of an unpopular law or for preventing burdensome taxes were viewed as acts of treason in the form of levying war. We doubt whether such construction is in tune with the modern day perspectives and standards.

[s 121.3] Terrorist Acts.—

Though every terrorist act does not amount to waging war, certain terrorist acts can also constitute the offence of waging war and there is no dichotomy between the two. Terrorist acts can manifest themselves into acts of war. According to the learned Senior Counsel for the State, terrorist acts prompted by an intention to strike at the sovereign authority of the State/Government, tantamount to waging war irrespective of the number involved or the force employed. However, the degree of animus or intent and the magnitude of the acts done or attempted to be done would assume some relevance in order to consider whether the terrorist acts give rise to a state of war. Yet, the demarcating line is by no means clear, much less transparent. It is often a difference in degree. The distinction gets thinner if a comparison is made of terrorist acts with the acts aimed at overawing the Government by means of criminal force. Conspiracy to commit the latter offence is covered by section 121A.¹⁶ The incorporation of Chapter IV of the Unlawful Activities \(Prevention\) Act, 1967, shall not be viewed as deemed repeal of section 121 of the IPC, 1860. As explained in Navjot Sandhu (supra), a "terrorist act" and an act of "waging war against the Government of India" may have some overlapping features, but a terrorist act may not always be an act of waging war against the Government of India, and vice-versa. The provisions of Chapter IV of the Unlawful Activities \(Prevention\) Act and those of Chapter VI of the Indian Penal Code \(IPC\), 1860 including section 121, basically cover different areas.¹⁷

[s 121.4] Foreign nationals not excluded.—

The word "whoever" is a word of broad import. Advisedly such language was used departing from the observations made in the context of the Treason Statute. Supreme Court finds no good reason why foreign nationals stealthily entering into Indian territory with a view to subverting the functioning of the Government and destabilising the society should not be held guilty of waging war within the meaning of section 121. The section on its plain term need not be confined only to those who owe allegiance to the established Government.¹⁸

The explanation to the section makes it clear that the offence is complete even without any act or illegal omission occurring in pursuance of the conspiracy.¹⁹ It is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should have taken place in pursuance of a conspiracy. An action of waging war, attempt to wage war or abetment to wage war are also covered by section 121-A.²⁰

2. Government of India.—The expression "Government of India" is surely not used in the narrow and restricted sense in section 121. In our considered view, the expression "Government of India" is used in section 121 to imply the Indian State, the juristic embodiment of the sovereignty of the country that derives its legitimacy from the collective will and consent of its people. The use of the phrase "Government of India" to signify the notion of sovereignty is consistent with the principles of Public International Law, wherein sovereignty of a territorial unit is deemed to vest in the people of the territory and exercised by a representative government.²¹

3. 'Abets the waging of such war'.—Such abetment is made a special offence. It is not essential that as a result of the abetment the war should in fact be waged. The main purpose of the instigation should be 'the waging of war'. It should not be merely a remote and incidental purpose but the thing principally aimed at by the instigation. There must be active suggestion or stimulation to the use of violence.²² As criminal acts took place pursuant to the conspiracy, the appellant, as a party to the conspiracy, shall be deemed to have abetted the offence. In fact, he took an active part in a series of steps taken to pursue the objective of conspiracy. The offence of abetting the waging of war, having regard to the extraordinary facts and circumstances of this case, justifies the imposition of capital punishment and, therefore, the judgment of the High Court in regard to the conviction and sentence of Afzal under section 121 IPC, 1860 shall stand.²³

[s 121.5] Principles relating to Section 121.—

- (i) No specific number of persons is necessary to constitute an offence under S.121, Penal Code.
- (ii) The number concerned and the manner in which they are equipped or armed is not material.
- (iii) The true criterion is quo animo did the gathering assemble?
- (iv) The object of the gathering must be to attain by force and violence an object of a general public nature, thereby striking directly against the King's authority.
- (v) There is no distinction between principal and accessory and all who take part in the unlawful act incur the same guilt.²⁴

[s 121.6] CASES.—Mumbai Terror Attack Case.—

The primary and the first offence that the appellant and his co-conspirators committed was the offence of waging war against the Government of India. What matters is that the attack was aimed at India and Indians. It was by foreign nationals. People were killed for no other reason than they were Indians; in case of foreigners, they were killed because their killing on Indian soil would embarrass India. The conspiracy, in furtherance of which the attack was made, was, inter alia, to hit at India; to hit at its financial centre; to try to give rise to communal tensions and create internal strife and insurgency; to demand that India should withdraw from Kashmir; and to dictate its relations with other countries. Nothing could have been more "in like manner and by like means as a foreign enemy would do". The appellant was rightly held guilty of waging war against the Government of India and rightly convicted under sections 121, 121A and 122 of the IPC, 1860.²⁵

[s 121.7] Red Fort Attack Case.—

The evidence as to the transmission of thoughts sharing the unlawful design would be sufficient for establishing the conspiracy. Again there must have been some act in pursuance of the agreement. The offence under section 121 of conspiring to wage a war is proved to the hilt against the appellant, for which he has been rightly held guilty for the offence punishable under sections 121 and 121-A, IPC, 1860.²⁶

[s 121.8] Parliament Attack Case.—

The single most important factor which impels to think that this is a case of waging or attempting to wage war against the Government of India is the target of attack chosen by the slain terrorists and conspirators and the immediate objective sought to be achieved thereby. The battlefield selected was the Parliament House complex. The target chosen was Parliament – a symbol of the sovereignty of the Indian republic. Huge and powerful explosives, sophisticated arms and ammunition carried by the slain terrorists who were to indulge in fidayeen operations with a definite purpose in view, is a clear indicator of the grave danger in store for the inmates of the House. The planned operations if executed, would have spelt disaster for the whole nation. The undoubted objective and determination of the deceased terrorists was to impinge on the sovereign authority of the nation and its Government. Even if the conspired purpose and objective falls short of installing some other authority or entity in the place of an established Government, it does not detract from the offence of waging war.²⁷

[s 121.9] Charge under Section 121, conviction under Section 123.—

In the case the Court has specifically dealt with the question whether the offence under section 123, IPC, 1860 of which the accused was not charged, is a minor offence falling under the charges framed, and held that the fact that there was no charge against the accused under this particular section, does not, in any way, result in prejudice to him because the charge of waging war and other allied offences are the subject matter of charges. It was held that the accused is not in any way handicapped by the absence of charge under section 123, IPC, 1860. The case which he had to meet under section 123 is no different from the case relating to the major charges which he was confronted with. In the face of the stand he had taken and his conduct even after the attack, he could not have pleaded reasonable excuse for not passing on the information. It was held that viewed from any angle, the evidence on record justifies his conviction under section 123, IPC, 1860.²⁸

[s 121.10] Previous Sanction.—

No Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under Chapter VI of IPC, 1860 except with the previous sanction of Central Government or of the State Government.²⁹ Where sanction was obtained only after cognizance, yet no prejudice was caused because the matter was not proceeded any further and charge was also not yet framed. The Court remitted the matter for disposal after the date of sanction.³⁰.

1. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".
2. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
3. Subs. by Act 16 of 1921, section 2, for "and shall forfeit all his property".
4. Subs. by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch. II, for "Illustrations" (w.e.f. 17 September 1957).
5. The brackets and letter "(a)" omitted by Act 36 of 1957, section 3 and Sch. II (w.e.f. 17 September 1957).
6. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".
7. Illustration (b) omitted by the A.O. 1950.
8. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
9. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
10. Maganlal v State, (1946) Nag 126.
11. Md Jamiluddin Nasir v State of WB, 2014 Cr LJ 3589 : AIR 2014 SC 2587 [LNIND 2014 SC 138] .
12. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : 2003 AIR SCW 5068 : AIR 2003 SC 4427 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : 2003 Cr LJ 5021 .
13. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
14. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
15. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
16. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
17. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
18. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
19. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
20. Adnan Bilal Mulla v State of Bombay, 2006 Cr LJ (NOC) 406 Bom : (2006) 5 AIR Bom R 11 DB.

21. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
22. Hasrat Mohani, (1922) 24 Bom LR 885 [LNIND 1922 BOM 136] .
23. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
24. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715 relied on Maganlal Radhakrishnan, AIR 1946 Ngp 173 .
25. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .
26. Mohd. Arif v State of NCT of Delhi, JT 2011 (9) SC 563 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : 2011 (8) Scale 328 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 10 SCR 56 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] : (2011) 13 SCC 621 [LNIND 2011 SC 753] relied on Kehar Singh v State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1988 SC 1883 [LNIND 1988 SC 887] . See also State of Gujarat v Jaman Haji Mamad Jat, 2007 Cr LJ 1584 (Guj).
27. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
28. Shaukat Hussain Guru v State (NCT) Delhi, AIR 2008 SC 2419 : (2008) 6 SCC 776 : 2008 Cr LJ 3016 : 2008 (8) SCR 391 : (2008) 3 SCC (Cr) 137.
29. Section 196(1)(a) of Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973.
30. Jamil Akhtar v State of WB, 2001 Cr LJ 4529 (Cal).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

31. [[s 121A] Conspiracy to commit offences punishable by section 121.

Whoever within or without ^{32.}[India] conspires to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121, ^{33.}[]or conspires to overawe,¹ by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, ^{34.}[the Central Government or any ^{35.}[State] Government ^{36.}[]], shall be punished with ^{37.}[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment of either description which may extend to ten years, ^{38.}[and shall also be liable to fine].

Explanation.—To constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission shall take place in pursuance thereof.]

COMMENT—

Conspiracy to wage war.—This section provides for the offence of conspiring to wage war against the Government of India. It was thought right to make the offence of conspiring by criminal force, or by show of criminal force, more severely penal than the offence of actually taking part in an unlawful assembly, having for its object the overawing of the Government. The reason was this that persons who by conspiring to bring about such a result, set the whole matter in motion, seemed more criminal and far more deserving of punishment than those who were their mere tools, and only took part in such an assembly.

The Explanation to section 121A clarifies that it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place pursuant to the conspiracy, in order to constitute the said offence. Thus, the criminal act done by the deceased terrorists in order to capture the Parliament House is an act that amounts to waging or attempting to wage war. The conspiracy to commit either the offence of waging war or attempting to wage war or abetting the waging of war is punishable under section 121A IPC, 1860 with the maximum sentence of imprisonment for life. In the circumstances of the case, the imposition of maximum sentence is called for and the High Court is justified in holding the appellant Afzal guilty under section 121A IPC, 1860 and sentencing him to life imprisonment.^{39.}

The words 'conspires to overawe by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Central Government, or any State Government' in this section clearly embrace not merely a conspiracy to raise a general insurrection, but also a conspiracy to overawe the Central Government or any State Government by the organisation of a serious riot or a large and tumultuous unlawful assembly.^{40.}

[s 121A.1] Ingredients.—

The section deals with two kinds of conspiracies:—

1. Conspiring within or without India to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121.
2. Conspiring to overawe by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Government.

1. 'Overawe'.—The word 'overawe' clearly imports more than the creation of apprehension or alarm or even perhaps fear. It appears to connote the creation of a situation in which the members of the Central or State Government feel themselves compelled to choose between yielding to force or exposing themselves or members of the public to a very serious danger. It is not necessary that the danger should be a danger of assassination or of bodily injury to themselves. The danger might well be a danger to public property or to the safety of members of the general public.²⁵ The word 'overawe' clearly imports more than the creation of apprehension or alarm or fear. A slogan that Government can be changed by an armed revolution does not mean that there is a conspiracy to change the Government by criminal force. At best it means that the petitioners want to educate the people that by force only the Government could be changed.^{41.}

Explanation.—The Explanation to this section says that to constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place in pursuance thereof.

^{31.} Ins. by Act 27 of 1870, section 4.

^{32.} The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

^{33.} The words "or to deprive the Queen of the sovereignty of the Provinces or of any part thereof" omitted by the A.O. 1950.

^{34.} Subs. by the A.O. 1937, for "the Government of India or any Local Government".

^{35.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Provincial".

^{36.} The words "or the Government of Burma" omitted by the A.O. 1948.

^{37.} Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life or any shorter term" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

^{38.} Ins. by Act 16 of 1921, section 3.

39. State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, AIR 2005 SC 3820 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.
40. Ramanand v State, (1950) 30 Pat 152.
41. Aravindan, 1983 Cr LJ 1259 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

31. [[s 121A] Conspiracy to commit offences punishable by section 121.

Whoever within or without ^{32.}[India] conspires to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121, ^{33.}[]or conspires to overawe,¹ by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, ^{34.}[the Central Government or any ^{35.}[State] Government ^{36.}[]], shall be punished with ^{37.}[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment of either description which may extend to ten years, ^{38.}[and shall also be liable to fine].

Explanation.—To constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission shall take place in pursuance thereof.]

COMMENT—

Conspiracy to wage war.—This section provides for the offence of conspiring to wage war against the Government of India. It was thought right to make the offence of conspiring by criminal force, or by show of criminal force, more severely penal than the offence of actually taking part in an unlawful assembly, having for its object the overawing of the Government. The reason was this that persons who by conspiring to bring about such a result, set the whole matter in motion, seemed more criminal and far more deserving of punishment than those who were their mere tools, and only took part in such an assembly.

The Explanation to section 121A clarifies that it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place pursuant to the conspiracy, in order to constitute the said offence. Thus, the criminal act done by the deceased terrorists in order to capture the Parliament House is an act that amounts to waging or attempting to wage war. The conspiracy to commit either the offence of waging war or attempting to wage war or abetting the waging of war is punishable under section 121A IPC, 1860 with the maximum sentence of imprisonment for life. In the circumstances of the case, the imposition of maximum sentence is called for and the High Court is justified in holding the appellant Afzal guilty under section 121A IPC, 1860 and sentencing him to life imprisonment.^{39.}

The words 'conspires to overawe by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Central Government, or any State Government' in this section clearly embrace not merely a conspiracy to raise a general insurrection, but also a conspiracy to overawe the Central Government or any State Government by the organisation of a serious riot or a large and tumultuous unlawful assembly.^{40.}

[s 121A.1] Ingredients.—

The section deals with two kinds of conspiracies:—

1. Conspiring within or without India to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121.
2. Conspiring to overawe by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Government.

1. 'Overawe'.—The word 'overawe' clearly imports more than the creation of apprehension or alarm or even perhaps fear. It appears to connote the creation of a situation in which the members of the Central or State Government feel themselves compelled to choose between yielding to force or exposing themselves or members of the public to a very serious danger. It is not necessary that the danger should be a danger of assassination or of bodily injury to themselves. The danger might well be a danger to public property or to the safety of members of the general public.²⁵ The word 'overawe' clearly imports more than the creation of apprehension or alarm or fear. A slogan that Government can be changed by an armed revolution does not mean that there is a conspiracy to change the Government by criminal force. At best it means that the petitioners want to educate the people that by force only the Government could be changed.^{41.}

*Explanation.—*The Explanation to this section says that to constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission should take place in pursuance thereof.

^{31.} Ins. by Act 27 of 1870, section 4.

^{32.} The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

^{33.} The words "or to deprive the Queen of the sovereignty of the Provinces or of any part thereof" omitted by the A.O. 1950.

^{34.} Subs. by the A.O. 1937, for "the Government of India or any Local Government".

^{35.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Provincial".

^{36.} The words "or the Government of Burma" omitted by the A.O. 1948.

^{37.} Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life or any shorter term" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

^{38.} Ins. by Act 16 of 1921, section 3.

^{39.} State (NCT of Delhi) v Navjot Sandhu @ Afsan Guru, [AIR 2005 SC 3820 \[LNIND 2005 SC 580\]](#) : (2005) 11 SCC 600 [LNIND 2005 SC 580] : (2005) 2 SCC (Cr) 1715.

40. Ramanand v State, (1950) 30 Pat 152.

41. Aravindan, 1983 Cr LJ 1259 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 122] Collecting arms, etc., with intention of waging war against the Government of India.

Whoever collects men, arms or ammunition or otherwise prepares to wage war with the intention of either waging or being prepared to wage war against the ^{42.} [Government of India], shall be punished with ^{43.} [imprisonment for life] or imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, ^{44.} [and shall also be liable to fine].

COMMENT—

This section is intended to put down with a heavy hand any preparation to wage war against the Government of India. The act made punishable by this section cannot be considered attempts; they are in truth preparations made for committing the offence of waging war. Preparation consists of devising or arranging the means or measures necessary for the commission of the offence. It differs widely from attempt which is the direct movement towards the commission after preparations are made. Preparation to commit an offence is punishable only when the preparation is to commit offences under section 122 (waging war against the Government of India) and section 399 (preparation and an attempt is sometimes thin and has to be decided on the facts of each case). There is a greater degree of determination in attempt as compared with preparation.^{45.}

^{42.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

43. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
44. Ins. by Act 16 of 1921, section 3.
45. Koppula Venkat Rao v State of AP, AIR 2004 SC 1874 [LNIND 2004 SC 301] : (2004) 3 SCC 602 [LNIND 2004 SC 301] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 123] Concealing with intent to facilitate design to wage war.

Whoever, by any act, or by any illegal omission, conceals the existence of a design to wage war against the ^{46.}[Government of India], intending by such concealment to facilitate, or knowing it to be likely that such concealment will facilitate, the waging of such war, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

This section reiterates the principle enunciated in section 118, the only difference being that the penalty under it is more severe. Section 39 of Code of Criminal Procedure \(Cr PC\), 1973 read with section 176 of the IPC, 1860 makes it an offence for any person who is aware of the commission of, or of the intention of any person to commit, an offence under sections 121–126, both inclusive (that is, offences against the State specified in Chapter VI of the Code), to omit giving any notice or furnishing any information to any public servant. Moreover, section 123 of IPC, 1860 makes it an offence to conceal, whether by act or omission, the existence of a design to "wage war" against the Government of India, when intending by such concealment to facilitate, or knowing it to be likely that such concealing will facilitate, the waging of such war.^{47.}

[s 123.1] Section 121 and Section 123.—

To prove an offence under section 121, IPC, 1860, the prosecution is required to prove that the accused is guilty of waging war against the Government of India or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, whereas for proving the offence under section 123, IPC, 1860 against the accused, the prosecution is required to prove that there was a concealment by an act or by illegal omission of existence of a design to wage war against the Government of India and he intended by such concealment to facilitate, or he knew that such concealment will facilitate, the waging of war. In the present case, the accused was charged under section 121, IPC, 1860, for waging war against the Government of India or attempting to wage such war or abetting the waging of such war. The concealment of such fact by an act or illegal omission with an intention to facilitate, or knowing that such concealment will facilitate, waging of war, even in the absence of proof of his involvement in waging of war against the Government of India, will constitute an offence and an accused can always be convicted for the concealment of such fact under section 123, IPC, 1860. The prosecution having been successful in proving the necessary ingredients of section 123, IPC, 1860, it would constitute a minor offence of a major offence and, therefore, the petitioner was convicted under section 123, IPC, 1860 which is a minor offence of the offences he faced trial.^{48.}

46. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

47. Mohammed Ajmal Mohammad Amir Kasab v State of Maharashtra, (2012) 9 SCC 1 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 4942 : AIR 2012 SC 3565 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 Cr LJ 4770 : JT 2012 (8) SC 4 [LNIND 2012 SC 1215] : 2012 (7) Scale 553 .

48. Shaukat Hussain Guru v State (NCT) Delhi, AIR 2008 SC 2419 : (2008) 6 SCC 776 : 2008 Cr LJ 3016 : 2008 (8) SCR 391 : (2008) 3 SCC (Cr) 137.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 124] Assaulting President, Governor, etc., with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power.

Whoever, with the intention of inducing or compelling the ^{49.}[President] of India, or the ^{50.}[Governor ^{51.}] of any ^{52.}[State], ^{53.} ^{54.} ^{55.} to exercise or refrain from exercising in any manner any of the lawful powers of such ^{56.}[President] or ^{57.}[Governor ^{58.}], assaults or wrongfully restrains, or attempts wrongfully to restrain, or overawes, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, or attempts so to overawe, such ^{59.}[President or ^{60.}[Governor ^{61.}]], shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

This section is an amplification of the third clause of section 121A. It punishes severely assaults, etc., made on high officers of Government.

^{49.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Governor General".

^{50.} Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "Governor" (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).

^{51.} The words "or Rajpramukh" omitted by the A.O. (No. 2) 1956.

^{52.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Province". Earlier the word "Province" was subs. by the A.O. 1937, for the word "Presidency".

53. The words "or a Lieutenant-Governor" omitted by the A.O. 1937.
54. The words "or a Member of the Council of the Governor General of India" omitted by the A.O. 1948.
55. The words "or of the Council of any Presidency" omitted by the A.O. 1937.
56. The words "Governor General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council" have successfully been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948 and the A.O. 1950 to read as above.
57. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "Governor" (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).
58. The words "or Rajpramukh" omitted by the A.O. (No. 2) 1956.
59. The words "Governor General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council" have successfully been amended by the A.O. 1937, the A.O. 1948 and the A.O. 1950 to read as above.
60. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "Governor" (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).
61. The words "or Rajpramukh" omitted by the A.O. (No. 2) 1956.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

62. [[s 124A] Sedition.

Whoever, by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards, 63.[*] the Government established by law in 64.[India], 65.[] shall be punished with 66.[imprisonment for life], to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1.*—The expression "disaffection" includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.*—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.*—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.]

COMMENT—

The offence under section 124A captioned as 'Sedition' is closely allied to treason – an offence against the State. Many personalities including the Father of the Nation and several freedom fighters have been tried and punished during the imperial rule under the above section. How far in a democratic set-up publishing or preaching of protest even questioning the foundation of the form of Government could be imputed as causing disaffection towards the Government and thus, committing of any offence under Chapter VI of the IPC, 1860 has to be examined within the letter and spirit of the Constitution and not as previously done under the imperial rule.⁶⁷

Sedition in itself is a comprehensive term, and it embraces all those practices, whether by word, deed, or writing, which are calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the State, and lead ignorant persons to endeavour to subvert the Government and laws of the country. The objects of sedition generally are to induce discontent and insurrection, and stir up opposition to the Government, and bring the administration of justice into contempt; and the very tendency of sedition is to incite the people to insurrection and rebellion.

Sedition has been described as disloyalty in action, and the law considers as sedition all those practices which have for their object to excite discontent or dissatisfaction, to create public disturbance, or to lead to civil war; to bring into hatred or contempt the Sovereign or the Government, the laws or constitutions of the realm, and generally all endeavours to promote public disorder.⁶⁸

[s 124A.1] Constitutional Validity.—

The Supreme Court, in Kedar Nath Singh v State of Bihar,⁶⁹ held that this section is not unconstitutional and opined that only when it is construed that the words, written or spoken, etc. which have the pernicious tendency or intention of creating public disorder or disturbance of law and order the law steps in to prevent such activities in the interest of public order, then only the section strikes the correct balance between individual fundamental rights and the interest of public order. The Court also held that a citizen has a right to say or write whatever he likes about the Government, or its measures, by way of criticism or comment, so long as he does not incite people to violence against the Government established by law or with the intention of creating public disorder.

The Supreme Court in a later Order in *Common Cause v UOI*⁷⁰ ordered that the authorities while dealing with the offences under section 124A of the IPC, 1860 shall be guided by the principles laid down by the Constitution Bench in Kedar Nath Singh.

Section 124A]

[s 124A.2] Ingredients.—

This section requires two essentials:—

1. Bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection towards the Government of India.
2. Such act or attempt may be done (i) by words, either spoken or written; or (ii) by signs; or (iii) by visible representation.

1. Bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection towards the Government of India.—A plain reading of the section would show that its application would be attracted only when the accused brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards the Government established by law in India, by words either written or spoken or visible signs or representations, etc.⁷¹ Necessary ingredient to attract punishment under section 124A, IPC, 1860, appears to be the effort of bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt to excite or attempt to excite disaffection towards the Government established by law in India by words, either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representation or otherwise.⁷² The offence does not consist in exciting or attempting to excite mutiny or rebellion, or any sort of actual disturbance, great or small. Whether any disturbance or outbreak was caused by the publication of seditious articles is absolutely immaterial. If the accused intended by the articles to excite rebellion or disturbance, his act would doubtless fall within this section, and would probably fall within other sections of the IPC, 1860. If he tried to excite feelings of hatred or contempt towards the Government, that is sufficient to make him guilty under this section.⁷³ The Federal Court of India had, however, held that the gist of the offence of sedition is incitement to violence; mere abusive words are not enough.⁷⁴ The view of the Federal Court was subsequently overruled by the Privy Council,⁷⁵ as being opposed to the view expressed in several cases.⁷⁶ comments, however strongly worded expressing, disapprobation of actions of Government, without exciting those feelings which generate the inclination to cause public disorder by acts of violence, would not be penal. In other words, disloyalty to Government established by law is not the same thing as commenting in strong terms upon the measures or acts of Government, or its agencies, so as to ameliorate the condition of the people or to secure the cancellation or alteration of those acts or measures by lawful means, that is to say, without exciting those feelings of enmity or disloyalty which imply excitement to public disorder or the use of violence.

In appreciating whether the act done by the accused by words "either spoken or written or by signs or by misrepresentation or otherwise" one cannot shut one's eyes to changes in political consumptions which have taken place over the course of time after the aforesaid penal provision section 124A was included in the IPC, 1860 and the declared objective of the Government of the day. Very often, the demarcating line between political criticism of the Government and those causing disaffection against the Government is thin and waving.⁷⁷

It is not an essential ingredient of sedition that the act done should be an act which is intended or likely to incite to public disorder.⁷⁸ But this view of the law does no longer seem to be correct, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Kedar Nath's case,⁷⁹ wherein Sinha, CJ observed:

In this very case it was further held that viewed in the context of antecedent history of the legislation, its purpose and the mischief it seeks to suppress the provisions of section 124A and section 505 of the IPC, 1860 should be limited in their application to acts involving intention or tendency to create disorder or disturbance of law and order or incitement to violence. Where the propaganda secretary of a Gurdwara addressed a gathering of Sikhs, some of whom were wearing black clothes and turbans, and in course of his speech though he did not give direct incitement to violence but he nevertheless gave exaggerated figures of casualties following Army action in Punjab, it was held that it would be quite proper to infer from the text and tenor of the speech made by the accused that the same was intended to bring the Government into contempt with the likelihood of eruption of violence and public disorder contemplated in Kedarnath's case. In the circumstances, his petition for quashing the criminal proceedings against him under section 482, Cr PC, 1973 was rejected.⁸⁰ The decisive ingredient for establishing the offence of Sedition under section 124A, IPC, 1860 is the doing of certain acts which would bring the Government established by law in India into hatred or contempt, etc. In this case, there is not even a suggestion that appellant did anything as against the Government of India or any other Government of the State. The charge framed against the accused contains no averment that accused did anything as against the Government.⁸¹ The prosecution evidence shows that the slogans were raised a couple of times only by the accused and that neither the slogans evoked a response from any other person of the Sikh community nor reaction from people of other communities. Supreme Court found it difficult to hold that upon the raising of such casual slogans, a couple of times without any other act whatsoever, the charge of sedition can be founded.

The casual raising of the slogans, once or twice by two individuals alone cannot be said to be aimed at exciting or attempt to excite hatred or disaffection towards the Government as established by law in India. Section 124A IPC, 1860 would in the facts and circumstances of the case have no application whatsoever and would not be attracted to the facts and circumstances of the case.⁸² The prosecution case is that the accused has delivered a speech creating ill will and promoting enmity among different racial and linguistic groups of Indian people and thereby committed the offences punishable under sections 124\(A\) and 153\(A\) of the IPC, 1860. A perusal of the First Information Report and the charge sheet laid by the respondent police would make it abundantly clear that the allegations mentioned therein, if proved, would naturally attract the provisions of sections 124\(A\) and 153\(A\) of IPC, 1860.⁸³ State of Punjab and Union Territory, Chandigarh, had been declared Disturbed Area and the extremists activities were going on a large scale in September 1984. The law and order situation had so deteriorated that the Army had to spread out. In this background, it will be proper to infer from the text and tenor of the speech made by the accused that the same was intended and it did tend to bring the Government into contempt with the likelihood of eruption of violence and public disorder.⁸⁴

2. Such act, attempt, etc., may be done by words, either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representation.—Not only the writer of seditious articles but whoever uses in any way words or printed matter for the purpose of exciting feelings of disaffection to the Government is liable under the section, whether he is the actual author or not.⁸⁵

[s 124A.3] 'Written'.—

In Raghubir Singh,⁸⁶ it has been held that for establishing the charge of sedition, it is not necessary that the accused must be the author of the seditious material and that distribution or circulation of seditious material may also be sufficient on the facts and circumstances of the case and even the act of courier is sometimes enough in a case of conspiracy and further that it is also not necessary that a person should be the participant in the conspiracy from start to finish. Disaffection may be excited in a thousand different ways. A poem, an allegory, a drama, a philosophical or historical discussion, may be used for the purpose of exciting disaffection. Seditious writing, while it remains in the hands of the author unpublished, will not make him liable. Publication of some kind is necessary.⁸⁷ Sending of seditious matter by post addressed to a private individual not by name but by designation as the representative of a large body of students amounts to publication if it is opened by anybody.⁸⁸

[s 124A.4] Advise to kill members of police force.—

The Government established by law acts through human agency and admittedly, the police service or force is itself a principal agency for the administration and maintenance of the law and order in the State. When a person makes a statement or gives an advice to resort to violence by killing four to five police officers, he could be said to have criticised the police force or the service en bloc. In such circumstances a prima facie case of waging war against the Government could be said to have been made out.⁸⁹

[s 124A.5] 'Visible representation'.—

Sedition does not necessarily consist of written matter: it may be evidenced by a wood-cut or engraving of any kind.^{90.}

[s 124A.6] Explanations 2 and 3.—

Both these Explanations have a strictly defined and limited scope. They have no application unless the article in question criticises "the measures of Government" or "administrative or other action of the Government" without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection.

[s 124A.7] Membership in a banned organization.—

Mere membership of a banned organization will not incriminate a person unless he resorts to violence or incites people to violence or does an act intended to create disorder or disturbance of public peace by resort to violence.^{91.}

[s 124A.8] 'Disapprobation'.—

This means simply disapproval. It is quite possible to disapprove of a man's sentiments or actions and yet to like him.^{92.}

[s 124A.9] Liability for extracts from other papers.—

The law does not excuse the publication in newspapers of writings which are in themselves seditious libels, merely because they are copied from foreign newspapers as items of news.^{93.}

[s 124A.10] Liability for letters of correspondents.—

The editor of a newspaper is liable for unsigned seditious letters appearing in his paper.^{94.}

[s 124A.11] Publication of seditious exhibits.—

Republication of a seditious article used as an exhibit in a case of sedition is not justifiable.^{95.}

[s 124A.12] Listening to cassettes.—

Certain accused persons were convicted for listening to some cassettes containing speeches of seditious nature. There was no other evidence to show that they either committed or conspired or attempted to commit or advocated or advised or knowingly facilitated commission of disruptive activities under Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act (TADA), 1987. Their conviction was set aside.^{96.}

[s 124A.13] Previous Sanction.—

No sanction has been obtained to prosecute the petitioner/ accused for the offence under section 124A of the IPC, 1860 which is a mandatory requirement for the Court to take cognizance of such offence. When that be so, whether the contents of the poster and its publication by the accused, even if it is at his instance, to determine whether any offence of sedition is made out thereof is not called for. Section 196 of the Cr PC, 1973 mandates that a complaint for such offence should be expressly authorised by the Government, and if not, the Court cannot take cognizance of such offence against the accused person. Committal proceedings taken over the final report laid before the Court without production of order of sanction satisfying the statutory mandate is clearly unsustainable.^{97.}

62. Subs. by Act 4 of 1898, section 4, for section 124A. Earlier section 124A was inserted by Act 27 of 1870, section 5.

63. The words "Her Majesty or" omitted by the A.O. 1950. The words "or the Crown Representative" ins. after the word "Majesty" by the A.O. 1937 were omitted by the A.O. 1948.

64. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

65. The words "or British Burma" omitted by the A.O. 1948. Earlier the words "or British Burma" were inserted by the A.O. 1937.

66. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life or any shorter term" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

67. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .

68. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, AIR 2003 SC 4427 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : JT 2003 (1) SC 200 : 2003 Cr LJ 5021 .

69. Kedar Nath Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1962 SC 955 [LNIND 1962 SC 21] : [1962] Supp 2 SCR 76.

70. Common Cause v UOI, Writ Petitions Civil No. 683/2016.

71. Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1785 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] : (1995) 3 SCC 214 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] .

72. Asit Kumar Sen Gupta v State of Chhattisgarh, 2012 (NOC) Cr LJ 384 (Chh).

73. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 528, (PC); BG Tilak, (1908) 10 Bom LR 848 [LNIND 1908 BOM 85] ; Amba Prasad, (1897) 20 All 55 , 69, FB; Luxman, (1899) 2 Bom LR 286 ; Shankar, (1910) 12 Bom LR 675 [LNIND 1910 BOM 66] .

74. Niharendu Dutt Majumdar, (1942) FCR 38 .

75. Sadashi v Narayan v State, (1947) 49 Bom LR 526 , (1947) Bom 110, 74 IA 89.

76. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 528, PC; Besant v Advocate-General of Madras, (1919) 43 Mad 146 : 21 Bom LR 867 PC; Wallace-Johnson, (1940) AC 231 .

77. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .
78. Pratap "Urdu Daily of New Delhi", (1949) 2 Punj 348.
79. Kedar Nath, AIR 1962 SC 955 [LNIND 1962 SC 21] : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 103 .
80. Naurang Singh, 1986 Cr LJ 846 (P&H).
81. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : (1997) 7 SCC 431 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : 1997 Cr LJ 4091 : (1997) 1 SCC (Cr) 1094.
82. Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1785 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] : (1995) 3 SCC 214 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] .
83. P Nedumaran v State, 2003 Cr LJ 4388 (Mad).
84. Naurang Singh v Union Territory, Chandigarh, 1986 Cr LJ 846 (PH).
85. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 129; Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal 35 , 41.
86. Raghubir Singh, 1987 Cr LJ 157 : AIR 1987 SC 149 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] : (1986) 4 SCC 481 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] .
87. Foster, 198.
88. Suresh Chandra Sanyal, (1912) 39 Cal 606 . Recovery of seditious material in the shape of letters is enough though they were not written by the person carrying them. Raghubir Singh v State of Bihar, 1987 Cr LJ 157 : AIR 1987 SC 149 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] : (1986) 4 SCC 481 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] .
89. Hardik Bharatbhai Patel v State of Gujarat, 2016 Cr LJ 225 (Guj) : 2016 (1) RCR (Criminal) 542.
90. Alexander M Sullivan, (1868) 11 Cox 44, 51.
91. Indra Das v State of Assam, (2011) 3 SCC 380 [LNIND 2011 SC 164] : 2011 Cr LJ 1646 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 1150 : (2011) 4 SCR 289 [LNIND 2011 SC 164] ; State v Raneef, (2011) 1 SCC 784 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : AIR 2011 SC 340 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : 2011 Cr LJ 982 .
92. Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal 35 , 44; Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 137.
93. Alexander M Sullivan, (1886) 11 Cox 44.
94. Apurba Krishna Bose, (1907) 35 Cal 141 .
95. Ibid.
96. Balbir Singh v State of UP, AIR 2000 SC 464 : 2000 Cr LJ 590 .
97. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

62. [[s 124A] Sedition.

Whoever, by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts

to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards, 63.[*] the Government established by law in 64.[India], 65.[] shall be punished with 66.[imprisonment for life], to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1.*—The expression "disaffection" includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.*—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.*—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.]

COMMENT—

The offence under section 124A captioned as 'Sedition' is closely allied to treason – an offence against the State. Many personalities including the Father of the Nation and several freedom fighters have been tried and punished during the imperial rule under the above section. How far in a democratic set-up publishing or preaching of protest even questioning the foundation of the form of Government could be imputed as causing disaffection towards the Government and thus, committing of any offence

under Chapter VI of the IPC, 1860 has to be examined within the letter and spirit of the Constitution and not as previously done under the imperial rule.⁶⁷

Sedition in itself is a comprehensive term, and it embraces all those practices, whether by word, deed, or writing, which are calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the State, and lead ignorant persons to endeavour to subvert the Government and laws of the country. The objects of sedition generally are to induce discontent and insurrection, and stir up opposition to the Government, and bring the administration of justice into contempt; and the very tendency of sedition is to incite the people to insurrection and rebellion.

Sedition has been described as disloyalty in action, and the law considers as sedition all those practices which have for their object to excite discontent or dissatisfaction, to create public disturbance, or to lead to civil war; to bring into hatred or contempt the Sovereign or the Government, the laws or constitutions of the realm, and generally all endeavours to promote public disorder.⁶⁸

[s 124A.1] Constitutional Validity.—

The Supreme Court, in Kedar Nath Singh v State of Bihar,⁶⁹ held that this section is not unconstitutional and opined that only when it is construed that the words, written or spoken, etc. which have the pernicious tendency or intention of creating public disorder or disturbance of law and order the law steps in to prevent such activities in the interest of public order, then only the section strikes the correct balance between individual fundamental rights and the interest of public order. The Court also held that a citizen has a right to say or write whatever he likes about the Government, or its measures, by way of criticism or comment, so long as he does not incite people to violence against the Government established by law or with the intention of creating public disorder.

The Supreme Court in a later Order in *Common Cause v UOI*⁷⁰ ordered that the authorities while dealing with the offences under section 124A of the IPC, 1860 shall be guided by the principles laid down by the Constitution Bench in Kedar Nath Singh.

Section 124A]

[s 124A.2] Ingredients.—

This section requires two essentials:—

1. Bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection towards the Government of India.
2. Such act or attempt may be done (i) by words, either spoken or written; or (ii) by signs; or (iii) by visible representation.

1. Bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt, or exciting or attempting to excite disaffection towards the Government of India.—A plain reading of the section would show that its application would be attracted only when the accused brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards the Government established by law in India, by words either written or spoken or visible signs or representations, etc.⁷¹. Necessary ingredient to attract punishment under section 124A, IPC, 1860, appears to be the effort of bringing or attempting to bring into hatred or contempt to excite or attempt to excite disaffection towards the Government established by law in India by words, either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representation or otherwise.⁷² The offence does not consist in exciting or attempting to excite mutiny or rebellion, or any sort of actual disturbance, great or small. Whether any disturbance or outbreak was caused by the publication of seditious articles is absolutely immaterial. If the accused intended by the articles to excite rebellion or disturbance, his act would doubtless fall within this section, and would probably fall within other sections of the IPC, 1860. If he tried to excite feelings of hatred or contempt towards the Government, that is sufficient to make him guilty under this section.⁷³ The Federal Court of India had, however, held that the gist of the offence of sedition is incitement to violence; mere abusive words are not enough.⁷⁴ The view of the Federal Court was subsequently overruled by the Privy Council,⁷⁵ as being opposed to the view expressed in several cases.⁷⁶ comments, however strongly worded expressing, disapprobation of actions of Government, without exciting those feelings which generate the inclination to cause public disorder by acts of violence, would not be penal. In other words, disloyalty to Government established by law is not the same thing as commenting in strong terms upon the measures or acts of Government, or its agencies, so as to ameliorate the condition of the people or to secure the cancellation or alteration of those acts or measures by lawful means, that is to say, without exciting those feelings of enmity or disloyalty which imply excitement to public disorder or the use of violence.

In appreciating whether the act done by the accused by words "either spoken or written or by signs or by misrepresentation or otherwise" one cannot shut one's eyes to changes in political consumptions which have taken place over the course of time after the aforesaid penal provision section 124A was included in the IPC, 1860 and the declared objective of the Government of the day. Very often, the demarcating line between political criticism of the Government and those causing disaffection against the Government is thin and waving.⁷⁷

It is not an essential ingredient of sedition that the act done should be an act which is intended or likely to incite to public disorder.⁷⁸ But this view of the law does no longer seem to be correct, in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in Kedar Nath's case,⁷⁹ wherein Sinha, CJ observed:

In this very case it was further held that viewed in the context of antecedent history of the legislation, its purpose and the mischief it seeks to suppress the provisions of section 124A and section 505 of the IPC, 1860 should be limited in their application to acts involving intention or tendency to create disorder or disturbance of law and order or incitement to violence. Where the propaganda secretary of a Gurdwara addressed a gathering of Sikhs, some of whom were wearing black clothes and turbans, and in course of his speech though he did not give direct incitement to violence but he nevertheless gave exaggerated figures of casualties following Army action in Punjab, it was held that it would be quite proper to infer from the text and tenor of the speech made by the accused that the same was intended to bring the Government into contempt with the likelihood of eruption of violence and public disorder contemplated in Kedarnath's case. In the circumstances, his petition for quashing the criminal proceedings against him under section 482, Cr PC, 1973 was rejected.⁸⁰ The decisive ingredient for establishing the offence of Sedition under section 124A, IPC, 1860 is the doing of certain acts which would bring the Government established by law in India into hatred or contempt, etc. In this case, there is not even a suggestion that appellant did anything as against the Government of India or any other Government of the State. The charge framed against the accused contains no averment that accused did anything as against the Government.⁸¹ The prosecution evidence shows that the slogans were raised a couple of times only by the accused and that neither the slogans evoked a response from any other person of the Sikh community nor reaction from people of other communities. Supreme Court found it difficult to hold that upon the raising of such casual slogans, a couple of times without any other act whatsoever, the charge of sedition can be founded.

The casual raising of the slogans, once or twice by two individuals alone cannot be said to be aimed at exciting or attempt to excite hatred or disaffection towards the Government as established by law in India. Section 124A IPC, 1860 would in the facts and circumstances of the case have no application whatsoever and would not be attracted to the facts and circumstances of the case.⁸² The prosecution case is that the accused has delivered a speech creating ill will and promoting enmity among different racial and linguistic groups of Indian people and thereby committed the offences punishable under sections 124(A) and 153(A) of the IPC, 1860. A perusal of the First Information Report and the charge sheet laid by the respondent police would make it abundantly clear that the allegations mentioned therein, if proved, would naturally attract the provisions of sections 124(A) and 153(A) of IPC, 1860.⁸³ State of Punjab and Union Territory, Chandigarh, had been declared Disturbed Area and the extremists activities were going on a large scale in September 1984. The law and order situation had so deteriorated that the Army had to spread out. In this background, it will be proper to infer from the text and tenor of the speech made by the accused that the same was intended and it did tend to bring the Government into contempt with the likelihood of eruption of violence and public disorder.⁸⁴

2. Such act, attempt, etc., may be done by words, either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representation.—Not only the writer of seditious articles but whoever uses in any way words or printed matter for the purpose of exciting feelings of disaffection to the Government is liable under the section, whether he is the actual author or not.⁸⁵

[s 124A.3] 'Written'.—

In Raghubir Singh,⁸⁶ it has been held that for establishing the charge of sedition, it is not necessary that the accused must be the author of the seditious material and that distribution or circulation of seditious material may also be sufficient on the facts and circumstances of the case and even the act of courier is sometimes enough in a case of conspiracy and further that it is also not necessary that a person should be the participant in the conspiracy from start to finish. Disaffection may be excited in a thousand different ways. A poem, an allegory, a drama, a philosophical or historical discussion, may be used for the purpose of exciting disaffection. Seditious writing, while it remains in the hands of the author unpublished, will not make him liable. Publication of some kind is necessary.⁸⁷ Sending of seditious matter by post addressed to a private individual not by name but by designation as the representative of a large body of students amounts to publication if it is opened by anybody.⁸⁸

[s 124A.4] Advise to kill members of police force.—

The Government established by law acts through human agency and admittedly, the police service or force is itself a principal agency for the administration and maintenance of the law and order in the State. When a person makes a statement or gives an advice to resort to violence by killing four to five police officers, he could be said to have criticised the police force or the service en bloc. In such circumstances a prima facie case of waging war against the Government could be said to have been made out.⁸⁹

[s 124A.5] 'Visible representation'.—

Sedition does not necessarily consist of written matter: it may be evidenced by a wood-cut or engraving of any kind.⁹⁰

[s 124A.6] Explanations 2 and 3.—

Both these Explanations have a strictly defined and limited scope. They have no application unless the article in question criticises "the measures of Government" or "administrative or other action of the Government" without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection.

[s 124A.7] Membership in a banned organization.—

Mere membership of a banned organization will not incriminate a person unless he resorts to violence or incites people to violence or does an act intended to create disorder or disturbance of public peace by resort to violence.^{91.}

[s 124A.8] 'Disapprobation'.—

This means simply disapproval. It is quite possible to disapprove of a man's sentiments or actions and yet to like him.^{92.}

[s 124A.9] Liability for extracts from other papers.—

The law does not excuse the publication in newspapers of writings which are in themselves seditious libels, merely because they are copied from foreign newspapers as items of news.^{93.}

[s 124A.10] Liability for letters of correspondents.—

The editor of a newspaper is liable for unsigned seditious letters appearing in his paper.^{94.}

[s 124A.11] Publication of seditious exhibits.—

Republication of a seditious article used as an exhibit in a case of sedition is not justifiable.^{95.}

[s 124A.12] Listening to cassettes.—

Certain accused persons were convicted for listening to some cassettes containing speeches of seditious nature. There was no other evidence to show that they either committed or conspired or attempted to commit or advocated or advised or knowingly facilitated commission of disruptive activities under Terrorist and Disruptive Activities (Prevention) Act (TADA), 1987. Their conviction was set aside.^{96.}

[s 124A.13] Previous Sanction.—

No sanction has been obtained to prosecute the petitioner/ accused for the offence under section 124A of the IPC, 1860 which is a mandatory requirement for the Court to take cognizance of such offence. When that be so, whether the contents of the poster and its publication by the accused, even if it is at his instance, to determine whether any offence of sedition is made out thereof is not called for. Section 196 of the Cr PC, 1973 mandates that a complaint for such offence should be expressly authorised by the Government, and if not, the Court cannot take cognizance of such offence against the accused person. Committal proceedings taken over the final report laid before the Court without production of order of sanction satisfying the statutory mandate is clearly unsustainable.^{97.}

^{62.} Subs. by Act 4 of 1898, section 4, for section 124A. Earlier section 124A was inserted by Act 27 of 1870, section 5.

^{63.} The words "Her Majesty or" omitted by the A.O. 1950. The words "or the Crown Representative" ins. after the word "Majesty" by the A.O. 1937 were omitted by the A.O. 1948.

64. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.
65. The words "or British Burma" omitted by the A.O. 1948. Earlier the words "or British Burma" were inserted by the A.O. 1937.
66. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life or any shorter term" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
67. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .
68. Nazir Khan v State of Delhi, AIR 2003 SC 4427 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : (2003) 8 SCC 461 [LNIND 2003 SC 696] : JT 2003 (1) SC 200 : 2003 Cr LJ 5021 .
69. Kedar Nath Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1962 SC 955 [LNIND 1962 SC 21] : [1962] Supp 2 SCR 76.
70. Common Cause v UOI, Writ Petitions Civil No. 683/2016.
71. Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1785 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] : (1995) 3 SCC 214 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] .
72. Asit Kumar Sen Gupta v State of Chhattisgarh, 2012 (NOC) Cr LJ 384 (Chh).
73. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 528, (PC); BG Tilak, (1908) 10 Bom LR 848 [LNIND 1908 BOM 85] ; Amba Prasad, (1897) 20 All 55 , 69, FB; Luxman, (1899) 2 Bom LR 286 ; Shankar, (1910) 12 Bom LR 675 [LNIND 1910 BOM 66] .
74. Niharendu Dutt Majumdar, (1942) FCR 38 .
75. Sadashi v Narayan v State, (1947) 49 Bom LR 526 , (1947) Bom 110, 74 IA 89.
76. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 528, PC; Besant v Advocate-General of Madras, (1919) 43 Mad 146 : 21 Bom LR 867 PC; Wallace-Johnson, (1940) AC 231 .
77. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .
78. Pratap "Urdu Daily of New Delhi", (1949) 2 Punj 348.
79. Kedar Nath, AIR 1962 SC 955 [LNIND 1962 SC 21] : 1962 (2) Cr LJ 103 .
80. Naurang Singh, 1986 Cr LJ 846 (P&H).
81. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : (1997) 7 SCC 431 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] : 1997 Cr LJ 4091 : (1997) 1 SCC (Cr) 1094.
82. Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1995 SC 1785 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] : (1995) 3 SCC 214 [LNIND 1995 SC 1420] .
83. P Nedumaran v State, 2003 Cr LJ 4388 (Mad).
84. Naurang Singh v Union Territory, Chandigarh, 1986 Cr LJ 846 (PH).
85. Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 129; Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal 35 , 41.
86. Raghubir Singh, 1987 Cr LJ 157 : AIR 1987 SC 149 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] : (1986) 4 SCC 481 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] .
87. Foster, 198.
88. Suresh Chandra Sanyal, (1912) 39 Cal 606 . Recovery of seditious material in the shape of letters is enough though they were not written by the person carrying them. Raghubir Singh v State of Bihar, 1987 Cr LJ 157 : AIR 1987 SC 149 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] : (1986) 4 SCC 481 [LNIND 1986 SC 336] .
89. Hardik Bharatbhai Patel v State of Gujarat, 2016 Cr LJ 225 (Guj) : 2016 (1) RCR (Criminal) 542.
90. Alexander M Sullivan, (1868) 11 Cox 44, 51.
91. Indra Das v State of Assam, (2011) 3 SCC 380 [LNIND 2011 SC 164] : 2011 Cr LJ 1646 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 1150 : (2011) 4 SCR 289 [LNIND 2011 SC 164] ; State v Raneef, (2011) 1 SCC 784 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : AIR 2011 SC 340 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : 2011 Cr LJ 982 .
92. Jogendra Chunder Bose, (1891) 19 Cal 35 , 44; Bal Gangadhar Tilak, (1897) 22 Bom 112, 137.

93. Alexander M Sullivan, (1886) 11 Cox 44.
94. Apurba Krishna Bose, (1907) 35 Cal 141 .
95. Ibid.
96. Balbir Singh v State of UP, AIR 2000 SC 464 : 2000 Cr LJ 590 .
97. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 125] Waging war against any Asiatic Power in alliance with the Government of India.

Whoever wages war against the Government of any Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the ⁹⁸[Government of India] or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, shall be punished with ⁹⁹[imprisonment for life], to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

COMMENT—

Waging war against Asiatic power.—This section restrains a person from making India the base of intrigues and enterprise for the restoration of deposed rulers or other like purposes. The fulfilment of the obligations of the State to allies and friendly Powers requires that the abetment of such schemes by its subjects whether by furnishing supplies or otherwise should be forbidden.¹⁰⁰ "One Sovereign power is bound to respect the subjects and the rights of all other sovereign powers outside its own territory".¹⁰¹ This section, however, does not affect India's right as sovereign nation to offer political asylum to a deposed ruler.

⁹⁸. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

⁹⁹. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

¹⁰⁰. M & M 105.

¹⁰¹. Jameson, (1896) 2 QB 425, 430.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 126] Committing depredation on territories of power at peace with the Government of India.

Whoever commits depredation, or makes preparations to commit depredation, on the territories of any power in alliance or at peace with the ¹⁰²[Government of India], shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine and to forfeiture of any property used or intended to be used in committing such depredation, or acquired by such depredation.

COMMENT—

Depredation.—The preceding section provides for waging war against any Asiatic Power in alliance with the Government of India, this section prevents the commission of depredation or plunder on territories of States at peace with the Government of India. The scope of this section is much wider than the preceding section, for it applies to a Power which may or may not be Asiatic.

¹⁰². Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

³¹[s 127] Receiving property taken by war or depredation mentioned in sections 125 and 126.

Whoever receives any property knowing the same to have been taken in the commission of any of the offences mentioned in sections 125 and 126, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine and to forfeiture of the property so received.

COMMENT—

This section applies to those persons who knowingly receive any property obtained by waging war with a Power at peace with the Government of India or by committing depredation on its territories.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 128] Public servant voluntarily allowing prisoner of State or war to escape.

Whoever, being a public servant and having the custody of any State prisoner¹ or prisoner of war², voluntarily allows such prisoner to escape from any place in which such prisoner is confined, shall be punished with ¹⁰³[imprisonment for life], or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

Allowing escape to prisoners.—This section and section 225A provide for one kind of offence. In both sections the public servant who has the custody of the prisoner is punished if he voluntarily allows such prisoner to escape. In this section the prisoner must be a State prisoner or a prisoner of war; under section 225A the prisoner may be an ordinary criminal. The offence under this section is thus, an aggravated form of the offence than under section 225A.

1. 'State prisoner' is one whose confinement is necessary in order to preserve the security of India from foreign hostility or from internal commotion, and who has been confined by the order of the Government of India. ¹⁰⁴.

2. 'Prisoner of war' is one who in war is taken in arms. Those who are not in arms, or who being in arms submit and surrender themselves, are not to be slain but to be made prisoners. But it seems those only are prisoners of war who are taken in arms. ¹⁰⁵.

103. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

104. Beng Reg III of 1818; Bom Reg VIII of 1818; Mad Reg II of 1819.

105. M & M 107.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).

II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).

III. Sedition (section 124A).

IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).

V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 129] Public servant negligently suffering such prisoner to escape.

Whoever, being a public servant and having the custody of any State prisoner or prisoner of war, negligently suffers such prisoner to escape from any place of confinement in which such prisoner is confined, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

Negligently suffering prisoners to escape.—The offence under this section is like the one provided in section 128. Under it the escape of the prisoner should be owing to the negligence of the public servant. Section 128 punishes a public servant who voluntarily allows a State prisoner to escape. Section 223 punishes the escape of an ordinary prisoner under similar circumstances.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE

The offences against the State fall into the following groups:—

- I. Waging, or attempting or conspiring to wage, or collecting men and ammunition to wage war against the Government of India (sections 121, 121A, 122, 123).
- II. Assaulting President, or Governor of a State with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power (section 124).
- III. Sedition (section 124A).
- IV. War against a power at peace with the Government of India (section 125) or committing depredations on the territories of such power (sections 125–126).
- V. Permitting or aiding or negligently suffering the escape of, or rescuing or harbouring, a State prisoner (sections 128, 129, 130).

[s 130] Aiding escape of, rescuing or harbouring such prisoner.

Whoever knowingly aids or assists any State prisoner or prisoner of war in escaping from lawful custody, or rescues or attempts to rescue any such prisoner, or harbours or conceals any such prisoner who has escaped from lawful custody, or offers or attempts to offer any resistance to the recapture of such prisoner, shall be punished with ¹⁰⁶[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.*—A State prisoner or prisoner of war, who is permitted to be at large on his parole within certain limits in ¹⁰⁷[India], is said to escape from lawful custody if he goes beyond the limits within which he is allowed to be at large.

COMMENT—

Aiding escape, harbouring escapees.—This section uses words more extensive than those in the two preceding ones which contemplate an escape only from some prison or actual place of custody. Again in the last two sections the offender is a public servant; under this section he may be any person. The scope of this section is much narrower than section 129. This section requires that the rescue or assistance be given "knowingly".

¹⁰⁶. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

¹⁰⁷. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 131] Abetting mutiny, or attempting to seduce a soldier, sailor or airman from his duty.

Whoever abets the committing of mutiny by an officer, soldier,¹ [sailor or airman], in the Army, ² [Navy or Air Force] of the ³ [Government of India] or attempts to seduce any such officer, soldier, ⁴ [sailor or airman] from his allegiance or his duty, shall be punished with ⁵ [imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

⁶ [Explanation.—In this section the words "officer", ⁷ ["soldier", ⁸ ["sailor"] and "airman"] include any person subject to ⁹ [the Army Act, ¹⁰ [the Army Act, 1950¹¹], ¹² [the Naval Discipline Act, ¹³ [] the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934 (34 of 1934)¹⁴], ¹⁵ [the Air Force Act or ¹⁶ [the Air Force Act, 1950]], as the case may be.]

COMMENT—

Aiding mutiny, seduction from duty.—The first part of this section relates to the offence of abetting mutiny. The offence contemplated is an abetment which is not followed by actual mutiny, or which, supposing actual mutiny follows, is not the cause of that mutiny.

The offence of 'mutiny' consists in extreme insubordination, as if a soldier resists by force, or if a number of soldiers rise against or oppose their military superiors, such acts proceeding from alleged or pretended grievances of a military nature. Acts of a riotous nature directed against the government or civil authorities rather than against military superiors seem also to constitute mutiny.¹⁷

1. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor"

2. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

3. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

4. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

5. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

6. Ins. by Act 27 of 1870, section 6.

7. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "and soldier".

8. Ins. by Act 35 of 1934, section 2 and Sch.

9. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "Articles of War for the better government of Her Majesty's Army, or to the Articles of War contained in Act No. 5 of 1869".

10. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "the Indian Army Act, 1911" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
11. Now see the Navy Act, 1957 (62 of 1957).
12. Ins. by Act 35 of 1934, section 2 and Sch.
13. The words "or that Act as modified by" omitted by the A.O. 1950.
14. Now see the Navy Act, 1957 (62 of 1957).
15. Subs. by Act 14 of 1932, section 130 and Sch., for "or the Air Force Act".
16. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "the Indian Air Force Act, 1932" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).
17. M&M 112.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 132] Abetment of mutiny if mutiny is committed in consequence thereof.

Whoever abets the committing of mutiny by an officer, soldier, ^{18.}[sailor or airman] in the Army, ^{19.}[Navy or Air Force] of the ^{20.}[Government of India], shall, if mutiny be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with death or with ^{21.}[imprisonment for life], or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

^{18.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{19.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{20.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

^{21.} Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 133] Abetment of assault by soldier, sailor or airman on his superior officer, when in execution of his office.

Whoever abets an assault by an officer, soldier, ^{22.}[sailor or airman], in the Army, ^{23.}[Navy or Air Force] of the ^{24.}[Government of India], on any superior officer being in the execution of his office, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

Abetment of assault, etc.—This section punishes the abetment of an assault which is not committed. The next section punishes similar abetment where the offence is committed.

^{22.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{23.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{24.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 134] Abetment of such assault, if the assault is committed.

Whoever abets an assault by an officer, soldier, ²⁵[sailor or airman], in the Army, ²⁶[Navy or Air Force] of the ²⁷[Government of India], on any superior officer being in the execution of his office, shall, if such assault be committed in consequence of that abetment be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT—

Where abetted assault committed.—This section punishes the abetment of an assault when such assault is committed in consequence of that abetment. It stands in the same relation to section 133 as section 132 does to section 131.

²⁵ Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

²⁶ Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

²⁷ Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 135] Abetment of desertion of soldier, sailor or airman.

Whoever abets the desertion of any officer, soldier, ^{28.}[sailor or airman], in the Army, ^{29.}[Navy or Air Force] of the ^{30.}[Government of India], shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Abetment of desertion.—The desertion abetted under this section need not take place. Mere abetment is made punishable.

^{28.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{29.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{30.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 136] Harboursing deserter.

Whoever, except as hereinafter expected, knowing or having reason to believe that an officer, soldier, ^{31.}[sailor or airman], in the Army, ^{32.}[Navy or Air Force] of the ^{33.}[Government of India], has deserted, harbours such officer, soldier, ^{34.}[sailor or airman], shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is given by a wife to her husband.

COMMENT—

Harboursing deserter.—A person harbouring a deserter is an 'accessory after the fact'. The gist of the offence is concealment of a deserter to prevent his apprehension. Exception is made only in the case of a wife.

The word 'harbour' is defined in section 52A.

^{31.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{32.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{33.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

^{34.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 137] Deserter concealed on board, merchant vessel through negligence of master.

The master or person in charge of a merchant vessel, on board of which any deserter from the Army, ^{35.}[Navy or Air Force] of the ^{36.}[Government of India] is concealed, shall, though ignorant of such concealment, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, if he might have known of such concealment but for some neglect of his duty as such master or person in charge, or but for some want of discipline on board of the vessel.

COMMENT—

Concealment on board.—This section punishes the master or person in charge of a merchant ship on board of which a deserter has concealed himself. The master is liable even though he is ignorant of such concealment. But some negligence or laxity in the maintenance of discipline on the part of the master has to be made out.

^{35.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{36.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 138] Abetment of act of insubordination by soldier, sailor or airman.

Whoever abets what he knows to be an act of insubordination by an officer, soldier, ³⁷ [sailor or airman], in the Army, ³⁸ [Navy or Air Force] of the ³⁹ [Government of India], shall, if such act of insubordination be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Abetment of insubordination.—In this section it is expressed as part of the definition of the offence that the abettor knows the quality of the act abetted, that is, he knows it to be an act of insubordination.

³⁷. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

³⁸. Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

³⁹. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 138A] [Repealed]

[Application of foregoing sections to the Indian Marine Service.] Repealed by s. 2 and
Sch. of Act XXXV of 1934.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 139] Persons subject to certain Acts.

No person subject to ^{40.}the [Army Act, ^{41.}the [Army Act, 1950, the Naval Discipline Act, ^{42.}[^{43.}[] the Indian Navy \(Discipline\) Act, 1934^{44.}], ^{45.}the [Air Force Act or ^{46.}the [Air Force Act, 1950]]], is subject to punishment under this Code for any of the offences defined in this Chapter.

COMMENT—

Persons subject to these special Acts are punishable under those Acts and not under the Penal Code.

^{40.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "any Article of War for the Army or Navy of the Queen, or for any part of such Army or Navy".

^{41.} Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "the Indian Army Act, 1911" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

^{42.} Ins. by Act 35 of 1934, section 2 and Sch.

^{43.} The words "or that Act as modified" omitted by the A.O. 1950.

^{44.} Now see the Navy Act, 1957 (62 of 1957).

^{45.} Subs. by Act 14 of 1932, section 130 and Sch., for "or the Air Force Act".

^{46.} Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch., for "the Indian Air Force Act, 1932" (w.e.f. 1-4-1951).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VII OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE

[s 140] Wearing garb or carrying token used by soldier, sailor or airman.

Whoever, not being a soldier, ^{47.}[sailor or airman], in the Military, ^{48.}[Naval or Air] service of the ^{49.}[Government of India], wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by such a soldier, ^{50.}[sailor or airman] with the intention that it may be believed that he is such a soldier, ^{51.}[sailor or airman], shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

Wearing garb or carrying token.—The gist of the offence herein made penal is the intention of the accused wearing the dress of a soldier for the purpose of inducing others to believe that he is in service at the present time. Merely wearing a soldier's garb without any specific intention is no offence. Cast-off uniforms of soldiers are worn by many men. Actors put on different military uniforms.

^{47.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{48.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or Navy".

^{49.} Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Queen".

^{50.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

^{51.} Subs. by Act 10 of 1927, section 2 and Sch. I, for "or sailor".

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 141] Unlawful assembly.

An assembly of five or more¹ persons is designated an "unlawful assembly", if the common object² of the persons composing that assembly is—

First.*—To overawe by criminal force, or show of criminal force, ¹[the Central or any State Government or Parliament or the Legislature of any State], or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant; or

Second.*—To resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process; or Third.—To commit any mischief or criminal trespass, or other offence; or

Fourth.*—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to any person, to take or obtain possession of any property, or to deprive any person of the enjoyment of a right of way, or of the use of water or other incorporeal right of which he is in possession or enjoyment, or to enforce any right or supposed right; or

Fifth.*—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do.

Explanation.*—An assembly which was not unlawful when it assembled, may subsequently become an unlawful assembly.

1. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for The Central or any Provincial Government or Legislature.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 142] Being member of unlawful assembly.

Whoever, being aware of facts which render any assembly an unlawful assembly, intentionally joins that assembly, or continues in it, is said to be a member of an unlawful assembly.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 143] Punishment.

Whoever is a member of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Unlawful assembly.—An 'assembly' is a company of persons assembled together in a place, usually for a common purpose. Court is concerned with an 'unlawful assembly'. Wherever five or more persons commit a crime with a common object and intent, then each of them would be liable for commission of such offence, in terms of sections 141 and 149, Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\). It is not possible to define the constituents or dimensions of an offence under section 149 simpliciter with regard to dictionary meaning of the words 'unlawful assembly' or 'assembly'.² An assembly of five or more persons having as its common object any of the five objects enumerated under section 141 of IPC is deemed to be an unlawful assembly. Membership of an unlawful assembly is itself an offence punishable under section 143, whereas other species of the said offence are dealt with under section 143–145 of IPC. Similarly, sections 146–148 of IPC deals with the offence of rioting which is defined to be use of force or violence by any member thereof. Section 149 makes every member of an unlawful assembly liable for offence that may be committed by any member of the unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly or for commission of any offence that the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object of the assembly.³ To bring a case within section 149 of IPC some essential features must be present. First, there must be an existence of an unlawful assembly within the meaning of section 141 of IPC. This is a mixed question of fact and law.⁴

The underlying principle of section 141 is that law discourages tumultuous assemblage of men to preserve the public peace. Section 141 defines what an 'unlawful assembly' is. Section 142 gives the connotations of 'a member of an unlawful assembly'. Section 143 punishes tumultuous assemblies as they endanger public peace. It does not require that the purpose of the unlawful assembly should have been fulfilled.

The essence of an offence under this section is the combination of five or more persons, united in the purpose of committing a criminal offence, and the consensus of purpose is itself an offence distinct from the criminal offence which these persons agree and intend to commit.⁵ Unlike the Indian law contained in section 141, IPC, 1860, an unlawful assembly at common law need to have only three or more persons who must assemble together for the common purpose of committing an offence involving use of violence, or for achieving a lawful or unlawful object in such a manner so as to lead to a reasonable apprehension of a breach of peace as a direct result of their conduct.⁶ Thus, under section 141, IPC, especially under sub-section (3) thereof, use of violence or likelihood of breach of the peace is not at all a sine qua non for an offence of unlawful assembly but this is so under the common law. So under the common law, even if the purpose of the assembly is unlawful, the offence of being an unlawful assembly would not be committed if there is no likelihood of breach of the peace and this would be so even if the unlawful common purpose is carried out.

[s 143.1] Ingredients.—

An 'unlawful assembly' is an assembly of five or more persons if their common object is—

1. to overawe by criminal force
 - (a) the Central Government, or
 - (b) the State Government, or
 - (c) the Legislature, or
 - (d) any public servant in the exercise of lawful power;
2. to resist the execution of law or legal process;
3. to commit mischief, criminal trespass, or any other offence;
4. by criminal force—
 - (a) to take or obtain possession of any property, or

- (b) to deprive any person of any incorporeal right, or
 - (c) to enforce any right or supposed right;
5. by criminal force to compel any person—
- (a) to do what he is not legally bound to do, or
 - (b) to omit what he is legally entitled to do.

1. 'Five or more'.— The Constitution Bench in *Mohan Singh's case*⁷ held that it is only where five or more persons constituted an assembly that an unlawful assembly is born, provided, of course, the other requirements of the said section as to the common object of the persons composing that assembly are satisfied. In other words, it is an essential condition of an unlawful assembly that its membership must be five or more. The Supreme Court has endorsed the view that the number of injuries caused and the number of persons who were inflicted with those injuries, (in this case, three persons were attacked and they sustained 13, 12 and 7 injuries respectively) can give a clue to the fact that more than three persons must necessarily have participated in the attack.⁸

[s 143.2] Effect of acquittal of some accused:

In Mohan Singh v State of Punjab,⁹ the Supreme Court considered the question of acquittal of two of the accused charged for the offence under section 302 read with section 149, on the conviction of the remaining three accused. If five or more persons are named in the charge as forming an unlawful assembly and the evidence adduced by the prosecution proves that charge against all of them that is a very clear case where section 149 could be invoked. "It is however not necessary that five or more persons must be convicted before a charge under section 149 could be successfully brought home to any members of the unlawful assembly. It may be that less than five persons may be charged and convicted under section 302 read with section 149, if the charge is that persons before the court along with others named, constituted an unlawful assembly. Other persons so named may not be available for trial along with their companions for the reason that they have absconded. In such a case, the fact that less than five persons are before the court does not make section 149 inapplicable. Therefore, in order to bring home a charge under section 149, it is not necessary that five or more persons must necessarily be brought before the court and convicted ..." In view of the decision of the Constitution Bench in Mohan Singh's case,¹⁰ even after acquittal of the two accused from all the charges levelled against them, if there is any material that they were members of the unlawful assembly, the conviction under section 302 can be based with the aid of section 149.¹¹

Where two of the six accused persons were acquitted without any finding that some other known or unknown persons also were involved in the assault, the remaining four accused persons could not be said to be members of an unlawful assembly.¹² Where a group of persons, differently armed, assaulted a man with the common object of killing him and all the assailants accused except one were acquitted, it was held that the remaining sole accused could not be convicted and sentenced under section 302 with the aid of section 149. The court cannot carve out a new case.¹³ If out of an unlawful assembly consisting of seven named persons four are acquitted, the other three cannot be convicted of rioting as members of an unlawful assembly.¹⁴ They may, however, be convicted of the principal offence with the aid of section 34, IPC, 1860.¹⁵ Where presence of eight persons in the course of assault was established, four of them were given benefit of doubt but there was no finding anywhere to the effect that only four persons had taken part in the assault, conviction of the remaining four on the charge of forming unlawful assembly was not illegal.^{16.}

2. 'Common object'.— The common object of an unlawful assembly depends firstly on whether such object can be classified as one of those described in section 141; secondly, such common object need not be the product of prior concert but may form on spur of the moment, finally, nature of such common object is a question of fact to be determined by considering the nature of arms, nature of assembly, behaviour of members, etc.^{17.} Mere presence in an assembly does not make a person a member of an unlawful assembly unless it is shown that he had done something or omitted to do something which would make him a member of the unlawful assembly or unless the case falls under section 142.^{18.} Thus, merely because some persons assembled, all of them cannot be condemned 'ipso facto' as being members of that unlawful assembly.^{19.} At the same time it cannot be laid down as a general proposition of law that unless an overt act is proved against a person, who is alleged to be a member of unlawful assembly, it cannot be said that he is a member of an assembly. The only thing required is that he should have understood that the assembly was unlawful and was likely to commit any of the acts which fall within the purview of section 141.^{20.} Further the prosecution has to prove that the commission of the offence was by any member of an unlawful assembly and such offence must have been committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly or such that the members of the assembly knew that it was likely to be committed.^{21.} The word 'object' means the purpose or design and, in order to make it 'common', it must be shared by all. In other words, the object should be common to the persons, who compose the assembly, that is to say, they should all be aware of it and concur in it. A common object may be formed by express agreement after mutual consultation, but that is by no means necessary. It may be formed at any stage by all or a few members of the assembly and the other members may just join and adopt it. Once formed, it need not continue to be the same. It may be modified or altered or abandoned at any stage.^{22.}

Section 142 postulates that whoever, being aware of facts which render any assembly an unlawful one, intentionally joins the same would be a member thereof. Whether an assembly is unlawful one or not, would depend on various factors, the principal amongst them being a common object formed by the members thereof to commit an offence specified in one or the other clauses contained in section 141.^{23.} In a free fight between two groups resulting in death of one person and injuries to several others on both the sides, it was held that the formation of an unlawful assembly was not impossible but the common object of such an assembly cannot be determined on the basis of serious injury by one of them.^{24.} The accused along with about six–eight others forcibly entered into the office of a union leader and assaulted him but the victim did not receive any serious injury inside the union office and managed to escape. Later on in the open space some members of the crowd surrounded and attacked him and dealt fatal blows. It was held that the accused who entered the union office did not share the common object of committing murder of the deceased. They were convicted under sections 326/149.^{25.} Where the accused forming an unlawful assembly assaulted the deceased but the injury caused by only one accused proved to be fatal and the injuries caused by the others were found to be simple, it was held that the common object of the unlawful assembly was only to cause grievous hurt and only the accused who caused fatal injury was liable to be convicted for murder and others under section 326/149.^{26.}

The Supreme Court observed on the facts of a case that given the circumstances in which the assembly came together and given that all parties were aware that among them, certain members carried weapons like guns and spear, even if it was held that common object of assembly was not to cause death, it would not be an unreasonable inference that all accused knew that the offence of culpable homicide was likely to be committed in prosecution of such an armed assault on another group which was not prepared to withstand such an attack, bringing about application of second portion of section 149. Therefore, it was held, that any of the accused found to have participated in the assault should be held guilty under section 141 and 149.^{27.}

[s 143.3] Determination of Common object:

Determination of the common object of an unlawful assembly or the determination of the question whether a member of the unlawful assembly knew that the offence that was committed was likely to be committed is essentially a question of fact that has to be made keeping in view the nature of the assembly, the arms carried by the members and the behaviour of the members at or near the scene and a host of similar or connected facts and circumstances that cannot be entrapped by any attempt at an exhaustive enumeration.^{28.} It is difficult indeed, though not impossible, to collect direct evidence of such knowledge. An inference may be drawn from circumstances such as the background of the incident, the motive, the nature of the assembly, the nature of the arms carried by the members of the assembly, their common object and the behaviour of the members soon before, at or after the actual commission of the crime.^{29.}

[s 143.4] Second clause—Resisting Law or Legal Process.—

Resistance to some law, or legal process, connotes some overt act, and mere words, when there is no intention of carrying them into effect, are not sufficient to prove an intention to resist.^{30.} When an order is lawfully made under the provisions of a statute, that order is law, and resistance to the execution of that law is an offence.^{31.}

Under this clause the act resisted must be a legal act. Where a number of persons resisted an attempt to search a house which was being made by officers, who had not the written order investing them with the power to do so, it was held that the persons resisting the attempted search were not guilty of this offence.^{32.} Assembling together for the common object of rescuing a friend from unlawful police detention has been held by the Supreme Court as not constituting an unlawful assembly.^{33.}

[s 143.5] Third clause.—Committing Criminal Trespass, Mischief, other offence.—

This clause specifies only two offences, viz., mischief and criminal trespass, but the words 'or other offence' seem to denote that all offences are included though only two are enumerated in a haphazard way. In Manga @ Man Singh v State of Uttarakhand, the Supreme Court while considering the application of principle of 'ejusdem generis' to section 141 'third' clause, observed that:

We fail to appreciate as to how simply because the offences mischief or criminal trespass are used preceding the expression "other offence" in Section 141 'third', it should be taken that such offence would only relate to a minor offence of mischief or trespass and that the expression "other offence" should be restricted only to that extent. As pointed out by us above, the offence of mischief and trespass could also be as grave as that of an offence of murder, for which the punishment of life imprisonment can be imposed as provided for under Sections 438, 449, 450 etc. Therefore, we straight away hold that the argument of learned senior counsel for the Appellants to import the principle of 'ejusdem generis' to Section 141 'third', cannot be accepted.^{34.}

[s 143.6] Suleman Bakery Case:

It is a case related to the communal riots of Mumbai in early 1993. Government imposed curfew and the Special Operation Squad (SOS) was called to control the communal riots on information of stone pelting, throwing of glass bottles, acid bulbs and firing from the terrace of Suleman Bakery. It was argued that at any rate SOS was an unlawful assembly on account of the third clause of section 141 of IPC, 1860, and hence, all the discharged accused persons were members of the unlawful assembly and had to be at least charged and inquired into by the courts below. It was argued that the assembly of the police at least till the time they broke open the door was a lawful move, as it was their duty but they should not have broken open the door and trespassed the Suleman bakery; and all those who entered Suleman bakery formulated an unlawful assembly as they illegally trespassed into the Suleman bakery. Since A-1, Shri Tyagi, had ordered them to break open the doors and he was a part of that unlawful assembly who had the common object. The Supreme Court held that they were all the members of the SOS and had the duty to quell the riots. They were not doing anything illegal in coming out and trying to control the riots. Court rejected the argument by holding that a trespass becomes a criminal trespass if it is with an intention to annoy or to do something illegal which is not the case here. There was no question of the so-called entry amounting to criminal trespass.³⁵

[s 143.7] Fourth clause—Application of Criminal Force.—

The act falling within the purview of this clause is made punishable owing to the injurious consequences which it is likely to cause to the public peace. This clause does not take away the right of private defence of property. It does not affect clause 2 of section 105, which allows a person to recover the property carried away by theft. It is meant to prevent the resort to force in vindication of supposed rights. It makes a distinction between an admitted claim or an ascertained right and a disputed claim.³⁶

Where five or more persons assemble for maintaining by force or show of force a right which they bona fide believe they possess, and not for enforcing by such force or show of force a right or supposed right of theirs, they do not constitute an unlawful assembly.³⁷ An assembly of five or more persons cannot be designated as an unlawful assembly under this section if its object is to defend property by the use of force within the limits prescribed by law.³⁸ But when a body of men are determined to vindicate their rights, or supposed rights, by unlawful force, and when they engage in a fight with men who, on the other hand, are equally determined to vindicate, by unlawful force, their rights or supposed rights, no question of self-defence arises. Neither side is trying to protect itself, but each side is trying to get the better of the other.³⁹

[s 143.8] Fifth clause—Compelling persons to act or omission.—

This clause is very comprehensive and applies to all the rights a man can possess, whether they concern the enjoyment of property or not. There is no reference to 'any right or supposed right' as in the preceding clause.

[s 143.9] Explanation.—

An assembly which is lawful in its inception may become unlawful by the subsequent act of its members.⁴⁰ It may turn unlawful all of a sudden and without previous concert among its members.⁴¹ But illegal acts of one or two members, not acquiesced in by the others, do not change the character of the assembly.⁴² The law on the point as stated above is approved by the Supreme Court in Moti Das.⁴³

[s 143.10] Being member of unlawful assembly.—

Section 142 shows that it is sufficient for the offence of riot to be proved against an individual that the individual should remain in an unlawful assembly as soon as he is aware that the assembly is unlawful. The word "continues" in the section means physical presence as a member of the unlawful assembly, that is, to be physically present in the crowd.⁴⁴ This, however, should not be interpreted to mean that mere presence as a curious onlooker or bystander at the scene of the unlawful assembly without sharing its common object would make a person liable under section 142, IPC, 1860, for being a member of an unlawful assembly.⁴⁵ Thus common object cannot be attributed to a person from his mere presence at the scene of the occurrence. There must be some other direct or circumstantial evidence to justify that inference.⁴⁶

For being a member of unlawful assembly it is not necessary that a person must commit some overt act towards the commission of the crime. The test is whether he knows of its common object and continues to keep its company due to his own free will.⁴⁷ Thus, where a large procession of Kannadigas, taken out to voice protest against Maharashtrians, turned violent, started pelting stones and attacking police officers; the procession turned into an unlawful assembly the moment it developed the common object of causing damage to property and injuries to police officers. Thereafter, every person who continued as a member of the assembly became liable for the offence committed by the processionists by virtue of section 149 of IPC, 1860.⁴⁸ If some unidentified members of an unlawful assembly behaved in an unruly manner, the other members in the procession cannot be held guilty of the offence by foisting vicarious liability, merely because they were in the procession.⁴⁹

[s 143.11] CASES.—Enforcement of right by use of criminal force.—Dispute regarding possession of land.—

Where there was a dispute of long standing between the accused and certain other parties regarding possession of certain land, and the accused went to sow the land with indigo, accompanied by a body of men armed with sticks who kept off the opposite party by brandishing their weapons while the land was sowed, it was held that they were guilty of this offence.⁵⁰ Where the accused, who were in possession of the disputed land, went upon it in a large body armed with sticks, prepared in anticipation of a fight, and were reaping the paddy grown by them, when the complainant's party came up and attempted to cut the same, whereupon a fight ensued and one man was seriously wounded and died subsequently, it was held that the common object was not to enforce a right but to maintain undisturbed the actual enjoyment of a right and that the assembly was not therefore unlawful.⁵¹

2. State of Haryana v Shakuntla, (2012) 5 SCC 171 [LNIND 2012 SC 1259] : JT 2012 (4) SC 287 : AIR 2012 (SCW) 2952 : 2012 Cr LJ 2850 .
3. Bharat Soni v State of Chhattisgarh, 2013 Cr LJ 486 (SC) : 2013 (1) Mad LJ (Cr) 94 : 2013 (1) Crimes 66 .
4. Gurmail Singh v State of Punjab, 2013 (4) SCC 228 [LNIND 2012 SC 864] : 2013 (2) SCC (Cr) 369.
5. Matti Venkanna, (1922) 46 Mad 257.
6. Stephen, Digest of Criminal Law, Article 90.
7. Mohan Singh's case, AIR 1963 SC 174 [LNIND 1962 SC 118] : (1963) 1 Cr LJ 100 .
8. Suresh Pal v State of UP, AIR 1981 SC 1161 : 1981 Cr LJ 624 : 1981 All LJ 562 : 1981 Supp SCC 6 .
9. Mohan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1963 SC 174 [LNIND 1962 SC 118] : 1963 (1) Cr LJ 100
10. Supra.
11. Shaji v State, (2011) 5 SCC 423 [LNIND 2011 SC 481] : AIR 2011 SC 1825 [LNIND 2011 SC 481] : 2011 Cr LJ 2935 (SC). See also Roy Fernandes v State of Goa, (2012) 3 SCC 221 [LNIND 2012 SC 86] : 2012 Cr LJ 1542 (SC).
12. Subran v State of Kerala, 1993 Cr LJ 1387 (SC) : AIR 1993 SCW 1014 : (1993) 3 SCC 32 [LNIND 1993 SC 162] , 39.
13. Ram Chandra Chaudhary v State of UP, 1992 Cr LJ 1488 (All). Over a dozen persons prosecuted, others acquitted, only two convicted of whom one died, the remaining one convict entitled to acquittal on the same grounds, see Malkiat Singh v State of Punjab, 1994 Cr LJ 623 : AIR 1993 SCW 4071 .
14. Motiram, (1960) 62 Bom LR 514 ; Kartar Singh, AIR 1961 SC 1787 [LNIND 1961 SC 210] : 1961 (2) Cr LJ 853 .
15. Ram Tahal, 1972 Cr LJ 227 (SC); Amir Hussain, 1975 Cr LJ 1874 : AIR 1975 SC 2211 ; Methala Potturaju v State of AP, (1992) 1 SCC 49 [LNIND 1991 SC 448] : AIR 1991 SC 2214 [LNIND 1991 SC 448] : 1991 Cr LJ 3133 : AIR 1991 SC 2214 [LNIND 1991 SC 448] .
16. Sahebrao Kisan Jadhav v State of Maharashtra, 1992 Cr LJ 339 (Bom) : 1992 (1) Bom CR 423 [LNIND 1991 BOM 410] .
17. Bhanwar Singh v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : AIR 2009 SC 768 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : (2008) 67 AIC 133 .
18. KM Ravi v State of Karnataka, (2009) 16 SC 337 ; Baladin, AIR 1956 SC 181 : 1956 Cr LJ 345 . See also Masalti v State of UP, AIR 1965 SC 202 [LNIND 1964 SC 173] : (1965) 1 Cr LJ 226 ; and Bishambar, AIR 1971 SC 2381 : 1971 Cr LJ 1700 ; followed in Babu Hamidkhan Mestry v State of Maharashtra, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 2355 (Bom) cited in Binay Kumar Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1997 SC 322 [LNIND 1996 SC 2707] : 1997 AIR SCW 78 : (1997) 1 SCC 283 [LNIND 1996 SC 2707] : 1997 Cr LJ 362 , to the effect that where a larger number of persons are accused of committing a crime and are charged with the aid of section 149, the court should be extremely careful in scrutinising the evidence and there should be two, three or more witness who should be consistent. This ruling was applied in Kamaksha Rai v State of UP, AIR 2000 SC 53 [LNIND 1999 SC 885] : 2000 Cr LJ 178 . See also Thankappan Mohanan v State of Kerala, 1990 Cr LJ 1477 ; Chinu Patel v State of Orissa, 1990 Cr LJ 248 (Ori).
19. Uday Singh v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 393 .
20. Raj Nath v State of UP, AIR 2009 SC 1422 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 4 SCC 334 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 1 SCR 336 : JT 2009 (1) SC 373 [LNIND 2009 SC 85] ; (2009) 2 SCC (Cr) 289.
21. Uday Singh v State of MP, AIR 2017 SC 393 .

22. Raj Nath v State of UP, AIR 2009 SC 1422 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 4 SCC 334 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 1 SCR 336 : JT 2009 (1) SC 373 [LNIND 2009 SC 85] : (2009) 2 SCC (Cr) 289.
23. Akbar Sheikh v State of WB, (2009) 7 SCC 415 [LNIND 2009 SC 1106] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 431.
24. Amrik Singh v State of Punjab, 1993 AIR SCW 2482 : 1993 Cr LJ 2857 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 320 .
25. SP Sinha v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1992 SC 1791 : 1992 Cr LJ 2754 : 1993 Supp (1) SCC 658 .
26. Thakore Dolji Vanvirji v State of Gujarat, AIR 1992 SC 209 : 1992 Cr LJ 3953 .
27. Bhanwar Singh v State of MP, (2008) 16 SCC 657 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : AIR 2009 SC 768 [LNIND 2008 SC 1246] : (2008) 67 AIC 133 . There was no right of private defence in the circumstances, the accused persons were aggressors and such persons cannot claim benefit of private defence.
28. Bharat Soni v State of Chhattisgarh, 2013 Cr LJ 486 (SC) 2013 (1) Mad LJ (Cr) 94 : 2013 (1) Crimes 66 .
29. Rajendra Shantaram Todankar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2003 SC 1110 [LNIND 2003 SC 4] : 2003 (2) SCC 257 [LNIND 2003 SC 4] .
30. Abdul Hamid, (1922) 2 Pat 134 (SB).
31. Ramendrachandra Ray, (1931) 58 Cal 1303 .
32. Narain, (1875) 7 NWP 209.
33. State of UP v Niyamat, (1987) 1 SCC 434 : AIR 1987 SC 1652 [LNIND 1987 SC 391] : 1987 Cr LJ 1881 .
34. Manga @ Man Singh v State of Uttarakhand, (2013) 7 SCC 629 [LNIND 2013 SC 529] : 2013 Cr LJ 3332 .
35. Noorul Huda Maqbool Ahmed v Ram Deo Tyagi, (2011) 7 SCC 95 [LNIND 2011 SC 570] : 2011 Cr LJ 4264 : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 31.
36. Gulam Hoosein, (1909) 11 Bom LR 849 .
37. Veerabadra Pillai v State, (1927) 51 Mad 91.
38. Mathu Pandey, (1970) 1 SCR 358 [LNIND 1969 SC 516] : AIR 1970 SC 27 [LNIND 1969 SC 516] .
39. Prag Dat, (1898) 20 All 459 ; Kabiruddin, (1908) 35 Cal 368 ; Maniruddin, (1908) 35 Cal 384 . See also Onkarnath, 1974 Cr LJ 1015 : AIR 1974 SC 1550 [LNIND 1974 SC 154] ; Vishvas v State, 1978 Cr LJ 484 : AIR 1978 SC 414 [LNIND 1978 SC 17] .
40. Khemee Singh, (1864) 1 WR (Cr) 18; Lokenath Kar, (1872) 18 WR (Cr) 2.
41. Ragho Singh, (1902) 6 Cal WN 507.
42. Dinobundo Rai, (1868) 9 WR (Cr) 19.
43. Moti Das, AIR 1954 SC 657 at p 659.
44. Sheo Dayal v State, (1933) 55 All 689 .
45. Baladin, 1956 Cr LJ 345 : AIR 1956 SC 181 ; Hanuman Singh, 1969 Cr LJ 359 (All); Md Shariff, 1969 Cr LJ 1351 (Bom); Musakhan, 1976 Cr LJ 1987 : AIR 1976 SC 2566 ; Muthu Naicker v State of WB, 1978 Cr LJ 1713 (SC). To the same effect, State of Karnataka v Mallu Kallappa Patil, 1994 Cr LJ 952 : AIR 1994 SC 784 : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 352 .
46. R Deb, Principles of Criminology, Criminal Law and Investigation, 2nd Edn, vol II, p 862. See also Akbar Sheikh v State of WB, (2009) 7 SCC 415 [LNIND 2009 SC 1106] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 431; Rattiram v State of MP, through Inspector of Police, 2013 Cr LJ 2353 (SC) : 2013 AIR (SCW) 2456.

47. Apren Joseph, 1972 Cr LJ 1162 (Ker); See also Balwant Singh, 1972 Cr LJ 645 : AIR 1972 SC 860 [LNIND 1972 SC 94] .
48. Kutubuddin Hasansab Mahat, 1977 Cr LJ NOC 155 (Kant); See also Moti Das, 1954 Cr LJ 1708 : AIR 1954 SC 657 ; Sukha, 1956 Cr LJ 923 : AIR 1956 SC 513 [LNIND 1956 SC 30] ; Chandrika Prasad, 1972 Cr LJ 22 : AIR 1972 SC 109 [LNIND 1971 SC 453] .
49. Jayendra Shantaram Dighe v State of Maharashtra, 1992 Cr LJ 2796 (Bom).
50. Peary Mohun Sircar, (1883) 9 Cal 639 .
51. Silajit Mahto, (1909) 36 Cal 865 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 144] Joining unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapon.

Whoever, being armed with any deadly weapon, or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, is a member of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Armed with deadly weapons.—This is an aggravated form of the offence mentioned in the last section. The risk to public tranquillity is aggravated by the intention of using force evinced by carrying arms. The enhanced punishment under this section can only be inflicted on that member of an unlawful assembly who is armed with a weapon of offence.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 145] Joining or continuing in unlawful assembly, knowing it has been commanded to disperse.

Whoever joins or continues in an unlawful assembly, knowing that such unlawful assembly has been commanded in the manner prescribed by law to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Joining or continuing with unlawful assembly.—

This section is connected with section 151, infra. Section 188 of IPC, 1860 provides for the disobedience of any lawful order promulgated by a public servant. Sections 145 and 151 deal with special cases as the disobedience may cause serious breach of the peace. As to the powers of the police to disperse an unlawful assembly, see section 129, Criminal Procedure Code.

[s 145.1] CASES.—

Where an assembly did not by its own conduct become an unlawful assembly by developing common object within the meaning of section 141, IPC, 1860, its members could not be convicted under section 145, IPC, by merely joining or continuing as its members.⁵² It may, however, be added here that members of such an assembly, even though not unlawful, could be prosecuted under section 151, IPC, if the order of dispersal had been lawfully given in the bona fide exercise of police powers under section 129, Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(Cr PC, 1973\), with a view to preventing a breach of the peace.⁵³

⁵². Jagmohan, 1977 Cr LJ 1394 (Ori).

⁵³. R Deb, Op Cit, vol II, pp 834–835; See also Duncan, supra.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 146] Rioting.

Whenever force or violence is used by an unlawful assembly,¹ or by any member thereof, in prosecution of the common object² of such assembly, every member of such assembly is guilty of the offence of rioting.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 147] Punishment for rioting.

Whoever is guilty of rioting, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Rioting.—A riot is an unlawful assembly in a particular state of activity, which activity is accompanied by the use of force or violence. It is only the use of force that distinguishes rioting from an unlawful assembly.⁵⁴ Under the Common law when members of an unlawful assembly actually carry out their unlawful common purpose with violence, so as to cause alarm, they are guilty of riot. For a successful prosecution of a riot case the prosecution must prove:—

- (i) that there were five or more persons;
- (ii) that they had a common purpose;
- (iii) that they had begun to execute such purpose;
- (iv) that they intended to help one another by force, if necessary;
- (v) that they had shown such degree of violence which would alarm at least one person of reasonable courage.

This last mentioned fact need not be proved by calling a person, who has been so alarmed but it may be made out from facts and circumstances of the case in hand.⁵⁵ The ingredients mentioned in item numbers (iv) and (v) above are not to be found at all in section 146 of IPC, 1860. Where some youths exceeding three were found demolishing a wall but disappeared the moment the caretaker of the building appeared at the scene, it was held that they could not be convicted of the offence of riot under the common law as there was no evidence of show of violence sufficient to alarm one person of reasonable firmness and courage.⁵⁶ In the Indian context in this very case the offence of rioting was complete the moment the youths used force to demolish the wall for it was not necessary in the Indian law to use force or violence against a person, far less to cause alarm to a person of reasonable courage and firmness. Force or violence against an inanimate object too comes within the purview of section 146, IPC, 1860.⁵⁷

[s 147.1] Ingredients.—

The following are the essentials of the offence of rioting:—

- (1) That the accused persons, being five or more in number, formed an unlawful assembly.
- (2) That they were animated by a common object.
- (3) That force or violence was used by the unlawful assembly or any member of it in prosecution of the common object.

1. 'Force or violence is used by an unlawful assembly'.—The word 'violence' is not restricted to force used against persons only, but extends also to force against inanimate objects.⁵⁸ The words 'force' and 'violence' in this section connote different and distinct concepts. 'Force' is narrowed down by the definition under section 350 to persons while the word 'violence' includes violence to property and other inanimate objects.⁵⁹

The use of any force, even though it be of the slightest possible character, by any one of an assembly once established as unlawful, constitutes rioting.⁶⁰ Where a member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of the assembly throws down a man and then causes him bodily hurt, the offence of rioting under this section is complete as soon as the man is thrown down by using force and the hurt subsequently caused would come under section 323 or section 325.⁶¹ The essential question in a case under section 147 is whether there was an unlawful assembly of five or more persons. The identity of the persons comprising the assembly is a matter relating to the determination of the guilt of the individual accused and even when it is possible to convict less than five persons only, section 147 still applies, if upon the evidence in the case the Court is able to hold that the person or persons who have been found guilty were members of an assembly of five or more persons, known or unknown, identified or unidentified.⁶² It has been held by the Supreme Court that this section is not attracted where the act in question was done in pursuit of a lawful object. In this case the investigating police party was being led by the witness to a spot for recovering the dead-body. The witness tried to run away and was beaten up with a lathi. He died shortly thereafter. The Supreme Court did not sustain the conviction of the police personnel under this section.⁶³

2. 'In prosecution of the common object'.—Acts done by some members of an unlawful assembly outside the common object of the assembly or of such a nature as the members of the assembly could not have known to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object are only chargeable against the actual perpetrators of those acts.⁶⁴ It is obligatory on the part of the court to examine that if the offence committed is not in direct prosecution of the common object, it yet may fall under second part of section 149, IPC, 1860, if the offence was such as the members knew was likely to be committed. Further inference has to be drawn as what was the number of persons; how many of them were merely passive witnesses; what were their arms and weapons. Number and nature of injuries is also relevant to be considered.⁶⁵

[s 147.2] 'Resistance to illegal warrant'.—

Resistance to the execution of an illegal warrant within reasonable bounds does not amount to rioting; but when the right of resistance is exceeded and a severe injury, not called for, is inflicted, the person who inflicts the injury may be convicted of such injury.⁶⁶

[s 147.3] 'Sudden quarrel'.—

If a number of persons assembled for any lawful purpose suddenly quarrel without any previous intention or design, they do not commit 'riot' in the legal sense of the word.⁶⁷

[s 147.4] 'Fundamental principles in cases of mammoth rioting'.—

(1) Notwithstanding the large number of rioters or of the persons put up in Court for rioting, and the consequent difficulty for the prosecution to name the specific acts attributed to each of the accused, the Court must see to it that all the ingredients required for unlawful assembly and rioting are strictly proved by the prosecution before convicting the particular accused persons.⁶⁸ (2) Spectators, wayfarers, etc., attracted to the scene of the rioting by curiosity, should not be, by reason of their mere presence at the scene of rioting and with the rioters, held to be members of the unlawful assembly or rioters. But of course, if they are proved to have marched with the rioters for a long distance, when the rioters were shouting tell-tale slogans and pelting stones, it will be for them to prove their innocence under section 106 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. (3) It will be very unsafe, in the case of such a large mob of rioters, to rely on the evidence of a single witness speaking to the presence of an accused in that mob for convicting him, especially when no overt act of violence, or shouting of slogan, or organising the mob, or giving orders to it or marching in procession with it, or other similar thing is proved against him. In a big riot by hundreds of persons, it is very easy even to mistake one person for another, and to implicate honestly really innocent persons, and even, to mistake persons seen elsewhere as having been seen there. An ordinary rule of caution and prudence will require that an accused person identified only by one witness, and not proved to have done any overt act, etc., as described above, should be acquitted, by giving him the benefit of the doubt. (4) Where there are acute factions based on either agrarian disputes and troubles or on political wrangling and rivalry or on caste divisions or on divisions of the "haves" and the "have-nots," the greatest care must be exercised before believing the evidence of a particular witness belonging to one of these factions against an accused of the opposite view. This principle becomes of special importance when there are no overt acts, etc., proved, and when there are only one or two witnesses speaking to the presence of the accused among the rioters, and they belong to the classes or factions opposed to the accused. (5) Mere followers in rioting deserve a much more lenient sentence than leaders, who mislead them into such violent acts, by emotional appeals, slogans and cries.^{69.}

[s 147.5] Offence Compoundable:

When an offence is compoundable under section 320 of Cr PC, 1973, and where the accused is liable under section 34 or 149 of IPC \(45 of 1860\) it may be compounded in like manner.^{70.}

[s 147.6] CASES.—

Where several Hindus, acting in concert, forcibly removed an ox and two cows from the possession of a Mohammedan, not for the purpose of causing 'wrongful gain' to themselves or 'wrongful loss' to the owner of the cattle, but for the purpose of preventing the killing of the cows, it was held that they were guilty of rioting.^{71.} There was a dispute about the possession of a certain land between the complainant and the accused. The complainant dug a well with a view to cultivate the said land. The accused forcibly entered on the land and damaged the well. It was held that the accused were guilty under this section as an accused person is not entitled to go upon his own land and by violence destroy the property of the complainant, even though a trespasser.^{72.}

[s 147.7] No unlawful assembly.—

The accused on receiving information that the complainant's party were about to take forcible possession of a plot of their land, collected a number of men, some of whom were armed, and went to the land. While they were engaged in ploughing, the complainant's party came up and interfered with the ploughing. A fight ensued, in the course of which one of the complainant's party was grievously wounded and subsequently died, and two of the accused's party were hurt. It was held that the accused were justified in taking such precautions as they thought were required to prevent the aggression, and that they were not members of an unlawful assembly.^{73.}

[s 147.8] Free fight.—

In a free fight there cannot be said to be any formation of an unlawful assembly and common intention. Each accused will be responsible for his individual act.^{74.}

[s 147.9] Separate trials.—

Where two opposite factions commit a riot, it is illegal to treat both parties as constituting one unlawful assembly and to try them together, as they cannot have one common object within the meaning of section 141; each party should be tried separately.⁷⁵

54. Rasul, (1888) PR No. 4 of 1889.
55. Sharp, Johnson, (1957) 1 QB 522, per Lord Goddard, CJ.
56. Field v Metropolitan Police Receiver, (1907) 2 KB 853.
57. Kalidas, 48 Cr LJ 351 (Cal).
58. Samaruddi, (1912) 40 Cal 367.
59. Lakshmiammal v Samiappa, AIR 1968 Mad 310 [LNIND 1967 MAD 171]; Kalidas, 48 Cr LJ 351 (Cal).
60. Koura Khan v State, (1868) PR No. 34 of 1868; Ramadeen Doobay, (1876) 26 WR (Cr) 6.
61. Parmeshwar, (1940) 16 Luck 51.
62. Kapildeo Singh, (1949–1950) FCR 834 : 52 Bom LR 512.
63. Maiku v State of UP, AIR 1989 SC 67 : 1989 Cr LJ 360 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 25.
64. Agra, (1914) PR No. 37 of 1914. Vishal Singh v State of MP, AIR 1998 SC 308 [LNIND 1997 SC 1362] : 1998 Cr LJ 505. See also Kania v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 50 (Raj). Bhanwarlal v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 3489 (Raj), fight between main accused and deceased over possession of land, other persons who were present at the spot and played no role could not be roped in.
65. Ramachandran v State, (2011) 9 SCC 257 [LNIND 2011 SC 854] : AIR 2011 SC 3581 [LNIND 2011 SC 854] : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 677.
66. Uma Charan Singh, (1901) 29 Cal 244.
67. Khajah Noorul Hoossein v C Fabre-Tonnerre, (1875) 24 WR (Cr) 26; State of UP v Jodha Singh, AIR 1989 SC 1822 : 1989 Cr LJ 2113 : (1989) 3 SCC 465, a verbal quarrel converting itself into armed group conflict, held not punishable under this section or section 108.
68. See Sherey v State of UP, 1991 Cr LJ 3289 : AIR 1991 SC 2246, where the Supreme Court observed that it would be safe to convict only those whose presence was consistently established by the evidence appearing from the stage of the First Information Report and to whom covert acts of violence were attributed. Kutumbaka Krishna Mohan Rao v Public Prosecutor, AIR 1991 SC 314 : 1991 Cr LJ 1711 : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 509, how presence is to be established. Budhwa v State of MP, AIR 1991 SC 4 [LNIND 1990 SC 580] : 1990 Cr LJ 2597, where the conviction of only four out of fifteen accused was upheld because evidence established only their participation in the attack.
69. Arulanandu, (1952) Mad 728. See also Toseswar Chutia v State of Assam, 2002 Cr LJ 1465 (Gau); Bhima v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 3086 [LNIND 2002 SC 528] (Bom).
70. Section 320 (3), Cr PC, 1973.
71. Raghunath Rai v State, (1892) 15 All 22.

72. Abdul Hussain, (1943) Kar 7 . See Ajab v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1989 SC 827 : 1989 Cr LJ 954 : (1989) Supp (1) SCC 601 .

73. Pachkauri, (1897) 24 Cal 686 ; Fateh Singh, (1913) 41 Cal 43 . K Ashokan v State of Kerala, AIR 1998 SC 1974 [LNIND 1998 SC 223] : 1998 Cr LJ 2834 , names of miscreants not mentioned by eye-witnesses in the FIR, miscreants mentioned in the investigation report which included certain names in different ink. False implication could not be ruled out. Benefit of doubt to accused persons. State of UP v Dan Singh, 1997 Cr LJ 1159 : AIR 1997 SC 1654 [LNIND 1997 SC 162] , the members of marriage party of a scheduled caste, were assaulted by villagers by sticks and stones. Some of them were burnt alive inside the house of the victims. The accused persons were held liable to be convicted under sections 147, 302/149, 436/149, 323/149 and sections 307/149. Lakhu Singh v State of Rajasthan, 1997 Cr LJ 3638 (Raj), lathi is not a deadly weapon, lathi bearing accused could not be convicted under section 148. Conviction altered to one under section 147.

74. Mangal Singh v State of MP, 1996 Cr LJ 1908 (MP).

75. Hossein Buksh, (1880) 6 Cal 96 ; Bachu Mullah v Sia Ram Singh, (1886) 14 Cal 358 ; Chandra Bhuiya, (1892) 20 Cal 537 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 148] Rioting armed with deadly weapon.

Whoever is guilty of rioting, being armed with a deadly weapon or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Rioting with deadly weapons.—Similar to section 144, this section is an aggravated form of the offence mentioned in the previous section. Enhanced punishment is provided for the person who is armed with a deadly weapon while committing the offence of rioting. This section cannot be read with section 149.^{76.}

Where out of the 45 accused persons convicted by the High Court 36 had been identified as members of the assembly by a solitary witness, the Supreme Court said that it was not safe to place reliance in reference to the accused about whom no other witness said that they were a part of the assembly. Their conviction was held to be unsustainable. So far as the remaining accused were concerned, the prosecution had proved the charge against them under section 148 and therefore their acquittal by the High Court was not justified.^{77.}

Where several persons assaulted the victim, the court said that it was not necessary that the death of the victim must be attributed to a particular injury or to a particular assailant. All of them are liable for conviction for causing death of the victim with the common object of the unlawful assembly.^{78.}

[s 148.1] Charge under section 147/148; Conviction under section 149.—

The Constitution Bench in Mahadev Sharma v State of Bihar,^{79.} held that if a charge had been framed under section 147 or section 148 and that charge had failed against any of the accused then section 149 could not have been used against him. The area which is common to sections 147 and 149 is the substratum on which different degrees of liability are built and there cannot be a conviction with the aid of section 149 when there is no evidence of such substratum. The accused have been expressly charged for the offence punishable under section 148, IPC, 1860, and have been acquitted thereunder, they cannot be legally convicted for the offence punishable under section 302 read with section 149, IPC. It is so because the offence of rioting must occur when members are charged with murder as the common object of the unlawful assembly. The offences under sections 147 and 148 are distinct offences.^{80.} Section 148, IPC creates liability on persons armed with deadly weapons and is a distinct offence and there is no requirement in law that members of unlawful assembly have also to be charged under section 148, IPC for legally recording their conviction under section 302 read with section 149, IPC. However, where an accused is charged under section 148, IPC and acquitted, conviction of such accused under section 302 read with section 149, IPC could not be legally recorded.^{81.}

^{76.} Vasu Pillai v State, 1956 Cr LJ 1358 ; Nand Kishore v State, AIR 1961 Ori. 29 [LNIND 1959 ORI 52] ; Re VS Reddy, (1963) 2 Cr LJ 70 .

^{77.} State of AP v Rayaneedi Sitharamaiah, (2008) 16 SCC 179 [LNIND 2008 SC 2492] . Mohd Ishaq v S Kazam Pasha, (2009) 12 SCC 748 [LNIND 2009 SC 1173] : 2009 Cr LJ 3063 , a mob 60–70 persons armed with deadly weapons entered a house and forcibly removed household articles and took them away on a lorry, person at whose instance they acted, held liable.

^{78.} Nand Kishore v State of Bihar, 2000 Cr LJ 5079 (Pat). See also Raju v State of Rajasthan, (2007) 10 SCC 289 [LNIND 2007 SC 591] .

^{79.} Mahadev Sharma v State of Bihar, AIR 1966 SC 302 [LNIND 1965 SC 143] : 1965 (1) SCR 18 : 1966 Cr LJ 1971 .

80. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300].

81. Ankoos v Public Prosecutor High Court of AP, (2010) 1 SCC 94 [LNIND 2010 SC 713] : JT 2009 (14) SC 6 [LNIND 2009 SC 1959] : AIR 2010 SC 566 [LNIND 2009 SC 1959] : 2010 Cr LJ 861 : (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 460.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 149] Every member of unlawful assembly guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object.

If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object¹ of that assembly, or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object, every person who, at the time of the committing of that offence, is a member of the same assembly, is guilty of that offence.

COMMENT—

Liability of every member.—The Supreme Court has held that this section does not create a separate offence but only declares the vicarious liability of all the members of an unlawful assembly for acts done in prosecution of the common object of that assembly or for such offences as the members of the unlawful assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object.⁸² However, Benches of a smaller strength in some cases⁸³ have observed that section 149 creates a specific and distinct offence. Thus the law declared therein by the Benches of a smaller strength cannot be taken as correct legal position.⁸⁴ This section creates a specific and distinct offence.⁸⁵ It is not the intention of the legislature in enacting section 149 to render every member of unlawful assembly liable to punishment for every offence committed by one or more of its members. In order to attract section 149, it must be shown that the incriminating act was done to accomplish the common object of unlawful assembly and it must be within the knowledge of other members as one likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object.⁸⁶ A plain reading of the section shows that the provision is in two parts. The first part deals with cases in which an offence is committed by any member of the assembly "in prosecution of the common object" of that assembly. The second part deals with cases where the commission of a given offence is not by itself the common object of the unlawful assembly but members of such assembly 'knew that the same is likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object of the assembly'.⁸⁷ This section makes both the categories of persons, those who have committed the offence as also those who were members of the same assembly liable for the offences under section 149, IPC, 1860, provided the other requirements of the section are satisfied. That is to say, if an offence is committed by any person of an unlawful assembly, which the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed, every member of such an assembly is guilty of the offence. The law is clear that membership of unlawful assembly is sufficient to hold such participating members vicariously liable. For mulcting liability on the members of an unlawful assembly under section 149, it is not necessary that every member of the unlawful assembly should commit the offence in prosecution of the common object of the assembly. Mere knowledge of the likelihood of commission of such an offence by the members of the assembly is sufficient.⁸⁸ Whenever the court convicts any person or persons of any offence with the aid of section 149, a clear finding regarding the common object of the assembly must be given and the evidence disclosed must show not only the nature of the common object but also that the object was unlawful. If members of the assembly knew or were aware of the likelihood of a particular offence being committed in prosecution of a common object, they would be liable for the same under section 149.⁸⁹ In the absence of such finding as also any overt act on the part of the accused persons, mere fact that they were armed would not be sufficient to prove common object.⁹⁰ Where the moot question as to common objective is proved all the members of unlawful assembly would be vicariously liable for the acts done by the said assembly and thus the separate roles played by all the accused persons need not be examined.⁹¹ Section 149 makes it abundantly clear that if an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly, or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object, every person who, at the time of the committing of that offence is a member of such an assembly, is guilty of that offence, however if a person is a mere bystander, and no specific role is attributed to him, he may not come under the wide sweep contemplated under section 149.⁹² Further where the member had no knowledge of the unlawful object of the assembly or after having gained knowledge, he attempted to prevent the assembly from accomplishing the unlawful object, and after having failed to do so, he disassociated himself from the assembly, the mere participation of him in such an assembly would not be made him liable.⁹³

The section constitutes a substantive offence.⁹⁴

The Supreme Court reiterated the ambit and scope of this principle of liability as follows:

Section 149 IPC provides for vicarious liability. If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of a common object thereof or such as the members of that assembly knew that the offence was likely to be committed in prosecution of that object, every person who at the time of committing that offence was member would be guilty of the offence committed. The common object may be commission of one offence while there may be likelihood of commission of yet another offence, the knowledge whereof is capable of being safely attributable to the members of the unlawful assembly. Whether a member of such unlawful assembly was aware as regards likelihood of commission of another offence or not would depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Background of the incident, the motive, the nature of the assembly, the nature of the arms carried by the members of the assembly, their common object and the behaviour of the members soon before, at or after the actual commission of the crime would be relevant factors for drawing an inference in that behalf.⁹⁵ "Common object" means the purpose or design shared by all the members which may be formed at any stage. It has to be ascertained from the acts and conduct of the individuals concerned and surrounding circumstances.⁹⁶ Common object to commit a murder cannot be inferred only on the basis that the weapons carried by the accused were dangerous.⁹⁷

[s 149.1] Ingredients. –

The section has the following essentials –

1. There must be an unlawful assembly.
2. Commission of an offence by any member of an unlawful assembly.
3. Such offence must have been committed in prosecution of the common object of the assembly; or must be such as the members of the assembly knew to be likely to be committed. If these three elements are satisfied, then only a conviction under section 149, IPC, 1860, may be substantiated, and not otherwise.⁹⁸ Section 149 shall not apply to a person who is merely present in any unlawful assembly, unless he actively participates in offence or does some overt act with the necessary criminal intention or shares the common object of the unlawful assembly.⁹⁹

[s 149.2] Sudden action of one of the member in the assembly; all are not liable:

To the question whether the sudden action of one of the members of the unlawful assembly constitutes an act in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly namely preventing of erection of the fence in question and whether the members of the unlawful assembly knew that such an offence was likely to be committed by any member of the assembly Supreme Court answered in the negative.¹⁰⁰ As a consequence, the effect of section 149 of IPC, 1860, may be different on different members of the same unlawful assembly. Decisions of the Supreme Court in Gangadhar Behera v State of Orissa and Bishnaalias BhiswadebMahato v State of WB,¹⁰¹ similarly explained and reiterated the legal position on the subject.

[s 149.3] Sections 34 and 149. –

There is a difference between object and intention, for though their object is common, the intention of the several members may differ and indeed may be similar only in respect that they are all unlawful, while the element of participation in action, which is the leading feature of section 34, is replaced in section 149 by membership of the assembly at the time of the committing of the offence. Both sections deal with combinations of persons, who become punishable as sharers in an offence. Thus they have a certain resemblance and may to some extent overlap, but section 149 cannot at any rate relegate section 34 to the position of dealing only with joint action by the commission of identically similar criminal acts, a kind of case which is not in itself deserving of separate treatment at all".¹⁰² Section 34 of IPC, 1860 refers to cases in which several persons both do an act and intend to do that act: it does not refer to cases where several persons intend to do an act and some one or more of them do an entirely different act. In the latter class of cases section 149 of the Code may be applicable but section 34 is not.¹⁰³ On the other hand, if five or more persons both do an act and intend to do it, both section 34 and section 149, may apply, since the term "member" in the singular includes the plural also (section 9). In this connection see detailed discussion and cases under sub-head "Distinction between section 34 and section 149, IPC, 1860," under section 34 ante.

[s 149.4] Scope.—

This section is not intended to subject a member of an unlawful assembly to punishment for every offence which is committed by one of its members during the time they are engaged in the prosecution of the common object. It is divided into two parts: (1) an offence committed by a member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly; and (2) an offence such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly, is one which the accused knew would be likely to be committed in prosecution of the common object.¹⁰⁴ The section applies equally in cases where offences are committed by single member of the assembly and in cases where offences are committed by two or more members of the assembly acting in furtherance of a common intention.¹⁰⁵

Once the Court can find that an offence has been committed by some member or members of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object, then whether the principal offender has been convicted for that offence or not, upon the plain wording of this section, the other members may be constructively convicted of that offence, provided they are found to have had the necessary intention or knowledge. It is not correct to say that when a member of an unlawful assembly is to be found constructively guilty of an offence under this section, it must be the same offence of which the principal is convicted and not some other offence.¹⁰⁶

Members of an unlawful assembly may have a community of object only up to a certain point, beyond which they may differ in their objects, and the knowledge possessed by each member of what is likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object will vary, not only according to the information at his command, but also according to the extent to which he shares the community of object, and as a consequence of this the effect of this section may be different on different members of the same unlawful assembly.¹⁰⁷

Before this section can be called in aid, the Court must find with 'certainty' that there were at least five persons sharing the common object. A finding that three of them 'may or may not have been there' betrays uncertainty on this vital point and it consequently becomes impossible to allow the conviction to rest on this uncertain foundation. This is not to say that five persons must always be convicted before this section can be applied. It is possible in some cases for Judges to conclude that though five were unquestionably there the identity of one or more is in doubt. In that case, the conviction of the rest with the aid of this section would be good.¹⁰⁸ Non-applicability of section 149, IPC, 1860, is no bar in convicting the accused persons under section 302, IPC read with section 34 of IPC, if the evidence discloses commission of offence in furtherance of common intention of them all. It would depend on the facts of each case as to whether section 34 or section 149 of IPC or both the provisions are attracted.¹⁰⁹ Where the accused, forming an unlawful assembly, chased and killed a man by inflicting multiple injuries on his body with sharp edged weapons, it was held that circumstances and transaction taken as a whole were sufficient to invoke section 34 or section 149.¹¹⁰

No judgment can be cited as a precedent however similar the facts may be. Each case must rest on its own facts.¹¹¹

The persons acting in self-defence of property cannot be members of an unlawful assembly.¹¹²

1. 'In prosecution of the common object'.—The expression "in prosecution of common object" has to be strictly construed as equivalent to "in order to attain the common object". There must be community of object and the object may exist only up to a particular stage, and not thereafter. Members of an unlawful assembly may have community of object up to certain point beyond which they may differ in their objects and the knowledge, possessed by each member of what is likely to be committed in prosecution of their common object may vary not only according to the information at his command, but also according to the extent to which he shares the community of object, and as a consequence of this the effect of section 149, IPC, 1860, may be different on different members of the same assembly.¹¹³ The word "knew" as used in the second branch of section 149 implied something more than "possibility" and it cannot bear the sense of "might have known". An offence committed in prosecution of common object would generally be the offence which the members of the assembly knew was likely to be committed.¹¹⁴ This phrase means that the offence committed was immediately connected with the common object of the unlawful assembly, of which the accused were members. The act must be one which must have been done with a view to accomplish the common object attributed to the members of the unlawful assembly. Where the common object is established, the unlawful assembly does not cease to be so by merely splitting itself into two groups for launching the attack. Section 149, IPC, 1860, would be clearly applicable to such a case.¹¹⁵

The words "in prosecution of the common object" do not mean "during the prosecution of the common object of the assembly". It means that the offence committed was immediately connected with the common object of the assembly or the act is one which upon the evidence appears to have been done with a view to accomplish the common object attributed to the members of the assembly. The words "in prosecution of the common object" have to be strictly construed as equivalent to "in order to attain common object".¹¹⁶ In the present case,¹¹⁷ the common object of unlawful assembly was to kill a particular person. Two members of the assembly went after him. Sensing danger, he ran into the adjoining room to fetch a spear to defend himself. His wife blocked his way and he could not come out. Frustrated, as they were, the two members of the assembly gunned down two young girls of their intended victim who were then playing in the courtyard outside the house. The conviction of the rest of the members for this murder was set aside as this was neither their common object, nor incidental to that, nor necessary for its attainment.

Vicarious responsibility can be fastened only on proof that the ultimate act was done in pursuance of common object.¹¹⁸

Even where the common object is not developed at the initial stage, it may develop on the spot, eoinstanti. Thus, where it appeared that members of a party divided themselves into small groups and waited for the victim and simultaneously pounced upon him and jointly removed his body, the fact that they did not assemble at one place under any plan, but came there separately, was considered by the Supreme Court to be not of much importance because at the sensitive moment they seemed to be acting in an organised way.¹¹⁹ Where, however, the agreement specifically was only to give a thrashing to the victim, but one of them pulled out a knife and stabbed the victim, it was held that neither at the initial stage nor at the execution stage, could it be said that there was the object to cause a fatal injury so as to make all others liable for the death.¹²⁰

[s 149.5] Change of object.—

Members who shared the original common intention may not be liable when some members adopted a subsequently developed and aggravated common object and acted on it.¹²¹

[s 149.6] CASES.—Prosecution of common object.—

While membership of an unlawful assembly itself is an offence under section 143, IPC, 1860, use of force by members of the unlawful assembly gives rise to the offence of rioting which is punishable either under section 147 or section 148, IPC. Membership of the 4 accused in the unlawful assembly and use of force with dangerous weapons is borne out by the evidence on record. The said facts would make the acquitted accused liable for the offence under section 148 of IPC, 1860.¹²² Where a small compact body of men armed with clubs, and headed by a man carrying a gun, endeavoured to take forcible possession of certain lands, and one of the opponents was shot by their leader, it was held that they were guilty of murder.¹²³

Where in a faction-ridden village the members of one party seeing someone of the other party alighting from a bus emerged together to attack him, it could be easily said that they shared the common object to assault one of their enemies and at that stage the assembly turned into an unlawful assembly.¹²⁴ Where several persons assaulted and caused injuries to the deceased, however except one incised injury on the head, all were lacerated injuries on legs, common object of the unlawful assembly was held to cause grievous hurt and not murder and conviction of the accused was altered from sections 302/149 to sections 326/149.¹²⁵ Where the accused, being members of an unlawful assembly and being armed with sharp edged weapons, used only the blunt sides of their weapons, they were held to share the common object of causing grievous hurt and not murder.⁵⁷ Accused persons variously armed entered a police wireless station after breaking open doors and windows and assaulted inmates. Their individual acts were not known. It was held that all the accused persons must be deemed to have shared the common object of lurking house trespass and could be convicted under sections 149/455.¹²⁶ Where two innocent young girls were killed in a very gruesome manner just only to teach a lesson to their mother over a property dispute, every member of the killing team was held to be equally guilty deserving the maximum penalty of death, it being a case of the "rarest of rare" category.¹²⁷ Where the death of a police officer was caused while he was arresting the accused and those who caught hold of him intended only to prevent him from performing his duty, but the main accused suddenly killed him, it was held that the common object of the unlawful assembly was to deter police from performing their duty and not to commit murder. Their conviction was altered from one under sections 302/149 to one under section

353/149.^{128.} Several persons entered into a conspiracy to commit dacoity during the course of which one of the accused fired a shot which missed the target and hit one of his accomplices who died. The other accused fired a shot and killed one of the inmates of the house. The accused killing the inmate was convicted under sections 302 and 398. The three others were punished under section 398/149, their common object being dacoity and not murder.^{129.}

The accused persons were armed with lathis and guns. They declared on entry into the threshing floor mill that they had come to take away the paddy and, if the owner resisted, they would take life out of him. In these circumstances they caused death. s conviction under section 300 read with section 149 was held to be not illegal.^{130.}

There is no requirement for conviction under the section of assigning definite roles to the accused persons.^{131.}

[s 149.7] Identification of all the five not necessary.—

The section does not require that all the five persons must be identified. Presence of five persons is required to be established with the common object of doing an act. The fact that all of them could not be identified would not affect the application of the section. The eye-witnesses identified only four of them but testified that others were present with weapons at the time and place of occurrence.

[s 149.8] Unlawful assembly and the right of private defence.—

As long as the accused persons exercised their right of private defence, their assembly could not be described as unlawful. But only those accused persons who shared the object of doing something in excess of the right of private defence were liable to conviction with the help of section 149.^{132.} Where the accused persons were acting in the exercise of the right of private defence, the Supreme Court said that they could not be said to have constituted an unlawful assembly. Only one of them caused an injury after the right of private defence had ceased to be available to them. They could not be convicted under section 148 with the aid of section 149.^{133.}

[s 149.9] Overt act on the part of each and every member not necessary.—

The presence of the accused as a part of the unlawful assembly is sufficient for his conviction. The fact that the accused was present at the place of occurrence as a part of the unlawful assembly was not disputed. That was held to be sufficient to hold him guilty even if no overt act was attributed to him.^{134.} This principle may not apply where the presence is such that merely by its reason the person concerned does not become a member of the assembly. This happened in a case in which the names of only 4 persons were mentioned in the complaint. Five other persons were not mentioned because they kept standing at the back without any participation in the incident. But they were also roped in under section 149. The Supreme Court held that they could not be regarded as members of the assembly. Their conviction was impermissible.^{135.} Once a membership of an unlawful assembly is established it is not incumbent on the prosecution to establish whether any specific overt act has been assigned to any accused. Mere membership of the unlawful assembly is sufficient and every member is vicariously liable for the acts done by others either in the prosecution of the common object of the unlawful assembly or such as the members of the unlawful assembly knew were likely to be committed.^{136.}

[s 149.10] Inference of common object.—

The common object of the unlawful assembly has to be inferred from the membership, the weapons used and the nature of the injuries as well as other surrounding circumstances. Intention of members of unlawful assembly can be gathered by nature, number and location of injuries inflicted. In the instant case, repeated gun shots fired by one of accused person on the person of deceased and the injuries caused by lathis by other accused persons on the complainant and his second brother on their heads, clearly demonstrate the objective to cause murder of these persons.^{137.} Common object to commit a murder cannot be inferred only on the basis that the weapons carried by the accused were dangerous.^{138.} The common object of assembly is normally to be gathered from the circumstances of each case such as the time and place of the gathering of the assembly, the conduct of the gathering as distinguished from the conduct of the individual members are indicative of the common object of the gathering. Assessing the common object of an assembly only on the basis of the overt acts committed by such individual members of the assembly is impermissible.^{139.}

[s 149.11] Identification of common object.—

The identification of the common object essentially requires an assessment of the state of mind of the members of the unlawful assembly. Proof of such mental condition is normally established by inferential logic. If a large number of people gather at a public place at the dead of night armed with deadly weapons like axes and fire arms and attack another person or group of persons, any member of the attacking group would have to be a moron in intelligence if he did not know murder would be a likely consequence.^{140.}

[s 149.12] No common object.—

A large body of men belonging to one faction waylaid another body of men belonging to a second faction, and a fight ensued, in the course of which a member of the first mentioned faction was wounded and retired to the side of the road, taking no further active part in the affray. After his retirement a member of the second faction was killed. It was held that the wounded man had ceased to be a member of the unlawful assembly when he retired wounded, and that he could not, under this section, be made liable for the subsequent murder.^{141.} Where the accused persons rushed to the house of K with a view to injure K or inmates of his house but one of the accused attacked M, a woman working in the house causing grievous injuries to her, the other accused persons could not be held vicariously liable with the help of section 149, IPC, 1860, as it was not their common object nor had they any animus against M.^{142.} An unlawful assembly of 50 persons was alleged to have caused two deaths. There were no specific allegations against some of them, or that any criminal act was done by them in furtherance of common intention. It was held that they could not be convicted with the aid of either section 34 or section 149.^{143.} When an accused leaves the place of occurrence and thus ceases to be a member of the unlawful assembly, he cannot be convicted vicariously with the aid of section 149, IPC, for the murder which is committed subsequent to his leaving the scene of crime.^{144.} Where one member fired on being supplied with a bullet by another only the member supplying the bullet was held liable under section 302/149 and others were convicted only under section 325/194, IPC.¹⁴⁵ After a heated exchange of words, the accused went home and came back with a gun accompanied by others who also armed and immediately opened fire at the victim causing his death. Others did not fire at the victim. They fired indiscriminately at others injuring some people. Things happened in a very short span of time. It was held that the others could not have formed an unlawful assembly with the main accused with a common object. The main culprit alone was convicted of murder.¹⁴⁶ Where people collected outside a police-station to voice their protest over police- inaction in connection with the murder of a child, such an assembly could not possibly have any common object to commit criminal trespass, arson, looting, etc., and as such none could be convicted with the aid of section 149, IPC, 1860.¹⁴⁷ All the accused, armed only with lathis, caused multiple injuries to a man who died. All the injuries caused were simple in nature and were on non-vital parts of the body of the deceased, it could not be said that their common object was to kill the deceased. They were held liable to be convicted under section 304, Part II/149 and not under section 302/149.¹⁴⁸

Where the common object of an unlawful assembly was to cause hurt to prosecution witnesses, and the daughter of a witness who came out from inside the house only to save her father sustained an injury at the hands of one of the accused and died, it was held that there could be no common object in the circumstances to commit murder. They were held to be guilty under section 323 read with section 149.¹⁴⁹

[s 149.13] Unlawful assembly and single witness.—

In a case involving an unlawful assembly with a large number of persons, there is no rule of law that states that there cannot be any conviction on the testimony of sole eyewitness unless that the court is of the view that testimony of such eye witness is not reliable. The rule of requirement of more than one witness applies only in a case where a witness deposes in a general and vague manner or in the case of a riot.¹⁵⁰

Direct evidence is generally not available. The existence of common object has to be gathered from the act committed and results flowing from them.¹⁵¹

[s 149.14] Conviction for section 302 simpliciter, when the charge was for section 302 read with section 149 of IPC, 1860:

The Supreme Court in Nanak Chand v State of Punjab,¹⁵² considered the question whether there could be a conviction for the offence under section 302 simpliciter, when the charge was for the offence under section 302 read with section 149 of IPC. It was held that when there is no separate charge for the offence under section 302 simpliciter and charge is only for the offence under section 302 read with 149, the conviction for the offence under section 302 simpliciter is not sustainable. In Suraj Pal v State of UP,¹⁵³ 19 accused were tried for the offences under sections 148, 307 and 302 read with section 149 of IPC. Sessions Court convicted all the accused. In appeal to the High Court, ten accused were acquitted. Conviction and sentence of one accused was affirmed for the offence under sections 148, 307 and 302. Holding that absence of specific charges against the appellant under sections 307 and section 302, IPC in respect of which he was sentenced is a very serious lacuna as framing of a specific and distinct charge in respect of every distinct head of criminal liability constituting an offence is the foundation for a conviction and sentence. The question was referred to the Five Judge Constitution Bench, to determine whether there was a conflict of view between Nanak Chand's case (supra) and Suraj Pal's case (supra) and if so to determine it in Willie Slaney v State of Madhya Pradesh.¹⁵⁴ The Constitution Bench held that there was no conflict of views in the two decisions. It was held that the observations in Nanak Chand (supra), have to be appreciated on close examination of facts. Their Lordships considered the effect of a charge for constructive liability and its difference with a charge for the offence simpliciter and held that there was no prejudice and that the conviction is not invalid because of the nature of the charge. A three Judge Bench in Subran v State,¹⁵⁵ held that when the charge is under section 302 read with section 149 of IPC, without a specific charge having been framed for the offence under section 302 of IPC, as envisaged in law, an accused cannot be convicted for the substantive offence under section 302 of IPC, their Lordships did not consider the Constitution Bench decision in Willie Slaney's case (supra). Later in the review judgment, Subran v State, 1993 \(3\) SCC 722, their lordships reviewed the same as follows:

On a review of the judgment, we find that the opinion expressed is capable of being misinterpreted. The opinion expressed therein was required to be confined to the peculiar facts of the case, but it tends to give an impression as if it is a general exposition of law, which it was not meant to be.

The legal position in the light of the Constitution Bench decision in *Willie Slaney*¹⁵⁶ is clear. If the charge framed discloses the overt act committed by a particular accused, though the charge is for the offence under section 302 read with section 149 of IPC, 1860, and the accused faced trial with the knowledge that the prosecution case is that he committed the particular overt act which caused the death, non-framing of a distinct charge for the offence under section 302 will not cause prejudice to the accused, even though the charge framed was under section 302 read with section 149, IPC. In such a case, even though the charge is for the offence under section 302 read with section 149 of IPC and there is not even an alternate charge for the offence under section 302 simpliciter, when the charge discloses the overt act by a particular accused which caused the death of the victim, if the evidence establishes that, that particular accused inflicted that particular injury which caused the death, he could definitely be convicted for the offence under section 302 simpliciter. Even though there is no specific charge for section 302 simpliciter and the charge is for the offence under section 302 read with 149 of IPC, there could be a conviction under section 302 simpliciter.

[s 149.15] Where no charge framed as substantive offence with aid of either section 34 and section 149.—

Where participation of all the ten accused in the alleged assault on the deceased has been proved by the evidence of witnesses, but no charge insofar as the substantive offence under section 302, IPC, 1860, or under section 307, IPC with the aid of either section 34, IPC and section 149, IPC had been framed and also the evidence on record is not sufficient to attribute any specific injury suffered by the deceased to any particular accused, acquittal of the accused of the offences under section 302, IPC or under section 307, IPC is perfectly justified.¹⁵⁷

[s 149.16] Free fight and overt act.—

It has been held by the Supreme Court that in a case involving free fight, a conviction by resorting to section 149 is not permissible. No particular accused person can be convicted under section 149 unless it can be shown that he caused injuries.¹⁵⁸

[s 149.17] Sentencing.—

The presence of the appellant accused and their participation in the incidence was established. Their conviction under section 326 read with sections 149, 148 was confirmed. But considering their age and the fact that their participation in the incident was minimal, the sentence of six years R1 was reduced to two years R1, confirming the sentence of one year under section 148.^{159.}

[s 149.18] Group rivalries.—

In the case of group rivalries and enmities, there is a general tendency to rope in as many persons as possible as having participated in the assault. In such situations, the courts are called upon to be very cautious and sift the evidence with care. Where after a close scrutiny of the evidence, a reasonable doubt arises in the mind of the court with regard to the participation of any of those who have been roped in, the court would be obliged to give the benefit of doubt to them.^{160.} However, when there are eyewitnesses including injured witness who fully support the prosecution case and proved the roles of different accused, prosecution case cannot be negated only on the ground that it was a case of group rivalry. Group rivalry is double edged sword.^{161.}

[s 149.19] Inference from dangerous weapon.—

Common object to commit a murder cannot be inferred only on the basis that the weapons carried by the accused were dangerous.^{162.}

82. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300] .

83. Sheo Mahadeo Singh v State of Bihar, (1970) 3 SCC 46 ; Lalji v State of UP, 1989 (1) SCC 437 [LNIND 1989 SC 26] ; Lakhan Mahto, AIR 1966 SC 1742 [LNIND 1966 SC 61] .

84. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300] .

85. Lakhan Mahto, AIR 1966 SC 1742 [LNIND 1966 SC 61] : 1966 Cr LJ 1349 .

86. Kuldip Yadav v State of Bihar, 2011 (5) SCC 324 [LNIND 2011 SC 403] : AIR 2011 SC 1736 [LNIND 2011 SC 403] : 2011 Cr LJ 2640 : (2011) 2 SCC (Cr) 632.

87. Roy Fernandes v State of Goa, (2012) 3 SCC 221 [LNIND 2012 SC 86] : 2012 Cr LJ 1542 .

88. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300] .

89. Waman v State of Maharashtra, (2011) 7 SCC 295 [LNIND 2011 SC 564] : AIR 2011 (SCW) 4973 : 2011 Cr LJ 4827 : AIR 2011 SC 3327 [LNIND 2011 SC 564] : (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 83; Bhudeo Mandal v State of Bihar, (1981) 2 SCC 755 [LNIND 1981 SC 177] : 1981 SCC (Cr) 595, Ranbir Yadav v State of Bihar, (1995) 4 SCC 392 [LNIND 1995 SC 389] : 1995 SCC (Cr) 728, Allauddin Mian v State of Bihar, (1989) 3 SCC 5 [LNIND 1989 SC 236] : 1989 SCC (Cr) 490, Rajendra

Shantaram Todankar v State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 257 [LNIND 2003 SC 4] : 2003 SCC (Cr) 506 and State of Punjab v Sanjiv Kumar, (2007) 9 SCC 791 [LNIND 2007 SC 797] : (2007) 3 SCC (Cr) 578.

90. Kuldip Yadav v State of Bihar, 2011 (5) SCC 324 [LNIND 2011 SC 403] : AIR 2011 SC 1736 [LNIND 2011 SC 403] : 2011 Cr LJ 2640 : (2011) 2 SCC (Cr) 632.

91. Iqbal v State of UP, AIR 2017 SC 1127 [LNIND 2017 SC 73] .

92. Vyas Ram @ Vyas Kahar v State of Bihar, 2014 Cr LJ 50 : (2013) 12 SCC 349 [LNIND 2013 SC 861] .

93. Kattukulangara Madhavan v Majeed, AIR 2017 SC 2004 [LNIND 2017 SC 158] .

94. Sunil Balkrishna Bheir v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 598 [LNIND 2007 SC 669] : 2007 Cr LJ 3277 .

95. Munivel v State of TN, 2006 Cr LJ 2133 .

96. Hori Lal v State of UP, (2006) 13 SCC 79 [LNIND 2006 SC 1086] : 2007 Cr LJ 1181 . See also State of Punjab v Sanjeev Kumar, (2007) 9 SCC 791 [LNIND 2007 SC 797] : AIR 2007 SC 2430 [LNIND 2007 SC 797] ; Purusuram Pandey v State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 5068 [LNIND 2004 SC 1075] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 113, restatement of ingredients and principle on which the provision is based.

97. Najabhai Desurbhai Wagh v Valerabhai Deganbhai Vagh, 2017 (1) Crimes 270 (SC), (2017) 3 SCC 261 [LNIND 2017 SC 46] .

98. Vijay Pandurang Thakre v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2017 SC 897 . Gurmail Singh v State of Punjab, 2013 (4) SCC 228 [LNIND 2012 SC 864] : 2013 (2) SCC (Cr) 36; State of Maharashtra v Kashiram, (2003) 10 SCC 434 [LNIND 2003 SC 716] : AIR 2003 SC 3901 [LNIND 2003 SC 716] , two parts of sections 149 explained and distinguished, the expression "in prosecution of common object" and the word "knew" in section 149, their meaning also explained. Rajendra Shantaram Todankar v State of Maharashtra, (2003) 2 SCC 257 [LNIND 2003 SC 4] : AIR 2003 SC 1110 [LNIND 2003 SC 4] : 2003 Cr LJ 1277 , two clauses of the section explained, inference about knowledge of likelihood of crime, when can be drawn, explained.

99. Vijay Pandurang Thakre v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2017 SC 897 .

100. Roy Fernandes v State of Goa, 2012 (2) Scale 68 [LNIND 2012 SC 86] : JT 2012 (2) SC 457 : AIR 2012 (SCW) 1238 : (2012) 3 SCC 221 [LNIND 2012 SC 86] : 2012 Cr LJ 1542 .

101. Gangadhar Behera v State of Orissa, 2002 (8) SCC 381 [LNIND 2002 SC 645] and Bishnaalias BhiswadebMahato v State of WB, 2005 (12) SCC 657 [LNIND 2005 SC 873]

102. Barendra Kumar Ghosh, (1924) 52 IA 40 , 52 : 27 Bom LR 148 : 52 Cal 197.

103. Aniruddha Mana, (1924) 26 Cr LJ 827 , 829. Where the purpose was to show force and not to cause death, common intention was ruled out and the conviction was converted from under sections 302/34 to one under 302/149, Jai Narain v State of UP, 1995 Cr LJ 2335 (All).

104. Sabid Ali, (1873) 20 WR (Cr) 5 : 11 Beng LR 347, approved by the Supreme Court in Mazaji, AIR 1959 SC 572 [LNIND 1958 SC 169] ; Krishnarao, (1903) 5 Bom LR 1023 ; Fatnaya, (1941) 23 Lah 470.

105. Legal Remembrancer, Bengal v Golok Tikadar, (1943) 1 Cal 181 .

106. UN Singh v State, (1946) 25 Pat 215.

107. Jahiruddin, (1894) 22 Cal 306 , approved by the Supreme Court in Shambhu Nath, AIR 1960 SC 725 : 1960 Cr LJ 1114 .

108. Dalip Singh, AIR 1953 SC 364 [LNIND 1953 SC 61] : 1953 Cr LJ 1465 ; See also Dharam Pal, 1975 Cr LJ 1666 : AIR 1975 SC 1917 [LNIND 1975 SC 314] ; State of UP v Ranjha Ram, AIR 1986 SC 1959 [LNIND 1986 SC 271] : 1986 Cr LJ 1906 : (1986) 4 SCC 99 [LNIND 1986 SC 271] ; Amar Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 826 : 1987 Cr LJ 706 : (1987) 1 SCC 679 , see further Gopeteshwar Nath Ojha v State of Bihar, AIR 1986 SC 1649 : 1986 Cr LJ 1242 . Hoshiar Singh v

State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SC 191 [LNIND 1991 SC 568] : 1992 Cr LJ 510 , the acquittal of some would not warrant the acquittal of the rest; Sahebrao Kisan Jadhav v State of Maharashtra, 1992 Cr LJ 339 , presence of eight in the course of an assault was established but four were acquitted due to weak evidence, conviction of the rest for unlawful assembly not illegal. The cases of Amar Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1987 SC 826 ; and Maina Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1976 SC 1084 [LNIND 1976 SC 97] : (1976) 3 SCR 651 [LNIND 1976 SC 97] , were followed by the Supreme Court in K Nagamalleswara Rao v State of AP, 1991 Cr LJ 1365 : AIR 1991 SC 1075 [LNIND 1991 SC 150] : (1991) 2 SCC 532 [LNIND 1991 SC 150] , so as to come to the conclusion that where all others were acquitted and the evidence against the remaining four was also not reliable as to any overt acts done by them, their conviction was not sustainable. Darshan Singh v State of Punjab, 1990 Cr LJ 2684 : AIR 1991 SC 66 , prosecution theory that an 80-year-old man went in advance to hold the deceased, not acceptable. State of Assam v Bhelu Sheikh, 1989 Cr LJ 879 : AIR 1989 SC 1097 , no evidence to show that the accused caused injury, even dying declaration not recorded when the injured lived for seven days. Saudagar Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 1998 SC 28 [LNIND 1997 SC 890] : 1998 Cr LJ 62 , persons not named in the FIR as members of unlawful assembly were let off, the gun wielding accused persons fired gun shots, convicted for murder. Komal v State of HP, AIR 2002 SC 3057 [LNIND 2002 SC 518] , prosecution case of murder with common object proved, conviction. See also Sajjan Sharma v State of Bihar, (2011) 2 SCC 206 [LNIND 2011 SC 33] : AIR 2011 SC 632 [LNIND 2011 SC 33] : 2011 Cr LJ 1169 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 660.

109. Birbal Choudhary v State of Bihar, AIR 2017 SC 4866 [LNIND 2017 SC 2898].

110. Bolineedi Venkataramaiah v State of AP, AIR 1994 SC 76 : 1994 Cr LJ 61 : 1994 Supp (3) SCC 732 . Chanda v State of UP, (2004) 5 SCC 141 [LNIND 2004 SC 582] : AIR 2004 SC 2451 [LNIND 2004 SC 582] : 2004 All LJ 1871 : 2004 Cr LJ 2536 , common object as specified in section 141 must be proved for inflicting constructive liability, but proof of any overt act is not necessary. The court stated consideration for ascertaining common object, when and how it comes into existence and when it becomes modified or abandoned. Madan Singh v State of Bihar, (2004) 4 SCC 622 [LNIND 2004 SC 427] : AIR 2004 SC 3317 [LNIND 2004 SC 427] . Dani Singh v State of Bihar, 2004 Cr LJ 3328 , there must be common object as stated in section 141 and person actuated by it. Charan Singh v State of UP, (2004) 4 SCC 205 [LNIND 2004 SC 308] : AIR 2004 SC 2828 [LNIND 2004 SC 308] .

111. Rudrappa Ramappa Jainpur v State of Karnataka, (2004) 7 SCC 422 [LNIND 2004 SC 738] : AIR 2004 SC 4148 [LNIND 2004 SC 738] . Amzad Ali v State of Assam, 2003 Cr LJ 3545 : (2003) 6 SCC 270 [LNIND 2003 SC 570] , applicability in the context of section 302.

112. Shyam Singh v State of UP, 1992 Cr LJ 1632 (All). Ram Dhani v State, 1997 Cr LJ 2286 (All) dispute over land, complainant party resorted to cutting crop grown by the accused party. The latter were more than five in number and assembled to prevent the cutting. The court held that they could not be said to form an unlawful assembly.

113. Raj Nath v State of UP, AIR 2009 SC 1422 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 4 SCC 334 [LNIND 2009 SC 59] : (2009) 1 SCR 336 : JT 2009 (1) SC 373 [LNIND 2009 SC 85] : (2009) 2 SCC (Cr) 289.

114. Gangadhar Behera v State of Orissa, 2003 Cr LJ 41 : AIR 2002 SC 3633 [LNIND 2002 SC 645] . Chanda v State of UP, (2004) 3 SCC 141 : AIR 2004 SC 2836 [LNIND 2004 SC 1556] , the expression "in prosecution of common object" and the word "knew" as used in section 149 were explained and distinguished.

115. Jagdeo Singh, 1981 Cr LJ 166 : AIR 1981 SC 648 .

116. Jit Singh v State, (1957) Pun 950; Mizaji, (1959) Supp (1) SCR 940 : AIR 1959 SC 572 [LNIND 1958 SC 169] : 1959 Cr LJ 777 . Satbir Singh v State of UP, (2009) 13 SCC 790 [LNIND

2009 SC 450] : AIR 2009 SC 2163 [LNIND 2009 SC 450] : (2009) 3 All LJ 786; Ashok Kumar v State of TN, 2006 Cr LJ 2931 : AIR 2006 SC 2419 [LNIND 2006 SC 360] : (2006) 10 SCC 157 [LNIND 2006 SC 360] .

117. Ibid, and see Lalji v State of UP, AIR 1989 SC 754 [LNIND 1989 SC 26] : (1989) 1 SCR 130 [LNIND 1989 SC 26] : 1989 Cr LJ 850 , the members cannot be acquitted only because of lack of evidence of precise participation. Earlier to this, in Ram Bilas Singh v State of Bihar, 1964 (1) Cr LJ 573 : (1963) 1 SCWR 743 : (1964) 1 SCR 775 [LNIND 1963 SC 22] , the Supreme Court observed: "It is true that in order to convict persons vicariously under section 34 or section 149 it is not necessary to prove that each and every one of them had indulged in overt acts. Even so, there must be material to show that the overt act or acts of one or more was or were done in furtherance of the common intention of all the accused or in prosecution of the common object of the members of the unlawful assembly. Following this and the above cited Supreme Court cases in Nagina Sharma v State of Bihar, 1991 Cr LJ 1195 , the Patna High Court held that the gang of persons who came fully armed to capture a booth and to prevent voters from voting and causing eight deaths in the process were all responsible for the deaths in question. See at pp 1231–1233.

118. Allauddin Mian v State of Bihar, AIR 1989 SC 1456 [LNIND 1989 SC 236] : 1989 Cr LJ 1466 . Ramappa Halappa Pujar v State of Karnataka, (2007) 13 SCC 31 [LNIND 2007 SC 561] , the fact of benefit of doubt to some accused person could not give advantage to others on whose part some other act was evident.

119. Vithal Bhimshah Koli v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1983 SC 179 [LNIND 1982 BOM 340] : 1983 Cr LJ 340 : (1983) 1 SCC 431 . See also Jawahar v State of UP, AIR 1991 SC 273 : 1991 Cr LJ 376 , equal conviction of the accused who was only holding the deceased by the neck while others struck.

120. Suratlal v State of MP, AIR 1982 SC 1224 [LNIND 1980 SC 121] : 1982 Cr LJ 1577 : (1982) 1 SCC 488 [LNIND 1980 SC 121] . Mohamed Arif v State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 105 [LNIND 1996 SC 1604] : 1997 Cr LJ 65 ; conviction of all the accused except one who was not identified by the eye-witness and given benefit of doubt. Ganga Singh v State of UP, 2000 Cr LJ 1695 (All), unlawful assembly, fodder belonging to informant burnt, death ensued from lathi blows, incident 21 years old. Accused persons grew into men of 55–60 years. They were sentenced to three years RI and fine of Rs. 5,000 each. Vikram v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 12 SCC 332 [LNIND 2007 SC 617] : (2008) 1 SCC (Cr) 362 : AIR 2007 SC 1893 [LNIND 2007 SC 617] : 2007 Cr LJ 3193 , whether in a given case common object has been made out depends upon facts and circumstances, conduct of the parties and the manner in which the occurrence had taken place has some bearing on the question.

121. Bhimrao v State of Maharashtra, (2003) 3 SCC 37 [LNIND 2003 SC 167] : AIR 2003 SC 1493 [LNIND 2003 SC 167] : 2003 Cr LJ 1204 .

122. Raju v State of Rajasthan, 2013 (2) SCC 233 [LNIND 2013 SC 25] : 2013 Cr LJ 1248 (SC). See also Shyam Babu v State of UP, JT 2012 (8) SC 377 [LNIND 2012 SC 536] : AIR 2012 (SCW) 4846 : (2012) 8 SCC 651 [LNIND 2012 SC 536] : AIR 2012 SC 3311 [LNIND 2012 SC 536] : 2012 Cr LJ 4550 : 2012 (8) Scale 535 [LNIND 2012 SC 536] .

123. Hari Singh, (1878) 3 CLR 49 . Haricharan v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1998 SC 244 [LNIND 1997 SC 1350] : 1998 Cr LJ 398 , accused appeared armed with weapons. They stopped the bus, put the gun on the chest of the driver threatening him if he tried to move. They caught hold of the deceased. One of them fired two shots and the other attacked with his weapon. Their conviction under section 300 read with section 149 was held to be proper. Mahantappa v State of Karnataka, AIR 1999 SC 314 [LNIND 1998 SC 1018] : 1999 Cr LJ 450 , the accused persons assaulted their victim with a sword, threw his body into a hut and set it on fire. Their conviction under section 300 read with section 149 was held to be proper. Some others who were also tried with them did not seem to have been members, they could have been bystanders. They were given the benefit of doubt. Bhagwan Singh v State of UP, (1992) 4 SCC 85 , the accused persons were on inimical terms with the complainant party, came to the spot armed with deadly weapons and attacked claiming three lives, it was held that they shared common object. Rachapalliabulu v State of AP, (2002) 4 SCC 208 [LNIND 2002 SC 267] : 2000 Cr LJ 2527 : AIR 2002 SC 1805 [LNIND 2002 SC 267] , assailants came together as fully armed, caused two deaths, held to have shared common object. Pratapneni Ravi Kumar v State of AP, AIR 1997 SC 2810 [LNIND 1997 SC 892] : 1997 Cr LJ 3505 , all those who assaulted the victim were members of unlawful assembly and death was caused in prosecution of common object, all of them guilty irrespective of the fact whether they had participated in beating the deceased. State of Rajasthan v Ani, AIR 1997 SC 1023 [LNIND 1997 SC 35] , armed accused person killed two and attempted to cause one more death, they were earlier involved in other riots. Conviction, but two accused were acquitted because evidence showed no connection with the incident. Satbir v Surat Singh, AIR 1997 SC 1160 : (1997) 4 SCC 192 , two accused persons, though present, could not be said with certainty to have shared the common intention to commit murder, benefit of doubt. Siddique v State of UP, 1998 Cr LJ 3829 (All), unlawful assembly causing death in business rivalry, conviction. State of Rajasthan v Nathu, (2003) 5 SCC 537 [LNIND 2003 SC 479] , murder, vicarious liability.

124. Muthu Naicker v State of WB, 1978 Cr LJ 1713 : AIR 1978 SC 1647 [LNIND 1978 SC 188] . From numbers, situs and nature of wounds it could be hold that all five accused persons had definite intention to commit murder of victim. State of Assam v Golbar Hussain, 2012 Cr LJ 4649 (Gau).

125. Kartar Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1996 SC 1406 [LNIND 1996 SC 307] : 1996 Cr LJ 1722 . In Ramesh v State of Haryana, AIR 2011 SC 169 [LNIND 2010 SC 1016] : 2011 Cr LJ 80 : (2010) 12 SCR 799 : (2010) 13 SCC 409 [LNIND 2010 SC 1016] : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 1176, the evidence show that the appellants variously armed, including the firearms assembled at one place and, thereafter, came to the place of occurrence and started assault together and when protested by the deceased, one of the members of the unlawful assembly shot the deceased dead and some of them caused injury by firearm, gandasa, lathi, etc., to others. All of them have come and left the place of occurrence together. Appellant held to be members of the unlawful assembly and offence have been committed in pursuance of the common object. Each of them shall be liable for the offence committed by any other member of the assembly. Also see Ranjit Singh v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 255 [LNIND 2010 SC 1057] : 2011 Cr LJ 283 : (2011) 4 SCC 336 [LNIND 2010 SC 1057] : (2011) 2 SCC (Cr) 227.

126. C Chellappan, 1979 Cr LJ 1335 : AIR 1979 SC 1761 .

127. Asharfi Lal v State of UP, AIR 1987 SC 1721 [LNIND 1987 SC 346] : 1987 Cr LJ 1885 : (1987) 3 SCC 224 [LNIND 1987 SC 346] . See also Lalji Singh v State of UP, AIR 1985 SC 1266 : 1985 Cr LJ 1488 , charges under sections 302, 147, 148 and 149; and Dalip Singh v State of UP, 1985 SCC (Cr) 486 : 1985 Supp SCC 471 : AIR 1986 SC 316 , charges under the same sections, established. Kishan Singh v State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 2027 (Raj), circumstances of the case established unlawful assembly as well as common object. Poonma Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1995 Cr LJ 359 (Raj), unlawful assembly, death caused, but requisite intention for murder not proved, conviction for culpable homicide and for forming unlawful assembly. Luku Pulke v State of Orissa, 1995 Cr LJ 1207 (Ori), acquittal because of contradictory statements of witnesses as to participation. Gajanan v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 2887 : AIR 1996 SC 3332 , the accused persons caused death by assault and beating, also beating others who came to rescue, showed common object of causing death.

128. Sheikh Ajyub v State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 420 : 1994 Supp (2) SCC 269 .
129. Joseph v State of Karnataka, 1993 Cr LJ 3538 : 1993 AIR SCW 2900. State of UP v Man Singh, AIR 2003 SC 62 [LNIND 2002 SC 657] , seven persons were variously armed, they attacked and killed their victim whose severed body was thrown by them into river. The witnesses recovered the body immediately after the attackers left. This established their presence at the spot. The reversal of conviction by the High Court because of poor visibility caused by fog was held to be improper. Shrawan Bhadaji Bhirad v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2003 SC 199 [LNIND 2002 SC 701] : 2003 Cr LJ 398 , seven persons armed with swords, attacked their victim causing multiple injuries which were found to be sufficient to cause death, but saved by a team of doctors. Conviction of the accused under the section was held to be proper. Alla Chinna Apparao v State of AP, 2003 Cr LJ 17 : AIR 2002 SC 3648 [LNIND 2002 SC 647] , the victim was attacked by accused persons who hacked his neck on two sides with coconut cutting knives. Eye-witnesses. Conviction under section 300
130. Umesh Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 2000 SC 2111 [LNIND 2000 SC 871] : 2000 Cr LJ 3167 .
131. Ram Dular Rai v State of Bihar, (2003) 12 SCC 352 [LNIND 2003 SC 1032] : AIR 2004 SC 1043 [LNIND 2003 SC 1032] : 2004 Cr LJ 635 ; Chand v State of UP, (2004) 5 SCC 141 [LNIND 2004 SC 582] : AIR 2004 SC 2451 [LNIND 2004 SC 582] : 2004 All LJ 1871 : 2004 Cr LJ 2536 , number of convicted persons less than five. Eight persons were named. Two of them held pistols. Shot fired but did not hit the victim. The other's shot proved fatal. Unlawful assembly was there. Acquittal of some of them on a technical ground did not wipe out application of section 149.
132. Kashirma v State of MP, (2002) 1 SCC 71 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] .
133. Kashi Ram v State of MP, AIR 2001 SC 2902 [LNIND 2001 SC 2369] ; Siyaram v State of MP, (2009) 4 SCC 792 [LNIND 2009 SC 577] : (2009) 2 SCC (Cr) 602 : 2009 Cr LJ 2071 , statement of principles to be followed by the appellate court in considering an appeal against acquittal. See also State of Maharashtra v Tulshiram Bhanudas Kamble, (2007) 14 SCC 627 [LNIND 2007 SC 3167] : AIR 2007 SC 3042 [LNIND 2007 SC 3167] : (2007) Cr LJ 4319 .
134. Yunis v State of MP, AIR 2003 SC 539 [LNIND 2002 SC 784] : 2003 Cr LJ 817 ; Re Ram Pravesh Sharma, 2003 Cr LJ NOC 180 (Jhar) : 2003 AIR Jhar HCR 220.
135. State of MP v Mishrilal, 2002 Cr LJ 2312 (SC).
136. State of UP v Kishanpal, (2008) 16 SCC 73 [LNIND 2008 SC 1608] . Akbar Sheikh v State of WB, (2009) 7 SCC 415 [LNIND 2009 SC 1106] : (2009) 3 SCC (Cr) 431, rule of prudence should be applied. Something more than the persons concerned being cited as accused in a witness box would be necessary. The court must have before it some materials to form an opinion that they had shared the common object. Sheo Prasad Bhor v State of Assam, (2007) 3 SCC 120 [LNIND 2007 SC 19] : AIR 2007 SC 918 [LNIND 2007 SC 19] : 2007 Cr LJ 1423 , assignment of independent parts to each member not necessary; if one is a member of the assembly, assault and death caused by any one of them would make others liable.
137. Ganga Ram Sah v State of Bihar, AIR 2017 SC 655 [LNINDU 2017 SC 31] .
138. Najabhai Desurbhai Wagh v Valerabhai Deganbhai Vagh, (2017) 3 SCC 261 [LNIND 2017 SC 46] : 2017 (1) Crimes 270 (SC).
139. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300] .
140. Vinubhai Ranchhodbhai Patel v Rajivbhai Dudabhai Patel, AIR 2018 SC 2472 [LNIND 2018 SC 300] .
141. Kabil Singh, (1869) 3 Beng LR (A Cr J) 1. See also State of Gujarat v Bharwad, 1990 Cr LJ 2531 (Guj), common object to belabour the members of a particular community, all liable under sections 324 and 326 and not for murder. Teja v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 262 , common object to insult, guilty under section 326 and not under section 302 though death was caused. Ramesh Baburao Devaskar v State of Maharashtra, (2008) Cr LJ 372 : (2007) 13 SCC 501 [LNIND 2007 SC 1213], name of only one accused mentioned in the FIR, PWs did not attribute any overt act to the remaining accused persons, thus, there was some substance in the contention that others did not share the common object.

142. Kshudiram, 1972 Cr LJ 756 : AIR 1972 SC 1221 . See also Bharwad Bhikha Natha, 1977 Cr LJ 1160 : AIR 1977 SC 1768 ; K Neelakanthee, 1978 Cr LJ 780 : AIR 1978 SC 1021 [LNIND 1978 SC 55] ; Bhudeo Mondla v State of Bihar, 1981 Cr LJ 725 : AIR 1981 SC 219 : (1981) 2 SCC 755 [LNIND 1981 SC 177] .

143. Jhapsa Kabari v State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 312 [LNIND 2001 SC 2762] . Jadu Sahani v State, 1999 Cr LJ 593 : 1999 AIR SCW 3985, no enmity between the conflicting groups, death caused by one of them as an individual act, only he was convicted for murder. State of Punjab v Harjit Singh, AIR 2002 SC 3040 [LNIND 2002 SC 501] , mere participation in the crime with others is not sufficient to attribute common object or common intention to one of them of the others involved in the incident. One accused person can be made liable criminally for the acts and deeds of others only on proof of the subjective elements in common intention by the objective test.

144. Nawab Ali, 1974 Cr LJ 921 : AIR 1974 SC 1228 [LNIND 1974 SC 117] . See also Ram Anjore, 1975 Cr LJ 249 : AIR 1975 SC 185 [LNIND 1975 SC 87] ; Badruddin v State, 1981 Cr LJ 729 : AIR 1981 SC 1223 .

145. Fatte, 1980 Cr LJ 829 : AIR 1979 SC 1504 . In a similar case, the assailant giving the fatal blow was convicted under section 302 but co-accused under sections 326/149, Ram Swarup v State of Haryana, AIR 1993 SC 2436 [LNIND 1993 SC 487] : 1993 Cr LJ 3540 : 1993 Supp (4) SCC 344 . Sukhbir Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2002 SC 1168 [LNIND 2002 SC 134] , a sweeper while working in a street happened to throw splashes of mud on the face of the accused. He abused the sweeper. The latter's father slapped the accused. He went away threatening and came back with others, but fatal injuries to the sweeper's father were inflicted by him alone, others kept only standing. Held individual act and not a common object: Kajal Sen v State of Assam, AIR 2002 SC 617 [LNIND 2002 SC 31] , fatal blows given by main accused. Others could not be convicted for offences punishable under section 302 read with sections 148 and 149. Tamaji Govind Misal v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1998 SC 174 [LNIND 1997 SC 1211] : 1998 Cr LJ 340 , the motive of the accused party was to remove babul trees from the land of the complainant party whatever be the cost and cause injuries which might become necessary. But some of them started assaulting immediately on reaching the spot. Others might not have known that the matter would go to the extent of murder, they were punished under sections 326/149 and not 300/149. Atmaram Zongarazi v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1997 SC 3573 [LNIND 1997 SC 1079] : 1997 Cr LJ 4406 , proof showed only one man striking and not others, others acquitted. Chandubhai Malubhai Parmar v State of Gujarat, AIR 1997 SC 1422 [LNIND 1997 SC 627] : 1997 Cr LJ 1909 , inter-community riot, accused armed with guns causing deaths, convicted under sections 300/149, but those who were busy only in burning property could not be convicted with others under section 300/149. Naurangi Mahto v State, 2001 Cr LJ 1525 (Jhar), no common object attributed to those who were just only present at the moment and had done no overt act. Incident took place at the spur of the moment. Naththoo Ram v State of UP, 2000 Cr LJ 3870 (All), injuries caused with blunt side of the weapon. It could not be said that the common object of the unlawful assembly was to cause death. Conviction was altered from under sections 302/149 to section 326/149.

State of UP v Rasid, AIR 2003 SC 1243 [LNIND 2003 SC 295] , accused persons who entered the house and caused death, convicted for murder, but those remained posted outside given benefit of doubt. Basisth Roy v State of Bihar, AIR 2003 SC 1439 [LNIND 2003 SC 162] , witnesses attributed overt act only to two out of 13 accused persons, convicted, others given benefit of doubt and acquitted. Jayantibhai Bhankarbhai v State of Gujarat, AIR 2002 SC 3569 [LNIND 2002 SC 565] , five convicted, only one appealed, he was acquitted, the Supreme Court allowed the conviction of the non-appealing convicts to stand.

146. Parusuram Pandey v State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 5068 [LNIND 2004 SC 1075] : (2004) 13 SCC 189 [LNIND 2004 SC 1075] .

147. Mohan Lal, 1982 Cr LJ 1898 (All).

148. Sarman v State of MP, AIR 1993 SC 400 : 1993 Cr LJ 63 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 356 . Where the only common object discovered on evidence was to beat the victim and not to cause death, others were held not liable to be convicted for murder but only under section 149/324; Gopa Ram v State of Rajasthan, 1996 Cr LJ 2987 (Raj).

149. State of Karnataka v Bhojappa, 1994 Cr LJ 1543 (Kant). See also Anant Kumar v State of MP, AIR 1994 SC 1639 : (1994) 2 Cr LJ 1585 , no specific acts were attributed to two of the accused persons who also had no knowledge whether the others carried knives or that they were likely to cause injuries, such two accused acquitted. Bhimrao v State of Maharashtra, 2003 Cr LJ 1204 : AIR 2003 SC 1493 [LNIND 2003 SC 167] , the accused came to the house of the victim with a common object, those who entered the house executed a different, held, their act could not be attributed to those who were standing outside. State of Rajasthan v Sheo Singh, 2003 Cr LJ 1569 : AIR 2003 SC 1783 [LNIND 2003 SC 231] , a joint project of murder could not be proved. Basisth Roy v State of Bihar, 2003 Cr LJ 1301 : AIR 2003 SC 1439 [LNIND 2003 SC 162] : (2003) 9 SCC 52 [LNIND 2003 SC 162] , murder on account of land dispute between the complainant and deceased party, specific overt acts of lathi blows and gun shots were attributed only to two of the accused persons, others could not be convicted for the same because there was no proof of a shared common object to that effect. Bharosi v State of MP, AIR 2002 SC 3299 [LNIND 2002 SC 567] , six accused persons armed with lathis attacked the victim, death was due to one head injury attributed to the main accused, others did not intend nor had any knowledge. They were held to be not guilty of murder. They were guilty under section 147 for their individual acts. Kishan Pal v State of UP, 2001 Cr LJ 2875 (All), unlawful assembly, eight members of a family slaughtered in a day light attack. Witnesses untrustworthy. Acquittal.

Cases of no proof.—Baikunth Mahto v State of Bihar, 2003 Cr LJ 2135 (Jhar), the accused persons attacked the deceased at midnight while he was asleep along with three other persons. Two of them became hostile. The medical report was that death must have been instantaneous with injury and so the deceased could not have named anybody. The persons sleeping there could not have identified the assailants because of dark night. Evidence doubtful, acquittal. Sunil Balkrishna Bhoil v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 14 SCC 398 : 2007 Cr LJ 3277 , unlawful assembly originally formed to assault the victim, all of sudden accused two stabbed him causing death, common object held to be not applicable, rest of them guilty of only house trespass under section 452. They had been in custody for a long period. They were set at liberty. Munna Chanda v State of Assam, 2006 Cr LJ 1632 : AIR 2006 SC 3555 [LNIND 2006 SC 128] : (2006) 3 SCC 752 [LNIND 2006 SC 128] , prior concert is not required, common object can develop at the spur of the moment, the deceased in this case, on being assaulted, fled, he was chased by some members of the party but who gave the fatal blow was not clear. Membership of two of the accused could not be proved nor any overt act could be attributed to them. They could not have been convicted under sections 302/149.

150. Ranjit Singh v State of MP, AIR 2011 SC 255 [LNIND 2010 SC 1057] : 2011 Cr LJ 283 : (2011) 4 SCC 336 [LNIND 2010 SC 1057] : (2011) 2 SCC (Cr) 227. See also Jhapsa Kabari v State of Bihar, AIR 2002 SC 312 [LNIND 2001 SC 2762] at p 314, where YK Sabharwal, J explained the position of a solitary witness.
151. Charan Singh v State of UP, (2004) 4 SCC 205 [LNIND 2004 SC 308] : AIR 2004 SC 2828 [LNIND 2004 SC 308] .
152. Nanak Chand v State of Punjab, AIR 1955 SC 274 [LNIND 1955 SC 3] : 1955 (1) SCR 1201 [LNIND 1955 SC 3] : 1955 Cr LJ 721 .
153. Suraj Pal v State of UP, AIR 1955 SC 419 [LNIND 1955 SC 17] : 1955 (1) SCR 1332 [LNIND 1955 SC 17] : 1955 Cr LJ 1004 .
154. Willie Slaney v State of MP, AIR 1956 SC 116 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] : 1955 (2) SCR 1140 [LNIND 1955 SC 90] : 1956 Cr LJ 291 .
155. Subran v State, 1993 (3) SCC 32 [LNIND 1993 SC 162] : 1993 SCC (Cr) 583 : 1993 Cr LJ 1387 : 1993 (2) Crimes 15 [LNIND 1993 SC 162] .
156. (supra).
157. State of Rajasthan v Hazi Khan, AIR 2017 SC 4001 .
158. Kanwarlal v State of MP, 2003 Cr LJ 62 : AIR 2002 SC 3690 [LNIND 2002 SC 558] .
159. Shri Krishan v State of UP, (2007) 15 SCC 557 .
160. Eknath Ganpat Aher v State of Maharashtra, (2010) 6 SCC 519 [LNIND 2010 SC 466] .
161. Sudha Renukaiah v State of AP, AIR 2017 SC 2124 [LNIND 2017 SC 197] .
162. Najabhai Desurbhai Wagh v Valerabhai Degambhai Vagh, (2017) 3 SCC 261 [LNIND 2017 SC 46] : 2017 (1) Crimes 270 (SC).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 150] Hiring, or conniving at hiring, of persons to join unlawful assembly.

Whoever hires or engages or employs, or promotes, or connives at the hiring, engagement or employment of any person to join or become a member of any unlawful assembly, shall be punishable as a member of such unlawful assembly, and for any offence which may be committed by any such person as a member of such unlawful assembly in pursuance of such hiring, engagement or employment, in the same manner as if he had been a member of such unlawful assembly, or himself had committed such offence.

COMMENT—

This section brings within the reach of the law those who are really the originators and instigators of the offences committed by hired persons. It deals with the case of those who are neither abettors of nor participators in the offence committed by an unlawful assembly.

The section creates a specific offence. It intends to embrace all those who hire, promote or connive at the employment of persons and render them punishable as principal participators. Under the section, a person, though not actually a member of an unlawful assembly himself, may be held guilty of being a member of the assembly and may be held liable for the offence which may be committed by the assembly to the same extent as if he had himself committed that offence. But this is possible only when it is found that he hired or engaged or employed or promoted or connived at the hiring, engagement or employment by any other person to join or become a member of the assembly. There must have been an unlawful assembly which was composed of persons so hired, etc., and an offence committed in the course of that assembly for which he becomes equally liable. The word "promotes" denotes acceleration or inducement. Though the word "employ" or "employment" is used, it does not mean recruitment. It would mean calling of the service of the hired person without any recruitment as a servant or agent to commit the offence.¹⁶³

¹⁶³. Vinit v State of Maharashtra, 1994 Cr LJ 1791 at pp 1804–1805, certain persons, who constituted an unlawful assembly, were hired to eliminate a particular person. The eliminators and their procurer were both held equally liable.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 151] Knowingly joining or continuing in assembly of five or more persons after it has been commanded to disperse.

Whoever knowingly joins or continues in any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, after such assembly has been lawfully commanded to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.*—If the assembly is an unlawful assembly within the meaning of section 141, the offender will be punishable under section 145.

COMMENT—

Effect of command to disperse.—Section 145 punishes the continuance in an unlawful assembly after it has been commanded to disperse. In this section the assembly need not be an 'unlawful assembly' but if it is likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, then joining or continuing in such assembly after it has been commanded to disperse is punishable. Section 129 of the Criminal Procedure Code confers on a Magistrate and an officer in charge of a police-station the power to disperse an unlawful assembly or any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace. A bare reading of section 129, Cr PC, 1973, would make it abundantly clear that a lawful procession or assembly cannot be regarded as likely to cause a breach of the peace when it is admitted that not they but some other body of persons is bent on attacking them. Whether an assembly is likely to cause a disturbance of public peace has to be judged from its own acts and behaviour and not from the behaviour of another hostile group whose physical opposition may cause a breach of the peace.¹⁶⁴ "Thus, if an assembly other than an unlawful assembly behaves in such a manner as to provoke a breach of the peace by its own conduct or action, there would be a justification to order it to disperse under the powers given by section 129 of the Criminal Procedure Code. But if a religious assembly or procession remains peaceful in the enjoyment of its legitimate rights and privileges under the law, it should not be ordered to disperse merely because a body of antagonistic persons take it into their heads to attack it with a view to provoke a riot. In such a case, it is rather that body of aggressive persons that constitutes an unlawful assembly and requires to be sternly dealt with under the law".¹⁶⁵ So where a peaceful group of persons who were cutting crop on their own land refused to disperse on being commanded to do so by an Inspector of Police merely because another hostile group objected to the harvesting of the crop, it was held that as these persons were not commanded lawfully to disperse under section 129, Cr PC, 1973, they could not be convicted under section 151, IPC, 1860.¹⁶⁶ In order to bring a case within the mischief of this section there must be clear evidence to show that the assembly had been "lawfully commanded" to disperse. Thus where the police officers in their evidence said that they had merely warned the two warring factions, it could not be said that the assembly had been commanded to disperse and as such there was no question of invoking section 151, IPC, to prosecute the members of the assembly.¹⁶⁷

¹⁶⁴. Yeshwant v State, 34 Cr LJ 705; See also Bealty v Gillbanks, (1882) 9 QBD 308 ; Kempe Gowda, 1954 Cr LJ 490 (Mysore).

¹⁶⁵. R Deb, Principles of Criminology, Criminal Law and Investigation, 2nd Edn, vol II, p 834. See also Re P Abdul Sattar, 1961 (1) Cr LJ 291 (Mysore).

¹⁶⁶. Kempe Gowda, 1954 Cr LJ 490 (Mysore), supra.

¹⁶⁷. Komma Neelakantha Reddy v State of AP, AIR 1978 SC 1021 [LNIND 1978 SC 55] : (1978) 2 SCC 473 [LNIND 1978 SC 55] : 1978 (3) SCR 75 [LNIND 1978 SC 55] : 1978 Cr LJ 780 : (1978) 1 SCC (Cr) 285.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 152] Assaulting or obstructing public servant when suppressing riot, etc.

Whoever assaults or threatens to assault, or obstructs or attempts to obstruct, any public servant in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, in endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly, or to suppress a riot or affray, or uses, or threatens, or attempts to use criminal force to such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Assault or obstruction of public servant.—The last section punished disobedience to the order of a public servant commanding an assembly to disperse. This section punishes more severely persons who assault a public servant endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly. It is intended to prevent the use of force on a public servant in order to prevent him from discharging his duty.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 153] Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot—.

Whoever malignantly,¹ or wantonly,² by doing anything which is illegal, gives provocation to any person intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause the offence of rioting to be committed, shall, if the offence of rioting be committed in consequence of such provocation, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both;

if rioting be committed; if not committed.

and if the offence of rioting be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Provocation for rioting.—A person, who maliciously or recklessly gives provocation to another by doing an illegal act knowing that such provocation will incite the other to rioting, is punishable under this section. The offence under this section involves some act of origination of a riot by doing an illegal act infuriating to the feelings of those who ultimately come to riot. The expression "gives provocation" connotes such idea. This section is intended to apply to such provocative words or acts as do not amount directly to instigation or abetment.¹⁶⁸ A mere chance provocation is not sufficient to justify conviction under this section.¹⁶⁹ The section is divided into two parts. If rioting is committed the punishment is more severe.

[s 153.1] Essential Ingredients:

- (a) The 'act' imputed against the accused is illegal,
- (b) He has done such act malignantly or wantonly, and,
- (c) He has given provocation to any person intending or knowing that such provocation will cause the offence of rioting.¹⁷⁰

1. 'Malignantly'.— implies a sort of general malice.¹⁷¹ The adverbs 'maliciously' and 'malignantly' are synonymous. Malice is not, as in ordinary speech, only an expression of hatred or ill-will to an individual, but means an unlawful act done intentionally without just cause or excuse.¹⁷² Malignant means extreme malevolence or enmity; violently hostile or harmful.

2. 'Wantonly'.— means recklessly, thoughtlessly, without regard for right or consequences. This word gives to the offence contained in this section a far larger, vaguer and more comprehensive scope, than would be implied by the word 'malignantly' standing alone. It occurs only in this section of the Code, while the word 'malignantly' occurs once again in section 270.

[s 153.2] CASES.—

The affixing of the poster exhorting for boycotting the election, even if it is objectionable, is not sufficient to show that by such affixture provocation is given to any person for causing the offence of rioting. Howsoever deplorable be the act of affixing the poster, to constitute the offence under section 153 of IPC, 1860, over and above the provocation that is likely to give cause for rioting, it has to be shown that the act — affixing of the poster — is illegal.¹⁷³

Where the accused wrote a pamphlet in praise of a person who was opposed to the High Priest of the Borah community in certain matters, but his real intention appeared to be to show a grave insult to the High Priest, an insult which was likely to inflame the feelings of the followers of the High Priest and to lead to a riot, it was held that he was guilty under this section.¹⁷⁴ Where a bride and bridegroom belonging to depressed classes rode in palanquins through a village in spite of the protests of high caste Hindus, it was held that this was not an illegal act for which they could be convicted under this section.¹⁷⁵ Where the accused unfastened the string of the National flag after flag-hoisting ceremony and tried to trample on it, it was held that the accused was guilty under this section as the act of the accused was deliberately insulting to the flag and thereby the accused intended to wound the feelings and sentiments of the other persons present.^{176.}

168. Ahmed Hasham, (1932) 35 Bom LR 240 , 57 Bom 329.

169. Dr RC Chowala, AIR 1966 Ori 192 [LNIND 1965 ORI 73] . Aroon Purie v HL Varma, 1999 Cr LJ 983 (Bom), in a debate on secularism, remarks were passed by some speakers touching sentiments of others. It was held that a true publication of such remarks would not come within the ambit of section 153, though they might constitute defamation. See also Baragur Ram Chandrappa v State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 3639 (Kant—DB).

170. Raju Thomas @ John Thomas v State, 2012 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 (Ker) : 2012 (4) Ker LT 499 ; See also Manzar Sayeed Khan v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : AIR 2007 SC 2074 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : 2007 Cr LJ 2959 .

171. Kahanji, (1893) 18 Bom 758, 775.[2012 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 (Ker) : 2012 (4) Ker LT 499].

172. Bromage v Prosser, (1825) 4 B&C 247. [2012 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 (Ker) : 2012 (4) Ker LT 499].

173. Advocate Manuel PJ v State, 2012 (4) Ker LT 708 . See also Raju Thomas @ John Thomas v State, 2012 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 (Ker) : 2012 (4) Ker LT 499 .

174. Rahimatalli Mahomedalli, (1919) 22 Bom LR 166 .

175. Jasnami, (1936) 58 All 934 .

176. Indra Singh v State, AIR 1962 MP 292 [LNIND 1957 MP 82] . Rajendra v State of Rajasthan, 2006 Cr LJ 173 (Raj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

177. [[s 153A] Promoting enmity between different groups on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, etc., and doing acts prejudicial to maintenance of harmony.

(1) Whoever—

- (a) by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote, on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, caste or community or any other ground whatsoever, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities, or
- (b) commits any act which is prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities, and which disturbs or is likely to disturb the public tranquillity, ¹⁷⁸. [or]

¹⁷⁹[(c) organizes any exercise, movement, drill or other similar activity intending that the participants in such activity shall use or be trained to use criminal force or violence or knowing it to be likely that the participants in such activity will use or be trained to use criminal force or violence, or participates in such activity intending to use or be trained to use criminal force or violence or knowing it to be likely that the participants in such activity will use or be trained to use criminal force or violence, against any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community and such activity for any reason whatsoever causes or is likely to cause fear or alarm or a feeling of insecurity amongst members of such religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community,]

shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

(2) Offence committed in place of worship, etc.

Whoever commits an offence specified in sub-section (1) in any place of worship or in any assembly engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine.]

COMMENT—

Promoting enmity.—This section replaces the old section. Sub-section (1)(c) has been newly inserted by Act 31 of 1972. This section provides for enhanced punishment for offences committed in a place of worship and making offences under this section cognisable. Under this section promoting enmity between different groups on grounds such as, place of birth, or residence are included and it also makes promotion of disharmony or feelings of ill-will an offence punishable under it. The provision in clause (b) of sub-section (1) to the section includes acts prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different regional groups and sub-section (2) provides for enhanced punishment for any offence specified in sub-section (1) when it is committed in a place of worship, etc. With communal and fissiparous tendencies on the increase this section has now gained an added importance. The object of section 153-A is to prevent breaches of the public tranquillity which might result from excited feelings of enmity between classes of people. Absence of malicious intention is a relevant factor to judge whether the offence is committed. ¹⁸⁰.

Section 153A of IPC, 1860, covers a case where a person by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities or acts prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony or is likely to disturb the public tranquillity. The gist of the offence is the intention to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of people. The intention to cause disorder or incite the people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153A of IPC and the prosecution has to prove prima facie the existence of mens rea on the part of the accused. ¹⁸¹. The intention to cause disorder or incite people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153A IPC and the prosecution has to prove the existence of mens rea in order to succeed. In this case, the prosecution has not been able to establish any mens rea on the part of the appellants as envisaged by the provisions of section 153A IPC, by their raising casually the slogans a couple of times. The offence under section 153A IPC is, therefore, not made out.^{182.}

There must either be the intention to promote such feelings, or such feelings should be promoted as the result of words spoken or written. The words promotes or tends to promote feelings of enmity are to be read as connoting a successful or unsuccessful attempt to promote feelings of enmity. It must be the purpose or parts of the purpose of the accused to promote such feelings, and, if it is no part of his purpose, the mere circumstance that there may be a tendency is not sufficient.^{183.} The word classes includes any definite and ascertainable class of people. Capitalists do not constitute a class within the meaning of this section.^{184.} To bring any body of persons within the description of a class of people, the body of persons must possess a certain degree of importance numerically, and must be ascertained with certainty and distinguished from any other class. Every group of persons cannot be designated as a class.^{185.} The classes contemplated must be not merely clearly defined and separable but also numerous. A small and limited group of Zamindars cannot be regarded as constituting a class.^{186.} Petitioner published a sentence "Oriya is a younger sister of Bengal" in his book. Subsequently petitioner published an apology in newspaper and deleted the controversial statement. In view of this it cannot be said that alleged sentence published to defame Oriya language or promote hatred between different linguistic groups. Criminal proceeding are quashed.^{187.}

The police force of the State cannot be brought within the purview of the term "community".^{188.}

[s 153A.1] Political Thesis.—

This section cannot be used even if an article causes or tends to cause hatred or enmity between different political classes like the capitalists and the labour class or between persons believing in different forms of Government, e.g., a democratic or totalitarian rule. A bare reading of clause (a) of section 153A will show that a person will be guilty under this section only where by words, either spoken or written, he promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different religious, racial, linguistic groups or castes or communities on grounds of religion, race, language, caste or community, etc., and not otherwise.^{189.} But where the author in the guise of presenting a political thesis or historical truth wrote two articles describing the Muslims as a basically violent race and further described today's Muslims as the descendants of foul Moghuls rulers who were lustful perverts, rapists and murderers, it was held that both the articles promoted feelings of enmity between Hindus and Muslims and came within the mischief of section 153A IPC, 1860, whether or not the Moghuls were really so.^{190.} In fine, this section does not contemplate the penalising of political doctrines, even though of the extreme kind like communism, but only such writings as directly promote feelings of hatred or enmity between classes. But if a publication advocates forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions, and aims at promoting class hatred and enmity, it comes under the purview of this section.^{191.}

1. Historical Account.—If the writing is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, it is no defence to a charge under section 153-A of IPC, 1860, that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority. Adherence to the strict path of history is not by itself a complete defence to a charge under section 153-A. It is no defence to a charge under section 153-A of IPC that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority.^{192.}

But it would be no offence if the author adheres to the historical part of his narrative, however unpalatable it may be to the members of the other community, but if he uses language which shows malice and is bound to annoy the members of the other community so as to degrade them in the eyes of the other classes, he is promoting feelings of enmity and hatred and is liable to be dealt with under this section and section 295- A.¹⁹³ It is, therefore, important to remember that criminality under section 153A does not attach to the thing said or done but to the manner in which it is said or done. If the words spoken or written are couched in temperate language and do not have the tendency to insult the feelings or the deepest religious convictions of any section of the people, penal consequences do not follow.¹⁹⁴ This appears also to be the law in England in regard to blasphemous libel. Thus, in Lemon's case Lord Diplock observed:

To publish opinion denying the truth of the established church or even of Christianity itself was no longer held to amount to the offence of blasphemous libel so long as such opinions were expressed in temperate language and not in terms of offence, insult or ridicule.¹⁹⁵

So what is said or written is not so important as how it is said or written or with what intent it is said or written. Where, therefore, the article did not intend or exhibit any insult to any religion but read as a whole projected a scholarly historical thesis showing as to how in pre-Islamic times the ancient Hindu culture and Hindu religion were in vogue in Arabia and how Islamic culture, religion and art were greatly influenced by Indian culture and religion, it could not be said that the article came within the mischief of section 153A, IPC, 1860, or section 95, Cr PC, 1973. The scope of section 153A, IPC, cannot be enlarged to such an extent with a view to thwart history or historical events.¹⁹⁶

Where an article in a newspaper bears a meaning that is calculated to produce hatred and enmity between two classes, the natural inference from the publication of such an article is that the person who published it had the malicious intention that it should produce such hatred and enmity.¹⁹⁷ A Hindu, who ridicules the Prophet of the Mohammedans not out of any eccentricity but in the prosecution of a propaganda started by a class of persons who are not Mohammedans, promotes feelings of enmity and hatred between Hindus and Mohammedans, and is liable to punishment under the section.¹⁹⁸ In order to ascertain the intention of the accused, the offending article must be read as a whole and the circumstances attending that publication must also be taken into account.¹⁹⁹

An FIR was filed against the author, publisher and printer of the book "Shivaji: Hindu King in Islamic India" on the ground that certain passages were objectionable. This led to blackening of the face of a local scholar, ransacking of a research institute and destruction of manuscripts, etc. The members of the institute had helped the author made contributions to enable the author to complete the work. The author was an American professor based in the USA. He tendered apology, by fax and the publishers immediately withdrew all the copies from the market. In proceedings against the author, etc., it was held that the book was purely a scholarly pursuit. There was no intention or motive to create trouble for the author and others. The State was directed not to proceed against them. The Supreme Court explained the gist of the offence under the section as follows:

The gist of the offence under section 153-A is the intention to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of people. The intention to cause disorder or incite the people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153-A IPC, 1860, and the prosecution has to prove prima facie the existence of mens rea on the part of the accused. The intention has to be judged primarily by the language of the book and the circumstances in which the book was written and published. The matter complained of to fall within the ambit of section 153-A must be read as a whole. One cannot rely on strongly worded and isolated passage for proving the charge nor indeed can one take a sentence here and a sentence there and connect them by a meticulous process of inferential reasoning.

The effect of the words must be judged from the standards of reasonable, strong-minded, firm and courageous men, and not those of weak and vacillating minds, nor of those who scent danger in every hostile point of view. It is the standard of the ordinary reasonable man or as they say in English law "the man on the top of a Clapham omnibus".

The common feature in both the sections, viz., sections 153-A and 505(2), being promotion of feeling of enmity, hatred or ill-will "between different" religious or racial or linguistic or regional groups or castes and communities, it is necessary that at least two such groups or communities should be involved. Merely inciting the feeling of one community or group without any reference to any other community or group cannot attract either of the two sections.²⁰⁰ In State of Maharashtra v Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate,²⁰¹ the Supreme Court again considered the question whether a notification issued by the Maharashtra Government to forfeit the book "Shivaji: Hindu King in Islamic India". It was held that the notification does not identify the communities between which the book had caused or is likely to cause enmity. It cannot be found out from the notification as to which communities got outraged by the publication of the book or it had had caused hatred and animosity between the particular communities or groups—statement in the notification to the effect that the book is 'likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity and in particular between those who revere Shri Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj and those who may not' is too vague a ground to satisfy the aforesaid tests. The order quashing the notification was upheld by the Supreme Court.

In Ramesh Chotalal Dalal v UOI,²⁰² the Court held that TV serial "Tamas" did not depict communal tension and violence and the provisions of section 153A of IPC, 1860, would not apply to it. It was also not prejudicial to the national integration falling under section 153B of IPC. Approving the observations of Vivian Bose, J in Bhagvati Charan Shukla v Provincial Government,²⁰³ the Court observed that the effect of the words must be judged from the standards of reasonable, strong-minded, firm and courageous men, and not those of weak and vacillating minds, nor of those who scent danger in every hostile point of view. It is the standard of ordinary reasonable man or as they say in English Law, "the man on the clapham omnibus". Again in Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP,²⁰⁴ it was held that the common feature in both the sections, viz., sections 153A and 505 (2), being promotion of feeling of enmity, hatred or ill-will "between different" religious or racial or linguistic or regional groups or castes and communities, it is necessary that at least two such groups or communities should be involved. Further, it was observed that merely inciting the feeling of one community or group without any reference to any other community or group cannot attract either of the two sections.

2. Scurrilous attack on basic religious books.—Section 153A certainly affords protection to the basic religious books of all the religions against scurrilous attacks. In Chandanmal Chopra v State of WB,²⁰⁵ it was alleged that the Koran, the basic religious book of Muslim religion promotes religious disharmony by advocating destructions of idols, etc., and thereby outrages not only the religious feelings of non-Muslims but also encourages hatred, disharmony, feeling of enmity between different religious communities in India, and the petitioner sought for directing the State of West Bengal to forfeit every copy of Koran. It was also alleged that the publication of Koran amounts to commission of offences punishable under sections 153A and 295A of IPC, 1860. In support of their contention the petitioners quoted some isolated passages from the Koran. In rejecting this contention the High Court of Calcutta held that sections 153A and 295A of the Code have no application in the present case. The book is the basic text book of the Mohammedans and is held sacred by them like Bible to Christians and Gita, Ramayana and Mahabharata to Hindus. Because of Koran no public tranquillity has been disturbed up to now and there is no reason to apprehend such disturbance in future. On the other hand the action of the petitioners may be said to have attempted to promote, on grounds of religion, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will amongst different religions, i.e., Muslims on the one hand and non-Muslims on the other within the meaning of section 153A, IPC, 1860. Forfeiture of Koran would go against the Preamble of the Constitution and violate Article 25 of the Constitution which guarantees freedom of conscience and religion to one and all.

3. Evidence of hatred, etc., not needed.—A Special Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that under this section it is not necessary to prove that as a result of the objectionable matter, enmity or hatred was in fact caused between the different classes. Intention to promote enmity or hatred, apart from the writing itself, is not a necessary ingredient of the offence. It is enough to show that the language of the writing is of a nature calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred for a person must be presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act. If a writing is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, it is no defence to a charge under this section that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority. Adherence to the strict path of history is not by itself a complete defence to a charge under this section.^{206.}

Immediately after the demolition of Babri masjid and violent riots in Bombay, editorials appeared in the Marathi newspaper 'Samna' which were in high flown and caustic language but were not directed against the Muslim Community as a whole but only against anti-national elements amongst them and also against the attitude of police, army and Government. The articles were held to be not coming within the mischief of section 153-A and section 153-B.^{207.}

[s 153A.2] Previous Sanction:

Previous sanction under section 196 Cr PC, 1973, is a must before taking cognizance of the offences under section 153 and 153B IPC, 1860.^{208.}

^{177.} Subs. by Act 35 of 1969, sec. 2, for section 153A (w.e.f. 4-9-1969). Earlier section 153A was substituted by Act 41 of 1961, sec. 2 (w.e.f. 12-9-1961).

^{178.} Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

^{179.} Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

^{180.} The Trustees of Safdar Hashmi Memorial Trust v Govt of Nct of Delhi, 2001 Cr LJ 3689 (Del).

^{181.} Manzar Sayeed Khan v State of Maharashtra, [\(2007\) 5 SCC 1 \[LNIND 2007 SC 437\]](#) : [AIR 2007 SC 2074 \[LNIND 2007 SC 437\]](#) : 2007 Cr LJ 2959 .

^{182.} Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, [AIR 1995 SC 1785 \[LNIND 1995 SC 1420\]](#) : [\(1995\) 3 SCC 214 \[LNIND 1995 SC 1420\]](#) : \(1995\) 1 SCC \(Cr\) 432.

^{183.} Ram, (1924) Kant 31. Mens rea is a necessary requirement of this offence. State (Delhi Admn) v Shrikanth Shastri, 1987 Cr LJ 1583 .

^{184.} Maniben Kara, \(1932\) 34 Bom LR 1642 ; Nepal Chandra Bhattacharjya, \(1939\) 1 Cal 299 .

^{185.} Narayan Vasudev Phadke, \(1940\) 42 Bom LR 861 .

186. Banomali Maharana, (1942) 22 Pat 48.
187. Express Publications (Madurai) Ltd v State of Orissa, 2006 Cr LJ 2548 (Ori).
188. Hardik Bharatbhai Patel v State of Gujarat, 2016 Cr LJ 225 (Guj) : 2015 (4) Crimes 462 (Guj).
189. Shiv Kumar, 1978 Cr LJ 701 (All).
190. Baburao Patel, 1980 Cr LJ 529 : AIR 1980 SC 763 [LNIND 1980 SC 84] .
191. Gautam, (1937) All 69 (SB).
192. R V Bhasin v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1375 (FB) (Bom); Gopal Godse v UOI, AIR 1971 Bom 56 [LNIND 1969 BOM 50] .
193. Harnam Das, (1957) 1 All 528 (FB).
194. Azizul Haque, 1980 Cr LJ 448 (SC).
195. Rex v Lemon, (1971) 1 All ER 898 .
196. Varsha Publications Pvt Ltd v State of Maharashtra, 1983 Cr LJ 1446 (Bom—SB); Nand Kishore Singh v State of Bihar, 1985 Cr LJ 797 (Pat-SB).
197. Kanchanlal Chunilal, (1930) 32 Bom LR 585 .
198. Shib Sharma, (1941) 16 Luck 674 .
199. Ghulam Sarwar, AIR 1965 Pat 393 .
200. Manzar Sayeed Khan v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : AIR 2007 SC 2074 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : 2007 Cr LJ 2959 ; Sajjan Kumar v CBI, (2010) 9 SCC 368 [LNIND 2010 SC 892] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1371 : (2010) 11 SCR 669 : 2011 AIR (SCW) 3730, Anti-Sikh Riots charges framed against Sajjan Kumar upheld by the SC. In S Khushboo v Kanniammal, JT 2010 (4) SC 478 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : 2010 (4) Scale 462 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 5 SCR 322 : 2010 Cr LJ 2828 : AIR 2010 SC 3196 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 2 SCC (Cr) 1299, it is found that section 153A IPC, 1860, have no application to the present case since the appellant was not speaking on behalf of one group and the content of her statement was not directed against any particular group either.
201. State of Maharashtra v Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate, (2010) 7 SCC 398 [LNIND 2010 SC 1557] : 2010 AIR (SCW) 4960 : (2010) 8 SCR 328 [LNIND 2010 SC 1557] : 2010 Cr LJ 4290 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 401. In Anand Chintamani Dighe v State of Maharashtra, 2002 Cr LJ 8 (Bom), the Government of Maharashtra issued notification under section 95(1) of the Code declaring that every copy of the Marathi play entitled "Mee Nathuram Godse Bolto" be forfeited to the Government. The notification, inter alia, stated that the play in question contained derogatory references towards Mahatma Gandhi and certain communities and was likely to disturb public tranquillity and that it was written with a deliberate and malicious intention to outrage the feelings of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi, The publication would be punishable under sections 153-A and 295-A of IPC, 1860. The challenge to the notification was repelled by the Bombay High Court.
202. Ramesh Chotalal Dalal v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 775 [LNIND 1988 SC 74]
203. Bhagvati Charan Shukla v Provincial Government, AIR 1947 Nag 1 .
204. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, (1997) 7 SCC 431 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] .
205. Chandanmal Chopra v State of WB, AIR 1986 Cal 104 [LNIND 1985 CAL 180] , 1986 Cr LJ 182 (Cal).
206. Gopal, (1969) 72 Bom LR 871 (SB).
207. Joseph Bain D'Souza v State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 1316 Bom. The court relied on Varsha Publications Pvt Ltd v State of Maharashtra, 1983 Cr LJ 1446 but distinguished; Babu Rao Patel v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1980 SC 763 [LNIND 1980 SC 84] : 1980 Cr LJ 529 . Trustees of Safdar Hashmi Memorial Trust v Govt of NCT of Delhi, 2001 Cr LJ 3689 (Del), the object of the provision is to prevent breaches of public tranquillity which might result from excited feelings of enmity between classes of people. Malicious intention or mens rea has to be proved. Mohd Khalid Hussain v State of AP, 2000 Cr LJ 2949 (AP), offence of promoting enmity between people on the ground of religion. There was nothing to show the actual words uttered or acts committed. There were only vague allegations. FIR quashed. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, 1997 Cr LJ 4091 : AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] , inciting the feelings of one group without any reference to another, attracts neither section 153A nor section 505.

208. Swaraj Thackeray v State of Jharkhand, 2008 Cr LJ 3780 (Jhar); Shailbhadra Shah v Swami Krishna Bharti, 1981 Cr LJ 113 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

177. [[s 153A] Promoting enmity between different groups on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, etc., and doing acts prejudicial to maintenance of harmony.

(1) Whoever—

- (a) by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote, on grounds of religion, race, place of birth, residence, language, caste or community or any other ground whatsoever, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities, or
- (b) commits any act which is prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities, and which disturbs or is likely to disturb the public tranquillity, ¹⁷⁸. [or]

¹⁷⁹[(c) organizes any exercise, movement, drill or other similar activity intending that the participants in such activity shall use or be trained to use criminal force or violence or knowing it to be likely that the participants in such activity will use or be trained to use criminal force or violence, or participates in such activity intending to use or be trained to use criminal force or violence or knowing it to be likely that the participants in such activity will use or be trained to use criminal force or violence, against any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community and such activity for any reason whatsoever causes or is likely to cause fear or alarm or a feeling of insecurity amongst members of such religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community,]

shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

(2) Offence committed in place of worship, etc.

Whoever commits an offence specified in sub-section (1) in any place of worship or in any assembly engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine.]

COMMENT—

Promoting enmity.—This section replaces the old section. Sub-section (1)(c) has been newly inserted by Act 31 of 1972. This section provides for enhanced punishment for offences committed in a place of worship and making offences under this section cognisable. Under this section promoting enmity between different groups on grounds such as, place of birth, or residence are included and it also makes promotion of disharmony or feelings of ill-will an offence punishable under it. The provision in clause (b) of sub-section (1) to the section includes acts prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony between different regional groups and sub-section (2) provides for enhanced punishment for any offence specified in sub-section (1) when it is committed in a place of worship, etc. With communal and fissiparous tendencies on the increase this section has now gained an added importance. The object of section 153-A is to prevent breaches of the public tranquillity which might result from excited feelings of enmity between classes of people. Absence of malicious intention is a relevant factor to judge whether the offence is committed. ¹⁸⁰.

Section 153A of IPC, 1860, covers a case where a person by words, either spoken or written, or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will between different religious, racial, language or regional groups or castes or communities or acts prejudicial to the maintenance of harmony or is likely to disturb the public tranquillity. The gist of the offence is the intention to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of people. The intention to cause disorder or incite the people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153A of IPC and the prosecution has to prove prima facie the existence of mens rea on the part of the accused. ¹⁸¹. The intention to cause disorder or incite people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153A IPC and the prosecution has to prove the existence of mens rea in order to succeed. In this case, the prosecution has not been able to establish any mens rea on the part of the appellants as envisaged by the provisions of section 153A IPC, by their raising casually the slogans a couple of times. The offence under section 153A IPC is, therefore, not made out.^{182.}

There must either be the intention to promote such feelings, or such feelings should be promoted as the result of words spoken or written. The words promotes or tends to promote feelings of enmity are to be read as connoting a successful or unsuccessful attempt to promote feelings of enmity. It must be the purpose or parts of the purpose of the accused to promote such feelings, and, if it is no part of his purpose, the mere circumstance that there may be a tendency is not sufficient.^{183.} The word classes includes any definite and ascertainable class of people. Capitalists do not constitute a class within the meaning of this section.^{184.} To bring any body of persons within the description of a class of people, the body of persons must possess a certain degree of importance numerically, and must be ascertained with certainty and distinguished from any other class. Every group of persons cannot be designated as a class.^{185.} The classes contemplated must be not merely clearly defined and separable but also numerous. A small and limited group of Zamindars cannot be regarded as constituting a class.^{186.} Petitioner published a sentence "Oriya is a younger sister of Bengal" in his book. Subsequently petitioner published an apology in newspaper and deleted the controversial statement. In view of this it cannot be said that alleged sentence published to defame Oriya language or promote hatred between different linguistic groups. Criminal proceeding are quashed.^{187.}

The police force of the State cannot be brought within the purview of the term "community".^{188.}

[s 153A.1] Political Thesis.—

This section cannot be used even if an article causes or tends to cause hatred or enmity between different political classes like the capitalists and the labour class or between persons believing in different forms of Government, e.g., a democratic or totalitarian rule. A bare reading of clause (a) of section 153A will show that a person will be guilty under this section only where by words, either spoken or written, he promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different religious, racial, linguistic groups or castes or communities on grounds of religion, race, language, caste or community, etc., and not otherwise.^{189.} But where the author in the guise of presenting a political thesis or historical truth wrote two articles describing the Muslims as a basically violent race and further described today's Muslims as the descendants of foul Moghuls rulers who were lustful perverts, rapists and murderers, it was held that both the articles promoted feelings of enmity between Hindus and Muslims and came within the mischief of section 153A IPC, 1860, whether or not the Moghuls were really so.^{190.} In fine, this section does not contemplate the penalising of political doctrines, even though of the extreme kind like communism, but only such writings as directly promote feelings of hatred or enmity between classes. But if a publication advocates forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions, and aims at promoting class hatred and enmity, it comes under the purview of this section.^{191.}

1. Historical Account.—If the writing is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, it is no defence to a charge under section 153-A of IPC, 1860, that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority. Adherence to the strict path of history is not by itself a complete defence to a charge under section 153-A. It is no defence to a charge under section 153-A of IPC that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority.^{192.}

But it would be no offence if the author adheres to the historical part of his narrative, however unpalatable it may be to the members of the other community, but if he uses language which shows malice and is bound to annoy the members of the other community so as to degrade them in the eyes of the other classes, he is promoting feelings of enmity and hatred and is liable to be dealt with under this section and section 295- A.¹⁹³ It is, therefore, important to remember that criminality under section 153A does not attach to the thing said or done but to the manner in which it is said or done. If the words spoken or written are couched in temperate language and do not have the tendency to insult the feelings or the deepest religious convictions of any section of the people, penal consequences do not follow.¹⁹⁴ This appears also to be the law in England in regard to blasphemous libel. Thus, in Lemon's case Lord Diplock observed:

To publish opinion denying the truth of the established church or even of Christianity itself was no longer held to amount to the offence of blasphemous libel so long as such opinions were expressed in temperate language and not in terms of offence, insult or ridicule.¹⁹⁵

So what is said or written is not so important as how it is said or written or with what intent it is said or written. Where, therefore, the article did not intend or exhibit any insult to any religion but read as a whole projected a scholarly historical thesis showing as to how in pre-Islamic times the ancient Hindu culture and Hindu religion were in vogue in Arabia and how Islamic culture, religion and art were greatly influenced by Indian culture and religion, it could not be said that the article came within the mischief of section 153A, IPC, 1860, or section 95, Cr PC, 1973. The scope of section 153A, IPC, cannot be enlarged to such an extent with a view to thwart history or historical events.¹⁹⁶

Where an article in a newspaper bears a meaning that is calculated to produce hatred and enmity between two classes, the natural inference from the publication of such an article is that the person who published it had the malicious intention that it should produce such hatred and enmity.¹⁹⁷ A Hindu, who ridicules the Prophet of the Mohammedans not out of any eccentricity but in the prosecution of a propaganda started by a class of persons who are not Mohammedans, promotes feelings of enmity and hatred between Hindus and Mohammedans, and is liable to punishment under the section.¹⁹⁸ In order to ascertain the intention of the accused, the offending article must be read as a whole and the circumstances attending that publication must also be taken into account.¹⁹⁹

An FIR was filed against the author, publisher and printer of the book "Shivaji: Hindu King in Islamic India" on the ground that certain passages were objectionable. This led to blackening of the face of a local scholar, ransacking of a research institute and destruction of manuscripts, etc. The members of the institute had helped the author made contributions to enable the author to complete the work. The author was an American professor based in the USA. He tendered apology, by fax and the publishers immediately withdrew all the copies from the market. In proceedings against the author, etc., it was held that the book was purely a scholarly pursuit. There was no intention or motive to create trouble for the author and others. The State was directed not to proceed against them. The Supreme Court explained the gist of the offence under the section as follows:

The gist of the offence under section 153-A is the intention to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of people. The intention to cause disorder or incite the people to violence is the sine qua non of the offence under section 153-A IPC, 1860, and the prosecution has to prove prima facie the existence of mens rea on the part of the accused. The intention has to be judged primarily by the language of the book and the circumstances in which the book was written and published. The matter complained of to fall within the ambit of section 153-A must be read as a whole. One cannot rely on strongly worded and isolated passage for proving the charge nor indeed can one take a sentence here and a sentence there and connect them by a meticulous process of inferential reasoning.

The effect of the words must be judged from the standards of reasonable, strong-minded, firm and courageous men, and not those of weak and vacillating minds, nor of those who scent danger in every hostile point of view. It is the standard of the ordinary reasonable man or as they say in English law "the man on the top of a Clapham omnibus".

The common feature in both the sections, viz., sections 153-A and 505(2), being promotion of feeling of enmity, hatred or ill-will "between different" religious or racial or linguistic or regional groups or castes and communities, it is necessary that at least two such groups or communities should be involved. Merely inciting the feeling of one community or group without any reference to any other community or group cannot attract either of the two sections.²⁰⁰. In State of Maharashtra v Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate,²⁰¹ the Supreme Court again considered the question whether a notification issued by the Maharashtra Government to forfeit the book "Shivaji: Hindu King in Islamic India". It was held that the notification does not identify the communities between which the book had caused or is likely to cause enmity. It cannot be found out from the notification as to which communities got outraged by the publication of the book or it had had caused hatred and animosity between the particular communities or groups—statement in the notification to the effect that the book is 'likely to result in breach of peace and public tranquillity and in particular between those who revere Shri Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj and those who may not' is too vague a ground to satisfy the aforesaid tests. The order quashing the notification was upheld by the Supreme Court.

In Ramesh Chotalal Dalal v UOI,²⁰² the Court held that TV serial "Tamas" did not depict communal tension and violence and the provisions of section 153A of IPC, 1860, would not apply to it. It was also not prejudicial to the national integration falling under section 153B of IPC. Approving the observations of Vivian Bose, J in Bhagvati Charan Shukla v Provincial Government,²⁰³ the Court observed that the effect of the words must be judged from the standards of reasonable, strong-minded, firm and courageous men, and not those of weak and vacillating minds, nor of those who scent danger in every hostile point of view. It is the standard of ordinary reasonable man or as they say in English Law, "the man on the clapham omnibus". Again in Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP,²⁰⁴ it was held that the common feature in both the sections, viz., sections 153A and 505 (2), being promotion of feeling of enmity, hatred or ill-will "between different" religious or racial or linguistic or regional groups or castes and communities, it is necessary that at least two such groups or communities should be involved. Further, it was observed that merely inciting the feeling of one community or group without any reference to any other community or group cannot attract either of the two sections.

2. Scurrilous attack on basic religious books.—Section 153A certainly affords protection to the basic religious books of all the religions against scurrilous attacks. In Chandanmal Chopra v State of WB,²⁰⁵ it was alleged that the Koran, the basic religious book of Muslim religion promotes religious disharmony by advocating destructions of idols, etc., and thereby outrages not only the religious feelings of non-Muslims but also encourages hatred, disharmony, feeling of enmity between different religious communities in India, and the petitioner sought for directing the State of West Bengal to forfeit every copy of Koran. It was also alleged that the publication of Koran amounts to commission of offences punishable under sections 153A and 295A of IPC, 1860. In support of their contention the petitioners quoted some isolated passages from the Koran. In rejecting this contention the High Court of Calcutta held that sections 153A and 295A of the Code have no application in the present case. The book is the basic text book of the Mohammedans and is held sacred by them like Bible to Christians and Gita, Ramayana and Mahabharata to Hindus. Because of Koran no public tranquillity has been disturbed up to now and there is no reason to apprehend such disturbance in future. On the other hand the action of the petitioners may be said to have attempted to promote, on grounds of religion, disharmony or feelings of enmity, hatred or ill-will amongst different religions, i.e., Muslims on the one hand and non-Muslims on the other within the meaning of section 153A, IPC, 1860. Forfeiture of Koran would go against the Preamble of the Constitution and violate Article 25 of the Constitution which guarantees freedom of conscience and religion to one and all.

3. Evidence of hatred, etc., not needed.—A Special Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that under this section it is not necessary to prove that as a result of the objectionable matter, enmity or hatred was in fact caused between the different classes. Intention to promote enmity or hatred, apart from the writing itself, is not a necessary ingredient of the offence. It is enough to show that the language of the writing is of a nature calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred for a person must be presumed to intend the natural consequences of his act. If a writing is calculated to promote feelings of enmity or hatred, it is no defence to a charge under this section that the writing contains a truthful account of past events or is otherwise supported by good authority. Adherence to the strict path of history is not by itself a complete defence to a charge under this section.²⁰⁶.

Immediately after the demolition of Babri masjid and violent riots in Bombay, editorials appeared in the Marathi newspaper 'Samna' which were in high flown and caustic language but were not directed against the Muslim Community as a whole but only against anti-national elements amongst them and also against the attitude of police, army and Government. The articles were held to be not coming within the mischief of section 153-A and section 153-B.²⁰⁷.

[s 153A.2] Previous Sanction:

Previous sanction under section 196 Cr PC, 1973, is a must before taking cognizance of the offences under section 153 and 153B IPC, 1860.²⁰⁸.

¹⁷⁷. Subs. by Act 35 of 1969, sec. 2, for section 153A (w.e.f. 4-9-1969). Earlier section 153A was substituted by Act 41 of 1961, sec. 2 (w.e.f. 12-9-1961).

¹⁷⁸. Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

¹⁷⁹. Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

¹⁸⁰. The Trustees of Safdar Hashmi Memorial Trust v Govt of Nct of Delhi, 2001 Cr LJ 3689 (Del).

¹⁸¹. Manzar Sayeed Khan v State of Maharashtra, [\(2007\) 5 SCC 1 \[LNIND 2007 SC 437\]](#) : [AIR 2007 SC 2074 \[LNIND 2007 SC 437\]](#) : 2007 Cr LJ 2959 .

¹⁸². Balwant Singh v State of Punjab, [AIR 1995 SC 1785 \[LNIND 1995 SC 1420\]](#) : [\(1995\) 3 SCC 214 \[LNIND 1995 SC 1420\]](#) : \(1995\) 1 SCC \(Cr\) 432.

¹⁸³. Ram, (1924) Kant 31. Mens rea is a necessary requirement of this offence. State (Delhi Admn) v Shrikanth Shastri, 1987 Cr LJ 1583 .

¹⁸⁴. Maniben Kara, \(1932\) 34 Bom LR 1642 ; Nepal Chandra Bhattacharjya, \(1939\) 1 Cal 299 .

¹⁸⁵. Narayan Vasudev Phadke, \(1940\) 42 Bom LR 861 .

¹⁸⁶. Banomali Maharana, (1942) 22 Pat 48.

¹⁸⁷. Express Publications (Madurai) Ltd v State of Orissa, 2006 Cr LJ 2548 (Ori).

¹⁸⁸. Hardik Bharatbhai Patel v State of Gujarat, 2016 Cr LJ 225 (Guj) : 2015 \(4\) Crimes 462 (Guj).

189. Shiv Kumar, 1978 Cr LJ 701 (All).
190. Baburao Patel, 1980 Cr LJ 529 : AIR 1980 SC 763 [LNIND 1980 SC 84] .
191. Gautam, (1937) All 69 (SB).
192. R V Bhasin v State of Maharashtra, 2012 Cr LJ 1375 (FB) (Bom); Gopal Godse v UOI, AIR 1971 Bom 56 [LNIND 1969 BOM 50] .
193. Harnam Das, (1957) 1 All 528 (FB).
194. Azizul Haque, 1980 Cr LJ 448 (SC).
195. Rex v Lemon, (1971) 1 All ER 898 .
196. Varsha Publications Pvt Ltd v State of Maharashtra, 1983 Cr LJ 1446 (Bom–SB); Nand Kishore Singh v State of Bihar, 1985 Cr LJ 797 (Pat-SB).
197. Kanchanlal Chunilal, (1930) 32 Bom LR 585 .
198. Shib Sharma, (1941) 16 Luck 674 .
199. Ghulam Sarwar, AIR 1965 Pat 393 .
200. Manzar Sayeed Khan v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 5 SCC 1 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : AIR 2007 SC 2074 [LNIND 2007 SC 437] : 2007 Cr LJ 2959 ; Sajjan Kumar v CBI, (2010) 9 SCC 368 [LNIND 2010 SC 892] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1371 : (2010) 11 SCR 669 : 2011 AIR (SCW) 3730, Anti-Sikh Riots charges framed against Sajjan Kumar upheld by the SC. In S Khushboo v Kanniammal, JT 2010 (4) SC 478 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : 2010 (4) Scale 462 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 5 SCR 322 : 2010 Cr LJ 2828 : AIR 2010 SC 3196 [LNIND 2010 SC 411] : (2010) 2 SCC (Cr) 1299, it is found that section 153A IPC, 1860, have no application to the present case since the appellant was not speaking on behalf of one group and the content of her statement was not directed against any particular group either.
201. State of Maharashtra v Sangharaj Damodar Rupawate, (2010) 7 SCC 398 [LNIND 2010 SC 1557] : 2010 AIR (SCW) 4960 : (2010) 8 SCR 328 [LNIND 2010 SC 1557] : 2010 Cr LJ 4290 : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 401. In Anand Chintamani Dighe v State of Maharashtra, 2002 Cr LJ 8 (Bom), the Government of Maharashtra issued notification under section 95(1) of the Code declaring that every copy of the Marathi play entitled "Mee Nathuram Godse Bolto" be forfeited to the Government. The notification, inter alia, stated that the play in question contained derogatory references towards Mahatma Gandhi and certain communities and was likely to disturb public tranquillity and that it was written with a deliberate and malicious intention to outrage the feelings of the followers of Mahatma Gandhi, The publication would be punishable under sections 153-A and 295-A of IPC, 1860. The challenge to the notification was repelled by the Bombay High Court.
202. Ramesh Chotalal Dalal v UOI, AIR 1988 SC 775 [LNIND 1988 SC 74]
203. Bhagvati Charan Shukla v Provincial Government, AIR 1947 Nag 1 .
204. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, (1997) 7 SCC 431 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] .
205. Chandanmal Chopra v State of WB, AIR 1986 Cal 104 [LNIND 1985 CAL 180] , 1986 Cr LJ 182 (Cal).
206. Gopal, (1969) 72 Bom LR 871 (SB).
207. Joseph Bain D'Souza v State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 1316 Bom. The court relied on Varsha Publications Pvt Ltd v State of Maharashtra, 1983 Cr LJ 1446 but distinguished; Babu Rao Patel v State (Delhi Admn), AIR 1980 SC 763 [LNIND 1980 SC 84] : 1980 Cr LJ 529 . Trustees of Safdar Hashmi Memorial Trust v Govt of NCT of Delhi, 2001 Cr LJ 3689 (Del), the object of the provision is to prevent breaches of public tranquillity which might result from excited feelings of enmity between classes of people. Malicious intention or mens rea has to be proved. Mohd Khalid Hussain v State of AP, 2000 Cr LJ 2949 (AP), offence of promoting enmity between people on the ground of religion. There was nothing to show the actual words uttered or acts committed. There were only vague allegations. FIR quashed. Bilal Ahmed Kaloo v State of AP, 1997 Cr LJ 4091 : AIR 1997 SC 3483 [LNIND 1997 SC 1060] , inciting the feelings of one group without any reference to another, attracts neither section 153A nor section 505.

208. Swaraj Thackeray v State of Jharkhand, 2008 Cr LJ 3780 (Jhar); Shailbhadra Shah v Swami Krishna Bharti, 1981 Cr LJ 113 (Guj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

209.[s 153-AA] Punishment for knowingly carrying arms in any procession or organising, or holding or taking part in any mass drill or mass training with arms.

Whoever knowingly carries arms in any procession or organizes or holds or takes part in any mass drill or mass training with arms in any public place in contravention of any public notice or order issued or made under section 144-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months and with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees.

Explanation.*—"Arms" means articles of any description designed or adapted as weapons for offence or defence and includes fire - arms, sharp edged weapons, lathis, dandas and sticks.]

COMMENT.—

Cr PC (Amendment) Act 2005—clause 44.—This clause amends IPC as follows, namely:—

Clause 16 is intended to enable the District Magistrate to prohibit mass drill (or training) with arms in public places. A new section 153-AA is, therefore, being added to the Indian Penal Code to prescribe punishment with imprisonment upto six months and fine upto two thousand rupees for the contravention of the prohibitory order. [Notes on Clauses].

209. Ins. by Cr PC (Amendment) Act, 2005 (25 of 2005), section 44(a).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

209.[s 153-AA] Punishment for knowingly carrying arms in any procession or organising, or holding or taking part in any mass drill or mass training with arms.

Whoever knowingly carries arms in any procession or organizes or holds or takes part in any mass drill or mass training with arms in any public place in contravention of any public notice or order issued or made under section 144-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974) shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months and with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees.

Explanation.*—“Arms” means articles of any description designed or adapted as weapons for offence or defence and includes fire - arms, sharp edged weapons, lathis, dandas and sticks.]

COMMENT.—

Cr PC (Amendment) Act 2005—clause 44.—This clause amends IPC as follows, namely:—

Clause 16 is intended to enable the District Magistrate to prohibit mass drill (or training) with arms in public places. A new section 153-AA is, therefore, being added to the Indian Penal Code to prescribe punishment with imprisonment upto six months and fine upto two thousand rupees for the contravention of the prohibitory order. [Notes on Clauses].

209. Ins. by Cr PC \(Amendment\) Act, 2005 (25 of 2005), section 44(a).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

210. [s 153B] Imputations, assertions prejudicial to national integration.

- (1) Whoever, by words either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise,—
 - (a) makes or publishes any imputation that any class of persons cannot, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of India as by law established or uphold the sovereignty and integrity of India, or
 - (b) asserts, counsels, advises, propagates or publishes that any class of persons shall, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, be denied or deprived of their rights as citizens of India, or shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

- (c) makes or publishes any assertion, counsel, plea or appeal concerning the obligation of any class of persons, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, and such assertion, counsel, plea or appeal causes or is likely to cause disharmony or feelings of enmity or hatred or ill-will between such members and other persons,

- (2) Whoever commits an offence specified in sub-section (1), in any place of worship or in any assembly engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine.]

COMMENT—

Prejudicing national integration.—This section has been newly added by Act 31 of 1972. This is a cognizable and non-bailable offence.

[s 153B.1] Sanction for prosecution.—

The allegation was that of instigating Hindus to convert to Christianity. The Court said that the previous sanction of the Central Government was necessary. But it was necessary for the court to take cognizance of the offence. The bar of sanction does not apply against registration of a criminal case or investigation by a police agency. The police asserted the accused and produced him before the Magistrate. The Magistrate remanded him to judicial custody. The passing of order of remand did not amount to taking of cognizance.²¹¹.

²¹⁰. Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

* Effective date yet to be notified.

²¹¹. State of Karnataka v Pastor P Raju, 2000 Cr LJ 4045 SC.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

210. [s 153B] Imputations, assertions prejudicial to national integration.

- (1) Whoever, by words either spoken or written or by signs or by visible representations or otherwise,—
 - (a) makes or publishes any imputation that any class of persons cannot, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, bear true faith and allegiance to the Constitution of India as by law established or uphold the sovereignty and integrity of India, or
 - (b) asserts, counsels, advises, propagates or publishes that any class of persons shall, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, be denied or deprived of their rights as citizens of India, or shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

- (c) makes or publishes any assertion, counsel, plea or appeal concerning the obligation of any class of persons, by reason of their being members of any religious, racial, language or regional group or caste or community, and such assertion, counsel, plea or appeal causes or is likely to cause disharmony or feelings of enmity or hatred or ill-will between such members and other persons,

- (2) Whoever commits an offence specified in sub-section (1), in any place of worship or in any assembly engaged in the performance of religious worship or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to five years and shall also be liable to fine.]

COMMENT—

Prejudicing national integration.—This section has been newly added by Act 31 of 1972. This is a cognizable and non-bailable offence.

[s 153B.1] Sanction for prosecution.—

The allegation was that of instigating Hindus to convert to Christianity. The Court said that the previous sanction of the Central Government was necessary. But it was necessary for the court to take cognizance of the offence. The bar of sanction does not apply against registration of a criminal case or investigation by a police agency. The police asserted the accused and produced him before the Magistrate. The Magistrate remanded him to judicial custody. The passing of order of remand did not amount to taking of cognizance.²¹¹.

²¹⁰. Ins. by Act 31 of 1972, section 2 (w.e.f. 14-6-1972).

* Effective date yet to be notified.

²¹¹. State of Karnataka v Pastor P Raju, 2000 Cr LJ 4045 SC.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 154] Owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held.

Whenever any unlawful assembly or riot takes place, the owner or occupier of the land upon which such unlawful assembly is held, or such riot is committed, and any person having or claiming an interest in such land, shall be punishable with fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, if he or his agent or manager, knowing that such offence is being or has been committed, or having reason to believe it is likely to be committed, do not give the earliest notice thereof in his or their power to the principal officer at the nearest police-station, and do not, in the case of his or their having reason to believe that it was about to be committed, use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent it, and, in the event of its taking place, do not use all lawful means in his or their power to disperse or suppress the riot or unlawful assembly.

COMMENT—

Liability of owner or occupier of land used for unlawful assembly.— Many duties of the police are by law imposed on land-holders. The present section proceeds apparently upon a presumption that, in addition to any such duty, the owner or occupier of land is cognizant in a peculiar way of the designs of those who assemble on his land, and is able not only to give the police notice, but also to prevent and to disperse and suppress the assembly.²¹²

Section 45 of the Cr PC, 1973, casts upon the owners and occupiers of land the duty of preventing a riot on their lands.

Knowledge, on the part of the owner or occupier of the land, of the acts or intentions of the agent, is not an essential element of an offence under this section, and he may be convicted under it though he may be in entire ignorance of the acts of his agent or manager.²¹³ According to some Police Regulations the Police are required to serve a warning notice on the landlord, owner, occupier or his agent or other person claiming interest in landed property contemplated in this and the two subsequent sections so that they may adopt every means in their power to prevent the unlawful assembly or rioting taking place on such property.²¹⁴ This being a laudable objective there can possibly be no objection to the issuance of such a notice. It should, however, be remembered that a police-officer cannot and should not in the name of serving such a notice injunct the owner or occupier, even temporarily, from enjoying his property.²¹⁵ The police have no such power under the law. To make a person cognizant about his duties under the law is one thing and to restrain the owner from enjoying his property is entirely a different thing.

²¹². M&M 128.

²¹³. Kazi Zeamuddin Ahmed, (1901) 28 Cal 504 ; Payag Singh, (1890) 12 All 550 .

²¹⁴. Rule 252, Bengal Police Regulations, vol I 1943, p 108.

²¹⁵. MK Ibrahim, 1979 Cr LJ 175 (Kant); Indu Bhushan v State, 1995 Cr LJ 1180 (Cal).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 155] Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed.

Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land, respecting which such riot takes place or who claims any interest in such land, or in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom, such person shall be punishable with fine, if he or his agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not respectively use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent such assembly or riot from taking place, and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

COMMENT—

Liability of beneficiary of riot.—Under the preceding section the owner of land is punishable for the taking place of an unlawful assembly or riot on his land. This section requires that the unlawful assembly or riot should take place in the interest of the owner or any person claiming interest in the land. The section, therefore, imposes unlimited fine. The preceding section refers to an unlawful assembly, as well as a riot; this section refers to riot only.

The principle on which this and the following sections proceed is to subject to fine all persons in whose interest a riot is committed and the agents of such persons, unless it can be shown that they did what they lawfully could to prevent the offence.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 156] Liability of agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed.

Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land respecting which such riot takes place, or who claims any interest in such land, or in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom, the agent or manager of such person shall be punishable with fine, if such agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed, or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not use all lawful means in his power to prevent such riot or assembly from taking place and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

COMMENT—

The provisions of the last two sections are made applicable by this section to the agent or manager of the owner or occupier of land.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 157] Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly.

Whoever harbours, receives or assembles, in any house or premises in his occupation or charge, or under his control any persons, knowing that such persons have been hired, engaged, or employed, or are about to be hired, engaged, or employed, to join or become members of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Harboursing hired persons.—Section 150 makes the hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly punishable, whereas this section makes punishable the harboursing of such hired persons. It has a wider application.

The section clearly refers to some unlawful assembly in the future and provides for an occurrence which may happen, not which has happened. An act of harbouring a person, with the knowledge that, in some time past, he had joined or was likely to have been a member of an unlawful assembly, is not an offence under this section.^{216.}

^{216.} Radharaman Shaha, (1931) 58 Cal 1401 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 158] Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly or riot;

Whoever is engaged, or hired, or offers or attempts to be hired or engaged, to do or assist in doing any of the acts specified in section 141, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both, or to go armed.

and whoever, being so engaged or hired as aforesaid, goes armed, or engages or offers to go armed, with any deadly weapon or with anything which used as a weapon of offence is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

This section is intended to punish those persons who hire themselves out as members of an unlawful assembly or assist any such members. It is divided into two parts. Higher penalty is awarded where the accused is armed with a deadly weapon.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 159] Affray.

When two or more persons¹, by fighting in a public place,² disturb the public peace,³ they are said to "commit an affray".

COMMENT—

The offence of affray in essence consists of the following ingredients—

- (a) fighting by two or more persons,
- (b) the fighting must take place in a public place

(c) such fighting must also result in disturbance of the public peace. Only if such ingredients are satisfied, an offence of affray can be said to have occasioned for which the persons causing the same would be responsible. In a prosecution under section 159, IPC, 1860, there must be positive evidence of public peace having been disturbed which would mean that, by the action of the accused the even tempo of life of the public was disturbed resulting in affecting the peace and tranquillity of the locality.²¹⁷

²¹⁷. Gadadhar Guru v State of Orissa, 1989 Cr LJ 2080.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VIII OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY

The offences in this chapter may be classified in the following four groups:—

I. Unlawful assembly.

- (1) Being a member of an unlawful assembly (sections 141, 142, 143).
- (2) Joining an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons (section 144).
- (3) Joining or continuing in an unlawful assembly knowing it has been commanded to disperse (section 145).
- (4) Hiring of persons to join an unlawful assembly (section 150).
- (5) Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly (section 157).
- (6) Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly (section 158).

II. Rioting (sections 146, 147).

- (1) Rioting with deadly weapon (section 148).
- (2) Assaulting or obstructing a public servant in the suppression of a riot (section 152).
- (3) Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot (section 153).
- (4) Liability of the owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held or a riot is committed (section 154).
- (5) Liability of the person for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 155).
- (6) Liability of the agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit a riot is committed (section 156).

III. Promoting enmity between different classes (section 153A).

IV. Affray (sections 159, 160).

[s 160] Punishment for committing affray.

Whoever commits an affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

Affray.—The word 'affray' is derived from the French word affraier, to terrify, and in a legal sense it is taken for a public offence to the terror of the people. The essence of the offence consists in the terror it is likely to cause to the public. The Criminal Procedure Code, 1973 has now made it a cognizable offence.

[s 160.1] Ingredients.—

This section requires three things—

1. Two or more persons must fight.
2. They must fight in a public place.
3. They must disturb the public peace.

The first basic ingredient of section 159, IPC, 1860, is fighting between two or more persons. The next ingredient is that the fighting should have been in public place and the last ingredient is that the fighting should have disturbed public peace.^{218.}

1. 'Two or more persons'.—An affray requires two persons at the least. An unlawful assembly requires five. The offence of Affray is a fight, i.e., a bilateral act, in which two parties participate and it will not amount to an affray when the party who is assaulted submits to the assault without resistance. Again, there must be a definite disturbance of the public peace due to the fight in the public place to make the offence affray.^{219.}

2. 'Fighting in a public place'.—'Public place' is a place where the public go, no matter whether they have a right to go or not. Many shows are exhibited to the public on private property, yet they are frequented by the public—the public go there.^{220.}

The expression 'Fighting' in section 159, IPC, 1860, is used in its ordinary sense and it means a combat or quarrel involving exchange of some force or violence, if not blows. Mere verbal quarrel or vulgarly abusing sans violence cannot be construed as fighting which contemplates bilateral use of violence by two competing parties. Even if there is no exchange of blows, there should be exchange of some violence between the two contending parties before it can be said that the parties are fighting. If one person uses violence against another and the other person merely remains passive, it cannot be said that there is a fighting, so also, if neither person uses violence against the other but both the persons indulge in verbal abuses, it does not amount to fighting.^{221.} Mere causing inconvenience to the public is not sufficient.^{222.}

3. 'Disturb the public peace'.—An affray is an offence against the public peace because it is committed in a public place and is likely to cause general alarm and disturbance. Mere causing public inconvenience is not enough.^{223.} Before a conviction can be entered under section 160, IPC, 1860, there must be a clear finding by the court that the place of occurrence was a public place. If there is no such finding the accused persons must be acquitted.^{224.}

[s 160.2] Affray and riot.—An affray differs from a riot.

- (1) An affray cannot be committed in a private place, a riot can be.
- (2) An affray can be committed by two or more persons, a riot, by five or more.

[s 160.3] Affray and assault.—An affray differs from an assault.—

- (1) The former must be committed in a public place; the latter may take place anywhere.

(2) The former is regarded as an offence against the public peace; the latter, against the person of an individual. An affray is nothing more than an assault committed in a public place and in a conspicuous manner, and is so called because it affrighteth and maketh men afraid.

218. K Ranganna s/o K Narasappa v State, 2010 Cr LJ 1275 (AP).

219. C Subbarayudu v State of AP, 1996 Cr LJ 1472 (AP).

220. Wellard v State, \(1884\) 14 QBD 63, 66, 67.

221. Mangam Chinna Subbarayudu v State, SHO, Nandyal Town PS, 1975 All LT, vol 34, p 332.

222. C Subbarayudu v State of AP, 1996 Cr LJ 1472 (AP).

223. Podan, \(1962\) 1 Cr LJ 339. See also C Subbarayudu v State of AP, 1996 Cr LJ 1472 (AP); and Mahant Kaushalya Das v State of Madras, [AIR 1966 SC 22 \[LNIND 1965 SC 169\]](#): 1966 Cr LJ 66.

224. Re Thommeni Nadar, 1974 Cr LJ 1116 (Mad). Gadadhar Guru v State of Orissa, 1989 Cr LJ 2080 (Ori), no positive evidence of disturbance of public peace or annoyance to public though there was a fight between two groups.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

Sections 161 to 165-A.— Repealed by the Prevention of Corruption Act (Act 49 of 1988), section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 166] Public servant, disobeying law, with intent to cause injury to any person.

Whoever, being a public servant, knowingly disobeys any direction of the law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will, by such disobedience, cause injury to any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A, being an officer directed by law to take property in execution, in order to satisfy a decree pronounced in Z's favour by a Court of Justice, knowingly disobeys that direction of law, with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause injury to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT—

Disobedience of law by public servant.—The offence under this section consists in a wilful departure from the direction of the law, intending to cause injury to any person. Mere breach of departmental rules will not bring a public servant within the purview of this section.

[s 166.1] Ingredients.—

- (i) The accused was a public servant at the relevant time;
- (ii) There was a direction of law as to how such public servant should conduct himself;
- (iii) The accused had disobeyed such direction;
- (iv) By such disobedience he had intended to cause or knew it would likely cause injury to any person.

The indispensable ingredient of the offence is that the offender should have done the act "being a public servant". The next ingredient close to its heels is that such public servant has acted in disobedience of any legal direction concerning the way in which he should have conducted as such public servant. For the offences under sections 167 and 219 of IPC, 1860 the pivotal ingredient is the same as for the offence under section 166 of IPC, 1860.¹ If in carrying out the direction of law the accused gave information which according to the complainant was untrue, that by itself cannot attract the offence punishable under section 166 IPC, 1860 unless it is shown that the replies given by the accused were untrue.² Where an investigating officer recorded his satisfaction in writing that the search of a particular premises was necessary because disputed documents might be found there, his entry into such premises was held to be not in disobedience of law and therefore, he could not be prosecuted without sanction under section 197 Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(CrPC, 1973\).³ To make out an offence under this provision, it has to be stated that the public servant knowingly disobeyed any particular direction of the law which he was bound to obey and further that such disobedience would cause injury to any person to the knowledge of the public servant.

1. K K Patel v State of Gujarat, [AIR 2000 SC 3346 \[LNIND 2000 SC 889\]](#) : 2000 Cr LJ 4592 : [JT 2000 \(7\) SC 246 \[LNIND 2000 SC 889\]](#) : [\(2000\) 6 SCC 195 \[LNIND 2000 SC 889\]](#) : \(2000\) 4 Supreme 160 .

2. Prabhakara Panicker M B v State of Kerala, 2010 Cr LJ 4117 \(Ker\) : 2010 \(3\) KHC 152 .

3. BS Thind v State of HP, 1992 Cr LJ 2935 ; People's Union for Civil Liberties v State of Maharashtra, 1998 Cr LJ 2138 \(Bom\).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

4. [\[s 166A\]](#) Public servant disobeying direction under law.

Whoever, being a public servant,—

- (a) knowingly disobeys any direction of the law which prohibits him from requiring the attendance at any place of any person for the purpose of investigation into an offence or any other matter, or
- (b) knowingly disobeys, to the prejudice of any person, any other direction of the law regulating the manner in which he shall conduct such investigation, or
- (c) fails to record any information given to him under sub-section (1) of section 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974), in relation to cognizable offence punishable under section 326A, section 326B, section 354, section 354B, section 370, section 370A, section 376, section 376A, ⁵\[section 376AB, section 376B, section 376C, section 376D, section 376DA, section 376DB], section 376E or section 509,

shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than six months but which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.]

4. Ins. by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).
5. Subs. by Act 22 of 2018, section 2, for "section 376B, section 376C, section 376D" (w.r.e.f. 21-4-2018).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

4. [[s 166A] Public servant disobeying direction under law.

Whoever, being a public servant,—

- (a) knowingly disobeys any direction of the law which prohibits him from requiring the attendance at any place of any person for the purpose of investigation into an offence or any other matter, or
- (b) knowingly disobeys, to the prejudice of any person, any other direction of the law regulating the manner in which he shall conduct such investigation, or
- (c) fails to record any information given to him under sub-section (1) of section 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974), in relation to cognizable offence punishable under section 326A, section 326B, section 354, section 354B, section 370, section 370A, section 376, section 376A, ⁵\[section 376AB, section 376B, section 376C, section 376D, section 376DA, section 376DB], section 376E or section 509,

shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than six months but which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.]

4. Ins. by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).
5. Subs. by Act 22 of 2018, section 2, for "section 376B, section 376C, section 376D" (w.r.e.f. 21-4-2018).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

4. [[s 166A] Public servant disobeying direction under law.

Whoever, being a public servant,—

- (a) knowingly disobeys any direction of the law which prohibits him from requiring the attendance at any place of any person for the purpose of investigation into an offence or any other matter, or
- (b) knowingly disobeys, to the prejudice of any person, any other direction of the law regulating the manner in which he shall conduct such investigation, or
- (c) fails to record any information given to him under sub-section (1) of section 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974), in relation to cognizable offence punishable under section 326A, section 326B, section 354, section 354B, section 370, section 370A, section 376, section 376A, ⁵\[section 376AB, section 376B, section 376C, section 376D, section 376DA, section 376DB], section 376E or section 509,

shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which shall not be less than six months but which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.]

4. Ins. by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).
5. Subs. by Act 22 of 2018, section 2, for "section 376B, section 376C, section 376D" (w.r.e.f. 21-4-2018).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

⁶[[s 166B] Punishment for non-treatment of victim.

Whoever, being in charge of a hospital, public or private, whether run by the Central Government, the State Government, local bodies or any other person, contravenes the provisions of section 357C of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(2 of 1974\), shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year or with fine or with both.]

COMMENT—

Sections 166A and 166B are enacted based on the recommendations given by the Justice J.S. Verma Committee, constituted in the aftermath of the December 2012 Delhi Rape Case by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (Nirbhaya Act, 2013).

⁶ Ins. by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).

The Indian Penal Code (PB), 36th ed

Ratanlal & Dhirajlal: Indian Penal Code (PB) / 6. Ins. by the Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013). [[s 166B] Punishment for non-treatment of victim.

Currency Date: 28 April 2020

© 2020 LexisNexis

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

6. [\[s 166B\]](#) Punishment for non-treatment of victim.

Whoever, being in charge of a hospital, public or private, whether run by the Central Government, the State Government, local bodies or any other person, contravenes the provisions of section 357C of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 \(2 of 1974\), shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year or with fine or with both.]

COMMENT—

Sections 166A and 166B are enacted based on the recommendations given by the Justice J.S. Verma Committee, constituted in the aftermath of the December 2012 Delhi Rape Case by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (Nirbhaya Act, 2013).

6. Ins. by the Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2013 (13 of 2013), section 3 (w.r.e.f. 3-2-2013).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 167] Public servant framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury.

Whoever, being a public servant, and being, as ⁷:[such public servant, charged with the preparation or translation of any document or electronic record, frames, prepares or translates that document or electronic record] in a manner which he knows or believes to be incorrect, intending thereby to cause or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury to any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

The preceding section deals generally with the disobedience of any direction of law; this section deals with a specific instance, viz., that of framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury. It is similar to section 218, which deals also with cases of framing incorrect record or writing with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture, whereas section 167 deals with cases of framing incorrect document only with intent to cause injury. In a case, the allegation that the accused, who is a Deputy Superintendent of Police, suppressed the statement recorded under section 161 of the CrPC, 1973 in a criminal case registered by the police and produced a fabricated statement along with the charge sheet before the Magistrate. The Court held that section 167 is attracted only when a public servant prepares a document in a manner which he thinks or believes to be incorrect. Essentially, the petitioner's allegation is that the accused suppressed the real statement prepared under section 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code and produced along with the charge sheet a fabricated statement. That comes only within the purview of section 193. Therefore, section 167 is not attracted to the allegations raised by the petitioner in his complaint.⁸

7. Subs. by the Information Technology Act (Act 21 of 2000), section 91 and First Schedule for the words "such public servant, charged with the preparation or translation of any document, frames or translates that document", w.e.f. 17-10-2000. The words "electronic record" have been defined in section 29A.

8. Joseph v State of Kerala, 2013 Cr LJ 749 : 2012 \(4\) KHC 157 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 168] Public servant unlawfully engaging in trade.

Whoever, being a public servant, and being legally bound as such public servant not to engage in trade, engages in trade, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT—

Public servant engaging in trade.—This section punishes those public servants who are legally bound not to engage in trade. If public servants were allowed to trade they would fail to perform their duties with undivided attention. Being in official position they could easily obtain unfair advantages over other traders.

The word 'trade' covers every kind of trade, business, profession, or occupation.⁹ This proposition of law no longer seems to be correct in view of the Supreme Court's decision in *Mahesh Kumar Dhirajlal's case*¹⁰, wherein their Lordships held that trade in its narrow sense means "exchange of goods for goods or for money with the object of making profit" and in its widest sense means "any business with a view to earn profit". Thus, where a tracer in the office of Sub-divisional Soil Conservation Officer took earned leave and during that period of leave obtained training as an Electrical Signal Maintainer from the Railway Administration, it was held that he could not be convicted under this section as he had not engaged himself in any trade even though he was receiving stipend from the Railways during the period of his training.¹¹ Following this ruling, it has been held that engaging oneself as an agent of an insurance company on commission basis does not amount to engaging in trade.¹²

[s 168.1] Private Practice of Government Doctors.—

In Kanwarjit Singh Kakkar v State of Punjab,¹³ the Supreme Court examined the question whether the indulgence in private practice of Government Doctors would amount to indulgence in 'trade' while holding the post of a government doctor, so as to constitute an offence under section 168 of the IPC, 1860. The Supreme Court held that "in our view, offence under Section 168 of the IPC, 1860 cannot be held to have been made out against the appellants even under this Section as the treatment of patients by a doctor cannot by itself be held to be engagement in a trade as the doctors' duty to treat patients is in the discharge of his professional duty which cannot be held to be a 'trade' so as to make out or constitute an offence under Section 168 of the IPC, 1860".

9. Mulshankar Maganlal, (1950) Bom 706 : (1950) 52 Bom LR 648 .

10. State of Gujarat v Mahesh Kumar Dhirajlal, AIR 1980 SC 1167 [LNIND 1980 SC 69] : 1980 Cr LJ 919 .

11. State of Gujarat v Mahesh Kumar Dhirajlal, AIR 1980 SC 1167 [LNIND 1980 SC 69] : 1980 Cr LJ 919 . See also Rasik Behari Mathur v State of Rajasthan, 2007 Cr LJ 3108 (Raj).

12. State of Maharashtra v Chandrakant Solanki, (1995) 1 Cr LJ 832 (Bom).

13. Kanwarjit Singh Kakkar v State of Punjab, 2011 CrLJ 3360 : SCC 158 : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 805.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 169] Public servant unlawfully buying or bidding for property.

Whoever, being a public servant, and being legally bound as such public servant, not to purchase or bid for certain property, purchases or bids for that property, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both; and the property, if purchased, shall be confiscated.

COMMENT—

Buying or holding property.—This section is merely an extension of the principle enunciated in the last section. It prohibits a public servant from purchasing or bidding for property which he is legally bound not to purchase.

It is necessary that there should be some statutory law or rules or regulations framed under the law and not merely some administrative instructions or guidelines prohibiting public servants from purchasing certain property. In this case, a Code of Conduct was issued by the State Government in the exercise of its executive power under Article 162 of the Constitution under which Ministers were prohibited from buying Government properties. There were no mandatory terms providing for any action in case of non-compliance. It was held that the Code of Conduct did not have the effect of law. Its violation could not generate legal proceedings there being nothing unlawful illegal within the meaning of section 43. The purchase of property of a Government company by a firm in which the then Chief Minister was a partner did not constitute an offence under section 169 in the absence of any law debarring the Chief Minister from making such a purchase.¹⁴

[s 169.1] TANSI land deal case.—

The allegation was that the Tamil Nadu Chief Minister, Ms. Jayalalitha, while holding the chief minister's post, had violated the code of conduct and purchased 3.0786 acres of land and buildings to the state-owned Tamil Nadu State Industries Corporation for Jaya Publications. While reversing the conviction passed by the High Court, the Supreme Court held that the offence under section 169 IPC, 1860 is incomplete without the assistance of some other enactment which imposes the legal prohibition required. Therefore, in order to come within the clutches of section 169 IPC, 1860, there should be a law which prohibits a public servant from purchasing certain property and if he does it, it becomes an offence under section 169 IPC, 1860. Section 481 of the Criminal Procedure Code, section 189 of the Railways Act, 1989 and section 19 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871 and instances of that nature in several enactments are available in which persons mentioned therein shall not directly or indirectly purchase any property at a sale under those Acts. Similarly section 136 of the Transfer of Property Act, 1882 provides that no Judge, legal practitioner, or officer connected with any Court of Justice shall buy or traffic in, or stipulate for, or agree to receive any share of, or interest in, any actionable claim and no Court of Justice shall enforce, at his instance, or at the instance of any person claiming by or through him, any actionable claims so dealt with by him as stated above. Thus, in these circumstances where a law has prohibited purchase of property or to bid at an auction, the prohibition contained therein will be attracted and will become an offence under section 169 IPC, 1860. The Code of Conduct not having a statutory force and not enforceable in a Court of law, nor having any sanction or procedure for dealing with a contravention thereof by the Chief Minister, cannot be construed to impose a legal prohibition against the purchase of property of the Government so as to give rise to a criminal offence under section 169 IPC, 1860.¹⁵

¹⁴. R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : 2004 Cr LJ 286 : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] .

¹⁵. R Sai Bharathi v J Jayalalitha, AIR 2004 SC 692 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] : (2004) 2 SCC 9 [LNIND 2003 SC 1023] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 170] Personating a public servant.

Whoever pretends to hold any particular office as a public servant,¹ knowing that he does not hold such office or falsely personates any other person holding such office, and in such assumed character does or attempts to do any act² under colour of such office,³ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

[s 170.1] Ingredients.—

The section requires two things—

1. A person (a) pretending to hold a particular office as a public servant, knowing that he does not hold such office, or (b) falsely personating any other person holding such office.
2. Such person in such assumed character must do or attempt to do an act under colour of such office.

COMMENT—

Personating public servant.—Mere personation is not an offence under this section. The person personating must do or attempt to do some act under colour of the office of the public servant whom he personates. Section 140 punishes the person who wears the garb or carries the token used by a soldier. This section punishes a person who does any act in the assumed character of a public servant.

1. 'Pretends to hold any particular office as a public servant'.—It must be an existing office. If it is uncertain who legally fills the office, a person doing an official act, in pursuance of what he honestly believes to be his lawful title to the office, does not come within this section.

2. 'Any act'.—It is not necessary that the act done or attempted to be done should be such an act as might legally be done by the public servant personated. The accused was arrested when he was demanding one anna's worth of fruit from a fruit-seller for one pie on the representation that he was a head constable, which in fact he was not. It was held that if he pretended to be a police-officer and tried as such police-officer to extort money or things from a fruit-seller, he was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁶ A person who poses as a Government servant and by so doing obtains of another's services, which he would not otherwise have obtained and which the other person was bound to give on demand by a Government officer, commits an offence under this section.¹⁷

3. 'Under colour of such office'.—An act is done 'under colour of an office,' if it is an act having some relation to the office, which the actor pretends to hold. If it has no relation to the office, as if A pretending to be a servant of Government, travelling through a district, obtains money, provisions, etc., the offence may amount to cheating under section 415, but is not punishable under this section.¹⁸ The act done under colour of office must be an act which could not have been done without assuming official authority.

Where the accused posed as a police officer and in that garb looted certain articles from the complainant and the stolen articles, one police ballot and monogram were recovered from him, his conviction under the section was held to be proper.¹⁹

[s 170.2] Retired IAS officer using IAS with his name.—

To constitute an offence under section 170, a person must either pretend to hold a particular office as a public servant knowing that he does not hold such office or falsely personate any other person holding such office. Over and above that, that person in such assumed character must do or attempt to do an act under the colour of such office. There must be pretension or false personation to be a particular person, that too a public servant, which he is not, and then doing of or attempt to do some act under colour of such office of that public servant, to proceed against a person under section 170 of the Indian Penal Code. Thus, where a retired IAS officer, had used IAS in his letterhead when he continued as Director of CAPE and also corresponded in that manner, is no ground to impute that he has committed an offence under section 170 of the Penal Code.²⁰

¹⁶. Aziz-ud-din v State, (1904) All 294 .

17. Bashirullakhan, (1942) Nag 484. Ajitender Singh v State of Punjab, 2000 Cr LJ 1827 (P&H) : 2000 (2) RCR (Criminal) 34, mere assumption of the character of a public servant is not enough, there must also be an attempt to commit an official act. Jata Shanker Jha v State of Rajasthan, 2000 Cr LJ 2108 (Raj) : 2000 (4) WLC 75 , accused personated as secret ASI in the Education Department used forged papers to divert the salary of others to himself. Conviction. Pratap Singh v State, 1998 Cr LJ 633 (P&H), acting under colour of office as Lambardar, offence under the section made out because the accused identified parties in sale deeds as an officer and also had certain sureties arrested.

18. M&M 142.

19. Karuna Krishna Biswas v State of WB, 1996 Cr LJ 2823 (Cal).

20. Premachandra Kurup v State, 2013 Cr LJ 1465 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER IX OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS

This chapter deals with two classes of offences, of which one can be committed by public servants alone, and the other comprises offences which relate to public servants, though they are not committed by them.

Deletion of provisions.—Sections 161–165A stand omitted by the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988, section 31 (w.e.f. 9 September 1988).

The relevant portion from the Statement of Objects and Reasons appended to the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1988 relating to the omission of sections 161 to 165A of Indian Penal Code, 1860 \(IPC, 1860\) is given below:

3. The Bill inter alia, envisages widening the scope of the definition of the expression

"public servant", incorporation of offences under sections 161–165A of the Indian Penal Code, enhancement of penalties provided for these offences and incorporation of a provision that the order of the trial court upholding the grant of sanction for prosecution would be final if it has not already been challenged and the trial has commenced. In order to expedite the proceedings, provisions for day-to-day trial of cases and prohibitory provisions with regard to grant of stay and exercise of powers of revision on interlocutory orders have also been included.

4. Since the provisions of section 165A are incorporated in the proposed legislation with an enhanced punishment, it is not necessary to retain those sections in the Indian Penal Code. Consequently, it is proposed to delete those sections with the necessary saving provision.

[s 171] Wearing garb or carrying token used by public servant with fraudulent intent.

Whoever, not belonging to a certain class of public servants, wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by that class of public servants, with the intention that it may be believed, or with the knowledge that it is likely to be believed, that he belongs to that class of public servants, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

Wearing garb or token of public servant.—Under this section the offence is complete, although no act is done or attempted in the assumed official character. The mere circumstance of wearing a garb, or carrying a token, with the intention or knowledge supposed, is sufficient. It is not necessary that something should pass in words. If any act is done then the preceding section will apply.

Under section 140 IPC, 1860, wearing the garb or carrying the token of a soldier is made punishable.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171A] "Candidate", "Electoral right", defined.

For the purposes of this Chapter—

²[(a) "candidate" means a person who has been nominated as a candidate at an election;¹

(b) "electoral right" means the right of a person to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at any election.

COMMENT—

Candidate, electoral right.—This chapter was introduced in the Code by the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act (XXXIX of 1920). It seeks to make punishable under the ordinary penal law, bribery, undue influence, and personation, and certain other malpractices at elections not only to the Legislative bodies, but also to membership of public authorities where the law prescribes a method of election; and, further, to debar persons guilty of malpractices from holding positions of public responsibility for a specific period. ³This chapter has to be read along with the Representation of the People Act, 1951 as it contains additional penalties for certain offences under this chapter, e.g., sections 171E and 171F of this Code. Thus, a conviction under section 171E or section 171F, IPC, 1860, amounts to a disqualification under section 8 of the Representation of the People Act, 1951.⁴

1. 'Election'.—'Election' is defined as including election to all classes of public bodies where such a system is prescribed by law (vide Explanation 3 to section 21 supra).

¹. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

². Subs. by Act 40 of 1975, section 9, for clause (a) (w.e.f. 6-8-1975).

³. Statement of Objects and Reasons. Gazette of India, 1920, Part V, p 135, section 4. Bhupinder Singh v State, 1997 Cr LJ 1416 (P&H), accused snatched ballot papers from the custody of a polling officer and tore them. This amounted to use of criminal force.

⁴. For a comparison between the sections 171A to 171E with the provisions of Representation of People Act, 1950. See Indira Nehru Gandhi v Raj Narain, AIR 1975 SC 2299 [LNIND 1975 SC 432] : (1975) Supp SCC 1 : 1976 \(2\) SCR 347 [LNIND 1975 SC 432].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1.[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171B] "Bribery".

(1) Whoever—

- (i) gives a gratification to any person with the object of inducing him or any other person to exercise any electoral right or of rewarding any person for having exercised any such right; or
- (ii) accepts either for himself or for any other person any gratification as a reward for exercising any such right or for inducing or attempting to induce any other person to exercise any such right; commits the offence of bribery:

Provided that a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action shall not be an offence under this section.

- (2) A person who offers, or agrees to give, or offers or attempts to procure, a gratification shall be deemed to give a gratification.
- (3) A person who obtains or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain a gratification shall be deemed to accept a gratification, and a person who accepts a gratification as a motive for doing what he does not intend to do, or as a reward for doing what he has not done, shall be deemed to have accepted the gratification as a reward.

COMMENT—

Bribery.—This section defines the offence of bribery at an election.

'Bribery' is defined primarily as the giving or acceptance of a gratification either as a motive or as a reward to any person, either to induce him to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election. It also includes offers or agreements to give or offer and attempts to procure a gratification for any person. 'Gratification' is already explained in section 161 of the Penal Code and is not restricted to pecuniary gratifications or to gratifications estimated in money.⁵ Section 171-B(1)(i) of Indian Penal Code provides that if gratification is given to any person inducing him or any other person to exercise any electoral right, then it will amount to bribery. The term "Electoral right" defined under clause (b) of section 171-A of Indian Penal Code clearly indicates that the electoral right is of definite nature and it is to be exercised by individual. So, the gratification has to be given to an individual. Here, the offer is made to the party (RPI) and not to any individual. Furthermore, there is nothing in the offer which indicates that any influence is being brought on any individual with respect to exercising his electoral right, that means, to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or to refrain from voting at the election. Seeking support of a political party, during the course of election and making an offer to political party of some share in political power for giving such support cannot be called as giving gratification as contemplated under section 171-B of Indian Penal Code.⁶ The word 'gratification' should be deemed to refer only to cases where a gift is made of something which gives a material advantage to the recipient. There is hardly any need to say that giving of anything whose value is estimable in money is bribery. A gun licence gives no material advantage to its recipient. It might gratify his sense of importance if he has a gun licence in a village where nobody else has a gun licence. So might be the conferment of an honour like Padma Bhushan. A praise from a high quarter might gratify the sense of vanity of a person. But the word 'gratification' as used in section 123 (1) does not refer to such gratification any more than in section 171-B of the Indian Penal Code.⁷

[s 171B.1] Sub-clause (2).—'Offers'.—

By this clause the attempt to corrupt is made equivalent to the complete act.

[s 171B.2] Treating.—

Treating will be bribery if refreshment is given or accepted with the intent required by law.⁸ The gist of the offence of treating is the corrupt inducement to the voter or to refrain from voting, which may be given at any time, although for obvious reasons it is usually given at or shortly before the election. 'Treating' is defined in section 171E.

[s 171B.3] Supreme Court on 'freebies'.—

In S Subramaniam Balaji v Government of Tamil Nadu,⁹ the Supreme Court held that freebies promised by political parties in their election manifestos shake the roots of free and fair polls, and directed the Election Commission to frame guidelines for regulating contents of election manifestos and undue influence at elections.

1. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

5. Statement of Objects and Reasons, Gazette of India, 1920, Part V, p 135, section 8.

6. Deepak Ganpatrao v Government of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 1224 (Bom).

7. Iqbal Singh v Gurdas Singh, AIR 1976 SC 27 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] : (1976) 3 SCC 284 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] : 1976 (1) SCR 884 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] .

8. Ibid.

9. S Subramaniam Balaji v Government of Tamil Nadu, 6 Mad LJ 307 : 2013 (8) Scale 249 [LNIND 2013 SC 627] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

1.[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171C] Undue influence at elections.

- (1) Whoever voluntarily interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right commits the offence of undue influence at an election.
- (2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), whoever—
 - (a) threatens any candidate or voter, or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested, with injury of any kind, or
 - (b) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or voter, within the meaning of sub-section (1).

- (3) A declaration of public policy or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section.

COMMENT.—

Exercise of undue influence.—This section defines 'undue influence at elections'.

Undue influence at an election is defined as the voluntary interference or attempted interference with the right of any person to stand, or not to stand as, or withdraw from being, a candidate, or to vote or refrain from voting. This covers all threats of injury to person or property and all illegal methods of persuasion and any interference with the liberty of the candidates or the electors. The inducing or attempting to induce a person to believe that he will become the object of divine displeasure is also interference.¹⁰

Where an attempt or threat is proved, it is unnecessary to prove that any person was in fact prevented from voting because the offence is complete.

The expression 'free exercise of his electoral right' does not mean that a voter is not to be influenced. This expression has to be read in the context of an election in a democratic society and the candidates and their supporters must naturally be allowed to canvass support by all legal and legitimate means. This exercise of the right by the candidate or his supporters to canvass support does not interfere or attempt to interfere with the free exercise of an electoral right.¹¹ The Supreme Court has accepted the proposition that something more than a mere act of canvassing would be necessary and that something more is specified in clauses (a) and (b) of the section. Applying this to the facts, the court laid down that the appeal, even if true, of the Chairman of the Minorities Commission who happened to be the retired judge of the Supreme Court, to the voters to cast their votes in favour of a particular candidate [who was returned], does not make out the offence enumerated in this section.¹² A message sent to the secretary of a party to boycott the election does not amount to interference within the meaning of this section as members of the party are still free to vote as they like.¹³

[s 171C.1] CASES.—

A candidate informed the voters that he was Chalanti Vishnu and representative of Lord Jagannath himself and that any person who did not vote for him would be a sinner against the Lord and the Hindu religion; it was held that such propaganda would amount to an offence under section 171F read with this section.¹⁴

The statement was made by a member of the ruling party to the Republican party of India (RPI) that if it supported the alliance in parliamentary elections, the latter would make one member of the RPI as Deputy Chief Minister of State. It was held that this did not amount to giving offer to any individual for inducing him to exercise his electoral right in a particular manner.¹⁵

1. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

10. Ram Dial v Sant Lal, AIR 1959 SC 855 [LNIND 1959 SC 73] : 1959 Supp (2) SCR 748 .

11. Shiv Kirpal Singh v VV Giri, AIR 1970 SC 2097 [LNIND 1970 SC 367] : (1970) 2 SCC 567 [LNIND 1970 SC 367] . See also M Anbalagan v State, 1981 Cr LJ 1179 (Mad), Babu Rao Patel, AIR 1968 SC 904 [LNIND 1967 SC 314] : 1968 (2) SCR 133 [LNIND 1967 SC 314] .

12. Charan Lal Sahu v Giani Zail Singh, AIR 1984 SC 309 [LNIND 1983 SC 371] : (1984) 1 SCC 390 [LNIND 1983 SC 371] .

13. M Anbalagan, Supra.

14. Raj Raj Deb v Gangadhar, AIR 1964 Ori 1 [LNIND 1962 ORI 29] : 1964 Cr LJ 57 .

15. Deepak Ganpatrao v Government of Maharashtra, 1999 Cr LJ 1224 (Bom).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171D] Personation at elections.

Whoever at an election applies for a voting paper or votes in the name of any other person, whether living or dead, or in a fictitious name, or who having voted once at such election applies at the same election for a voting paper in his own name, and whoever abets, procures or attempts to procure the voting by any person in any such way, commits the offence of personation at an election:

¹⁶[Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to a person who has been authorised to vote as proxy for an elector under any law for the time being in force in so far as he votes as proxy for such elector.]

COMMENT.—

Personation.—This section defines 'personation at elections'. It covers a person who attempts to vote in another person's name or in a fictitious name, as well as a voter who attempts to vote twice and any person who abets, procures, or attempts to procure, such voting.

The accused must have been actuated by a corrupt motive.¹⁷

What is to be proved in a prosecution for the offence under section 171-D is that the indictee "applied for voting (ballot) paper" in the name of any person. It is not the law that it must be proved invariably that he had voted or had attempted to vote in the election. All that need be proved is that the indictee had applied for a voting paper. The legislature appears to have carefully worded the statutory provision.¹⁸ The applicant was accused of having abetted the personation of a voter at a Municipal election in that, not being himself acquainted with the person who came forward to vote, he had, on the advice of others, put his name to a "signature sheet" in token that the thumb mark made by the voter was that of the person entitled to vote under a certain name on the electoral roll. It was held that, inasmuch as the acts done by the applicant apparently constituted the specific offence provided for by section 171F, he could only be tried for that offence, and could not be tried for abetment of the general offence provided for by section 465.¹⁹

¹ Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

¹⁶ Ins. by the Election Laws \(Amendment\) Act, 2003 (Act 24 of 2003), section 5 (w.e.f. 22-9-2003).

¹⁷ Venkayya, (1929) 53 Mad 444.

¹⁸ E Anoop v State, 2007 Cr LJ 2968 : 2006 (3) Ker LJ 50 .

19. Ram Nath, (1924) 47 All 268 . See Achcha Bhoomanna v Court of Distt. Munsif (Election Court), AIR 1992 AP 157 [LNIND 1991 AP 162] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171E] Punishment for bribery.

Whoever commits the offence of bribery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both:

Provided* that bribery by treating shall be punished with fine only.

Explanation.*—"Treating" means that form of bribery where the gratification consists in food, drink, entertainment, or provision.

¹. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171F] Punishment for undue influence or personation at an election.

Whoever commits the offence of undue influence or personation at an election shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Punishment for bribery, personation.— The Chief Minister of a State was campaigning for himself on a date before elections. He was directed by the Election Commissioner under threat of taking drastic action to return to his State headquarters. He was prevented by the order from exercising his voting right at the place where he was registered as a voter. There was no allegation that he used any violence in the election process. Directions were also oral and no reasons were given. It was held that the directions constituted a violation of section 171F.²⁰ The words "all forms of entertainment" in the Explanation to section 123 \(1\) of the Representation of the People Act apparently refer to offence of treating found in section 171-E of the Indian Penal Code.²¹ Accused entered into a polling booth and handed over a slip showing the name of a voter other than himself. He could not give any explanation as to why he entered into the polling booth. His conduct of appearing before polling officials and handing over the slip which does not relate to him, is sufficient declaration of his intention to apply vote for him. It was held that offence committed by him required a deterrent substantive sentence of imprisonment.²²

1. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

20. Court on its Own Motion v UOI, 2001 Cr LJ 225 (P&H) : (2000) ILR 2 P&H 288. The Court could not direct the Magistrate to take cognizance under section 190 because of the bar under section 197. Aggrieved party would have to launch prosecution.

21. Iqbal Singh v Gurdas Singh, AIR 1976 SC 27 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] : (1976) 3 SCC 284 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] : 1976 (1) SCR 884 [LNIND 1975 SC 354] .

22. E Anoop v State, 2007 Cr LJ 2968 : 2006 (3) Ker LJ 50 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171G] False statement in connection with an election.

Whoever with intent to affect the result of an election makes or publishes any statement purporting to be a statement of fact which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate shall be punished with fine.

COMMENT.—

False statements in elections.—False statements of fact in relation to the personal character or conduct of a candidate are penalised by this section. General imputations of misconduct unaccompanied by any charges of particular acts of misconduct cannot properly be described as statements of fact within the meaning of this section.²³

An offence under this section is not a species of the more general offence of defamation. There may be cases under this section which do not fall under section 499 and vice versa.²⁴

1. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

23. AS Radhakrishna Ayyar v Emperor, AIR 1932 Mad 511 : 1932 Mad WN 1086.

24. Bhagolelal Kwalchand Darji v Emperor, AIR 1940 Nag 249 : [1942] ILR Nag 208.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171H] Illegal payments in connection with an election.

Whoever without the general or special authority in writing of a candidate incurs or authorises expenses on account of the holding of any public meeting, or upon any advertisement, circular or publication, or in any other way whatsoever for the purpose of promoting or procuring the election of such candidate, shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees:

Provided* that if any person having incurred any such expenses not exceeding the amount of ten rupees without authority obtains within ten days from the date on which such expenses were incurred the approval in writing of the candidate, he shall be deemed to have incurred such expenses with the authority of the candidate.

COMMENT.—

Illegal payments in elections.—This section makes it illegal for any one, unless authorized by a candidate, to incur any expenses in connection with the promotion of the candidate's election.

¹. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

¹[CHAPTER IX-A OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS

[s 171-I] Failure to keep election accounts.

Whoever being required by any law for the time being in force or any rule having the force of law to keep accounts of expenses incurred at or in connection with an election fails to keep such accounts shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.]

COMMENT.—

Failure to keep accounts.—This section punishes failure to keep accounts of expenses incurred in connection with an election, if such accounts are required to be kept by any law or rule having the force of law.

¹. Chapter IXA (containing of sections 171A to 171-I) ins. by Act 39 of 1920, section 2.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 172] Absconding to avoid service of summons or other proceeding.

Whoever absconds¹ in order to avoid being served with a summons, notice or order,² proceeding from any public servant, legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons or notice or order is to attend in person or by agent, or to ^{1.} [produce a document or an electronic record in a Court of Justice], with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Absconding to avoid summons.—Absconding to avoid service of summons or other proceeding is similar to non-attendance in obedience to an order from a public servant. The object of this section is to punish an offender for the contempt his conduct indicates of the authority whose process he disregards.

The second clause applies where the summons or notice or order is (1) for attendance in Court; or (2) for production of a document.

1. 'Absconds'.—This term is not to be understood as implying necessarily that a person leaves the place in which he is. Its etymological and ordinary sense is to hide oneself; and it matters not whether a person departs from a place or remains in it, if he conceals himself. If a person, having concealed himself before process issues, continues to do so after it is issued, he absconds.^{2.}

2. 'Summons, notice or order'.—The summons, notice or order referred to, should be addressed to the same person whose attendance is required and who absconds to avoid being served with such a 'summons, notice or order'. A warrant is not an order served on an accused; it is simply an order to the police to arrest him.^{3.} It is not an offence under this section to abscond to avoid arrest under a warrant.^{4.}

[s 172.1] Bar to take Cognizance:

As per section 195(1)(a)(i) of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1973, (Cr PC, 1973) No court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under S. 172 to 188 (both inclusive) of the Indian Penal Code (45 of 1860, except on the complaint in writing of 'the public servant concerned' or of some other public servant to whom he is administratively subordinate. When the Court in its discretion is disinclined to prosecute the wrongdoers, no private complainant can be allowed to initiate any criminal proceeding in his individual capacity as it would be clear from the reading of the section itself which is to the effect that no Court can take cognizance of any offence punishable under sections 172–188 of the Indian Penal Code \(IPC, 1860\) except on the written complaint of 'the public servant concerned' or of some other public servant to whom he is administratively subordinate.⁵

1. Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I, for "to produce a document in a Court of Justice" (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).
2. Srinivasa Ayyangar, (1881) 4 Mad 393, 397.
3. Lakshmi, (1881) Unrep. Cr C 152.
4. Annawadin, (1923) 1 Ran 218.
5. State of UP v Mata Bhikh, (1994) 4 SCC 95 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] : JT 1994 (2) SC 565 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] : (1994) 2 Scale 235 : (1994) 1 SCC (Cr) 831 : 1994 (2) SCR 368 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 173] Preventing service of summons or other proceeding, or preventing publication thereof.

Whoever in any manner intentionally prevents the serving on himself, or on any other person, of any summons, notice or order proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, or intentionally prevents the lawful affixing to any place of any such summons, notice or order, or intentionally removes any such summons, notice or order from any place to which it is lawfully affixed, or intentionally prevents the lawful making of any proclamation, under the authority of any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to direct such proclamation to be made,

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent, or ⁶[to produce a document or electronic record in a Court of Justice], with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Preventing service of summons.—This section punishes intentional prevention of the service of summons, notice or order.

A refusal to sign a summons,⁷ a refusal to receive a summons⁸ and the throwing down of a summons after service,⁹ do not constitute the offence of intentionally preventing the service of a summons under this section. Under the Cr PC, 1973 the mere tender of a summons is sufficient and a refusal by a person to receive it does not expose him to the penalty of this section. Actual delivery is not necessary to complete the service.¹⁰ Chapter X, sections 172–190 of the IPC, 1860 deal with the offences constituting "Contempts of the Lawful authority of Public Servants". A Magistrate could be covered by the definition of a 'Public Servant' given by section 21 of the IPC, 1860. But the sections given in Chapter X of the IPC, 1860 relate to particular kinds of contempt of the lawful authority of Public Servants and none of these cover the kind of acts which were committed by the accused with the object of the stifling a prosecution.¹¹.

6. Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I, for "to produce a document in a Court of Justice" (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).
7. Kalya Fakir, (1868) 5 BHC (Cr C) 34; Krishna Gobinda Das, (1892) 20 Cal 358 .
8. Punamatai, (1882) 5 Mad 199.
9. Arumuga Nadan, (1882) 5 Mad 200 (n), 1 Weir 79.
10. Sahedeo Rai, (1918) 40 All 577 .
11. Waryam Singh v Sadhu Singh, AIR 1972 SC 905 : (1972) 1 SCC 796 : 1972 Cr LJ 635 : (1972) 1 SCC (Cr) 477; TN Godavarman Thirumulpad (89) v UOI. (2006) 10 SCC 486 : (2007) 9 Scale 272

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 174] Non-attendance in obedience to an order from public servant.

Whoever, being legally bound to attend in person or by an agent at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue the same, intentionally omits to attend at that place or time, or departs from the place where he is bound to attend before the time at which it is lawful for him to depart, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both, or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, being legally bound to appear before the ¹²[High Court] at Calcutta, in obedience to a subpoena issuing from that Court, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.
- (b) A, being legally bound to appear before a ¹³[District Judge] as a witness, in obedience to a summons issued by that ¹⁴[District Judge], intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT.—

Non-attendance.—The offence contemplated by this section is an intentional omission to appear—

- (1) at a particular specified ¹⁵ place in India, ¹⁶
- (2) at a particular time,
- (3) before a specified public functionary,
- (4) in obedience to a summons, notice or order (written or verbal), ¹⁷ not defective in form, ¹⁸ and

(5) issued by an officer having jurisdiction¹⁹ in the matter.

A conviction cannot be had unless the person summoned

(1) was legally bound to attend, and

(2) refused or intentionally omitted to attend.²⁰

[s 174.1] CASES.—Wilful departure before, lawful time.—

Where a man in obedience to a summons attended a Magistrate's Court at 10 a.m., but finding the Magistrate not present at the time mentioned in the summons, departed without waiting for a reasonable time, it was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.²¹

[s 174.2] Public servant absent.—

Where a public servant was absent on a date fixed in the summons, the person summoned could not be convicted, though he purposely failed to attend.²²

[s 174.3] Police Notice.—

If the accused were not within the jurisdiction of the police station or adjoining police station while being served with an order under section 160, Cr PC, 1973, they were not legally bound to attend before the requisitioning police-officer and as such on their failure to attend, their conviction under section 174, IPC, 1860, could not be maintained.²³

[s 174.4] Notice by Railway Protection Force.—

Enquiry conducted by an officer of the Railway Protection Force being in the nature of a judicial proceeding under section 9 of the Railway Property \(Unlawful Possession\) Act, 1966, any person summoned by such officer to produce any document or give evidence, shall be bound to produce such document and to state the truth in course of his examination. Failure to do so or furnishing of false documents, etc., will entail prosecution under sections 174, 175, 179, 180 and 193, IPC, 1860, as the case may be.²⁴

12. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Supreme Court".

13. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Supreme Court".

14. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Zila Judge".

15. Ram Saran, (1882) 5 All 7.

16. Paranga v State, (1893) 16 Mad 463.
17. Guman, (1873) Unrep. Cr C 75 : (1870) 5 MHC (Appx) 15.
18. Krishtappa, (1896) 20 Mad 31.
19. Venkaji Bhaskar, (1871) 8 BHC (Cr C) 19 : (1865) 1 Weir 87.
20. Sreenath Ghose, (1868) 10 WR (Cr) 33.
21. Kisan Bapu, (1885) 10 Bom 93.
22. Krishtappa, sup.
23. Krishan, 1975 Cr LJ 620 (HP).
24. BC Saxena, 1983 Cr LJ 1432 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

25. [[s 174-A] Non-appearance in response to a proclamation under section 82 of Act 2 of 1974.

Whoever fails to appear at the specified place and the specified time as required by a proclamation published under sub-section (1) of section 82 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years or with fine or with both, and where a declaration has been made under sub-section (4) of that section pronouncing him as a proclaimed offender, he shall be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and shall also be liable to fine.]

COMMENT.—

Cr PC (Amendment) Act, 2005—Clause 44.—This clause amends the IPC, 1860 as follows, namely:—

Clause 12 seeks to insert new sub-sections (4) and (5) in section 82 of the Code to provide for the declaration of a person as proclaimed offender, if he fails to appear in spite of the proclamation published under sub-section (1) of that section. In order to curb the tendency on the part of criminals not to attend the Court in response to proclamation published under sub-section (1) or further proclamation issued under sub-section (4) declaring the accused as "Proclaimed Offender" a new section 174-A is being added to the Indian Penal Code to prescribe punishment for such offender. [Notes on Clauses.]

If Investigating Officer submits charge sheet without arresting the accused persons (unless he is on bail), it can be submitted only if he has been declared absconder and the case under section 174-A IPC, 1860 has also been registered as a result of this proclamation.^{26.}

The offence under section 174A IPC, 1860 which arises out of the proceedings conducted during the main case can be tried and disposed of by the same Court. Lodging of separate FIR for commission of offence under section 174 IPC, 1860 is not always required.^{27.}

25. Ins. by Cr PC (Amendment) Act, 2005 (25 of 2005), section 44(b) (w.e.f. 23-6-2006 vide Notfn. No. SO 923(E), dated 21 June 2006).
26. Iqbal v State of UP, 2013 Cr LJ 1332 (All).
27. A Krishna Reddy v CBI, 2017 (5) ADR 635.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 175] Omission to produce ²⁸[document or electric record] to public servant by person legally bound to produce it.

Whoever, being legally bound to produce or deliver up any ²⁹[document or electronic record] of any public servant, as such, intentionally omits so to produce or deliver up the same, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both, or, if the ³⁰[document or electronic record] is to be produced or delivered up to a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A, being legally bound to produce a document before a ³¹[District Court], intentionally omits to produce the same. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT—

This section punishes persons who refuse to produce documents which they are legally bound to produce before a public servant. From reading of section 345 of the Cr PC, 1973, it is clear that offences under sections 175, 178, 179, 180 or 228 would constitute contempt, only if they are committed in the view or presence of the Court. This would also show that offences under sections 175, 178, 179, 180 or 228 per se do not amount to contempt. They are contempt only if they are committed "in the view or presence of the Court"; otherwise they remain offences under the IPC, 1860 simpliciter.³²

²⁸. Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I, for "document" (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

²⁹. Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I, for "document" (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

³⁰. Subs. by Act 21 of 2000, section 91 and Sch. I, for "document" (w.e.f. 17-10-2000).

³¹. Subs. by the A.O. 1950, for "Zila Court".

³². Arun Paswan v State of Bihar, AIR 2004 SC 721 [LNIND 2003 SC 1085] : (2004) 5 SCC 53 [LNIND 2003 SC 1085].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 176] Omission to give notice or information to public servant by person legally bound to give it.

Whoever, being legally bound to give any notice or to furnish information on any subject to any public servant, as such, intentionally omits to give such notice or to furnish such information in the manner and at the time required by law, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the notice or information required to be given respects the commission of an offence, or is required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence, or in order to the apprehension of an offender, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both;

³³or, if the notice or information required to be given is required by an order passed under sub-section (1) of section 565 (now 356) of the [Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 \(now 1973\)³⁴. with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.]

COMMENT.—

Omission to give notice or information.—This section applies to persons upon whom an obligation is imposed by law to furnish certain information to public servants, and the penalty which the law provides is intended to apply to parties who commit an intentional breach of such obligation,³⁵ and not where the public servants have already obtained the information from other sources.³⁶

A doctor is not obliged to inform the police when he treats a patient who has met with vehicle accident.³⁷

[s 176.1] CASE.—

It was not within the scope of the Magistrate to hold investigative officer guilty for violation of his official duties who had already sought extension to complete the investigation. Omission on the part of IO to complete the investigation within 60 days from date of arrest is not covered under provisions of section 176, IPC, 1860.³⁸ Under section 39 (i)(v) Cr PC, 1973, where a person is aware of commission or an intention to commit an offence under sections 302, 303 and 304, IPC, 1860, he is bound to give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission or intention and failure to do so is punishable under this section. Where the mother of a murder suspect merely said that her son and daughter-in-law went to bed at about 10 P.M. and that early next morning, her son came out and ran away and she found her daughter-in-law lying dead on the bed, it was held that her failure to inform the police did not constitute an offence under section 176, IPC, 1860, as she was neither aware that a murder was going to be committed nor aware that a murder had been committed.³⁹

33. Added by Act 22 of 1939, section 2.

34. Now see section 356 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973 (2 of 1974).

35. Phool Chand Brojobassee, (1871) 16 WR (Cr) 35.

36. Sashi Bhusan Chuckrabutty, (1878) 4 Cal 623 ; Pandya, (1884) 7 Mad 436; Gopal Singh, (1982) 20 Cal 316 .

37. SN Naik v State of Maharashtra, 1996 Cr LJ 1463 (Bom).

38. Manoj Kumar Gautam v State of UP, 2009 Cr LJ 3176 (Pat).

39. TS John v State, 1984 Cr LJ 753 (Ker). See also Geetha v Sub-Inspector of Excise, Mudigere, 2007 Cr LJ 3496 (Kar).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 177] Furnishing false information.

Whoever, being legally bound to furnish information on any subject to any public servant, as such, furnishes, as true, information on the subject which he knows or has reason to believe to be false, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both;

or, if the information which he is legally bound to give respects the commission of an offence, or is required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence, or in order to the apprehension of an offender, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, a landholder, knowing of the commission of a murder within the limits of his estate, wilfully misinforms the Magistrate of the district that the death has occurred by accident in consequence of the bite of a snake. A is guilty of the offence defined in this section.
- (b) A, a village watchman, knowing that a considerable body of strangers has passed through his village in order to commit a dacoity in the house of Z, a wealthy merchant residing in a neighbouring place, and being bound under clause, 5, section VII, Regulation III, 1821,⁴⁰ of the Bengal Code, to give early and punctual information of the above fact to the officer of the nearest police station, wilfully misinforms the police officer that a body of suspicious characters passed through the village with a view to commit dacoity in a certain distant place in a different direction. Here A is guilty of the offence defined in the later part of this section.

⁴¹.[Explanation.—In section 176 and in this section the word "offence" includes any act committed at any place out of ⁴².[India], which, if committed in ⁴³.[India], would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460; and the word "offender" includes any person who is alleged to have been guilty of any such act.]

COMMENT.—

Furnishing false information.—Section 176 deals with the omission to give information; this section deals with the giving of false information. Persons who are not under a legal obligation to furnish information cannot be dealt with under these sections.⁴⁴ Furnishing false information is distinct from omission to give information. Omission to mention about a two-wheeler in the statement of assets and liabilities by a public servant is not an offence under section 177 IPC, 1860.⁴⁵ It is clear that the accused having been aware of the fact that she belongs to "Havyak Brahmin" by caste, furnished false information to the authority and obtained admission by producing false caste certificate. The ingredients of section 177 are proved.⁴⁶ In a case where the allegation was that the complainant filed false information in nomination paper, it was held that a complaint by the Returning officer is mandatory.⁴⁷

The appellant being a Sarpanch of the Gram Panchayat was legally bound to give correct information and issue a correct certificate but he issued a false certificate in favour of one Lal Chand that he does not own any land except the land which he has made fit for cultivation, in fact, though Lal Chand owned 13 kanals, 13 marlas and also his wife owned lands in the village Baruhi. Therefore, the ingredients of section 177 of the Code were proved as against him.⁴⁸

[s 177.1] Application of Section 195 and 340 Cr PC, 1973.—

Section 195\(1\), Cr PC, 1973 lays down that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under sections 172–188, IPC, 1860 except on the complaint in writing of the public servant concerned or some other public servant to whom he is administratively subordinate. The provision of section 195\(1\), Cr PC, 1973 is mandatory.⁴⁹

40. Rep. by Act 17 of 1862.

41. Added by Act 3 of 1894, section 5.

42. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

43. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1-4-1951), to read as above.

44. Ashok Kumar Mittal v Ram Kumar Gupta, (2009) 2 SCC 656 [LNIND 2009 SC 33] : (2009) 1 SCC (Cr) 836 : (2009) 1 KLT 398 [LNIND 2009 SC 33] : (2009) 1 CHN 184 (SC) : (2009) 234 ELT 193 .

45. Veeranna v State of Karnataka, 2013 Cr LJ (NOC) 335 (Kar).

46. State of Karnataka v G M Sumanabai, 2004 Cr LJ 4112 (Kar).

47. Amita Trivedi v State of Rajasthan, 2013 Cr LJ (NOC) 240 (Raj). See also Jayalalitha v Kuppasamy, 2013 Cr LJ 839 (SC) : 2012 (11) Scale 432 [LNIND 2012 SC 756] .

48. Bishan Dass v State of Punjab, 2015 Cr LJ 281 : 2014 (9) Scale 690 [LNINDORD 2014 SC 21072] . See also State of Karnataka v G M Sumanabai, 2004 Cr LJ 4112 (Kar).

49. Lakpa Sherpa v State of Sikkim, 2004 Cr LJ 3488 (Sik). See also Ram Dhan v State of UP, 2012 (4) Scale 259 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] : 2012 AIR(SCW) 2500 : 2012 Cr LJ 2419 : (2012) 5

SCC 536 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] : AIR 2012 SC 2513 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] relied on Sachida Nand Singh v State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493 [LNIND 1998 SC 138] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 178] Refusing oath or affirmation when duly required by public servant to make it.

Whoever refuses to bind himself by an oath ⁵⁰. [or affirmation] to state the truth, when required so to bind himself by a public servant legally competent to require that he shall so bind himself, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Refusal to take oath.—The refusal to take an oath amounts to contempt of Court. The person refusing may be dealt with under section 345 of the Cr PC, 1973 summarily or the Court may proceed under section 195 of the same Code. The penalty of this section would not be attracted where the refusal to take oath is justifiable. This observation of the Supreme Court occurs in Kiran Bedi and Inder Singh v Committee of Inquiry.⁵¹ The justification available to the police-officers in question was that they were sought to be cross-examined under oath at the very outset of the inquiry, whereas other officers similarly placed were to figure in the cross-examination at a subsequent stage. This procedure was discriminatory, hence, the justification. The Court accordingly held that the committee should not have directed a complaint to be filed against them under this section.

⁵⁰. Ins. by Act 10 of 1873, section 15.

⁵¹. Kiran Bedi and Inder Singh v Committee of Inquiry, AIR 1989 SC 714 [LNIND 1989 SC 833] : 1989 Cr LJ 903 : (1989) 1 SCR 20 [LNIND 1989 SC 833] : (1989) 1 SCC 494 [LNIND 1989 SC 10].

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 179] Refusing to answer public servant authorised to question.

Whoever, being legally bound to state the truth on any subject to any public servant, refuses to answer any question demanded of him touching that subject by such public servant in the exercise of the legal powers of such public servant, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Refusing to answer questions.—The offence under this section consists in the refusal to answer a question which is relevant to the subject concerning which the public servant is authorised to inquire, or which at least touches that subject. Under sections 121–132 of the Indian Evidence Act a witness is exempted from answering certain questions. If a person gives false answers, then he will be guilty under section 193 and not under this section.

Refusing to answer the question of a police-officer investigating a case under section 161 of the Criminal Procedure Code is not an offence under this section.⁵² This section also applies to the accused as the words used in section 161\(1\) Cr PC, 1973, are "any person acquainted with facts and circumstances of the case". Thus, the accused too is bound to answer a question put by a police-officer in course of his examination. However, the answer to a question has a tendency to incriminate him; he can claim protection under Article 20\(3\) of the Constitution and refuse to answer. Of course, it is a matter which has to be ultimately decided by the Court.⁵³

The matter is entirely different so far the officers of the Railway Protection Force are concerned first, they are not police-officers⁵⁴ and second, the enquiry conducted by them under sections 8 and 9 of the Railway Property \(Unlawful Possession\) Act, 1966 is not a police investigation but should be deemed to be a judicial proceeding.⁵⁵ Section 9 of this special Act specifically lays down that during such enquiry by an RPF officer, persons summoned have to obey summons and state the truth and, therefore, by refusing to answer, such persons would make themselves liable under section 179, IPC, 1860. The question of invoking Article 20\(3\) of the Constitution does not arise in such a case, as till the complaint is filed under section 190(1)(a), Cr PC, 1973 by the RPF officer, a person cannot be regarded as "accused of an offence" within the meaning of Article 20\(3\) of the Constitution.⁵⁶

52. Mawzanagyi, (1930) 8 Ran 511.
53. Nandini Satpathy v PL Dani, 1978 Cr LJ 968 : AIR 1978 SC 1025 .
54. State of MP v Chandan Singh, 1980 Cr LJ 1024 (MP); R Muthu v Asst. SI, RPF, 1983 Cr LJ 1309 (Mad); State of UP v Durga Prasad, 1974 Cr LJ 1465 : AIR 1974 SC 2136 [LNIND 1974 SC 248] .
55. Durga Prasad, Supra; BC Saxena, 1983 Cr LJ 1432 (AP).
56. BC Saxena, Supra; Mohd. Dastgir, 1960 Cr LJ 1159 : AIR 1960 SC 758 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 180] Refusing to sign statement.

Whoever refuses to sign any statement made by him, when required to sign that statement by a public servant legally competent to require that he shall sign that statement, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

The essential ingredients to constitute the offence under this Section are:—

- (i) The accused made a statement before a public servant.
- (ii) The accused was required by public servant to sign such statement.
- (iii) Public servant was legally empowered or competent to require the accused to sign that statement, and
- (iv) That the accused refused to sign statement.^{57.}

[s 180.1] Refusal to sign.—

The statement must be such a one as the accused can be legally required to sign, e.g., a statement recorded under the provisions of sections 164 and 281(5) of the Cr PC, 1973 or a statement under sections 8 and 9 of the Railway Property \(Unlawful Possession\) Act, 1966.^{58.} To attract the offence under section 180 of IPC, 1860, the person accused of such offence should be under a legal obligation or compulsion to sign the statement or submissions.^{59.}

^{57.} Basavaraj Shivarudrappa Sirsi v State of Karnataka, 2011 Cr LJ 4809 (Kar).

^{58.} Durga Prasad, and BC Saxena, Supra.

^{59.} Basavaraj Shivarudrappa Sirsi v State of Karnataka 2011 Cr LJ 4809 (Kar).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 181] False statement on oath or affirmation to public servant or person authorised to administer an oath or affirmation.

Whoever, being legally bound by an oath ⁶⁰[or affirmation] to state the truth on any subject to any public servant or other person authorized by law to administer such oath ⁶¹[or affirmation], makes, to such public servant or other person as aforesaid, touching the subject, any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.—

False statement on oath.—This section should be compared with section 191. Under it a false statement to any public servant, or other person, authorised to administer oath or affirmation, is punishable.⁶² It does not apply where the public servant administers the oath in a case wholly beyond his jurisdiction⁶³ or where he is not competent to make a statement on solemn affirmation.⁶⁴

[s 181.1] Failure to administer oath.—

In view of sections 4 and 5 of the Oaths Act, 1969, it is always desirable to administer oath or statement may be recorded on affirmation of the witness. The Supreme Court in Rameshwar v State of Rajasthan,⁶⁵ has categorically held that the main purpose of administering of oath is to render persons who give false evidence, liable to prosecution and further to bring home to the witness the solemnity of the occasion and to impress upon him the duty of speaking the truth, further such matters only touch credibility and not admissibility. However, in view of the provisions of section 7 of the Oaths Act, 1969, the omission of administration of oath or affirmation does not invalidate any evidence.⁶⁶

⁶⁰. Ins. by Act 10 of 1873, section 15.

61. Ins. by Act 10 of 1873, section 15.
62. Niaz Ali, (1882) 5 All 17 .
63. Andy Chetty, (1865) 2 MHC 438 .
64. Subba, (1883) 6 Mad 252.
65. Rameshwar v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1952 SC 54 [LNIND 1951 SC 76] .
66. State of Rajasthan v Darshan Singh, (2012) 5 SCC 789 [LNIND 2012 SC 334] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 3036 : 2012 Cr LJ 2908 : 2012 (5) Scale 570 [LNIND 2012 SC 334] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

67. [s 182] False information, with intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person.

Whoever gives to any public servant any information ¹ which he knows or believes to be false, intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, such public servant—

- (a) to do or omit anything² which such public servant ought not to do or omit if the true state of facts respecting which such information is given were known by him, or
- (b) to use the lawful power of such public servant to the injury or annoyance of any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.]

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A informs a Magistrate that Z, a police-officer, subordinate to such Magistrate, has been guilty of neglect of duty or misconduct, knowing such information to be false, and knowing it to be likely that the information will cause the Magistrate to dismiss Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.
- (b) A falsely informs a public servant that Z has contraband salt in a secret place, knowing such information to be false, and knowing that it is likely that the consequence of the information will be a search of Z's premises, attended with annoyance to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.
- (c) A falsely informs a policeman that he has been assaulted and robbed in the neighbourhood of a particular village. He does not mention the name of any person as one of his assailants, but knows it to be likely that in consequence of this information the police will make enquiries and institute searches in the village to the annoyance of the villages or some of them. A has committed an offence under this section.]

COMMENT.—

Object.—The object of this section is that a public servant should not be falsely given information with the intent that he should be misled by a person who believed that information to be false, and intended to mislead him. This section does not require that action must always be taken if the person who makes the public servant knows or believes that action will be taken.^{68.}

[s 182.1] Ingredients.—

- (1) Giving of an information to a public servant.
- (2) Information must have been known or believed to be false by the giver.
- (3) Such false information was given with intention to cause, or knowing that it is likely to cause such public servant (a) to do or omit anything which he ought not to do or omit to do if the true facts were known to him, or (b) to use his lawful power to the injury or annoyance of any person.^{69.}

1. 'Any information'.—The Bombay and the Patna High Courts have ruled that any 'false information' given to a public servant, with the intent mentioned in the section, is punishable under it whether that information is volunteered by the informant or is given in answer to questions put to him by the public servant.^{70.} Where a driver of a motor vehicle, who had no licence with him, on being asked his name by a police-officer, gave a fictitious name, it was held that he had committed an offence under this section.^{71.}

The section makes no distinction between information relating to a cognizable offence and one relating to a non-cognizable offence, nor is there anything in the section to justify the conclusion that it applies only to cases in which the information given to any public servant relates to a cognizable offence.^{72.}

2. 'To do or omit anything'.—It is not necessary that the public servant to whom false information is given should be induced to do anything or to omit to do anything in consequence of such information. The gist of the offence is not what action may or may not be taken by the public servant to whom false information is given, but the intention or knowledge (to be inferred from his conduct) of the person supplying such information.^{73.} Section 182 does not require that action must always be taken if the person who moves the public servant knows or believes that action would be taken.^{74.} Under this clause it is not necessary to show that the act done would be to the injury or annoyance of any third person.^{75.}

[s 182.2] Condition precedent for prosecution.—

This section has to be read in conjunction with section 195\(1\)\(a\) of the Cr PC, 1973 which requires a complaint for offences under sections 172–188, IPC, 1860, to be filed by the public servant concerned or by some other public servant to whom he is administratively subordinate.^{76.} It is mandatory to follow the procedure prescribed under section 195 of the Code while initiating action against an accused for an offence punishable under section 182, IPC, 1860 else such action is rendered void ab initio.^{77.} Thus, investigation into an offence under section 182, IPC, 1860 can be done only on the complaint given by a competent public servant; taking note of the fact that the procedure contemplated is not complied within the line with section 195, Cr PC, 1973 as well as the settled legal position evolved through the decisions of the Apex Court, the cognizance assumed by the Magistrate for the offence under section 182, IPC, 1860 is erroneous and not sustainable in law.^{78.} Similar view has been expressed by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in PD Lakhani v State of Punjab,⁷⁹ relying upon its earlier judgment in Daulat Ram's case (supra) and Mata Bhikh's case.⁸⁰ It is held that:

no complaint, therefore, could be lodged before the learned Magistrate by the Station House Officer. Even assuming that the same was done under the directions of SP, Section 195, in no uncertain terms, directs filing of an appropriate complaint petition only by the public servant concerned or his superior officer. It, therefore, cannot be done by an inferior officer. It does not provide for delegation of the function of the public servant concerned⁸¹.

[s 182.3] Private Complaint.—

Since the offence under section 182 is covered by the bar of section 195 Cr PC, 1973 there is absolutely no scope for filing a private complaint. The embargo in section 195 Cr PC, 1973 takes away the right to prosecute in respect of the aforesaid offences by way of filing a private complaint. Going by section 195 Cr PC, 1973 no Court shall take cognizance except in the manner contemplated by section 195 Cr PC, 1973 and consequently, no jurisdiction to refer the case under section 156\(3\) Cr PC, 1973 to the Police for investigation or to issue a direction to proceed under the aforesaid sections to the Police on a private person's complaint.⁸²

[s 182.4] Mala fide Prosecution.—

The Supreme Court has laid down that proceedings can be taken under this section as well as under sections 211 and 500 against persons who initiate prosecution against a person in high position with a view to wreaking vengeance for a private and personal grudge.⁸³

[s 182.5] CASES.—Causing public servant to do what he ought not to do.—

Mere non-mentioning of the complaint already filed in the Court of Chief Judicial Magistrate, in the petition filed under section 156\(3\) Cr PC, 1973 before the Special Sessions Judge, would not be enough to attract the section.⁸⁴ The accused falsely telegraphed to a District Magistrate that the town had been attacked by a gang of 200 robbers, but the Magistrate put no faith in the telegram and took no action; it was held that the accused were guilty of an offence under this section.⁸⁵ A personated B at an examination and passed the examination and obtained a certificate in B's name. B, thereupon, applied to have his name entered in the list of candidates for Government service. He attached to this application the certificate issued in his name, and his name was ordered to be entered on the list of candidates. It was held that he was guilty of an offence under this section.⁸⁶ Where the ulterior motive of the accused in making a false report of burglary was to suppress certain documents by pleading that they were stolen, it was held that the act of the accused was not punishable under this section.⁸⁷ Where a resolution was passed in a public meeting condemning police inaction in regard to an assault case and copies of the said resolution were sent to various authorities including the Superintendent of Police and the officer-in-charge, but the officer-in-charge took exception to it and filed a complaint in Court under sections 182 and 211, IPC, 1860, it was held that forwarding of the resolution did not amount to institution of criminal proceeding and no offence either under section 182 or section 211, IPC, 1860, was committed. It was further observed that police should not be so sensitive over public criticism.⁸⁸

[s 182.6] Period of Limitation.—

Since the offence under section 182 IPC, 1860 is punishable with imprisonment for a period of six months only, the authority should file the complaint under section 182 IPC, 1860 within one year from the date when that authority found that the allegations made in the complaint were false. Since more than four years was elapsed from the date when the authority found the allegations were false, no question of filing any complaint under section 182 IPC, 1860 at this belated stage arises.^{89.}

67. Subs. by Act 3 of 1895, section 1, for section 182.
68. Daulat Ram, [AIR 1962 SC 1206 \[LNIND 1962 SC 28\]](#) : 1962 \(2\) Cr LJ 286 .
69. Jiji Joseph v Tomy Ignatius, 2013 Cr LJ 828 (Ker).
70. Ramji Sajabarao, (1885) 10 Bom 124; Lachman Singh, (1928) 7 Pat 715.
71. Lachman Singh, (1928) 7 Pat 715.
72. Thakuri, (1940) 16 Luck 55 .
73. Budh Sen v State, (1891) 13 All 351 ; Raghu Tiwari, (1893) 15 All 336 .
74. Sham Lal Thukral v State of Punjab, 2009 Cr LJ 189 (PH) relying on [AIR 1962 SC1206 \[LNIND 1962 SC 28\]](#) : (1962 (2) Cr LJ 286) .
75. Ganesh Khanderao, (1889) 13 Bom 506.
76. Daulat Ram, 1962 \(2\) Cr LJ 286 : [AIR 1962 SC 1206 \[LNIND 1962 SC 28\]](#) ; TS Venkateswaran, 1982 Cr LJ NOC 68 (Ker); See also State of Rajasthan v Chaturbhuj, 1983 Cr LJ NOC 56 (Raj).
77. Saloni Arora v State of NCT of Delhi, [AIR 2017 SC 391 \[LNIND 2017 SC 23\]](#) .
78. EK Palanisamy v DySP, 2010 Cr LJ 1802 (Mad); Geetika Batra v OP Batra, 2009 Cr LJ 2687 (Del).
79. PD Lakhani v State of Punjab, 2008 AIR SCW 3357.
80. Mata Bhikh's case, (1994) 4 SCC 95 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] : (1994 AIR SCW 1935).
81. Also see Sham Lal Thukral v State of Punjab, 2009 Cr LJ 189 (PH); Randhir v State of Haryana, 2004 Cr LJ 479 (PH).
82. Loid Jude Manakkat v State, 2013 \(2\) KLT 931 : 2013 \(3\) KLJ 53 .
83. State of Haryana v Bhajan Lal, 1992 Supp (1) SCC 335 : AIR 1992 SC 604 : 1992 Cr LJ 527 .
84. Subhash Chandra v State of UP, (2000) 9 SCC 356 [LNIND 1999 SC 1565] : JT 2000 \(2\) SC 26 : 2000 AIR(SCW) 4947.
85. Budh Sen, supra.
86. Ganesh Khanderao, supra.
87. Shambhoo Nath, [AIR 1959 All 545 \[LNIND 1958 ALL 203\]](#) .
88. Shiv Kumar Prasad Singh, 1984 Cr LJ 1417 (Pat).
89. Harbhajan Singh Bajwa v Senior Superintendent of Police, Patiala, 2000 Cr LJ 3297 (PH).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 183] Resistance to the taking of property by the lawful authority of a public servant.

Whoever offers any resistance to the taking of any property by the lawful authority of any public servant, knowing or having reason to believe that he is such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

This section makes it penal to offer resistance to the taking of property by the lawful authority of any public servant. The Bombay High Court has held that there are no words in the section as there are in section 99, extending the operation of the section to acts which are not strictly justifiable by law. Resistance to an act of a public officer acting bona fide though in excess of his authority may give rise to some charge in the nature of assault, but it cannot afford any foundation for a prosecution under this section.⁹⁰ The Madras High Court is of opinion that this section should be read in conjunction with section 99. Taking the two together, if an officer acts in good faith under colour of his office the mere circumstance that his "act may not be strictly justifiable by law" cannot affect the lawfulness of his authority. In this case, property had been seized in execution by the officer of the Court, and it was held that as the officer was acting bona fide, though he had wrongly seized the property of the accused, the accused could be convicted under this section for resisting the execution.⁹¹ This view of the law receives substantial support from the decision of the Supreme Court in *Keshoram's case*⁹² where too it has been held that merely because no prior notice was served on the accused before seizing his cattle under the Delhi Municipal Act for recovering arrears of milk tax, it could not be said that the municipal officer's action was entirely illegal and as such the accused had the right of private defence against the bona fide act of the public servant. In the instant case the accused was held to have been rightly convicted under sections 353/332/333, IPC, 1860, for assaulting the public servant. On a parity of reasoning it can be said that had the accused been prosecuted under section 183 of the Code, he could have also been convicted under that section as well.

[s 183.1] Lawful authority wanted.—

Where a person resisted an official in attaching property under a warrant, the term of which had already expired,⁹³ or which did not specify the date on or before which it was to be executed,⁹⁴ it was held that he was not guilty under this section. If the warrant is executed by a Court official when it is addressed to a peon, resistance to the Court official is not illegal.⁹⁵

If a bailiff breaks open the doors of a third person in order to execute a decree against a judgment-debtor, he is a trespasser if it turns out that the person or goods of the debtor are not in the house; and under such circumstances the owner of the house does not by obstructing the bailiff, render himself punishable under section 183 or section 186.⁹⁶

90. Sakharam Pawar, (1935) 37 Bom LR 362 .

91. Tiruchitrambala Pathan, (1896) 21 Mad 78.

92. Keshoram, 1974 Cr LJ 814 : AIR 1974 SC 1158 [LNIND 1974 SC 130] .

93. Anand Lal Bera v State, (1883) 10 Cal 18 .

94. Mohini Mohan Banerji, (1916) 1 PLJ 550 , 18 Cr LJ 39.

95. Ibid.

96. Gazi Aba Dore, (1870) 7 BHC (Cr C) 83.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 184] Obstructing sale of property offered for sale by authority of public servant.

Whoever intentionally obstructs any sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

This section punishes intentional obstruction of the sale of any property conducted under the lawful authority of a public servant. No physical obstruction is necessary. Use of abusive language by a person at an auction-sale conducted by a public servant makes him liable to be convicted of an offence under this section.^{97.}

^{97.} Provincial Govt. CP & Berar v Balaram, (1939) Nag 139.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 185] Illegal purchase or bid for property offered for sale by authority of public servant.

Whoever, at any sale of property¹ held by the lawful authority of a public servant, as such, purchases or bids for any property on account of any person, whether himself or any other, whom he knows to be under a legal incapacity to purchase that property at that sale, or bids for such property not intending to perform the obligations under which he lays himself by such bidding, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

This section makes it penal to bid at a public sale of property on account of a party who is under a legal incapacity to purchase it, or to bid for it not intending to complete the purchase or as it is expressed to perform the obligations under which the bidder lays himself by such "bidding".^{98.}

1. 'Property'.—This word is used in its wide sense. The right to sell drugs is a monopoly granted for a certain area and comes within the definition of property. A person who bids at an auction of the right to sell drugs within a certain area under a false name and, when the sale is confirmed in his favour, denies that he has ever made any bid at all, is guilty of an offence under this section.^{99.}

^{98.} 2nd Rep., section 110.

^{99.} Bishan Prasad, (1914) 37 All 128 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 186] Obstructing public servant in discharge of public functions.

Whoever voluntarily obstructs any public servant in the discharge of his public functions, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

State Amendment

Andhra Pradesh.— Offence under section 186 is cognizable.

[Vide A.P.G.O. Ms. No. 732, dated 5th December, 1991].

COMMENT—

This section provides for voluntarily obstructing a public servant in the discharge of his duties. It must be shown that the obstruction or resistance was offered to a public servant in the discharge of his duties or public functions as authorised by law. The mere fact of a public servant believing that he was acting in the discharge of his duties will not be sufficient to make resistance or obstruction to him amount to an offence.¹⁰⁰ If the public servant is acting in good faith under colour of his office there is no right of private defence against his act.¹⁰¹

The word "obstruction" connotes some overt act in the nature of violence or show of violence.¹⁰² To constitute "obstruction", it is not necessary that there should be actual criminal force. It is sufficient if there is either a show of force or a threat or any act preventing the execution of any act by a public servant.¹⁰³ Though an offence under this section is a non-cognizable one, by virtue of powers vested in the State Government under section 10 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, it can be made a cognizable offence in a specified area by means of a notification, while such notification remains in force.

[s 186.1] Initiation of Prosecution.—

To initiate prosecution under this section it is necessary to see that the complaint is filed under section 195(1)(a), Cr PC, 1973, by the concerned public servant or his superior officer to whom he is administratively subordinate (See also discussion under sub-head "Condition precedent for Prosecution under section 182 ante.) It is also not possible to bypass the requirements of section 195(1)(a), Cr PC, 1973, by merely changing the label of the offence, say from section 186 to section 353, IPC, 1860.¹⁰⁴

[s 186.2] Offences with bar under section 195 Cr PC, 1973 with some offences without the bar.—

Where an accused commits some offences which are separate and distinct from those contained in section 195 of the Cr PC, 1973, section 195 will affect only the offences mentioned therein unless such offences form an integral part so as to amount to offences committed as a part of the same transaction, in which case the other offences also would fall within the ambit of section 195 of the Code.¹⁰⁵ It is a well-accepted proposition of law that when an accused commits some offences which are separate and distinct from those contained in section 195; section 195 will affect only the offences mentioned therein unless such other offences form an integral part of the same so as to amount to offences committed as a part of the same transaction. That in such case the other offences would also fall within the ambit of section 195 of the Code. In other words, the offences charged against the petitioners under section 143, 147, 148, 149, 332, 333 and 307 of IPC, 1860, cannot be split from the complaint for a separate offence in the facts and circumstances of the present case, and thereby cognizance in respect to said offences are also barred under section 195(1)(a)(i) of the Code.¹⁰⁶

[s 186.3] CASES.—Obstruction.—

A Circle Inspector went into the compound of the accused with a village servant to remove a portion of the hedge which was an encroachment. When the servant put his scythe to the hedge to cut it, the accused caught hold of the scythe and threatened him. It was held that the accused was guilty of an offence under this section, since his laying hold of the scythe amounted to physical obstruction, and the obstruction offered to the servant was tantamount to obstruction to the Circle Inspector under whose orders he was acting.¹⁰⁷ The daughter of the tenant of the accused died of electrocution. The police-officers entered the premises with permission to check fresh wiring and leakage of current. They were prevented from taking photographs by the accused and also not allowed to leave the house. The Court said that this amounted to obstruction within the meaning of section 186 and wrongful confinement within the meaning of section 342.¹⁰⁸ Section 186 contemplates obstruction of a public servant in the discharge of his public duty and section 332 contemplates voluntarily causing hurt to him to deter him from performing his public duty. The gravity of the offences is different. Offence under section 332 is cognizable. The requirement of making a complaint in writing as postulated by section 195, Cr PC, 1973, cannot be extended to the case of an offence under section 332.¹⁰⁹

[s 186.4] Section 186 and Section 353: Distinction between.—

Sections 186 and 353, IPC, 1860 relate to two distinct offences and while the offence under the latter section is a cognizable offence the one under the former section is not so. The ingredients of the two offences are also distinct. Section 186, IPC, 1860 is applicable to a case where the accused voluntarily obstructs a public servant in the discharge of his public functions but under section 353, IPC, 1860 the ingredient of assault or use of criminal force while the public servant is doing his duty as such is necessary. The quality of the two offences is also different. Section 186 occurs in Chapter X of the IPC, 1860 dealing with Contempts of the lawful authority of public servants, while section 353 occurs in Chapter XVI regarding the Offences affecting the human body. It is well established that section 195 of the Cr PC, 1973 does not bar the trial of an accused person for a distinct offence disclosed by the same set of facts but which is not within the ambit of that section.¹¹⁰ If in truth and substance the offence in question falls in the category of sections mentioned in section 195 of the Code and it was not open to bypass its provisions even by choosing to prosecute under section 353, IPC, 1860 only.¹¹¹

100. Lilla Singh, (1894) 22 Cal 286 ; Tulsiram v State, (1888) 13 Bom 168.
101. Poomalai Udayan, (1898) 21 Mad 296; Pukot Kotu, (1896) 19 Mad 349.
102. Phudki, AIR 1955 All 104 [LNIND 1954 ALL 119] .
103. Babulal, (1956) 58 Bom LR 1021 .
104. Oduvil Devaki Amma, 1982 Cr LJ NOC 11 (Ker).
105. State of UP v Suresh Chandra Srivastava, AIR 1984 SC 1108 [LNIND 1984 SC 575] : 1984 Cr LJ 926 .
106. Ramji Bhikha Koli v State of Gujarat, 1999 Cr LJ 1244 (Guj).
107. Bhaga Mana, (1927) 30 Bom LR 364 . See also Gyan Bahadur v State of MP, 2013 Cr LJ 1729 (MP).
108. Veena Ranganekar v State, 2000 Cr LJ 2543 (Del).
109. State of HP v Vidya Sagar, 1997 Cr LJ 3893 (HP).
110. Durgacharan Naik v State of Orissa, AIR 1966 SC 1775 [LNIND 1966 SC 59] : 1966 Cr LJ 1491 (SC).
111. Ashok v The State, 1987 Cr LJ 1750 (MP); Mrityunjoy Das v State, 1987 Cr LJ 909 (Cal).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 187] Omission to assist public servant when bound by law to give assistance.

Whoever, being bound by law to render or furnish assistance to any public servant in the execution of his public duty, intentionally omits to give such assistance, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both;

and if such assistance be demanded of him by a public servant legally competent to make such demand for the purposes of executing any process lawfully issued by a Court of Justice, or of preventing the commission of an offence, or of suppressing a riot, or affray, or of apprehending a person charged with or guilty of an offence, or of having escaped from lawful custody, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

COMMENT—

This section provides, first in general terms for the punishment when a person, being bound by law to render assistance to a public servant in the execution of his public duty, intentionally omits to assist; and second, for the punishment when the assistance is demanded for certain specified purposes.^{112.}

This section speaks of assistance to be rendered to public servants, just as sections 176 and 177 speak of furnishing true information. A case was registered against the accused/ Sub-Inspector of Police under section 187 of the IPC, 1860 for not assisting the Assisting Sessions Judge, in the service of summons to witnesses and administration of justice. In the light of the language employed in sections 195\(1\) of Cr PC, 1973, the prosecution initiated at the instance of the Assistant Sessions Judge cannot be sustained for the reason that the Sub-Inspector of Police is not subordinate to the said Officer. Unless a complaint is made by the competent officer as specified under section 195(1) of the Code, the prosecution cannot be further proceeded with. Apart from this aspect of the matter, in as much as the service of summons, being in discharge of the official duties of the Sub-Inspector, sanction under section 197 of the code is also required.^{113.}

112. Ramaya Naika, (1903) 26 Mad 419, (FB).

113. Paleti Anil Babu v State, 2006 Cr LJ 3084 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 188] Disobedience to order duly promulgated by public servant.

Whoever, knowing that, by an order promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order, he is directed to abstain from a certain act, or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, disobeys such direction, shall, if such disobedience causes or tends to cause obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any person lawfully employed, be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both;

and if such disobedience causes or tends to cause danger to human life, health or safety, or causes or tends to cause a riot or affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Explanation.*—It is not necessary that the offender should intend to produce harm, or contemplate his disobedience as likely to produce harm. It is sufficient that he knows of the order which he disobeys, and that his disobedience produces, or is likely to produce, harm.

ILLUSTRATION

An order is promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order, directing that a religious procession shall not pass down a certain street. A knowingly disobeys the order, and thereby causes danger of riot. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

COMMENT—

Ingredients.—To constitute this offence it is necessary to show—

- (1) a lawful order promulgated by a public servant empowered to promulgate it;
- (2) knowledge of the order which may be general or special;
- (3) disobedience of such order; and
- (4) the result that is likely to follow from such disobedience.

The offence under this section has now been made a cognizable offence under the Cr PC, 1973. Though a bailable offence, it can be made non-bailable by a notification by the State Government under section 10\(2\) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932.

There must be evidence that the accused had knowledge of the order with the disobedience of which he is charged. Mere proof of a general notification promulgating the order does not satisfy the requirements of the section.¹¹⁴ "Promulgation" does not require publication in newspapers or by posters.¹¹⁵ Mere disobedience of an order does not constitute an offence in itself; it must be shown that the disobedience has or tends to a certain consequence,¹¹⁶ namely, annoyance, obstruction, etc. The annoyance has to be proved as a fact; mere mental annoyance of the authorities concerned is not enough.¹¹⁷ It is also necessary to see that the order was not only lawfully made but duly promulgated and the accused had knowledge of the order, else his conviction cannot be sustained.¹¹⁸ Where a standing crop was attached by means of an order under section 145 Cr PC, 1973 and the accused, who had come to know the order, reaped and removed the crop, an offence under this section was held to have been committed. It was a disobedience packed with a tendency to cause riot or affray.¹¹⁹ The complaint of this offence must disclose that the disobedience of the order led to the consequences narrated in clauses (2) and (3) of section 188, IPC, 1860, otherwise no cognizance can be taken on such a complaint.¹²⁰ It is not necessary that, if the order disobeyed was that of a civil Court, a complaint should be received from that Court. A criminal Court can entertain a complaint of disobedience from any other source.¹²¹

It is open to a person charged under this section to plead in defence that the order, though made with jurisdiction, was utterly wrong or improper on merits.¹²²

[s 188.1] Necessary particulars in the complaint.—

In order to attract the provisions of section 186 IPC, 1860, it has to be seen whether the public servant in the discharge of his public functions has been voluntarily obstructed or not. It is reiterated that what was mentioned in the complaint was that the government administration was disrupted for half an hour. Mere disruption of government administration without there being a specific mention that the public servants were obstructed from voluntarily discharging their public functions would not attract section 186 IPC, 1860.¹²³

Knowledge of orders.—The offence of disobedience of the orders of a public servant is not committed where there is nothing to show that the accused person had knowledge of the order.¹²⁴

[s 188.2] Curfew Order and Shoot to kill.—

Violation of a curfew order under section 144, Cr PC, 1973, is a minor offence punishable under section 188, IPC, 1860, and as such the executive instruction to "Shoot to Kill" for violation of a prohibitory order under section 144 Cr PC, 1973, is ultra vires section 144 Cr PC, 1973, section 188 IPC, 1860, Articles 20\(1\) and 21 of the Constitution and is, therefore, void and unlawful.¹²⁵

[s 188.3] Prohibitory order under Food and Safety Standards Act, 2006.—

Disobedience to a prohibitory order issued by the Food and Safety Commissioner from possessing or transporting Gutka or Pan Masala would not cause breach of law and order. The Commissioner's order is not an order contemplated under Chapter 10 of the IPC, 1860. Besides, the prohibitory order issued under section 30 of the FSS Act, 2006 and its violation, would amount to offence only under section 55 of the FSS Act, 2006. This specific provision is made in the special enactment, which is a law in itself. It would not permit any one to apply section 188 of the IPC, 1860 for such breach or violation.^{126.}

[s 188.4] Complaint.—

A written complaint by a public servant concerned is sine qua non to initiate a criminal proceeding under section 188 of the IPC, 1860 against those who, with the knowledge that an order has been promulgated by a public servant directing either 'to abstain from a certain act, or to take certain order, with certain property in his possession or under his management' disobey that order.^{127.}

114. Ramdas Singh, (1926) 54 Cal 152 .

115. Srimati Tugla, (1955) 2 All 547 .

116. Lachhmi Devi, (1930) 58 Cal 971 .

117. Pradip, AIR 1960 Assam 20 ; DN Ramaiah, 1972 Cr LJ 1158 (Mysore); Saroj Hazra, 48 Cr LJ 747 (Cal); Bharat Raut, 1953 Cr LJ 1787 24.(Pat); Dalganjan, 1956 Cr LJ 1176 (All); Fakir Charan Das, 1957 Cr LJ 1151 (Ori); Pradip Choudhury, 1960 Cr LJ 251 (Assam); Ram Manohar Lohia; 1968 Cr LJ 281 (All).

118. K Papayya v State, 1975 Cr LJ 1784 (AP).

119. Bhagirathi Shrichandan v Damodar, 1987 Cr LJ 631 (Ori).

120. Padan Pradhan, 1982 Cr LJ 534 (Pat).

121. Thavasiyappan v Periasamy Nadar, 1992 Cr LJ 283 .

122. Bachuram v State, AIR 1956 Cal 102 [LNIND 1955 CAL 186] .

123. Anurag Thakur v State of HP, 2016 Cr LJ 3363 : I L R 2016 (III) HP 1314.

124. Bhoop Singh Tyagi v State, 2002 Cr LJ 2872 (Del).

125. Jayantilal v State, 1975 Cr LJ 661 (Guj); see also R Deb : Op Cit, pp 840-841.

126. Ganesh Pandurang Jadhao v The State of Maharashtra, 2016 Cr LJ 2401 : III (2016) CCR 334 (Bom).

127. State of UP v Mata Bhikh, (1994) 4 SCC 95 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] : JT 1994 (2) SC 565 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] : (1994) 2 Scale 235 : (1994) 1 SCC (Cr) 831 : 1994 (2) SCR 368 [LNIND 1994 SC 311] . See also C Muniappan v State of TN, (2010) 9 SCC 567 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] : AIR 2010 SC 3718 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 1402 : 2010 (8) Scale 637 : JT 2010 (9) SC 95 [LNIND 2010 SC 809] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 189] Threat of injury to public servant.

Whoever holds out any threat of injury to any public servant, or to any person in whom he believes that public servant to be interested, for the purpose of inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of the public functions of such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

State Amendment

Andhra Pradesh.— In Andhra Pradesh offence under section 189 is cognizable.

[Vide A.P.G.O. Ms. No. 732, dated 5th December, 1991].

COMMENT—

Under this section there must be a threat of injury either to the public servant or to any one in whom the accused believes the public servant to be interested. What the section deals with are menaces which would have a tendency to induce the public servant to alter his action. See section 503 which defines criminal intimidation and applies in all cases. This section deals with criminal intimidation of a public servant. Threats of violence to a public servant who accepted bribe money but did not do the promised work are not covered by this section. A public servant deserves protection, since in the performance of his duties, he is likely to cause disappointment to many and invite their wrath. That is why under sections 189 and 353 and various other sections of the IPC, 1860, a public servant is strongly protected and punishment for offences against him is made deterrent. However if a public servant has gone astray and indulged in malpractices, more especially by way of taking bribe, he would necessarily become subject to public criticism and private accountability. What appears then at the forefront is not the performance of duty by the public servant, but the non-performance of some contract dehors the normal functions of the public servant. If that illegal contract gives rise to any act of violence at any stage, such acts cannot constitute by any stretch of imagination acts contemplated and punished under sections 353 and 189, IPC, 1860.^{128.}

Where workers of Communist Party (Marxist) went to a police station to protest against the arrest of their party workers and in the process asked the police-officer to release them on threat of dire consequences, it was held that the accused had committed an offence under this section.^{129.} By a notification under section 10 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932, the State Government can make this section a cognizable offence for a specified area.

128. Duraikhannu v State of TN, 1987 Cr LJ 1461 (Mad); Mrityunjoy Das v State, 1987 Cr LJ 909 (Cal).

129. De Cruz, (1884) 8 Mad 140.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER X OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS

This Chapter contains penal provisions intended to enforce obedience to the lawful authority of public servants. Contempt of the lawful authority of Courts of Justice, of Officers of Revenue, Officers of Police, and other public servants are punishable under this head.

[s 190] Threat of injury to induce person to refrain from applying for protection to public servant.

Whoever holds out any threat of injury to any person for the purpose of inducing that person to refrain or desist from making a legal application for protection against any injury to any public servant legally empowered as such to give such protection, or to cause such protection to be given, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

State Amendment

Andhra Pradesh.—Offence under section 190 is cognizable.

[Vide A.P.G.O. Ms. No. 732, dated 5th December, 1991].

COMMENT—

The object of this section is to prevent persons from terrorising others with a view to deter them from seeking the protection of public servants against any injury. Where a clergyman, knowing that a civil suit was pending against a person for the possession of certain church property, excommunicated him for withholding it, it was held that the clergyman had committed no offence under this section. By a notification under section 10\(1\) of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1932 the State Government can make this offence a cognizable one for a specified area while such notification remains in force.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 191] Giving false evidence.

Whoever, being legally bound by an oath or by an express provision of law to state the truth, or being bound by law to make a declaration upon any subject,¹ makes any statement which is false,² and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true,³ is said to give false evidence.

Explanation 1.*—A statement is within the meaning of this section, whether it is made verbally or otherwise.

Explanation 2.*—A false statement as to the belief of the person attesting is within the meaning of this section, and a person may be guilty of giving false evidence by stating that he believes a thing which he does not believe, as well as by stating that he knows a thing which he does not know.

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, in support of a just claim which B has against Z for one thousand rupees, falsely swears on a trial that he heard Z admit the justice of B's claim. A has given false evidence.
- (b) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z, when he does not believe it to be the handwriting of Z. Here A states that which he knows to be false, and therefore gives false evidence.

- (c) A, knowing the general character of Z's handwriting, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z; A in good faith believing it to be so. Here A's statement is merely as to his belief, and is true as to his belief, and therefore, although the signature may not be the handwriting of Z, A has not given false evidence.
- (d) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he knows that Z was at a particular place on a particular day, not knowing anything upon the subject. A gives false evidence whether Z was at that place on the day named or not.
- (e) A, an interpreter or translator, gives or certifies as a true interpretation or translation of a statement or document which he is bound by oath to interpret or translate truly, that which is not and which he does not believe to be a true interpretation or translation. A has given false evidence.

COMMENT.—

Ingredients.—The offence under this section involves three ingredients:—

- (1) A person must be legally bound;
 - (a) by an oath, or any express provision of law, to state the truth; or
 - (b) to make a declaration upon any subject.
- (2) He must make a false statement.
- (3) He must;
 - (a) know or believe it to be false, or
 - (b) not believe it to be true.

1. 'Legally bound by an oath or by an express provision of law, etc.'— In case the recourse to a false plea is taken with an oblique motive, it would definitely hinder, hamper or impede the flow of justice and prevent the Courts from performing their legal duties.² The Courts have to follow the procedures strictly and cannot allow a witness to escape the legal action for giving false evidence before the Court on mere explanation that he had given it under the pressure of the police or for some other reason. Whenever the witness speaks falsehood in the Court, and it is proved satisfactorily, the Court should take a serious action against such witnesses.³ It is necessary that the accused should be legally bound by an oath before a competent authority. If the Court has no authority to administer an oath the proceeding will be coram non jure and a prosecution for false evidence will not stand.⁴ Similarly, if the Court is acting beyond its jurisdiction it will not be sustained.⁵ For the essentiality of section 191, petitioner must have been legally bound to speak truth or make a declaration and he must have stated or declared what is false. He must also know or believe what he has stated or declared is false or he has believed it true. If there is no compulsion to make any declaration as required by law, Section 191 will not have any application. The information given by him is not on any oath nor was he bound to give such information under any provision of Law.⁶

[s 191.1] 'By an oath'.—

An oath or a solemn affirmation is not a sine qua non in the offence of giving false evidence.⁷ The offence may be committed although the person giving evidence has been either sworn or affirmed.⁸ Whenever in a Court of law a person binds himself on oath to state the truth, he is bound to state the truth and he cannot be heard to say that he should not have gone into the witness box or should not have made an affidavit. It is no defence to say that he was not bound to enter the witness box.⁹

[s 191.2] 'By an express provision of law'.—

Under this clause sanction of an oath is not necessary; there must be a specific provision of law compelling a person to state the truth. Where the accused is not bound by an express provision of law to state the truth he cannot be charged with giving false evidence.¹⁰

[s 191.3] 'Declaration upon any subject'.—

In certain cases the law requires a declaration from a person of verification in a pleading—and if such a declaration is made falsely it will come under this clause. The words 'any subject' denote that the declaration must be in connection with a subject regarding which it was to be made.

2. 'Any statement which is false'.—It is not necessary that the false evidence should be material to the case in which it is given.¹¹ If the statement made is designedly false, the accused is liable whether the statement had a material bearing or not upon the matter under enquiry before the Court.¹²

3. 'Knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true'.—The matter sworn to must be either false in fact, or, if true, the accused must not have known it to be so. The making of a false statement, without knowledge as to whether the subject-matter of the statement is false or not, is legally the giving of false evidence.¹³ Where a man swears to a particular fact, without knowing at the time whether the fact be true or false, it is as much perjury as if he knew the fact to be false, and equally indictable.¹⁴ However, a man cannot be convicted of perjury for having acted rashly, or for having failed to make reasonable inquiry with regard to the facts alleged by him to be true.¹⁵

[s 191.4] Two Contradictory Statements.—

Merely because a person makes two contradictory statements, one of which must be false, it does not make out a case of perjury unless the falsity of one of the two statements as charged in the indictment is positively proved to be so.¹⁶ In India a prosecution for perjury seems to be possible in such a case by virtue of illustration (e) of section 221, The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1973, it has been held to be inexpedient to do so in the interest of justice. Thus, where a person made one statement under section 164 Cr PC, 1973 and a diametrically opposite statement in Court during the enquiry or trial, he could in view of this illustration be charged in the alternative and convicted of intentionally giving false evidence, although it cannot be proved which of these contradictory statements was false. But to do so may be to tie him down to his previous false statement under section 164 Cr PC, 1973, and preventing him from telling the truth even belatedly at the later stage of enquiry or trial. The Supreme Court too has felt that a witness whose statement has been recorded under section 164 Cr PC, 1973, feels tied to his previous statement and as such his evidence has to be approached with caution.¹⁷ In the instant case as it could not be shown that the earlier statements of the witnesses recorded under section 164 Cr PC, 1973 were true and those given before the Magistrate in course of the enquiry were false, the complaints of perjury filed against the witnesses were directed to be withdrawn.¹⁸

[s 191.5] As to expert opinion.—

A scientific expert was asked to give his opinion regarding two cartridges, whether those were fired from one firearm or from two different ones, without sending the suspected firearm to him. He gave opinion, inter alia, that no definite opinion could be offered in order to link the firearm unless the firearm was made available to him. During the examination, the Court insisted him to give a definite opinion that too without examining the firearm. At that time, he opined that the cartridges appeared to have been fired from two separate firearms. Considering that there was a deliberate deviation in his opinion the High Court initiated proceedings against him under section 340 Cr PC, 1973 for perjury. The Supreme Court held that it is unjust, if not unfair, to attribute any motive to the appellant that there was a somersault from his original stand in the written opinion.¹⁹

[s 191.6] Written statements and applications.—

A person filing a written statement in a suit is bound by law to state the truth, and if he makes a statement which is false to his knowledge or belief, or which he believes not be to true, he is guilty of this offence.²⁰ Signing and verifying an application for execution containing false statements is an offence under this section, and it makes no difference that at the time when the signature and verification were appended the application was blank.²¹ But the verification of an application, in which the applicant makes a false statement, does not subject him to punishment for this offence, if such application does not require verification.²²

[s 191.7] Incriminating statement no justification.—

When a party makes a false statement while legally bound by solemn affirmation, the fact that the statement was one tending to incriminate himself will not justify his acquittal on a charge of giving false evidence.²³

[s 191.8] Illegality of trial does not purge perjury.—

The fact that the trial in which false evidence is given is to be commenced de novo owing to irregularity does not exonerate the person giving false evidence in that trial from the obligation to speak the truth, and he is liable for giving false evidence.²⁴

[s 191.9] Prosecution for perjury.—

It has been held by the Supreme Court that the courts should sanction the prosecution for perjury only in those cases where perjury appears to be deliberate and where it would be expedient in the interest of justice to punish the delinquent and not merely because there is some inaccuracy in the statement.²⁵

[s 191.10] Accused not liable for giving false evidence.—

The authors of the Code observe:

We have no punishment for false evidence given by a person when on his trial for an offence, though we conceive that such a person ought to be interrogated... If A stabs Z, and afterwards on his trial denies that he stabbed Z, we do not propose to punish A as a giver of false evidence.²⁶

The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer questions put by the Court or by giving false answers to them.²⁷

[s 191.11] CASES.—

In a case, where the allegation was that the Attorney General and Chief Vigilance Officer gave consent to prosecute the Complainant without due care and without proper application of mind. The Supreme Court held that it cannot be said that the document conveying consent was a 'false document' or that giving of 'consent' amounted to giving of 'false evidence' or 'fabricating false evidence' at any stage of judicial proceeding.²⁸ A person could only be held guilty of an offence under section 191 if false evidence is knowingly given or when the statement is believed to be not true.²⁹ A witness falsely deposing in another's name,³⁰ and a person falsely verifying his plaint,³¹ and an official making a false return of the service of summons,³² were held guilty of giving false evidence. The Supreme Court has held that where a false affidavit is sworn by a witness in a proceeding before a Court the offence would fall under this section and section 192. It is the offence of giving false evidence or of fabricating false evidence for the purpose of being used in a judicial proceeding.³³ Where a notice of perjury was issued to certain eye-witnesses but it could not be shown with certainty that they were liars, it was held that the issue of notices was not proper. The Court used its inherent powers and quashed the notices. The challenge was presented by only one of the witnesses on his own behalf as well as that of others.³⁴

[s 191.12] Affidavit.—

An affidavit is evidence within the meaning of section 191 of the IPC, 1860. It was alleged about an affidavit filed in a Court that it contained false statements. The affidavit was filed by the party suo motu and not under direction from the Court. Such an affidavit could not be termed as evidence. Hence, no action could be taken against him under the IPC, 1860.³⁵ Process Server while he takes information from the neighbours is not expected to get a sworn statement from them. It is neither an affidavit nor a sworn statement. It is only an information, which he has collected to show his bona fides that he made attempts to serve the notice on the party. If on the request of process server if any such information is given that information cannot be treated as false evidence or fabricating evidence nor it could be treated as certificate nor a declaration under any of the provisions of this section.^{36.}

[s 191.13] Abetment.—

Where an accused asked a witness to suppress certain facts in giving his evidence against him (accused), it was held that he was guilty of abetment of giving false evidence in a stage of a judicial proceeding.^{37.} Where C falsely represented himself to be U, and the writer of a document signed by U, and T, knowing that C was not U and had not written such document, adduced C as U, the writer of that document, it was held that T was guilty of abetment of giving false evidence.^{38.}

[s 191.14] Bar under section 195 Cr PC, 1973.—

Section 195 of the Code lays down the procedure for prosecution for contempt of lawful authority of public servants for offences against public justice and for offences against public documents given in the form of evidence. As per this provision, Court is debarred from taking cognizance of any of the offences punishable under sections 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and section 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceedings in any Court except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in that behalf or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate. The term "Court" in the section means a Civil, Revenue or Criminal Court and includes a tribunal. Section 340 of the Code prescribes the procedure to be followed for offences mentioned in section 195 of the Code. Therefore, the summoning orders of the Magistrate against the petitioners under sections 193/191/209 IPC, 1860 are hit by provisions of section 195 of the Code and the cognizance taken by the Magistrate of the offences is, therefore, without jurisdiction.^{39.} Sections 191 and 192 of the IPC, 1860 are the sections that define offences for which punishment is provided for in sections 193 and 195 as mentioned in section 195(1)(b) (i), Criminal Procedure Code. So the bar to initiate proceedings is applicable to sections 191 and 192 also.^{40.}

[s 191.15] Procedure.—

A combined reading of the aforequoted provisions of Cr PC, 1973 and IPC, 1860 as also sub-section (3) of section 195, Cr PC, 1973 makes this legal position quite clear that they are applicable to any legal proceeding before a Civil Court or a Criminal Court, including a Tribunal constituted by Central, Provincial or State Acts, if declared by that particular Act to be a Court for the purpose of section 195, Cr PC, 1973. Therefore, if the Family Court finds that any party to the proceeding or a witness therein has intentionally given false evidence at any stage of a judicial proceeding or fabricated false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of the proceeding, and the Family Court is of the opinion that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an enquiry should be made into any evidence referred to in clause (b) of sub-section (1) of section 195, Cr PC, 1973 it may hold a preliminary enquiry and if it thinks necessary then it may record a finding to that effect and then proceed to make a complaint in respect of the particular offence/offences stipulated in clause (b) of section 195, Cr PC, 1973 to the concerned Magistrate having jurisdiction against the said person.^{41.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
2. Chandra Shashi v Anil Kumar Verma, 1995 (1) SCC 421 [LNIND 1994 SC 1604] .
3. Mishrilal v State of MP, (2005)10 SCC 701 [LNIND 2005 SC 1165] : 2005 SCC (Cr) 1712.
4. Abdul Majid v Krishna Lal Nag, (1893) 20 Cal 724 ; Niaz Ali, (1882) 5 All 17 ; Mata Dayal (1897) 24 Cal 755 ; Subba, (1883) 6 Mad 252; Fatteh Ali, (1894) PR No. 15 of 1894.
5. Chait Ram, (1883) 6 All 103 ; Bharma, (1886) 11 Bom 702 (FB).
6. D Jothi v K P Kandasamy, 2000 Cr LJ 292 (Mad).
7. (1865) 2 WR (CrL) 9.
8. Gobind Chandra Seal, (1892) 19 Cal 355 ; Shava v State, (1891) 16 Bom 359; contra, Maru, (1888) 10 All 207 .
9. Ranjit Singh, 1959 Cr LJ 1124 : AIR 1959 SC 843 [LNIND 1959 SC 63] .
10. Hari Charan Singh, (1900) 27 Cal 455 .
11. Parbutty Churn Sircar, (1866) 6 WR (Cr) 84; Damodhar P Kulkarni, (1868) 5 BHC (CrC) 68.
12. Mohammad Khudabux, (1949) Nag 355.
13. Echan Meeah, (1865) 2 WR (Cr) 47. Mohammad Hussein v State of Maharashtra, 1995 Cr LJ 2364 (Bom).
14. Mawbey, (1796) 6 TR 619, 637; Schlesinger, (1847) 10 QB 670 .
15. Muhammad Ishaq, (1914) 36 All 362 .
16. Cross & Jones: Introduction to Criminal Law, 9th Edn, p 275.
17. Ramcharan, 1968 Cr LJ 1473 : AIR 1968 SC 1267 [LNIND 1968 SC 29] ; Balak Ram, 1974 Cr LJ 1486 : AIR 1974 SC 2165 [LNIND 1974 SC 236] .
18. Ibid. Kuriakose v State of Kerala, 1995 Cr LJ 2687 : 1994 Supp (1) SCC 602 , contradictory statements as to contents of panchanama by an attesting witness does not make him liable to be prosecuted under the section, gravity of the false statement has also to be taken into account.
19. Prem Sagar Manocha v State (NCT of Delhi), 2016 Cr LJ 1090 : (2016) 4 SCC 571 [LNIND 2016 SC 9] .
20. Mehrban Singh, (1884) 6 All 626 ; Padam Singh, (1930) 52 All 856 .
21. Ratanchand v State, (1904) 6 Bom LR 886 .
22. Kasi Chunder Mozumdar, (1880) 6 Cal 440 .
23. (1867) 3 MHC (Appx.) XXXIX.
24. Virasami v State, (1896) 19 Mad 375; Batesar Mandal, (1884) 10 Cal 604 .
25. State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v Pankaj Chaudhary, AIR 2018 SC 5412 [LNIND 2018 SC 565] .
26. Note G, p 131.
27. Criminal Procedure Code, section 313 (3).
28. Buddhi Kota Subbarao v K Parasaran, AIR 1996 SC 2687 [LNIND 1996 SC 1254] : (1996) 5 SCC 530 [LNIND 1996 SC 1254] .
29. Indian Structural Engineering Company Pvt Ltd v Pradip Kumar Saha, 2009 Cr LJ 4229 (Cal).
30. Prema Bhika (1863) 1 BHC 89.
31. Luxumandas, (1869) Unrep CrC 25.
32. Shama Churn Roy, (1867) 8 WR (Cr) 27.

33. Baban Singh v Jagdish Singh, AIR 1967 SC 68 [LNIND 1966 SC 47] : 1967 Cr LJ 6 ; MP Paul, 1973 Cr LJ 1284 (Ker).
34. State v Manohar Yeshwant Paul, 1997 Cr LJ 3114 (Bom).
35. Delhi Lotteries v Rajesh Agarwal, AIR 1998 : 1332 (Del).
36. D Jothi v K P Kandasamy, 2000 Cr LJ 292 (Mad).
37. Andy Chetty, (1865) 2 MHC 438 .
38. Chundi Churn, Nauth, (1867) 8 WR (Cr) 5.
39. Kusum Sandhu v Sh Ved Prakash Narang, 2009 Cr LJ 1078 (Del).
40. Premjit Kaur v Harsinder Singh, (1982) 2 SCC 167 : (1982) 1 SCC (Cr) 379 : 1982 CrLR 318.
41. Arun Kumar Agarwal v Mrs. Radha Arun, 2001 Cr LJ 3561 (KAR).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 192] Fabricating false evidence.

Whoever causes any circumstance to exist or ⁴²[makes any false entry in any book or record or electronic record or makes any document or electronic record containing a false statement], intending that such circumstance, false entry or false statement may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding,¹ or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant² as such, or before an arbitrator, and that such circumstance, false entry or false statement so appearing in evidence, may cause any person who in such proceeding is to form an opinion upon the evidence, to entertain an erroneous opinion touching any point material³ to the result of such proceeding, is said "to fabricate⁴ false evidence".

ILLUSTRATIONS

- (a) A, puts jewels into a box belonging to Z, with the intention that they may be found in that box, and that this circumstance may cause Z to be convicted of theft. A has fabricated false evidence.
- (b) A makes a false entry in his shop-book for the purpose of using it as corroborative evidence in a Court of Justice. A has fabricated false evidence.

- (c) A, with the intention of causing Z to be convicted of a criminal conspiracy, writes a letter in imitation of Z's handwriting, purporting to be addressed to an accomplice in such criminal conspiracy, and puts the letter in a place which he knows that the officers of the Police are likely to search. A has fabricated false evidence.

COMMENT.—

The wording of this section is so general as to cover any species of crime, which consists in the endeavour to injure another by supplying false data upon which to rest a judicial decision.

[s 192.1] Ingredients.—

The offence defined in this section has three ingredients:—

- (1) Causing any circumstance to exist, or making any false entry in any book or record, or making any document containing a false statement.
- (2) Doing one of the above acts with the intention that it may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant or an arbitrator.
- (3) Doing such act with the intention that it may cause any person, who in such proceeding, is to form an opinion upon the evidence to entertain an erroneous opinion touching any point material to the result of such proceeding.⁴³ From a careful reading of section 192, IPC, 1860, what transpires is that whoever forges a document, containing false statement or false entry, intending that such false entry or false statement may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant as such, so appearing in evidence, may cause any person, who, in such proceeding, is to form an opinion upon the evidence, to entertain an erroneous opinion in such proceeding, he is said to fabricate false evidence.⁴⁴

1. 'Judicial proceeding'.—The Code of Criminal Procedure says that 'judicial proceeding' includes any proceeding in the course of which evidence is or may be legally taken on oath [section 2(i)]. The power to take evidence on oath, which includes affirmation as well,⁴⁵ is the characteristic test of 'judicial proceeding'. 'Judicial proceeding' means nothing more or less than a step taken by a Court in the course of administration of justice in connection with a case.⁴⁶ Execution proceedings are judicial proceedings.⁴⁷

It is not essential that there should be any judicial proceeding pending at the time of fabrication. It is enough that there is a reasonable prospect of such a proceeding having regard to the circumstances of the case and that the document in question is intended to be used in such a proceeding.⁴⁸

2. 'Public servant'.—The provisions of this section are not confined to false evidence to be used in judicial proceedings, but to any proceeding before a public servant. A Government correspondence was stealthily removed by accused No. 1 and handed over to the pleader of accused Nos. 2 and 3. The correspondence was replaced by accused No. 1. It was afterwards discovered that some papers had disappeared from the correspondence whilst others had been either mutilated or altered. It was held that accused Nos. 2 and 3 were guilty of offences under sections 466 and 193.⁴⁹

3. 'Material'.—The false evidence under this section should be material to the case in which it is given though not so under section 191.⁵⁰ The word 'material' means of such a nature as to affect in any way, directly or indirectly, the probability of anything to be determined by the proceeding, or the credit of any witness, and a fact may be material although evidence of its existence was improperly admitted.⁵¹

4. 'Fabricate'.—The term fabrication refers to the fabrication of false evidence; and if the evidence fabricated is intended to be used in a judicial proceeding, the offence is committed as soon as the fabrication is complete; it is immaterial that the judicial proceeding has not been commenced,⁵² or that no actual use has been made of the evidence fabricated. The mere fabrication is punishable under section 193; the use of the fabricated evidence is punishable under section 196.

The evidence fabricated must be admissible evidence.⁵³

[s 192.2] Liability of accused for fabricating false evidence.—

It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta⁵⁴ and Bombay⁵⁵ that an offender who fabricates false evidence to screen himself from punishment is liable to be convicted under this section. The Allahabad High Court⁵⁶ has veered round to the same view, after distinguishing an earlier case⁵⁷ to the contrary.

[s 192.3] Vicarious liability.—

Neither section 192 IPC, 1860 nor section 199 IPC, 1860, incorporate the principle of vicarious liability, and therefore, it was incumbent on the complainant to specifically aver the role of each of the accused in the complaint.⁵⁸ Penal Code does not contain any provision for attaching vicarious liability on the part of the managing Director or the Director for the Company when the accused is the company. Vicarious liability arise provided any provision exists in that behalf in the statute. It is obligatory on the part of the complainant to make requisite allegations which would attract the provision constituting vicarious liability.⁵⁹

[s 192.4] CASES.—Fabrication of evidence to be used in judicial proceeding.—

The brother of an accused person applied to the Court on behalf of the accused asking that the witnesses for the prosecution might first be made to identify the accused. The Court assenting to this request, he produced before the Court ten or twelve men, none of whom could be identified as the accused by any of the witnesses. Upon being asked by the Court where the accused was, he pointed out a man who was not the accused. It was held that he was guilty of fabricating false evidence.⁶⁰ The accused, who was in possession of the complainant's house as a yearly tenant, about the time the tenancy came to an end, prepared another rent-note for a period of four years and got it registered without the complainant's knowledge. It was held that the accused had fabricated false evidence inasmuch as the rent-note, which contained an admission against the interest of the accused, could be admitted in evidence on his behalf.⁶¹ By swearing a false affidavit the accused makes himself prima facie liable under section 193 read with sections 191 and 192 of the IPC, 1860.⁶² In order to have the value of CFC excluded for the purpose of excise duty, letters were fabricated and the same were seized in a raid. Fifteen months later, taking up a notice of motion, High Court directed filing of criminal complaints against the appellant under section 192. While agreeing that the Division Bench was not wrong in making the direction, which it did on the merits of the case, Supreme Court held that the High Court did not appear to have bestowed sufficient attention while deciding upon the expediency contemplated by section 340.⁶³

[s 192.5] No fabrication if no erroneous opinion could be formed touching any point material to result of proceeding.—

It is now well settled that prosecution for perjury should be sanctioned by the Court only in those cases where there is a prima facie case of deliberate and conscious falsehood on a matter of substance and the conviction is reasonably probable or likely.⁶⁴ It is also very necessary that the portions of the witness's statement in regard to which he has, in the opinion of the Court, perjured himself, should be specifically set out in or form annexure to the show cause notice issued to the accused so that he is in a position to furnish adequate and proper reply in regard thereto and be able to meet the charge.⁶⁵

[s 192.6] No fabrication of evidence fabricated is inadmissible.—

The mere fact that a document would be ultimately inadmissible in evidence does not necessarily take it out of the mischief of section 193.⁶⁶

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

42. Subs. by The Information Technology Act, 2000 (Act 21 of 2000) section 91 and First Sch, w.e.f. 17 October 2000, for the words "makes any false entry in any book or record, or makes any document contained on false statement". The words "electronic record" have been defined in section 29A.

43. Babu Lal v State of UP, (1964) 1 Cr LJ 555 : AIR 1964 SC 725 [LNIND 1963 SC 218] .
Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd, (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 CR LJ. 8 : (2010) 12 SCR 551 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 68; See State of MP v Asian Drugs, 1990 Cr LJ 105 MP, the defence exposing fabrication by Inspectors under The Drugs and Cosmetics Act, 1940 (23 of 1940).

44. Sushanta Sarkar v State of Nagaland 2012 Cr LJ 4467 (Gau).

45. The General Clauses Act, 1897 (X of 1897), section 3 (37)

46. Venkatachalam Pillai, (1864) 2 MHC 43 ; Tulja v State, (1887) 12 Bom 36, 42.

47. Govind Pandurang, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1239 , 45 Bom 668.

48. Rajaram, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1229 [LNIND 1920 BOM 119] ; Govind Pandurang, Ibid.

49. Vallabhram Ganpatram, (1925) 27 Bom LR 1391 .

50. Tookaram, (1862) Unrep. CrC 2.
51. Stephen's Digest, Art 148; SP Kohli, 1978 Cr LJ 1804 : AIR 1978 SC 1753 [LNIND 1978 SC 235] .
52. Mula, (1879) 2 All 105 .
53. Zakir Husain, (1898) 21 All 159 .
54. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v Taraknath Chatterji, (1935) 62 Cal 666 .
55. Rama Nana, (1921) 46 Bom 317, 23 Bom LR 987.
56. Bhagirath Lal, (1934) 57 All 403 .
57. Ram Khilawan, (1906) 28 All 705 .
58. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd, (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 : (2010) 12 SCR 551 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 68.
59. Maksud Saiyed v State of Gujarat, (2008) 5 SCC 668 [LNIND 2007 SC 1090] : JT 2007 (11) SC 276 [LNIND 2007 SC 1090] : 2008 (5) SCR 1240 : (2008) 6 Scale 81 [LNIND 2008 SC 848] : (2008) 2 SCC (Cr) 692.
60. Cheda Lal, (1907) 29 All 351 .
61. Rajaram, (1920) 22 Bom LR 1229 [LNIND 1920 BOM 119] .
62. Baban Singh, 1967 Cr LJ 6 : AIR 1967 SC 68 [LNIND 1966 SC 47] .
63. Phiroze Dinshaw Lam v UOI, 1996) 8 SCC 209 : (1996) 1 SCC (Cr) 575.
64. SP Kohli, 1978 Cr LJ 1804 : AIR 1978 SC 1753 [LNIND 1978 SC 235] .
65. Ibid.
66. Mahesh Chandra Dhupi, (1940) 1 Cal 465 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 193] Punishment for false evidence.

Whoever intentionally gives false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding, or fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding,¹ shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine, and whoever intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case,² shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation 1.—A trial before a Court-martial; ⁶⁷. [] is a judicial proceeding.

Explanation 2.—An investigation directed by law preliminary to a proceeding before a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

ILLUSTRATION

A, in an enquiry before a Magistrate for the purpose of ascertaining whether Z ought to be committed for trial, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding, A has given false evidence.

Explanation 3.—An investigation directed by a Court of Justice according to law, and conducted under the authority of a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

ILLUSTRATION

A, in any enquiry before an officer deputed by a Court of Justice to ascertain on the spot the boundaries of land, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding. A has given false evidence.

COMMENT.—

Sections 191 and 192 define the offences punishable under this section. The first paragraph applies only to cases in which the false evidence is given in a judicial proceeding, the second to all other cases. If the offence is committed in any stage of a judicial proceeding it is more severely punishable than when it is committed in a non-judicial proceeding.

Intention is the essential ingredient in the constitution of this offence. If the statement was false, and known or believed by the accused to be false, it may be presumed that in making that statement he intentionally gave false evidence. In order to make a person liable for perjury it is necessary that he should have made a statement on oath regarding the facts on which his statement was based and then deny those facts on oath on a subsequent occasion.⁶⁸ The mere fact that a deponent has made contradictory statements at two different stages in a judicial proceeding is not by itself always sufficient to justify a prosecution for perjury under section 193 but it must be established that the deponent has intentionally given false statement in any stage of the 'judicial proceeding' or fabricated false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of the 'judicial proceeding'.⁶⁹

It is not necessary that the false statement should be material to the case. The gist of the offence is the giving or fabrication of false evidence intentionally. Where knowledge of falsity is proved, intention is readily presumed.⁷⁰

1. 'Any stage of a judicial proceeding'.—The recording of a statement under section 161 itself is a judicial proceeding in view of Explanation 2 to section 193 in so far as recording of a statement is part of the investigation directed by law preliminary to a proceeding before a Court of justice and therefore is a stage of the judicial proceedings. Mere failure to support contention made in said FIR while giving evidence under section 164 Cr PC, 1973, can't conclusively lead to hold that he had given false evidence by departing from contentions made in FIR.⁷¹ Where a witness in Sessions trial deposing contrary to what he had said in a statement recorded under section 164, recourse to section 340 cannot be taken without first deciding whether the earlier statement was false.⁷² In the course of proceedings for execution of a decree in a Court which had no jurisdiction to entertain such proceedings the judgment-debtor made a false statement and produced a forged receipt. The Court made a complaint under section 195 of the Criminal Procedure Code for prosecution of the judgment-debtor in respect of the said offences; it was held that if during the course of the proceedings which were ultra vires and illegal any offence under section 471 of the Code was committed, it could not be said that it was committed in or in relation to, or by a party to, any judicial proceedings, in which evidence could be legally taken, and therefore the complaint must be dismissed.⁷³ Since enquiry conducted by an officer of the Railway Protection Force is a judicial proceeding under section 9 of The Railway Property \(Unlawful Possession\) Act, 1966, furnishing of false documents in course of such an enquiry would amount to an offence under section 193, IPC, 1860.⁷⁴ Giving false evidence in support of the prosecution case during the course of trial falls within the ambit of sections 193 and 195, IPC, 1860, and not under section 211, IPC, 1860, as there is no institution of criminal proceeding in such a case.⁷⁵ (See Comments under sub-head "Falsely Charges" under section 211 infra.) Where the accused abetted the offence of forgery by creating a false document with a view to use it in a suit but did not use it in the suit, it was held that there was no question of prosecuting him under section 193, IPC, 1860, nor was a Court complaint under section 195(1) (b) (i), Cr PC, 1973, necessary in the case. The accused could be safely prosecuted under section 467 read with section 114, IPC, 1860, on a private complaint.⁷⁶

Where the accused police-officer asked a police official to forge the signature of his superior on the carbon copy of the counter-affidavit containing false averments and the same was filed in the Supreme Court with that forged signature, the accused was held guilty of an offence under section 192.⁷⁷

Questions which a person is compelled to answer and the answers which have a tendency to incriminate, cannot be the sole basis of a charge of perjury.⁷⁸

[s 193.1] Court Complaint: When?—

In Iqbal Singh Marwah v Meenakshi Marwah,⁷⁹ the Constitution Bench held that the section 195(1)(b)(ii) -Cr PC, 1973 which mandates that 'no Court shall take cognizance of offences relating to documents given in evidence except on the complaint in writing of that Court, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate', would be attracted only when the offences enumerated in the said provision have been committed with respect to a document after it has been produced or given in evidence in a proceedings in any Court, i.e., during the time when the documents was in custodial legis.⁸⁰ Though the Rent Controller discharges quasi-judicial functions, he is not a Court, as understood in the conventional sense and he cannot, therefore, make a complaint under section 340 Cr PC, 1973.⁸¹

[s 193.2] Belated complaint.—

A witness made false statement before a competent Court and the accused were convicted. The appellate Court (Sessions Court) held that the witness had given false statement and directed that a notice be issued to him to show cause why a complaint under section 193, IPC, 1860 be not filed against him. The notice was issued and after hearing him, the Court directed that a complaint be filed. The High Court found that the notice issued to him was no notice because it did not specify the portions that were found to be false, besides the statement was recorded ten years ago. The Court held that it was not proper to file a complaint at that stage. The Court set aside the order of the Sessions Judge.⁸²

[s 193.3] Supreme Court cannot convert itself into trial Court.—

The accused filed a forged affidavit before the Supreme Court. It was held by the three Judge Bench that the Supreme Court could not try and convict the accused. The order of the Supreme Court convicting the accused and sentencing him to three months' imprisonment was liable to be set aside because of non-compliance of procedure prescribed by sections 195 and 340, Cr PC, 1973 and also because of lack of original jurisdiction to try a criminal offence under section 193, IPC, 1860. Directions to the competent authority to proceed in the matter were not issued because the accused had already served out the sentence of imprisonment imposed on him.^{83.}

[s 193.4] False Affidavits.—

The swearing of false affidavits in judicial proceedings not only has the tendency of causing obstruction in the due course of judicial proceedings but has also the tendency to impede, obstruct and interfere with the administration of justice. The due process of law cannot be permitted to be slighted nor the majesty of law be made a mockery by such acts or conduct on the part of the parties to the litigation or even while appearing as witnesses. Anyone who makes an attempt to impede or undermine or obstruct the free flow of the unsoiled stream of justice by resorting to the filing of false evidence commits criminal contempt of the Court and renders himself liable to be dealt with in accordance with the Act. On facts, High Court found that apart from committing contempt of Court the accused-1 has also committed an offence of perjury punishable under section 193, IPC, 1860 committed in relation to proceedings of the Court. Court directed the Registrar (Judicial) under section 340(3)(b), Cr PC, 1973 to file a complaint before the jurisdictional Magistrate in this regard.^{84.}

[s 193.5] CASES.—

A father handed over the custody of his minor daughter to the accused woman for household chores, but thereafter his efforts to get back his daughter failed. He filed a habeas corpus petition and the Court directed the respondent to produce the girl in response to which the respondent produced some other girl of the same name to mislead the Court. The Court directed that a complaint under sections 193, 196 and 199 be lodged against the respondent.^{85.} Declaration in an application filed under section 482 of Cr PC, 1973 that the applicant had not approached the Supreme Court or the High Court earlier is not perjury, though applicant had filed for anticipatory Bail before the Sessions Court.^{86.}

[s 193.6] Hostile witness.—

In a prosecution under sections 489B and 489C, all prosecution witnesses who were police officials turned hostile. Subsequently they filed affidavits stating that they were threatened by higher officers not to support their previous statements during investigation. Court set aside the order of acquittal of the accused, ordered re-trial and directed to proceed under sections 193 and 195A.^{87.} After a long span of time, the prosecution witnesses filed a false affidavit stating that they were coerced and tutored by police. They were held liable for perjury.^{88.}

2. 'In any other case'.—A statement made in the course of a public investigation under section 164 of the Code of Criminal Procedure comes within these words.^{89.} Whether the accused has really made a false statement or not is a question of fact, which can be decided at the trial and not in quashing proceeding, when the allegations, which have been made against the accused do make out a prima facie case under section 193, IPC, 1860.^{90.} A person married the daughter of his maternal uncle, after converting to Christianity. If they married before conversion this marriage would have come under 'Sapindas relations' which is prohibited under the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955. After conversion into Christianity the marriage does not fall under 'Sapinda' relationship. It cannot be said that there was any false declaration. It is held that offence punishable under section 193 of IPC, 1860 is not made out.^{91.}

[s 193.7] Section 193 IPC, 1860 and Section 125A of the Representation of Peoples Act, 1950.—

Where a specific penal provision is made under the Act providing a penalty for filing false affidavit under section 125A of the Act, without anything more, for filing such a false affidavit, that alone, no prosecution under the general penal provision of section 193 of the Penal Code is entertainable. Furthermore, the penal provision under section 193 IPC, 1860 has to be understood giving significance to the expressions 'intentionally giving or fabricating false evidence', 'in any stage of a judicial proceeding' or 'in any other case.' Giving or fabricating false evidence in the aforesaid section whether it be in the judicial proceeding or in any other case must have been intended to form an opinion on the evidence erroneously and such forming of opinion should be touching the point material to the result of such proceeding. Viewed in that angle the declaration to be made by a candidate in his affidavit filed with his nomination paper over the matters prescribed by the election commission when he contests an election, it cannot be stated that the candidate is giving evidence by affidavit but at best only a declaration on the particulars sought for. If the candidate fails to furnish information or gives false information which he knows or has reason to believe to be false or conceals any information he is liable to be prosecuted only for the offence under section 125A of the Act, and not for the penal offence under section 193 IPC, 1860.^{92.}

[s 193.8] Section 193 IPC, 1860 and proceedings under section 340 Cr PC, 1973.—

Power to punish under section 344 Cr PC, 1973 and section 193 Cr PC, 1973 are distinct. Section 344 Cr PC, 1973 calls for summary trial, whereas under section 193 IPC, 1860 offender is to be tried as warrant case. Section 344 Cr PC, 1973 vests powers in the Courts to summarily try and punish the accused. It is for this reason that section 344 Cr PC, 1973 prescribes sentence also. The Judge either should have convicted the petitioner under section 344 Cr PC, 1973 or ought not to have invoked section 193 IPC, 1860. Once, the Judge opted to try the petitioner for the offence under section 193 IPC, 1860, it was incumbent upon him to hold an inquiry under section 340 Cr PC, 1973 and then to frame a charge and try the offender for a warrant case as minimum sentence prescribed under section 193 IPC, 1860 is three years.^{93.} Before lodging a complaint as provided by section 340 of the Code, the Court has to record a finding of any (i) prima facie case and deliberate falsehood on a matter of substance; (ii) there is reasonable foundation for the charge; and (iii) it is expedient in the interest of justice that a complaint should be filed.^{94.} An enquiry when made, under section 340 \(1\) Cr PC, 1973, is really in the nature of affording a locus paenitentiae to a person and if at that stage the Court chooses to take action, it does not mean that he will not have full and adequate opportunity in due course of the process of justice to establish his innocence. When the trial of the appellant commences under section 193, IPC, 1860 the reasons given or those in the order passed under section 340 (1), Cr PC, 1973 should not weigh with the criminal Court in coming to its independent conclusion whether the offence under section 193, IPC, 1860 has been fully established against the appellant beyond reasonable doubt.^{95.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
67. The words "or before a Military Court of Request" omitted by Act 13 of 1889, section 2 and Sch.
68. Ismail Khan v State of Karnataka, 1992 Cr LJ 3566 (Kant).
69. KTMS Mohd v UOI, AIR 1992 SC 2199 : 1992 Cr LJ 2781 .
70. Sadasiba, (1956) Cut 87; Pravinchand v Ibrahim Md, 1987 Cr LJ 1795 (Bom).
71. Bimal Das v The State of Tripura, 2012 Cr LJ 1252 (Gau).
72. Thomman v IInd Adl Sessions Judge, 1994 Cr LJ 48 (Ker).
73. Sumat Prasad v State, (1942) All 42 .
74. BC Saxena, 1983 Cr LJ 1432 (AP).
75. Santosh Singh v Izahar Hussain, 1973 Cr LJ 1176 : AIR 1973 SC 2190 [LNIND 1973 SC 160] .
76. State of Karnataka v Hemareddy, 1981 Cr LJ 1019 : AIR 1981 SC 1417 [LNIND 1981 SC 44] : (1981) 2 SCC 185 [LNIND 1981 SC 44] .
77. Afzal v State of Haryana, AIR 1996 SC 2326 [LNIND 1996 SC 130] : 1996 Cr LJ 1679 .
78. NSR Krishna Prasad v Directorate of Enforcement LBK Market, 1992 Cr LJ 1888 (AP). See section 132, The Indian Evidence Act, 1972.
79. Iqbal Singh Marwah v Meenakshi Marwah, (2005) 4 SCC 370 [LNIND 2005 SC 261] : AIR 2005 SC 2119 [LNIND 2005 SC 261] .
80. Sushanta Sarkar v State of Nagaland, 2012 Cr LJ 4467 (Gau).
81. Iqbal Singh Narang v Veeran Narang, AIR 2012 SC 466 [LNIND 2011 SC 1189] : (2012) 2 SCC 60 [LNIND 2011 SC 1189] ; 2012 AIR (SCW) 730 : (2012) 1 SCC (Cr) 740.
82. Jagdish Prasad Singhal v State of Rajasthan, 1994 Cr LJ 759 (Raj).
83. Randhir Singh v State of Haryana, AIR 2000 SC 544 [LNIND 2000 SC 27] : 2000 Cr LJ 755 . Another ruling to the same effect, MS Ahlawat v State of Haryana, AIR 2000 SC 168 [LNIND 1999 SC 1395] : (2000) Cr LJ 388 ; Mohammed Zahid v Govt. of NCT of Delhi, 1998 Cr LJ 2908 : AIR 1998 SC 2023 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] .
84. Advocate General, Karnataka v Chidambara, 2004 Cr LJ 493 (Kant).
85. R Rathinam v Kamla Vaiduriam, 1993 Cr LJ 2661 (Mad).
86. Rajkumar Dhanuji Bombarde v Madhukar Wankhede, 2008 Cr LJ 661 (Bom).
87. Court on Its Own Motion v State of Punjab, 2012 Cr LJ 2240 (PH).
88. State of MP v Badri Yadav, 2006 Cr LJ 2128 : AIR 2006 SC 1769 [LNIND 2006 SC 229] : (2006) 9 SCC 549 [LNIND 2006 SC 229] .
89. Purshottam Ishvar, (1920) 23 Bom LR 1 ; 45 Bom 834 (FB). Mohammed Zahid v Govt. of NCT of Delhi, AIR 1998 SC 2023 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] : 1998 Cr LJ 2908 , false entries in case diary, interpolations, cooking up false case against the accused, show-cause notices issued against the concerned police officer for the offence.
90. Sushanta Sarkar v State of Nagaland, 2012 Cr LJ 4467 (Gau).
91. O P Gogne v State, 2012 Cr LJ 1718 (Del).
92. Ganesh Kumar v PK Raju, 2013 (2) Ker LT 434 : 1 LR 2013 (2) Ker 710 .
93. Jaskaran v State of Haryana, 2008 Cr LJ 4261 (PH).
94. Rit Lai Khatway v State of Bihar, 2007 Cr LJ 593 (Pat). See also State (Govt. of NCT of Delhi) v Pankaj Chaudhary, AIR 2018 SC 5412 [LNIND 2018 SC 565] .

95. K Karunakaran v TV Eachara Warriar, AIR 1978 SC 290 [LNIND 1977 SC 319] : (1978) 1 SCC 18 [LNIND 1977 SC 319] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 194] Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of capital offence.

Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence, intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence which is capital ⁹⁶[by the law for the time being in force in ⁹⁷[India]] shall be punished with ⁹⁸[imprisonment for life], or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if innocent person be thereby convicted and executed.

and if an innocent person be convicted and executed in consequence of such false evidence, the person who gives such false evidence shall be punished either with death or the punishment hereinbefore described.

COMMENT.—

This is an aggravated form of the offence of giving or fabricating false evidence made punishable by section 193.

To constitute an offence under this section the accused must give false evidence intending thereby to cause some person to be convicted of a capital offence. A person who brings before a Court a witness whom he has tutored to tell a false story concerning a murder case before it, commits an offence under this section.⁹⁹.

[s 194.1] CASE.—

Where the Investigating Officer fabricated false evidence by manipulating the records in large number of documents to get the accused persons convicted and the time was not mentioned in documents prepared during investigation conviction under section 194 was held proper.¹⁰⁰ Where the Investigating Inspector concocted false evidence with the help of two sarpanchas and villagers to rope in an innocent man in a false murder case which led to his conviction by the Sessions Court and during the course of hearing of the appeal in the High Court the so-called murdered man appeared in person before the High Court, it was held that the Inspector, the sarpanchas and the other witnesses were liable to be prosecuted under section 194, IPC, 1860, read with section 340, Cr PC, 1973.¹⁰¹.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

96. Subs. by the A.O. 1948, for "by the law of British India or England".

97. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for "the States" (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).

98. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

99. Sur Nath Bhaduri, (1927) 50 All 365 .

100. Suresh Chandra Sharma v State of MP, AIR 2009 SC 3196 ; 2009 Cr LJ 4288 (SC).

101. Darshan Singh, 1985 Cr LJ NOC 71 (P&H). See also Baij Nath Dubey v Avas Evam Vikas Parishad, 1997 Cr LJ 2681 (All).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 195] Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with imprisonment for life or imprisonment.

Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence which ¹⁰²[by the law for the time being in force in ¹⁰³[India]] is not capital, but punishable with ¹⁰⁴[imprisonment for life], or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, shall be punished as a person convicted of that offence would be liable to be punished.

ILLUSTRATION

A gives false evidence before a Court of Justice, intending thereby to cause Z to be convicted of a dacoity. The punishment of dacoity is ¹⁰⁵[imprisonment for life], or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, with or without fine. A, therefore, is liable to ¹⁰⁶[imprisonment for life] or imprisonment, with or without fine.

COMMENT.—

This section is similar to the preceding section except as regards the gravity of the offence in respect of which the perjury is committed. The preceding section deals with perjury in the case of an offence punishable with death, this section deals with perjury of an offence punishable with imprisonment for life or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards. In the case of a person who burnt his own house and charged another with the act, it was held that he should not be convicted under this section, but under section 211,¹⁰⁷ but where A, with a view to having B convicted, assisted in concealing stolen railway pins in his house and field, it was held that A was properly convicted of an offence under this section.¹⁰⁸ Giving false evidence in support of the prosecution case amounts to an offence under sections 193 and 195, IPC, 1860, and not under section 211, IPC, 1860.¹⁰⁹ Misstatement of facts and concealment of an essential fact in a writ petition amounts to giving false evidence. The petitioner was liable to face proceedings for giving false evidence.¹¹⁰ It is not necessary that fabrication of false evidence takes place only inside the Court as it can also be fabricated outside the Court though has been used in the Court.¹¹¹

A Disciplinary Proceedings Tribunal is not a Court for the purposes of this section. It is not "a court in the accepted sense of that term, though it may possess some of the trappings of a court."¹¹² A party giving an answer to a question put under Order 10 r. 2 of the CPC when not under oath and when not being examined as a witness, cannot attract section 195 IPC, 1860.¹¹³ Police-officers fabricated the evidence in order to book the appellant under TADA. From the materials on record, Supreme Court was of the opinion that it is expedient in the interest of justice that an enquiry should be made in accordance with sub-section (1) of section 340, Cr PC, 1973 into the commission of offences under sections 193, 195 and 211.¹¹⁴

[s 195.1] St. Kitts (Chandraswamy) Case.—

The respondent, was at the relevant time, serving as Director (Enforcement) with the government of India. The respondent was a public servant at the time of the commission of the alleged offence, no cognizance of the offence could have been taken against him in the absence of sanction under section 197 Criminal Procedure Code.¹¹⁵

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

102. Subs. by the A.O. 1948, for "by the law of British India or England".

103. Subs. by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch, for "the States" (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).

104. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

105. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

106. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "such transportation" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

107. Bhugwan Ahir, (1867) 8 WR (Cr) 65.

108. Rameshar Rai, (1877) 1 All 379 .

109. Santokh Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 1176 : AIR 1976 SC 2190 .
110. Dehri Cooperative Development v State of Bihar, 2002 Cr LJ 3396 (Pat); Mohammed Zahid v Govt. NCT of Delhi, 1998 Cr LJ 2908 : AIR 1998 SC 2023 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] : (1998) 5 SCC 419 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] , for note on the case see under section 193. Also see Harrianna Gowda v State of Karnataka, 1998 Cr LJ 4756 (Kant).
111. Ram Dhan v State of UP, 2012 (4) Scale 259 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] : 2012 AIR (SCW) 2500 : 2012 Cr LJ 2419 : (2012) 5 SCC 536 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] : AIR 2012 SC 2513 [LNIND 2012 SC 1057] relied on Sachida Nand Singh v State of Bihar, (1998) 2 SCC 493 [LNIND 1998 SC 138] .
112. R Venkat Reddy v State of AP, 1992 Cr LJ 414 .
113. Kapil Corepacks Pvt Ltd v Harbans Lal, 2 AIR 2010 SC 2809 [LNIND 2010 SC 697] : 2010 (7) Scale 558 [LNIND 2010 SC 697] : (2010) 9 SCR 500 [LNIND 2010 SC 697] : (2010) 3 SCC (Cr) 924.
114. Mohd Zahid v Govt. of NCT of Delhi, AIR 1998 SC 2023 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] : (1998) 5 SCC 419 [LNIND 1998 SC 557] .
115. State through Central Bureau of Investigation v B L Verma, (1997) 10 SCC 772 ; See also Asha Sunder Shivdasani v Aruna Ramesh Kriplani, 2001 Cr LJ 2146 (Bom) - proceedings quashed as hit by section 195 Cr PC, 1973.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

116.[s 195A] Threatening or any person to give false evidence.

[Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause that person to give false evidence shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both;

and if innocent person is convicted and sentenced in consequence of such false evidence, with death or imprisonment for more than seven years, the person who threatens shall be punished with the same punishment and sentence in the same manner and to the same extent such innocent person is punished and sentenced.]

COMMENTS.—

In a prosecution under sections 489B and 489C, all prosecution witnesses who were police officials turned hostile. Subsequently they filed affidavits stating that they were threatened by higher officers not to support their previous statements during investigation. Court set aside the order of acquittal of the accused, ordered re-trial and directed to proceed under sections 193 and 195A.¹¹⁷

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : \(2009\) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : \(2009\) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

116. New section 195A Ins. by The Criminal Law \(Amendment\) Act, 2005 (Act No. 2 of 2006), section 2 (w.e.f. 16 April 2006 vide Notfn. No. SO 523(E), dated 12 April 2006.

117. Court on Its Own Motion v State of Punjab, 2012 Cr LJ 2240 (PH).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 196] Using evidence known to be false.

Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true or genuine evidence any evidence which he knows to be false or fabricated, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave or fabricated false evidence.

COMMENT.—

This section applies to those who make use of such evidence as is made punishable by sections 193, 194 and 195. It must be read with sections 191 and 192, and can only apply to the use of evidence which was false evidence within the meaning of section 191, or fabricated evidence within the definition laid down in section 192.¹¹⁸ Where an expert witness deposing on behalf of the defence claimed to be a diploma holder in criminology from the Imperial College of Science and Technology, London and it was found that the said claim was totally false and the diploma produced by him was a forged document, it was held he committed an offence in relation to Court proceedings under sections 193 and 196, IPC, 1860, and as such a Court complaint under section 195 (1)(b)(i), Cr PC, 1973, was necessary to prosecute him.¹¹⁹

The word 'corruptly' in this section means something different from "dishonestly" or "fraudulently". Although the user may not be dishonest or fraudulent, it may nevertheless be corrupt, if the user is designed to corrupt or prevent the course of justice. A person who files rent receipts alleged to have been granted by one of the landlords, who actually signs the receipts to support a false case of a tenancy under the landlord, does not commit an offence under section 471, but is guilty of corruptly using as true or genuine evidence which he knows to be false within the meaning of this section.¹²⁰.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
118. Lakshmaji, (1884) 7 Mad 289, 290.
119. Dr. S Dutt, 1966 Cr LJ 459 : AIR 1966 SC 595 [LNIND 1965 SC 196] .
120. Bibhuranjan Gupta, (1949) 2 Cal 440 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 197] Issuing or signing false certificate.

Whoever issues or signs any certificate required by law to be given or signed, or relating to any fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence, knowing or believing that such certificate is false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

COMMENT.—

Several laws require a certificate of some matter to be given. The offence of certifying in any of these, knowing or believing that the certificate is false, is put on the same footing as the offence of giving false evidence. The certificate must, however, be false in a material point. The issuing or signing must be by the officer or person authorized to certify.

[s 197.1] Ingredients.—

The section has two essentials:—

1. Issuing or signing of a certificate—
 - (a) required by law to be given or signed, or
 - (b) relating to a fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence.
2. Such certificate must have been issued or signed knowing or believing that it is false in any material point.

Before convicting a person for offence under section 197, IPC, 1860 the prosecution must prove the following facts:—

- (i) that the document in question purports to be a certificate;
- (ii) that such certificate is required by law to be given or signed, or that it related to some fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence;
- (iii) that such certificate is false;
- (iv) that it is false in a material point;
- (v) that the accused issued or signed the same;
- (vi) that he, when doing so, knew or believed, such certificate to be false.^{121.}

[s 197.2] Certificate.—

As per section 197, certificate contemplated therein is a certificate, which is required not to be given or signed for the use in the Court's administration of Justice. That means, certificate is issued as required by some law and it has some reference to some statutory requirements. Information given by petitioner to Process Server is that he has not heard about the Noticee for the last two years and his whereabouts are not known. That is not a certificate contemplated under any statute. Therefore, section 197 also will have no application.^{122.} The expression "by law admissible in evidence" means that the certificate should by some provision of law be admissible in evidence as such a certificate without further proof.^{123.} A medical certificate is not such a certificate and the issue or use of a false medical certificate does not render a person liable under this section or section 198.^{124.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

121. Mangtu Ram v State of Rajasthan, 2003 Cr LJ 4733 (Raj).

122. D Jothi v KP Kandasamy, 2000 Cr LJ 292 (Mad).

123. Mahabir Thakur, (1916) 23 CLJ 423; Kumar Choudhari v State, (1936) 16 Pat 21; Prafulla Kumar Khara, (1942) 1 Cal 573 . A caste certificate issued by an MLA to a student to enable him to get a pre-matric scholarship has been held to be not a certificate within the meaning of this section. Haladhara Karji v Dileswar Subudhi, 1989 Cr LJ 629 (Ori), no caste was mentioned in the certificate. Premlata v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1430 (Raj), a statement would become a false certificate if the law requires the issue of such a certificate as a legal proof. In this case the certificate was issued by the headmaster, though he was not authorised to do so. The candidate used the certificate for obtaining an appointment. A prima facie case under section 198 was made out against the headmaster.

124. Prafulla Kumar Khara, Ibid.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 198] Using as true a certificate known to be false.

Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use any such certificate as a true certificate, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

COMMENT.—

This section is connected with section 197 just as section 196 is connected with sections 193, 194 and 195.¹²⁵ Appellant used the duplicate certificate with changes, as a true certificate knowing it to be false in material particular and thereby got admission in Polytechnic. Therefore, there is no reason to interfere with the conviction. However, looking to the nature of the offence and the fact that the appellant's past and present records have been good and the fact that he has already lost his career and is now married, reduced the sentence to that already undergone.¹²⁶

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
125. Premlata v State of Rajasthan, 1998 Cr LJ 1430 (Raj), for notes on the case see under section 197.
126. Tulsibhai Jivabhai Changani v State of Gujarat, (2001) 1 SCC 719 [LNIND 2000 SC 2333] : 2001 Cr LJ 741 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 199] False statement made in declaration which is by law receivable as evidence.

Whoever, in any declaration made or subscribed by him, which declaration any Court of Justice, or any public servant or other person, is bound or authorised by law to receive as evidence of any fact, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

COMMENT.—

This section makes the penalty attached to the offence of giving false evidence applicable to declarations which, although not compellable, have, on being made, the same effect as the compulsory declarations referred to in sections 51 and 191.¹²⁷ Voluntary declarations are thus placed on the same level as compulsory declarations. The Supreme Court has said that the complaint for an offence under section 199, IPC, 1860, must make out the offence by singling out false averment in the complaint. Thus, where the allegation was that the accused had used a false affidavit before the Rent

Controller but the complaint did not set out a single averment from the said affidavit, which is said to be false, it was held that the complaint was not maintainable.^{128.}

[s 199.1] Ingredients.—

This section requires three essentials:—

1. Making of a declaration that a Court or a public servant is bound or authorised by law to receive in evidence.
2. Making of a false statement in such declaration knowing or believing it to be false.
3. Such false statement must be touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used.^{129.} Section 199 provides punishment for making a false statement in a declaration that is by law receivable in evidence. Rival contentions set out in affidavits accepted or rejected by Courts with reference to onus probandi do not furnish foundation for a charge under section 199, IPC, 1860.^{130.} A declaration before it could be made the foundation of charge under section 199 of IPC, 1860, it is necessary that it must be admissible in evidence as proof of the fact declared under any law in consequence of which the Court is bound or authorised to receive it as such.^{131.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

127. A Vedamuttu, (1868) 4 MHC 185 ; Asgarali v State, (1943) Nag 547.

128. Chandrapal Singh, 1982 Cr LJ 1731 : AIR 1982 SC 1238 : (1982) 1 SCC 466 . Shiv Raman Gaur v Madan Mohan Kanda, 1990 Cr LJ 1033 P&H.

129. Maharashtra State Electricity Distribution Co Ltd v Datar Switchgerar Ltd, (2010) 10 SCC 479 [LNIND 2010 SC 979] : 2011 Cr LJ 8 L : (2010) 12 SCR 551 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 68.

130. Chandrapal Singh v Maharaj Singh, AIR 1982 SC 1238 (1982) 1 SCC 466 .

131. D Jothi v KP Kandasamy, 2000 Cr LJ 292 (Mad).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 200] Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false.

Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true any such declaration, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Explanation.*—A declaration which is inadmissible merely upon the ground of some informality, is a declaration within the meaning of sections 199 to 200.

COMMENT.—

This section is connected with the last section just as section 198 is with section 197 or section 196 with sections 193, 194 and 195. The person who uses a false declaration is made liable as one who makes it.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 201] Causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender—.

Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed,¹ causes any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear, with the intention of screening the offender² from legal punishment, or with that intention gives any information respecting the offence which he knows or believes to be false;

if a capital offence;

shall, if the offence which he knows or believes to have been committed is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with imprisonment for life;

and if the offence is punishable with ¹³²[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with less than ten years' imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment for any term not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A, knowing that B has murdered Z, assists B to hide the body with the intention of screening B from punishment. A is liable to imprisonment of either description for seven years, and also to fine.

COMMENT.—

Object.—This section relates to the disappearance of any evidence of the commission of an offence and includes also the giving of false information with the intention of screening an offender. Sections 202 and 203 relate to the giving or omitting to give such information, and section 204 to the destruction of documentary evidence.

There are three groups of sections in the Code relating to the giving of information. First, sections 118–120 deal with concealment of a design to commit an offence; second sections 176, 177, 181 and 182 deal with omission to give information and with the giving of false information; and, third, sections 201–203 deal with causing the disappearance of evidence.

[s 201.1] Scope.—

The Supreme Court has held that this section is not restricted to the case of a person who screens the actual offender; it can be applied even to a person guilty of the main offence, though as a matter of practice a Court will not convict a person both of the main offence and under this section.^{133.}

But, if the commission of the main offence is not brought home to the accused, then he can be convicted under this section.^{134.} Where it is impossible to say definitely that a person has committed the principal offence he cannot escape conviction under this section merely because there are grounds for suspicion that he might be the principal culprit.^{135.} A woman's husband and in-laws could not be convicted of murdering her because there was no evidence whatsoever. They were convicted under this section because they gave no reasonable explanation of the unnatural death and had also disposed of the body in suspicious circumstances (dead body found near railway track).^{136.} The fact that the accused persons cannot be convicted for offence punishable under section 302 IPC, 1860 does not extricate them from the offence under section 201 IPC, 1860.^{137.} In a case of bride burning, where the post-mortem report was that death was due to throttling, burning her subsequently was held to be a clear proof of the fact that the evidence of strangulation was sought to be destroyed by the accused husband by pouring kerosene and setting her ablaze. The conviction of the husband under sections 201, 302 and 498-A was held to be proper.^{138.}

A statement given by a person in the course of an investigation by the police cannot amount to an offence under this section and section 203, even if it ultimately turns out to be false.^{139.} The allegation against the appellant was that, he had deliberately shielded the real offenders in the murder case and was accordingly liable for the offence under section 201 of the IPC, 1860. Supreme Court acquitted the accused holding that it is not possible on the evidence to ascertain, as to whether the appellant was, in fact, guilty of the offence alleged against him.^{140.}

The Supreme Court has held that where the evidence showed that a person had died and his body was found in a trunk and discovered in a well, and that the accused had taken part in the disposal of the body but there was no evidence to show the cause of his death, or the manner or circumstances in which it came about, it was held that the accused could not be convicted for an offence under this section.^{141.} In other words, the mere secreting of a dead body without first proving that the corpse secreted was the corpus delicti of a murder case is no offence under section 201, IPC, 1860.^{142.}

[s 201.2] Independent offence.—

A charge under section 201 of the IPC, 1860 can be independently laid and conviction maintained also, in case the prosecution is able to establish that an offence had been committed, the person charged with the offence had the knowledge or the reason to believe that the offence had been committed, the said person has caused disappearance of evidence and such act of disappearance has been done with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment. Mere suspicion is not sufficient, it must be proved that the accused knew or had a reason to believe that the offence has been committed and yet he caused the evidence to disappear so as to screen the offender. The offender may be either himself or any other person.^{143.} It has been held that the offence under the section is of independent nature, though it cannot be separated from the substance of the main offence. Accordingly, a conviction under the section can be recorded even though the commission of the main offence is not established. The Court, however, pointed out that such cases are likely to be very small in number. Applying this to the facts of the case, the Court held that the accused was guilty of offence under this section because he had buried the dead body of his wife in his field and misguided the police of her disappearance, though, because of decomposition, it could not be proved that he was responsible for her death.^{144.}

[s 201.3] Ingredients.—

To bring home a charge under section 201, IPC, the prosecution must prove:—

- (1) That an offence has been committed.
- (2) That the accused knew or had reason to believe the commission of such an offence.
- (3) That with such knowledge or belief he
 - (a) caused any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear, or
 - (b) gave any information relating to that offence which he then knew or believed to be false.
- (4) That he did so as aforesaid with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment.
- (5) If the charge be of an aggravated form, it must be further proved that the offence in respect of which the accused did as in (3) and (4) supra, was punishable with death or imprisonment for life or imprisonment extending to ten years.^{145.}

1. 'Knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed'.—It must be proved that an offence, the evidence of which the accused is charged with causing to disappear, has actually been committed,^{146.} and that the accused knew, or had information sufficient to lead him to believe, that the offence had been committed.^{147.} Unless the prosecution was able to establish that the accused person knew or had reason to believe that an offence has been committed and had done something causing the offence of commission of evidence to disappear, he cannot be convicted.^{148.}

Where the accused committed rape on a seven-year-old minor girl at his studio, killed her and disposed of her dead body in a carton. The dead body of the deceased was found in the carton, which the accused procured from witness. Conviction under sections 302, 376 and 201 IPC, 1860 is maintained.^{149.}

The charge framed was for causing disappearance for evidence. The fact that concealment was the likely effect of the Act is not enough. There was no evidence to attribute the knowledge of the death of the victim woman to the accused. Hence, the essential ingredient of the offence was missing.^{150.}

[s 201.4] Causing disappearance by preventing information from reaching police.—

Where after raping a girl of 11 years the accused persons thrust a stick into her private part of which she died and they falsely told the mother of the victim that they had already reported the matter to the police and in the meantime there was disappearance of evidence, they were held liable under this section.^{151.} Where the Court has no case that there is any intentional omission to give information by the accused to the police, the conviction under section 201 cannot be maintained only on the ground that no communication was given to the police and that the post-mortem had not been performed. It is also no case of the complainant that he had requested for post-mortem of the body and that intimation should have been given to the police before the last rites were performed and there is also no charge under section 202 of the IPC, 1860 of intentionally omitting to give information of the unnatural death to the police.^{152.}

2. 'Intention of screening offence of offender'.—The intention to screen the offender must be the primary and sole object of the accused. The fact that the concealment was likely to have that effect is not sufficient.^{153.} The accused person killed his brother and his whole family in order to avoid partition of the joint family property. There was no evidence to show that his son had common intention with him or participated in the commission of the crime. But because he had seen his father commit multiple murders, he tried to destroy the evidence by throwing away certain articles on two occasions from over a bridge. It seemed obvious that he had done that with the primary object of saving his father. He was convicted under this section.^{154.}

Where a man shot down his wife with his pistol, his companion, who played no other role, but concealed the authorship of the homicide, he was held guilty under this section.^{155.} Where the co-accused persons told the investigating officer that the deceased was not present in the house at the material time, it was held that this amounted to the offence of screening the offender.^{156.}

[s 201.5] Cases.—

In the Jessica Lal murder Case¹⁵⁷, the Supreme Court upheld the conviction of co-accused under section 201 read with section 120-B IPC, 1860 considering the evidence relating to their presence at the time of incident, removal of Tata Safari, his call details etc. as well as the evidence of PWs 30 and 101. In another case where the accused committed murder of his wife assaulting on her head with a chopper did cause the evidence to disappear by setting fire to the dead body after pouring kerosene on her, it is found that the accused has committed an offence punishable under sections 302 and 201 of IPC, 1860.¹⁵⁸ Where unnatural conduct of appellants to dispose of dead body of victim without having awaited for victim's husband who was already on his way to home and the evidence shows that victim died under unnatural circumstances, conviction under sections 302 and 201 IPC, 1860 is upheld.¹⁵⁹ Where the accused husband strangled his young wife to death and attempted to destroy evidence by burning her dead body, the order of acquittal of the accused of the offence under sections 300 and 201 was reversed by the Apex Court.¹⁶⁰

[s 201.6] Help rendered to conceal crime.—

Where a person through fear did not interpose to prevent the commission of a murder, and afterwards helped the murderers in concealing the body, it was held that he was not guilty of abetment of murder but was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁶¹ A person who assists the actual murderers in removing the corpse of their victim to a distance from the place where the murder was committed is prima facie guilty of an offence under this section, until he can establish that he acted under compulsion.¹⁶² Where it appeared from the statement of the accused that he took from the men who, according to him committed the murder, a jewel which was unquestionably the property of the deceased and he hid it and produced it later, it was held that the accused, when he hid the jewel, had the intention of screening the offender, whoever he was, from legal punishment and so was guilty of an offence under this section.¹⁶³ The death of a woman was caused on the first floor of the house and her mother-in-law, the only other occupant of the house at the time of the occurrence, was residing on the ground floor. The place of incident was intermeddled and bamboo pieces, rafters, and broken tiles were thrown over the dead body with a view to cause disappearance of evidence and to screen the offender. It was held that it was not possible without the complicity of the mother-in-law and hence though she could not be held guilty of murder or abetting it, she was guilty of an offence under section 201.¹⁶⁴

[s 201.7] Death in custody.—

Where there was death of a person in the police custody while he was detained there for interrogation and his dead body was not traced, however, the evidence of other witnesses who were also beaten up and injured by the police, categorically established that the deceased became unconscious on receipt of injuries inflicted by the police and died, it was held that an irresistible inference could be drawn that the police personnel who caused the death, must also have caused the disappearance of the body.¹⁶⁵

[s 201.8] Bride burning.—

In a bride burning case, the victim was murdered and thereafter her body was burnt to screen the offence. The guilt of the accused mother-in-law and that of the husband of the victim as particeps criminis was established beyond any shadow of doubt. The order of acquittal passed by the High Court from the offence of murder was reversed and set aside and that of the trial Court convicting both the accused under section 300 was upheld. The mother-in-law was also convicted under section 201.^{166.}

[s 201.9] False explanation by wife of death of husband.—

The accused wife attempted to explain away the death of her husband by saying that he was attempting suicide and while she attempted to save him, he fell, down to death. A search of her house showed evidence of murder. The Court said that even if she had not herself caused death, she was in know of things and attempted to explain away the incident by false explanations. The finding of guilt and her conviction under the section could not be interfered with.^{167.}

[s 201.10] Kidnapping, murder and concealment.—

The charge was that of Kidnapping the girl, murdering her and then concealing the dead body. The police brought the accused to his house. He himself dug the place from where the body was exhumed. The accused admitted that the house belonged to him. The accused failed to explain how the body came to be buried in his house. The Supreme Court confirmed his conviction under sections 300, 364 and 201.^{168.}

[s 201.11] Disposal of dead body by burning.—

The fact that the accused, after killing his two minor daughters, threw their dead bodies in the river, which amounted to causing disappearance of the evidence of murder.^{169.}

[s 201.12] Failure of doctor to give information.—

The failure on the part of the doctor to give information to police for six days after the admission of a burnt patient has been held not to constitute any offence under section 201 by itself.^{170.}

[s 201.13] Threat to approver.—

Oral threat or inducement given by the two lady lawyers to the approver not to give any statement against the petitioner, cannot amount to commission of an offence under section 201 IPC, 1860.^{171.}

[s 201.14] Sanction under section 197 Cr PC, 1973.—

In a case where the allegation was that HIV contaminated blood was supplied to the Government Medical College Hospital and as a result, some patients who were given blood transfusion had tested HIV positive. Accused tampered with the entries made in official register, tearing of pages from the different official registers and stowing them away in house. The acts cannot be related to the discharge of his official duties and hence sanction for prosecution under section 197 Cr PC, 1973 not required.^{172.}

[s 201.15] Acquittal for main offence, conviction under section 201.—

One Palvinder Kaur was tried for offence under sections 302 and 201 Penal Code and was convicted under section 302 IPC, 1860 but no verdict was recorded regarding the charge under section 201 Penal Code. In appeal, High Court acquitted her of the charge of murder, but convicted under section 201 of Penal Code. In the appeal before Supreme Court, it was held that in order to establish the charge under section 201 IPC, 1860 it is essential to prove that substantive offence has been committed and the accused knew or had reason to believe that such offence has been committed with requisite knowledge and intention of screening the offender from such legal punishment, caused any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear or gave any information respecting such offence or having such knowledge or believed to be false. She is acquitted under section 201 IPC, 1860.^{173.} Conviction for causing disappearance of evidence is possible even if nobody has been convicted for the main offence.^{174.} Where the allegation was that the appellant killed his wife with a bamboo stick and buried her dead body in dry portion of pond located in his compound and there was no mark of injury found on the dead body; Court held that the possibility that deceased committed suicide by consuming poison cannot be ruled out. Though he was acquitted under section 302, but was convicted under section 201 IPC, 1860.^{175.}

[s 201.16] Main accused died during pendency of trial.—

Where main accused died during pendency of trial, conviction of co-accused for causing disappearance of evidence is held not proper.^{176.}

[s 201.17] CASES.—

however, submitted with respect that having regard to the decisions of the Supreme Court in the cases of Om Prakash,^{177.} and Abhayanand,^{178.} where it has been held that to constitute an attempt to commit an offence it is not essential that the last proximate act must be done by the accused, in the instant case too the accused could perhaps be held guilty of an attempt to cause disappearance of the evidence of murder under sections 201/511, IPC, 1860, as they, in fact, did all that lay within their power to do towards causing disappearance of the evidence of murder but the plot failed as the police intervened in the matter. Where the members of an unlawful assembly indiscriminately killed five persons, dragged the dead bodies over a distance, beheaded the victims and threw their limbs and bodies in the raging fire, they not only committed an offence under section 201, IPC, 1860, but were also liable under sections 302/149, IPC, 1860.^{179.} If murder of an illegitimate child remains unproved, mere secreting of the dead body of the child does not constitute an offence under section 201 IPC, 1860.^{180.} Where the complaint filed under section 201, IPC, 1860, besides mentioning the section did not contain a single word as to how the evidence of the crime was destroyed, it was held that no cognizance could be taken on such a complaint as it did not even contain allegations to constitute the offence under section 201, IPC, 1860.^{181.} Mere removal of dead body from one place to another does not by itself amount to causing disappearance of evidence under section 201, IPC, 1860.^{182.} Where the dead bodies were disposed of by some of the members of the unlawful assembly, all of them could be convicted under section 201 read with section 149, IPC, 1860.¹⁸³ Where the accused cremated the dead body of his wife who had committed suicide without informing the police, the accused was held liable under section 201 in spite of he being acquitted under sections 304-B and 498-A.¹⁸⁴

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

132. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).

133. Kalawati, (1953) SCR 546 [LNIND 1953 SC 5] , at p 557. Followed in VL Tresa v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 953 [LNIND 2001 SC 364] , wife of the deceased concealing the real circumstances of death. Ram Singh v State of HP, 1997 Cr LJ 1829 : 1997 SCC (Cr) 729, for notes see under section 120-B.

134. Nebti Mandal, (1939) 19 Pat 369.

135. Public Prosecutor v Venkatamma, (1932) 56 Mad 63.

136. Bakhora Chowdhary v State of Bihar, 1991 Cr LJ 91 (Pat). A father-in-law convicted for lodging report of suicide of his daughter-in-law when he knew it was murder. Brij Kishore v State of UP, 1989 Cr LJ 616 (All).

137. Asar Mohammad v State of UP, AIR 2018 SC 5264 .

138. Deepak v State of Maharashtra, (1995) 2 Cr LJ 2219 (Bom).

139. Markose, (1962) 1 Cr LJ 610 .

140. Rathinam v State of TN, (2011) 3 SCC (Cr) 111 : (2011) 11 SCC 140 [LNIND 2009 SC 1873] : 2010 (11) Scale 6 [LNINDORD 2009 SC 542]

141. Palvinder Kaur, (1953) SCR 94 [LNIND 1952 SC 54] : 1953 Cr LJ 154 : AIR 1952 SC 354 [LNIND 1952 SC 54] . See Bhupendra Singh v State of UP, AIR 1991 SC 1083 [LNIND 1991 SC 151] : 1991 Cr LJ 1337 : 1991 All LJ 379 : (1991) 2 SCC 750 [LNIND 1991 SC 151] . See also State of UP v Kapil Deo, AIR 1991 SC 2257 [LNIND 1991 SC 397] : 1991 Cr LJ 3321 : 1991 Supp (2) SCC 170 ; Suleman Rahiman v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1968 SC 829 [LNIND 1967 SC 354] : 1968 Cr LJ 1013 ; Roshan Lal v State of Punjab, AIR 1965 SC 1413 [LNIND 1964 SC 339] : 1965 (2) Cr LJ 426 ; Batapa Bada Seth v State of Orissa, 1987 Cr LJ 1976 (Ori); Sardar Singh v State (Delhi Admn.), AIR 1993 SC 1696 [LNIND 1993 SC 153] : 1993 Cr LJ 1489 : 1993 Supp (2) SCC 393 . Ram Saran Mahto v State of Bihar, 1999 Cr LJ 4311 : AIR 1999 SC 3435 [LNIND 1999 SC 782] ; Gati Bahera v State of Orissa, 1997 Cr LJ 4331 (Ori).

142. Basanti v State of HP, AIR 1987 SC 1572 : 1987 Cr LJ 1869 : (1987) 3 SCC 227 . For other examples of acquittals under benefit of doubt, see Kedar Nath v State of UP, AIR 1991 SC 1224 : 1991 Cr LJ 989 ; Kishore Chand v State of HP, AIR 1990 SC 2140 [LNIND 1990 SC 468] : 1990 Cr LJ 2289 . Sudhir Mondal v State of WB, 1988 Cr LJ 569 (Cal); State of Rajasthan v Kamla, AIR 1991 SC 967 : 1991 Cr LJ 602 .

143. Dinesh Kumar Kalidas Patel v State of Gujarat, AIR 2018 SC 951 .

144. Suresh v State of Karnataka, 2002 Cr LJ 3273 (Kant).

145. K Purnachandra Rao, 1975 Cr LJ 1671 : AIR 1975 SC 1925 [LNIND 1975 SC 316] . Sukhram v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 7 SCC 502 [LNIND 2007 SC 969] : AIR 2007 SC 3050 [LNIND 2007 SC 969] , the Supreme Court restated the ingredients of the offence.

146. Abdul Kadir v State, (1880) 3 All 279 (FB).
147. Matuki Misser, (1885) 11 Cal 619 . Hanuman v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1994 SC 1307 [LNIND 1993 SC 992] : (1994) 2 Cr LJ 2092 : 1994 Supp (2) SCC 39 , where it was not proved that the dead body in question was that of the victim of murder or that the accused persons were themselves the assailants or knew the assailants, the Supreme Court held that it was not safe to convict them only on the ground that they performed the ceremonies for cremation of the body and took part in cremation. Arbind Singh v State of Bihar, AIR 1994 SC 1068 : 1994 Cr LJ 1227 (SC), another case where the participants in a cremation were acquitted because they had no knowledge or reason to believe that the death was homicidal.
148. Dinesh Kumar Kalidas Patel v State of Gujarat, AIR 2018 SC 951 .
149. Samir Bhowmik v State of Tripura, 200 Cr LJ 3018 (Gau).
150. Vijaya v State of Maharashtra, (2003) 8 SCC 296 [LNIND 2003 SC 739] : AIR 2003 SC 3787 [LNIND 2003 SC 739] .
151. Ghuraiyaa v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 1129 . Naba Kumar Das v State of Assam, 2002 Cr LJ 1950 (Gau).
152. Dinesh Kumar Kalidas Patel v State of Gujarat, AIR 2018 SC 951 .
153. Jamnadas, (1963) 1 Cr LJ 433 ; Dr. Ravindra Kumar v State of Bihar, 1991 Cr LJ 3052 (Pat).
154. Prakash Dhawal Khairnar v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 340 [LNIND 2001 SC 2841] at 348.
155. Bhanu Pratap Tewari v State of UP, 2002 Cr LJ 1243 (All).
156. Vithal Thukaram More v State of Maharashtra, AIR 2002 SC 2715 [LNIND 2002 SC 449] ; Hargovindas Devrajibhai Patel v State of Gujarat, 1998 Cr LJ 662 : AIR 1998 SC 370 [LNIND 1997 SC 1443] . In Rabin Mallick v State of West Bengal, 2011 Cr LJ 3801 (Cal) the body of the deceased boy was concealed in a place in the exclusive knowledge of accused. Conviction was held proper but in Udaimanik Jamatia v The State of Tripura, 2011 Cr LJ 4167 (Gau) accused was acquitted though there was recovery of skeleton at the instance of accused.
157. Sidhartha Vashisht v State (NCT of Delhi), AIR 2010 SC 2352 [LNIND 2010 SC 367] : (2010) 2 SCC (Cr) 1385.
158. Channaraja v State of Karnataka, 2012 Cr LJ 159 (Kar) Sk Waheed v State of Bihar, 2010 Cr LJ 1870 (Pat).
159. Diwan Singh v State of Uttaranchal, 2012 Cr LJ 3256 (Utt) But in Ramakanta Patel v State of Orissa, 2011 Cr LJ 600 (Ori). See also Netrananda Naik v State of Orissa, 2011 Cr LJ 813 (Ori).
160. Mulakh Raj v Satish Kumar, AIR 1992 SC 1175 [LNIND 1992 SC 322] : 1992 Cr LJ 1529 . Turuku Budha Karkaria v State of Orissa, 1994 Cr LJ 552 (Ori), killing a woman, removing her ornaments, concealing her body in a bush in deep forest, killers guilty under the section, sentenced under section 302.
161. Goburdhun Bera, (1866) 6 WR (Cr) 80.
162. Autar, (1924) 47 All 306 ; Begu, (1925) 52 IA 191 , 6 Lah 226, 27 Bom LR 707, followed in Mata Din v State, (1929) 5 Luck 255 . Raveendran v State of Kerala, 1994 Cr LJ 3562 (Ker), the accused offered a helping hand to the main accused in disposing of the dead body, conviction under section 201.
163. Public Prosecutor v Munisami, (1941) Mad 503.
164. Vinod Bhalla v State of MP, 1992 Cr LJ 3527 (MP). See also Sankarapandian v State of TN, 1992 Cr LJ 3662 (Mad); Budhan Singh v State of Bihar, 2006 Cr LJ 2451 SC : AIR 2006 SC 1959 [LNIND 2006 SC 300] .
165. Bhagwan Singh v State of Punjab, AIR 1992 SC 1689 [LNIND 1992 SC 396] : 1992 Cr LJ 3144 .

166. Sarojini v State of MP, 1993 AIR SCW 817 : 1993 Cr LJ 1648 (SC). See also Bhuneshwar Pd Chaurasia v Bhuneshwar Chaurasia, 2001 Cr LJ 3541 (Pat), a married woman died of poisoning, she was cremated hurriedly during the same night without informing police or her relatives. Those who participated in the activity were held guilty under the section; Shambir Gowada v State of WB, 2000 Cr LJ 1602 (Cal); SK Usman v State of Maharashtra, 2000 Cr LJ 3301 (Bom).
167. VL Tresa v State of Kerala, AIR 2001 SC 953 [LNIND 2001 SC 364] .
168. Damodar v State of Karnataka, AIR 2000 SC 50 [LNIND 1999 SC 884] : 2000 Cr LJ 175 .
169. State of West Bengal v Rakesh Singh, (2016)1 CALLT 178 (HC) : 2015 Cr LJ 3847 .
170. KK Patnayak (Dr) v State of MP, 1999 Cr LJ 4911 (MP).
171. Sri Jayendra Saraswathy Swamigal v State of TN, AIR 2006 SC 6 [LNIND 2005 SC 815] : \(2005\) 8 SCC 771 [LNIND 2005 SC 815] : 2005 Cr LJ 4626 .
172. State of Maharashtra v Devahari Devasingh Pawar, AIR 2008 SC 1375 [LNIND 2008 SC 103] : \(2008\) 2 SCC 540 [LNIND 2008 SC 103] : 2008 AIR (SCW) 815 : 2008 Cr LJ 1593 .
173. Palvinder Kaur v State of Punjab, AIR 1952 SC 354 [LNIND 1952 SC 54] .
174. State of Karnataka v Madesha, (2007) 7 SCC 35 [LNIND 2007 SC 918] : AIR 2007 SC 2917 [LNIND 2007 SC 921] ; Sukhram v State of Maharashtra, (2007) 7 SCC 502 [LNIND 2007 SC 969] : AIR 2007 SC 3050 [LNIND 2007 SC 969] , conviction under section 201 possible despite acquittal from the main offence.
175. Suman Rajowar v State of Assam, 2011 Cr LJ 2984 (Gau).
176. Keshave Kishore Sinha v State of Bihar, 2013 Cr LJ \(NOC\)7 (Pat).
177. Om Prakash, 1961 \(2\) Cr LJ 848 : AIR 1961 SC 1782 [LNIND 1961 SC 201] .
178. Abhayanand, 1961 \(2\) Cr LJ 822 .
179. State of UP v Mahendra Singh, 1975 Cr LJ 425 : AIR 1975 SC 455 [LNIND 1974 SC 320] .
180. Re Sumitra Sherpani, 1975 Cr LJ 169 (Gau), See also Mazahar Ali, 1976 Cr LJ 1629 (J&K).
181. Chandrapal Singh, 1982 Cr LJ 1731 : AIR 1982 SC 1238 : (1982) 1 SCC 466 .
182. Bhagaban Kirshani, 1985 Cr LJ 868 (Ori).
183. Ram Avtar, 1985 Cr LJ 1865 (SC) : AIR 1985 SC 880 [LNIND 1985 SC 4] .
184. Sunkara Suri Babu v State of AP, 1996 Cr LJ 1480 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 202] Intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform.

Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed, intentionally omits to give any information respecting that offence which he is legally bound to give, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

This section punishes the illegal omission to give information of those who are by some law bound to give information, when such omission is intentional. It is similar to section 176. See sections 39 and 40, Criminal Procedure Code, as to the persons legally bound to give information. The word "whoever" in section 202, IPC, 1860, refers to persons other than the offender.¹⁸⁵ Moreover to compel a criminal to incriminate himself would violate the spirit of Article 20\(3\) of the Constitution. Where the duty to inform arises first and is not performed, the liability under this section would arise and it would be no defence that subsequent to the breach of duty there was involvement of the accused person in some crimes. The person who knew or had reason to believe that death was not natural was obliged under the section to give information.^{186.}

[s 202.1] Essential Ingredients.—

To sustain a conviction under the above quoted section 202 of the Penal Code, it is necessary for the prosecution to prove:

- (1) that the accused had knowledge or reason to believe that some offence had been committed,
- (2) that the accused had intentionally omitted to give information respecting that offence and
- (3) that the accused was legally bound to give that information.^{187.}

332 The Indian Penal Code [Chapter XI

[s 202.2] CASES.—

The accused persons who raped a girl of 11 years and caused her death by thrusting a stick into her private part were under no obligation to file information of their own criminality, they became liable under this section because by falsely telling the mother of the victim that they had already reported the matter, they prevented her from lodging report with the police.^{188.}

This section has also no application where the principal offence has not been established.^{189.}

[s 202.3] Failure of doctor to give information.—

The allegation was the Accused, a dentist treated one of the injured assailants by suturing (stitching) his wound on the back after applying local anaesthesia pursuant of a previous plan that if and when any of the assailants got injured in the attack then immediate medical treatment would be given by the accused to the injured. The accused stitched the back of an assailant, which is not the job of a dentist. Offence under section 201 prima facie made out.^{190.} The failure on the part of the doctor to give information to the police (in this case information was given after a gap of six days) has been held not to constitute any offence under section 202. It would have to be shown that doctors were duty bound to give such information that there was knowledge that in the burning of the lady some offence was involved. Even where this would be so, it would be a separate offence. The doctors cannot be prosecuted jointly with the main accused.^{191.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
185. HS Rathod, 1979 Cr LJ 1025 : AIR 1979 SC 1232 [LNIND 1979 SC 43] .
186. Bhagwan Swarup v State of Rajasthan, AIR 1991 SC 2062 [LNIND 1991 SC 416] : 1991 Cr LJ 3123 .
187. HS Rathod, (supra).
188. Ghuraiyaa v State of MP, 1990 Cr LJ 1129 . State of Rajasthan v Chhote Lal, 2012 Cr LJ 1214 (SC) : 2011 (6) Scale 526 : 2012 AIR (SCW) 1159.
189. HS Rathod, (supra).
190. State of Kerala v Raneef, (2011) 1 SCC 784 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : AIR 2011 SC 340 [LNIND 2011 SC 3] : 2011 Cr LJ 982 : (2011) 1 SCC (Cr) 409.
191. KK Patnayak (Dr) v State of MP, 1999 Cr LJ 4911 (MP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 203] Giving false information respecting an offence committed.

Whoever knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed, gives any information respecting that offence which he knows or believes to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

¹⁹².[Explanation.—In sections 201 and 202 and in this section the word "offence", includes any act committed at any place out of ¹⁹³ [India], which, if committed in ¹⁹⁴ [India], would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460.]

COMMENT.—

The liability under this section attaches to anyone who gives false information whether he is legally bound to furnish such information or not. The object of the Legislature is to discourage and punish the giving of false information to the police concerning offences which are actually committed and which the person charged with knows, or has reason to believe, have been actually committed. The section contemplates information volunteered by some person.

[s 203.1] Ingredients.—

To secure a conviction under section 203, IPC, 1860, the prosecution must prove,

- (1) that an offence has been committed;
- (2) that the accused knew or had reason to believe that such offence had been committed;
- (3) that he gave the information with respect to that offence;
- (4) that the information so given was false;
- (5) that when he gave such information he knew or believed it to be false.^{195.}

A complaint against the petitioners/accused for committing an offence under section 203 of the IPC, 1860 would lie only in a case where such accused had voluntarily given false information in respect of an offence committed knowing or believing it to be false. Statements given by them to police during investigation of the crime and recorded under section 161 of the Code even if it is false, will not constitute an offence under section 203 of the IPC, 1860.^{196.} Where two nuns died due to fall of bricks lifted by hoist lift without protective measures at construction site. Deed of settlement purportedly made in the name of a fictitious person so as to save the culpability of the contractor. Offence made out.^{197.} Where the accused were prosecuted for throttling a man to death and also for giving for the purpose of screening murder wrong information that he died of excessive drinking, there being no direct evidence for the offence of murder, the accused were acquitted of the offence of murder and their conviction under section 201 was modified into one under section 203 for giving false information.^{198.} Where petitioners were charged under section 203 and section 211, IPC, 1860 by the police only to cover up their mishandling of the investigation and their having falsely charged the petitioners of a crime which never took place, Court ordered compensation to the petitioners.^{199.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

192. Added by Act 3 of 1894, section 6.

193. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

194. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

195. Bhagguram, 1982 Cr LJ 106 (MP).

196. Jiji joseph v Tomy Ignatius, 2013 Cr LJ 828 (Ker).

197. Kumar v State of Kerala, 2012 Cr LJ 3193 (Ker).

198. Nagireddi Siva v State of AP, 1992 Cr LJ 1339 (AP).

199. Peruboyina Satyanarayana v State of AP, 2006 Cr LJ 3027 (AP).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 204] Destruction of document to prevent its production as evidence.

Whoever secretes or destroys any ²⁰⁰. [document or electronic record] which he may be lawfully compelled to produce as evidence in a Court of Justice, or in any proceeding lawfully held before a public servant, as such, or obliterates or renders illegible the whole or any part of such ²⁰¹. [document or electronic record] with the intention of preventing the same from being produced or used as evidence before such Court or public servant as aforesaid, or after he shall have been lawfully summoned or required to produce the same for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Section 175 deals with omission to produce or deliver up any document to any public servant, this section deals with secretion or destruction of a document which a person may lawfully be compelled to produce in a Court. A person may secrete a document not only when the existence of the document is unknown to other persons and for the purpose of preventing the existence of the document coming to the knowledge of anybody, but also when the existence of the document is known to others.^{202.}

The offence under this section is an aggravated form of the offence punishable under section 175. The section applies whether the proceeding is of a civil or criminal nature.

[s 204.1] CASES.—Secreting document.—

Where the plaintiff in a suit referred to arbitration by consent, with a view to prevent a witness from referring to an endorsement on a bond, snatched up the bond which was lying beside the arbitrator, ran away, and refused to produce it, it was held that he had committed this offence.^{203.}

[s 204.2] Destroying document.—

Where a police-officer took down at first the report of the commission of a dacoity made to him, but subsequently destroyed that report and framed another and a false report of the commission of a totally different offence, he was held guilty of this offence.^{204.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

200. Subs. by The Information Technology Act, 2000 (Act 21 of 2000), section 91 and First Sch, w.e.f. 17 October 2000, for the word "document". The words "electronic record" have been defined in section 29A.

201. Subs. by The Information Technology Act, 2000 (Act 21 of 2000), section 91 and First Sch., w.e.f. 17 October 2000, for the word "document". The words "electronic record" have been defined in section 29A.

202. Susenbihari Ray, (1930) 58 Cal 1051 (SB).

203. Subramania Ghanapati, (1881) 3 Mad 261.

204. Muhammad Shah Khan, (1898) 20 All 307 . See also Jagdish v State of Rajasthan, 2002 Cr LJ 2171 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 205] False personation for purpose of act or proceeding in suit or prosecution.

Whoever falsely personates another, and in such assumed character makes any admission or statement, or confesses judgment,¹ or causes any process to be issued or becomes bail or security, or does any other act in any suit or criminal prosecution, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

The offence punishable under this section is not merely cheating by using a fictitious name, but by falsely assuming to be some other real person and in that character making an admission, confessing judgment, or causing any process to be issued, etc.

Any fraudulent gain or a benefit to the offender is not an essential element of this offence.²⁰⁵ Where A personated B at a trial with B's consent, which was given to save himself from the trouble of making an appearance in person before a Magistrate, it was held that A was guilty of an offence under this section, and B was guilty of abetment of the offence.²⁰⁶ Act of impersonating another for purpose of giving evidence in Court falls under section 205 IPC, 1860. Section 205, IPC, 1860 is squarely covered under section 195(b)(i) of the Code of Criminal Procedure and cognizance could be taken only by a Court on the complaint in writing of that Court in which such offence was committed.²⁰⁷

1. 'Confesses judgment'.—Allows a decree to be passed against himself.

[s 205.1] Personation of imaginary person.—

There is a conflict of opinion on the point whether a person commits an offence under this section by personating a purely imaginary person. The Calcutta High Court has held that a person by such personation commits an offence under this section.²⁰⁸ The Madras High Court, dissenting from the above ruling, has held that it is not enough to show the assumption of a fictitious name; it must also appear that the assumed name was used as a means of falsely representing some other individual.²⁰⁹

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : \(2009\) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : \(2009\) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

205. Suppakon, \(1863\) 3 MHC 450 ; Kalya, \(1903\) 5 Bom LR 138 .

206. Suppakon, supra.

207. Jawahar Yadav v State of Chhattisgarh, 2006 Cr LJ 2078 (Chh).

208. Bhitto Kahar, (1862) 1 Ind Jur OS 128. See also K M Chitharanjan v P M Kunhunni, 2005 Cr LJ 4434 (Ker).

209. Kadar Ravuttan, \(1868\) 4 MHC 18 . By virtue of the provision in section 195 Cr PC, 1973, cognizance of an offence under this section is barred except on a complaint by the court where the offence is committed. Sardul Singh v State of Haryana, 1992 Cr LJ 354 (P&H).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 206] Fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution.

Whoever fraudulently removes, conceals, transfers or delivers to any person any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine, under a sentence which has been pronounced, or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced, by a Court of Justice or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made by a Court of Justice in a civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

The concealment or removal of property contemplated in this section must be to prevent the property from being taken. Where the property is already taken and the removal is subsequent, the offence under this section is not committed.²¹⁰ The word 'taken' has been used in the sense of 'seized' or 'taken possession of'.²¹¹ Where the removal was open and without any element of secrecy or deception, it was held that the removal was not "fraudulent removal" and hence this section could not apply.²¹².

A creditor commits no fraud who anticipates other creditors and obtains a discharge of his debt by the assignment of any property which has not already been attached by another creditor.²¹³.

Sections 206, 207 and 208 have the effect of rendering criminal all collusive modes by which creditors, or lawful claimants may be defeated of their just remedies. Sections 421–424 deal with fraudulent transfers.

Under this and the next section a civil suit must be actually pending before a Court, and not merely intended to be filed.²¹⁴.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

210. Murli v State, (1888) 8 AWN 237.

211. Sahebrao Baburao, (1936) 38 Bom LR 1192 .

212. Kudumban v Dinakaran, 1962 Cr LJ 555 .

213. Appa Mallya, (1876) Unrep CrC 110.

214. MS Ponuswami, (1930) 8 Ran 268.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 207] Fraudulent claim to property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution.

Whoever fraudulently accepts, receives or claims any property or any interest therein, knowing that he has no right or rightful claim to such property or interest, or practices any deception touching any right to any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine, under a sentence which has been pronounced, or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced by a Court of Justice or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made by a Court of Justice in a civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

This section deals with the receiver, acceptor, or claimer of property who tries to prevent its seizure as a forfeiture. It punishes the accomplice just as the preceding section punishes the principal offender.

-
1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 208] Fraudulently suffering decree for sum not due.

Whoever fraudulently causes or suffers a decree or order to be passed against him at the suit of any person for a sum not due or for a larger sum than is due to such person or for any property or interest in property to which such person is not entitled, or fraudulently causes or suffers a decree or order to be executed against him after it has been satisfied, or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

ILLUSTRATION

A institutes a suit against Z. Z, knowing that A is likely to obtain a decree against him, fraudulently suffers a judgment to pass against him for a larger amount at the suit of B, who has no just claim against him, in order that B, either on his own account or for the benefit of Z, may share in the proceeds of any sale of Z's property which may be made under A's decree. Z has committed an offence under this section.

COMMENT.—

This section prevents the abuse of getting someone to file a collusive suit for recovery of the whole property and suffering a decree to be passed. It punishes persons making fictitious claims in order to secure the property of the defendant against person to whom he may become indebted in future.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 209] Dishonestly making false claim in Court.

Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly, or with intent to injure or annoy any person, makes in a Court of Justice any claim which he knows to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.—

This section relates to false and fraudulent claims in a Court of Justice. It is much wider than the last section as it applies to a person who is acting fraudulently or dishonestly. Not only must the claim be false to the knowledge of the person making it, but the object of it must be to defraud, to cause wrongful loss or wrongful gain, to injure or to annoy. The section punishes the making of a false claim. The offence will be complete as soon as a suit is filed. If a person applies for the execution of a decree which has already been executed his act will be an offence under the next section.²¹⁵

Where the Court took cognizance of a complaint against dishonestly making a false claim in a Court without complaint of the concerned civil judge, the cognizance was held to be not justified by reason of section 195(b)(ii), Cr PC, 1973 that covers such offences.²¹⁶ The Court had no jurisdiction to take cognizance of offence under sections 193/ 209/34 IPC, 1860 without having received any complaint under section 195 from the concerned civil Court.²¹⁷

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

215. Beegum Mahtoon, (1869) 12 WR (Cr) 37; Bismilla Khan v Rambhau, (1946) Nag 686. Cognizance of an offence under this section can be taken on a complaint by the court concerned. See section 195 Cr PC, 1973. Sardul Singh v State of Haryana, 1992 Cr LJ 354 P&H.

216. Babu Lal v State, 1998 Cr LJ 3595 (Raj). See also Vinod Kumar v State, 1997 Cr LJ 2893 (P&H).

217. Kusum Sandhu v Sh Ved Prakash Narang, 2009 Cr LJ 1078 (Chh); Babu Lal v State of Rajasthan, 2009 Cr LJ 3595 (Raj).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 210] Fraudulently obtaining decree for sum not due.

Whoever fraudulently obtains ¹ a decree or order against any person for a sum not due or for a larger sum than is due, or for any property or interest in property to which he is not entitled, or fraudulently causes a decree or order to be executed against any person after it has been satisfied ² or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied or fraudulently suffers or permits any such act to be done in his name, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

This section is the counterpart to section 208 in respect of fraudulent decrees, just as section 207 is the counterpart to section 206 in respect of fraudulent transfers and conveyances, the object of the Code being to strike both parties alike with the same penalty. This section, taken together with section 208, will enable both plaintiff and defendant to a fraudulent or collusive suit or execution to be dealt with alike.

1. 'Obtains'.—The offence is committed when the decree is fraudulently obtained and the fact that the decree has not been set aside, though admissible to prove that there was no fraud, is not a bar to a prosecution under the section.²¹⁸.

2. 'Causes a decree or order to be executed...after it has been satisfied'.—The mere presentation of an application for the execution of a decree already executed will not be sufficient. The accused must have caused the decree to be executed against the opposite party after it had been satisfied,²¹⁹ or obtained an order for attachment for a sum already paid.²²⁰ Where the decree-holder does not want to proceed with the execution and gets his execution application dismissed he cannot be convicted of an offence under this section.²²¹.

The fact that the satisfaction is of such a nature that the Court executing the decree could not recognize it does not prevent the decree-holder from being convicted of an offence under this section.²²².

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

218. Molla Fuzla Karim, (1905) 33 Cal 193 .

219. Shama Charan Das v Kasi Naik, (1896) 23 Cal 971 .

220. Hikmat-ullah Khan v Sakina Begam, (1930) 53 All 416 .

221. Bismilla Khan v Rambhau, (1946) Nag 686.

222. Madhub Chunder Mozumdar v Novodeep Chunder Pandit, (1888) 16 Cal 126 ; Mutturaman Chetti, (1881) 4 Mad 325; Pillala, (1885) 9 Mad 101.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 211] False charge of offence made with intent to injure.

Whoever, with intent to cause injury¹ to any person, institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceedings² against that person, or falsely charges³ any person with having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground⁴ for such proceeding or charge against that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both; and if such criminal proceeding be instituted⁵ on a false charge of an offence punishable with death, ^{223.}[imprisonment for life], or imprisonment for seven years or upwards, shall be punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

COMMENT.—

This section includes two distinct offences:—

- (1) Actually instituting or causing to be instituted false criminal proceeding against a person.^{224.}

- (2) Preferring a false charge against a person.

The first assumes the second, but the second may be committed where no criminal proceedings follow.

The necessary ingredients to constitute either of the above offences are—

- (1) the criminal proceedings must be instituted, or the false charge made with intent to injure;
- (2) the criminal proceedings must be instituted, or the false charge must be made, without just or lawful ground, in other words, it must be made maliciously.

Difference is made in punishment according as the charge relates to offences punishable with imprisonment which may extend to seven years or more or otherwise.

The mere making of a false charge is punishable under the first part of the section. If a case gets no further than a police inquiry, it falls within that part. But under the second part there should be an actual institution of criminal proceedings on a false charge.²²⁵ Two conditions are necessary before the enhanced punishment provided in the second paragraph could be inflicted: (1) proceedings on the false charge should have been actually instituted, and (2) the false charge must be in respect of an offence punishable with death, imprisonment for life, or imprisonment for seven years or upwards.

[s 211.1] Sections 182 and 211.—

According to the Bombay High Court there is a clear distinction between a false charge that falls under section 211 and false information given to the police, in which latter case the offence falls under section 182. A person prosecuting another under section 182 need not prove malice and want of reasonable and probable cause except so far as they are implied in the act of giving information known to be false, with the knowledge or likelihood that such information would lead a public servant to use his power to the injury or annoyance of the complainant. In an inquiry under section 211, on the other hand, proof of the absence of just and lawful ground for making the charge is an important element.²²⁶ If the information conveyed to the police amounts to the institution of criminal proceedings against a defined person or amounts to the falsely charging of a defined person with an offence, then the person giving such information is guilty of an offence under section 211. In such a case, section 211 is, and section 182 is not, the appropriate section under which to frame a charge. Section 182, when read with section 211, must be understood as referring to cases where the information given to the public servant falls short of amounting to institution of criminal proceedings against a defined person and falls short of amounting to the falsely charging of a defined person with an offence as defined in the Penal Code.²²⁷

The Calcutta, the Madras, the Allahabad and the Patna High Courts differ from this view of the Bombay High Court. The Calcutta High Court has ruled that a prosecution for a false charge may be under section 182 or section 211, but if the false charge was a serious one, the graver section 211 should be applied and the trial should be full and fair.²²⁸ Where a false charge is made to the police of a cognizable offence the offence committed by the person making the charge falls within the meaning of section 211 and not section 182.²²⁹

The Madras High Court has held that there is no error in a conviction under section 182, when the false charge made before the police was punishable under the final clause of section 211. The High Court may quash the conviction and sentence for the minor offence and direct a trial before a tribunal having jurisdiction for the graver offence.

Whether it will do so, or not, is a question, not of law, but of expediency on the facts of the particular case.^{230.}

The Allahabad High Court had held that where a specific false charge is made, the proper section, for proceedings to be adopted under section 211.^{231.} Although it is difficult to see what case would arise under section 211 to which section 182 could not be applied yet section 182 would apply to a case that might not fall under section 211. The offence under section 182 is complete when false information is given to a public servant by a person who believes it to be false, but who intends thereby to cause such public servant to institute criminal proceedings against a third person. The offence is complete although the public servant takes no steps towards the institution of such criminal proceedings. There is no restriction imposed by the Penal Code or by the Criminal Procedure Code upon the prosecution of an offence either under section 182 or section 211. It appears that it has been left to the discretion of the Court to determine when and under what circumstances prosecution should be proceeded with under sections 182 and 211.^{232.} The soundness of this view is doubted in subsequent cases.^{233.}

The Patna High Court has followed the view of the Calcutta High Court.^{234.}

The Lahore High Court has held that an offence under section 182 is included in the more serious offence under section 211 and a prosecution for a false charge may be either under section 182 or section 211, though clearly if section 211 does apply and the false charge is serious, the prosecution should be under section 211.^{235.}

1. 'Intent to cause injury'.—This is an essential part of the offence.^{236.}

2. 'Institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceedings'.—The word "proceedings" is used in this section in the ordinary sense of a prescribed mode of action for prosecuting a right or redressing a wrong. It is not used in the technical sense of a proceeding taken in a Court of law.^{237.} Neither the proceedings before the Disciplinary Committee of the Bar Council of India, is a criminal proceeding nor was the charge in the Disciplinary Proceedings in relation to an offence. Charge in the Disciplinary Proceedings before the Bar Council of India is only in respect of professional misconduct and not offence as such.^{238.} Under this section 'instituting a criminal proceeding' may be treated as an offence in itself apart from 'falsely charging' a person with having committed an offence. There are two modes in which a person aggrieved may seek to put the criminal law in motion: (1) by giving information to the police (Criminal Procedure Code, section 154) and (2) by lodging a complaint before a Magistrate (Criminal Procedure Code, sections 190, 200). A person who sets the criminal law in motion by making to the police a false charge in respect of a cognizable offence institutes criminal proceedings.^{239.} But as the police have no power to take any proceedings in non-cognizable cases without orders from a Magistrate, a false charge of such offence, made to the police, is not an institution of criminal proceedings, but merely a false charge.^{240.} The distinction between cognizable and non-cognizable offences relates to the powers of the police only, and it will, therefore, seem that the false charge of any offence, whether cognizable or non-cognizable, before a Magistrate is an institution of criminal proceedings.

3. 'Falsely charges'.—The word 'charges' means something different from 'gives information'. The true test seems to be, does the person who makes the statement that is alleged to constitute the 'charge' do so with the intention and object of setting the criminal law in motion against the person against whom the statement is directed? Such object and intention may be inferred from the language of the statement and the circumstances in which it is made.^{241.} The false charge must be made to a Court, or to an officer who has power to investigate and send it up for trial.^{242.} Where the tribunal before whom the complaint is made is not competent to take any action direct or indirect to punish the persons complained against, it cannot be said that the accused 'charged' such persons with any offence or that his intention necessarily was that action should be taken against them.²⁴³ A false petition to the Superintendent of Police, praying for the protection of the petitioners from the oppression of a Sub-Inspector, which may be effected by some departmental action, does not amount to such a false charge.²⁴⁴ It is enough that a false charge is made though no prosecution is instituted thereon.²⁴⁵ Where a person who gives false information as to the commission of an offence merely states that he suspected a certain other person to be the offender, it may be that he would not be liable under this section, but where it is clear that the informant's intention was not merely that the police should follow up a clue but that they should put the alleged offender on trial, the informant is guilty of an offence under this section.²⁴⁶ The Calcutta High Court has held that the meaning of the expression 'falsely charges' is simply 'falsely accuses' and as the section stands there is no necessity of this false accusation being made in connection with a criminal proceeding.²⁴⁷

[s 211.2] Giving false Evidence: No false charge.—

The words "falsely charges" in this section cannot mean giving false evidence against the accused as a prosecution witness during the course of a trial. To "falsely charge" must refer to the criminal or initial accusation putting or seeking to put in motion the machinery of criminal investigation and not when seeking to prove the false charge by making deposition in support of the charge framed in that trial. The words "falsely charges" have to be read along with the expression "institution of criminal proceedings". The false charge must, therefore, be made initially to a person in authority or to someone who is in a position to get the offender punished by appropriate proceedings. In other words it must be embodied either in a complaint or in a report of a cognizable offence to the police-officer or to an officer having authority over the person against whom the allegations are made. Giving false evidence in course of a trial amounts to an offence under sections 193 and 195 and not under section 211, IPC, 1860.²⁴⁸

[s 211.3] Bare statement is not false charge.—

A statement to the police of a suspicion that a particular person has committed an offence is not a charge within the meaning of this section, nor does it amount to institution of criminal proceedings; and a conviction cannot be had on proof that the suspicion was unfounded.²⁴⁹ The accused made a report to the police that his buffalo had been poisoned and that he suspected two persons whom he named of having administered the poison. The police made an inquiry and reported that there was no case of poisoning and the charge was struck off. One of the persons then brought a complaint under this section against the accused. It was held that the report to the police did not amount to a charge of a criminal offence.²⁵⁰

[s 211.4] Statement under section 162, Criminal Procedure Code.—

A statement under section 162, Criminal Procedure Code, in answer to questions put by a police-officer making an investigation under section 161 of the Code, cannot be made the basis of a prosecution under this section.^{251.} False identification in a Test Identification Parade is not falsely charging.^{252.}

4. 'Knowing that there is no just or lawful ground'.—This expression is the equivalent of the English technical phrase "without reasonable or probable cause," which means an honest belief in the guilt of the accused based upon a full conviction, founded upon reasonable grounds, of the existence of a state of circumstances, which, assuming them to be true, would reasonably lead any ordinarily prudent and cautious man, placed in the position of the accuser, to the conclusion that the person charged was probably guilty of the crime imputed. There must be:

First, an honest belief of the accuser in the guilt of the accused;

Second, such belief must be based on an honest conviction of the existence of the circumstances which led the accuser to that conclusion;

Third, such belief must be based upon reasonable grounds; that is, such grounds as would lead any fairly cautious man in the defendant's situation so to believe;

Fourth, the circumstances so believed and relied on by the accuser must be such as amount to reasonable ground for belief in the guilt of the accused.^{253.}

A person may, in good faith, institute a charge that is subsequently found to be false, or he may, with intent to cause injury to an enemy, institute criminal proceedings against him, believing there are good grounds for them but in neither case has he committed an offence under this section. To constitute this offence it must be shown that the person instituting criminal proceedings knew there was no just or lawful ground for such proceedings.^{254.}

In the absence of any special circumstances to rebut it, the judgment of one competent tribunal against the complainant affords very strong evidence of reasonable and probable cause.^{255.}

5. 'If such criminal proceeding be instituted'.—There is a divergence of views between the Calcutta, the Madras and the Patna High Courts on the one hand, and the Allahabad and the Lahore High Courts on the other, on the question whether the latter part of the section applies to such cases of complaints to the police which are disposed of without a formal magisterial inquiry. A Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court has held that the latter part would apply to such cases where the charge related to the more serious offence.^{256.} This case is followed by the Madras^{257.} and the Patna^{258.} High Courts. The test to apply is,—did the person who made the charge intend to set the criminal law in motion against the person on whom the charge is made.^{259.}

The Allahabad High Court has, on the other hand, held that to constitute the offence defined in the second paragraph of this section, it is necessary that criminal proceedings should be instituted. Where the offence committed does not go further than the making of a false charge to the police, the making of such charge does not amount to institution of criminal proceedings, and the offence committed will fall within the first paragraph, notwithstanding that the offence so falsely charged may be one of those referred to in the second paragraph.^{260.} The former Chief Court of the Punjab held likewise.^{261.}

[s 211.5] Complaint by Court: when.—

A complaint alleging commission of an offence punishable under section 211 IPC, 1860, "in or in relation to any proceedings in any Court", is maintainable only at the instance of that Court or by an officer of that Court authorized in writing for that purpose or some other Court to which that Court is subordinate, is abundantly clear from the language employed in the provision.²⁶² When the offence under section 211, IPC, 1860, is committed in relation to Court proceedings, cognizance without Court's complaint is barred by section 195 (1)(b)(i), Cr PC, 1973.²⁶³ Since an order of a Magistrate discharging an accused on submission of a police report under section 173, Cr PC, 1973, is a judicial and not administrative order, a complaint by the Magistrate or his superior Court under section 195(1)(b)(i), Cr PC, 1973, would be necessary to take cognizance of an offence under section 211, IPC, 1860.²⁶⁴ Similarly, remand and bail proceedings too have been held to be Court proceedings and as such a complaint by the Court would be necessary to take cognizance of the offence under section 211, IPC, 1860.²⁶⁵ This view of the law has now been affirmed by the Supreme Court as well.²⁶⁶

[s 211.6] Proceedings in any Court.—

There are three situations that are likely to emerge while examining the question whether there is any proceedings in any Court, namely,

(a) there might not be any proceeding in any Court at all,

(b) proceeding in a Court might actually be pending at the relevant time when cognizance is sought to be taken of the offence punishable under section 211, IPC, 1860 and

(c) there might have been proceedings which had already been concluded though there might not be any proceedings pending in any Court when cognizance of offence under section 211, IPC, 1860 is taken. It is only in second and third situation that section 195\(1\), Cr PC, 1973 would apply. The fact that proceedings had been concluded would not be material because section 195(1) does not require that proceedings in any Court must actually be pending at the time when the question of applying the bar arises if the offence under section 211, IPC, 1860 is alleged to have been committed in relation to those proceedings.²⁶⁷ A complaint by the concerned Executive Magistrate could be necessary under section 195(1)(a)(i), and there could be no sufficient reason for dispensing with the necessity for a complaint by him for prosecution of an offence under section 211, IPC, 1860 committed in relation to a proceeding before him under section 144, Cr PC, 1973.²⁶⁸

[s 211.7] Sections 211 and 500 IPC, 1860.—

If we read sections 211 and 500 of IPC, 1860 together, we would find a clear distinction. Section 211 imposes a punishment in case of a false charge or offence made with the intent to injure someone before any Court of law, whereas section 500 provides for punishment in case of a defamation of a person by any one. Defamation has been defined under section 499 which provides inter alia whoever, by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations, makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm, the reputation of such person, is said, except in the cases hereinafter excepted, to defame that person. Making a false complaint before a Court of law would amount to committing fraud on Court. It is for the Court to proceed against the erring person. The provision has been made to preserve the sanctity of the Court. Section 500 gives right to sue to a person who is defamed within the meaning of section 499 by the conduct of the accused. These two provisions are totally distinct and can be tried in absence of each other.^{269.}

[s 211.8] Civil remedy.—

A person aggrieved by a false charge may, if he chooses, sue in a civil Court for damages for malicious prosecution, instead of taking criminal proceedings under this section.

[s 211.9] CASES.—

It was alleged that petitioner's son was kidnapped by opposite party, petitioner's son himself appeared and made his statement that he was not kidnapped, rather he had himself voluntarily gone to marry with a girl. The girl also had appeared and made her statement that petitioner's son and herself have married and for that reason the petitioner threatening to kill them. It was held that the order, taking cognizance of offences against petitioner for falsely implicating the opposite party, is proper.^{270.}

[s 211.10] False charge should be made to Court or officer having jurisdiction to investigate.—

A woman appeared before the Station Staff Officer and accused a non-commissioned officer of rape, and, after a military inquiry, the military authority held that the charge was false and directed the complainant to be prosecuted under this section. The conviction was set aside, as the false charge was not made to a Court having jurisdiction.^{271.} Where the accused laid a charge of mischief by fire at a police station, which was reported to be false, and the District Magistrate, upon the receipt of a report to the same effect from the Deputy Magistrate, to whom he had sent the case for a judicial inquiry, passed an order to prosecute the accused, it was held that the order of the District Magistrate was bad, as the matter of the false charge had not come before him in the course of judicial proceedings.^{272.}

Where a letter falsely charging a person with having committed an offence was written and posted at Kumbakonam and was addressed to the Inspector-General of Police, Madras, an offence under this section could be said to be completed only when the letter reached the destination, i.e., the office of the Inspector-General of Police, Madras. The communication of the false accusation was, in fact, the laying of the false charge and, unless the matter was actually communicated to the superior officer, it could not be said that a false charge had been made. So, the Magistrate at Kumbakonam would have no territorial jurisdiction to try the case.^{273.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
223. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1-1-1956).
224. Jitendra v State of UP, 2000 Cr LJ 3087 (All), the accused was falsely implicated and convicted for offences under IPC. The court directed the authorities to register case against the prosecutrix and take necessary action; AN Gupta v State of Rajasthan, 1999 Cr LJ 4932 (Raj), FIR lodged containing false and baseless allegations, intending prima facie to injure the reputation of the complainant. Falsity was proved by the statements of the accused under section 313, Cr PC, 1973. The order acquitting the accused under sections 500 and 211 was set aside; Rubin Roy Chaudhury v State of WB, 1998 Cr LJ 1699 (Cal), order taking cognizance of offence was held to be proper. The office bearers of an Institute hatched a plot to bring about expulsion of the complainant and his wife, prima facie on false basis.
225. Karsan Jesang, (1941) 43 Bom LR 858 , (1942) Bom 22.
226. Per Ranade, J, in Raghavendra v Kashinathbhat, (1894) 19 Bom 717, 725.
227. Apaya, (1913) 15 Bom LR 574 [LNIND 1913 BOM 44] .
228. Sarada Prosad Chatterjee, (1904) 32 Cal 180 , followed in Gati Mandal, (1905) 4 CLJ 88.
229. Giridhari Naik, (1901) 5 Cal WN 727.
230. (1872) 7 MHC (Appx) 5.
231. Jugal Kishore, (1886) 8 All 382 .
232. Per Edge, CJ in Raghu Tiwari, (1893) 15 All 336 , 338.
233. Kashi Ram, (1924) 22 ALJR 829; Samokhan, (1924) 26 Cr LJ 594 .
234. Daroga Gope, (1925) 5 Pat 33.
235. Nota Ram, (1941) 23 Lah 675. See Muthra v Roora, (1870) PR No. 16 of 1870; Todur Mal v Mussammat Bholi, (1882) PR No. 14 of 1882.
236. Gopal Dhanuk, (1881) 7 Cal 96 .
237. Albert, AIR 1966 Kerala 11 [LNIND 1965 KER 172] (FB).
238. Rajkumar Malpani v Akella Sreenivasa Rao, 2011 Cr LJ 2997 (AP).
239. Jijibhai Govind, (1896) 22 Bom. 596; Karim Buksh, (1888) 17 Cal 574 , FB; Parahu, (1883) 5 All 598 ; Nanjunda Rau, (1896) 20 Mad 79; Mst Binia, (1937) Nag 338; Albert, AIR 1966 Kerala 11 [LNIND 1965 KER 172] (FB).
240. Karim Buksh, supra.
241. Rayan Kutti, (1903) 26 Mad 640, 643; Nihala, (1872) PR No. 14 of 1872.
242. Jamoon, (1881) 6 Cal 620 ; Sivan Chetti, (1909) 32 Mad 258, overruling Ramana Gowd, (1908) 31 Mad 506; Mathura Prasad, (1917) 39 All 715 .
243. Bhawani Sahai, (1932) 13 Lah 568.
244. Abdul Hakim Khan Chaudhuri, (1931) 59 Cal 334 .
245. Abdul Hasan, (1877) 1 All 497 ; Chenna Malli Gowda, (1903) 27 Mad 129.
246. Parmeshwar Lal, (1925) 4 Pat 472.
247. Dasarathi Mondal v Hari Das, AIR 1959 Cal 293 [LNIND 1959 CAL 1] . On appeal sub. nom. Hari Das, AIR 1964 SC 1773 [LNIND 1964 SC 84] : 1964 (2) Cr LJ 737 .
248. Santokh Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 1176 : AIR 1976 SC 1489 .
249. Bramanund Bhuttacharjee, (1881) 8 CLR 233 ; Karigowda, (1894) 19 Bom 51; Ganpatram v Rambai, (1950) Nag 208.
250. Abdul Ghafur, (1924) 6 Lah 28.
251. Ramana Gowd, (1908) 31 Mad 506.
252. Ibid.
253. Hicks v Faulkner, (1878) 8 QBD 167 , 171; Kapoor v Kairon, 1966 Cr LJ 115 .

254. Chidda, (1871) 3 NWP 327; Murad, (1893) PR No. 29 of 1894.
255. Parimi Bapirazu v Venkayya, (1866) 3 MHC 238 .
256. Karim Buksh, (1888) 17 Cal 574 (FB).
257. Nanjunda Rau, (1896) 20 Mad 79.
258. Parmeshwar Lal, (1925) 4 Pat 472.
259. Mallappa Reddi, (1903) 27 Mad 127, 128.
260. Bisheshar, (1893) 16 All 124 ; Pitam Rai v State, (1882) 5 All 215 .
261. Sultan, (1887) PR No. 3 of 1888; Khan Bahadar, (1888) PR No. 26 of 1888; Humayun, (1907) PR No. 26 of 1908.
262. Abdul Rehman v K M Anees-Ul-Haq, 2012 Cr LJ 1060 (SC) : 2011 (10)SCC 696 [LNIND 2011 SC 1156] . See also Harish Chandra Pathak v Anil Vats, 2008 Cr LJ 2965 (All).
263. M Devasenapathi, 1984 Cr LJ NOC 34 (Mad); K Ramakrishnan, 1986 Cr LJ 392 (Ker).
264. Narayan, 1972 Cr LJ 1446 (Del—FB).
265. PC Gupta v State, 1974 Cr LJ 945 (All-FB).
266. Kamalapati, 1979 Cr LJ 679 : AIR 1979 SC 777 [LNIND 1978 SC 383] .
267. Geetika Batra v OP Batra, 2009 Cr LJ 2687 (Del). A private complaint cannot be filed for an offence under section 211-See Subhash Ramchandra Durge v Deepak Annasaheb Gat, 2000 Cr LJ 4774 (Bom).
268. Rabin Roy Choudhury v State, 1997 Cr LJ 1699 (Cal); Dongari Venkatram v M Tirpathanna S I of Police, Kodad 2006 Cr LJ 2697 (AP).
269. Bir Chandra Das v Anil Kumar Sarkar, 2011 Cr LJ 3422 (Cal).
270. Chintamani Paul (Kumhar) v State of Jharkhand, 2009 Cr LJ 2283 (Jhar).
271. Jamoon, (1881) 6 Cal 620 ; See also Santokh Singh, 1973 Cr LJ 1176 : AIR 1973 SC 2190 [LNIND 1973 SC 160] .
272. Haibat Khan, (1905) 33 Cal 30 .
273. Sivaprakasam Pillai, (1948) Mad 893.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 212] Harbours offender—.

Whenever an offence has been committed, whoever harbours or conceals a person whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the offender, with the intention of screening him from legal punishment;

If a Capital Offence;

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with ²⁷⁴[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year, and not to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

275.["Offence" in this section includes any act committed at any place out of 276. [India], which, if committed in 277. [India], would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460 and every such act shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in 278. [India].]

Exception.—This provision shall not extend to any case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the offender.

ILLUSTRATION

A, knowing that B has committed dacoity, knowingly conceals B in order to screen him from legal punishment. Here, as B is liable to 279. [imprisonment for life], A is liable to imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding three years, and is also liable to fine.

COMMENT.—

Ingredients.—(i) the offence must have been committed, i.e., completed and there must be an 'offender';

(ii) there must be harbouring or concealment of a person by the accused;

(iii) the accused knows or has reason to believe that such harboured or concealed person is the offender;

(iv) there must be an intention on the part of the accused to screen the offender from legal punishment. 280.

[s 212.1] Offender.—

The word used is 'offender' and not 'accused' or a person convicted for that offence. The person who is sheltering, harbouring or concealing that person must have knowledge or has reason to believe that he is the 'offender'. The word "offender" is not defined under IPC, 1860. "Offender" as per the Dictionary, means "a person who has committed a crime or offence." Hence, a person who is convicted or acquitted may be an offender, for the purpose of section 212. An "offender" for the purpose of section 212 is neither a convict nor an accused, but he is a person who has actually committed the offence. The failure of the prosecution to prove the identity of the person who committed the offence does not render the person, who committed the offence, not an offender. He can be said to be an offender whose guilt has not been proved in Court. Yet, he is an offender, if he has committed an offence. 281.

This section applies to the harbouring of persons who have actually committed some offence under the Penal Code or an offence under some special or local law, when the thing punishable under such special or local law is punishable with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards. It does not apply to the harbouring of persons, not being criminals, who merely abscond to avoid or delay a judicial investigation. 282. Where there was no material to show that the accused had the knowledge or that he reasonably believed that he was harbouring or concealing a person who was an offender and the essential feature of secrecy was totally absent, it was held that no offence under section 212 was made out.²⁸³ It is the knowledge or the reasonable belief of the accused under section.212 that the person whom, he has harboured or concealed to be the offender, which is relevant. But, such knowledge or belief must be entertained by the accused, on the date on which he commits the offence by harbouring or concealing him.²⁸⁴

In the conspiracy for assassination of the former Prime Minister of India (Mr. Rajiv Gandhi), some of the accused persons appeared at the scene after achievement of the object. They played the role of harbouring and sheltering the main accused persons with full knowledge of their involvement in the assassination. They also made efforts to destroy evidence. Their conviction under section 212 was held to be proper.²⁸⁵

[s 212.2] Exception.—

The Exception only extends to cases where harbour is afforded by a wife or husband. No other relationship can excuse the wilful receipt or assistance of felons; a father cannot assist his child, a child his parent, a brother his brother, a master his servant, a servant his master.

[s 212.3] Section 212 IPC, 1860 and section 39 of Code of Criminal Procedure 1973.—

It is the duty of every citizen who is aware of commission of or of the intention of any other person to commit any offence punishable under sections 302, 304, 449, etc., to forthwith give information to the nearest Magistrate or police-officer of such commission of offence or intention. This provision is mandatory unless there is a reasonable excuse for omission or failure to inform. Section 39 of the Code of Criminal Procedure specifically provides that public "shall" give information to the police or the nearest Magistrate regarding commission of certain offences referred to in the said section. Section 39 is only a procedural section, violation of which is not made punishable under any penal statute, but, if a person who has knowledge or reasonable belief that a person is the offender can be treated as a person who is aware of the commission of the offence and even if he is not punishable for violating section 39 of the Code of Criminal Procedure when he harbours or conceals such an offender, he must certainly be guilty for offence under section 212.²⁸⁶

[s 212.4] Conviction of the person concealed—whether mandatory.—

Nowhere in section 212 it is stated that the person concealed should be convicted for an offence. Even if the main offender leaves unpunished by the Court, the object of the provision under section 212 requires that the person who has concealed or harboured the offender whom he believes and knows has committed the offence shall not leave unpunished if the other ingredients are established. The criminality lies in the act of concealment committed with the knowledge or belief that the person who is harboured or concealed is the offender and also with the criminal intention of screening him from legal punishment.²⁸⁷

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : [\(2009\) 10 SCC 664 \[LNIND 2009 SC 1659\]](#) : [\(2009\) 12 SCR 1215 \[LNIND 2009 SC 1659\]](#) .
274. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
275. Ins. by Act 3 of 1894, section 7.
276. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch. (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.
277. Ibid.
278. Ibid.
279. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
280. Sujith v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 824 (Ker), Aleem v State of AP, \(1995\) 1 Cr LJ 866 (AP). See also State v Siddarth Vashisth, (alias Manu Sharma), 2001 Cr LJ 2404 (Del), the co-accused had knowledge that the accused had committed murder, both of them were fellow directors in a company. He sent the car to pick up the accused from the place of occurrence to facilitate his escape. Liable to be punished under the section.
281. Sujith v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 824 (Ker).
282. Ramraj Choudhury, (1945) 24 Pat 604; Mir Faiz Ali v State of Maharashtra, 1992 Cr LJ 1034 (Bom).
283. State v Sushil Sharma, 2007 Cr LJ 4008 (Del); Niranjan Ojha v State of Orissa, 1992 Cr LJ 1863 (Ori); Also see Durga Shankar v State of Madhya Pradesh, 2006 Cr LJ 2494 (MP).
284. Sujith v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 824 (Ker).
285. State of TN v Nalini, AIR 1999 Cr LJ 3124 : AIR [1999 SC 2640 \[LNIND 1999 SC 1584\]](#) .
286. Sujith v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 824 (Ker).
287. Sujith v State of Kerala, 2008 Cr LJ 824 (Ker).

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 213] Taking gift, etc., to screen an offender from punishment—.

Whoever accepts or attempts to obtain, or agrees to accept, any gratification for himself or any other person, or any restitution of property to himself or any other person, in consideration of his concealing an offence or of his screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment,

if a capital offence;

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

The compounding of a crime, by some agreement not to bring the criminal to justice if the property is restored or a pecuniary or other gratification is given, is the offence punished by this and the following sections. It is the duty of every State to punish criminals. No individual has, therefore, a right to compound a crime because he himself is injured and no one else.

[s 213.1] Ingredients.—

The section has two essentials:

1. A person accepting or attempting to obtain any gratification or restitution of property for himself or any other person.
2. Such gratification must have been obtained in consideration of (a) concealing an offence, or (b) screening any person from legal punishment for an offence, or (c) not proceeding against a person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment. The most important ingredient of the charge, under section 213, viz., is that the payment was in relation to the interference with the course of a judicial proceeding and the tampering with the evidence.^{288.}

[s 213.2] Scope.—

According to the Calcutta High Court this section applies only where there has been an actual concealment of an offence, or screening of a person from legal punishment, or abstention from proceeding criminally against a person, and, as consideration for the same, there has been an acceptance of, or attempt to obtain, or agreement to accept, any gratification or restitution of property. It has no application where only an acceptance of or attempt to obtain, or agreement to accept, any gratification or restitution on a promise to conceal, screen or abstain, is proved and nothing more.^{289.} The Bombay High Court has dissented from this view and has held that this section does not require the actual concealment of an offence or the screening of any person from legal punishment or the actual forbearing of taking any proceedings. It is sufficient if an illegal gratification is received in consideration of a promise to conceal an offence or screen any person from legal punishment or desist from taking any proceedings.^{290.}

The section does not apply where the compounding of an offence is legal.

[s 213.3] Mere suspicion.—

This section is applicable only when it is proved that the person screened or attempted to be screened from legal punishment has been guilty of an offence, and not when there is merely a suspicion of his having committed some offence.^{291.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
288. Mir Faizali Shaheen v The State of Maharashtra, 1991 Cr LJ 1034 (Bom).
289. Hemachandra Mukherjee, (1924) 52 Cal 151 .
290. Biharilal Kalacharan, (1949) 51 Bom LR 564 .
291. Girish Myte, (1896) 23 Cal 420 ; Sanalal; Gordhandas, (1913) 15 Bom LR 694 [LNIND 1913 BOM 68] , 37 Bom 658, there must be knowledge that such person was an offender; Sumativijay Jain v State of MP, 1992 Cr LJ 97 (MP)

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 214] Offering gift or restoration of property in consideration of screening offender—.

Whoever gives or causes, or offers or agrees to give or cause, any gratification to any person, or ²⁹²[restores or causes the restoration of] any property to any person, in consideration of that person's concealing an offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment;

if a capital offence;

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with ²⁹³[imprisonment for life], or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

294.[Exception.—The provisions of sections 213 and 214 do not extend to any case in which the offence may lawfully be compounded.]

Illustrations. [Rep. by Act 10 of 1882, section 2 and Sch I.]

COMMENT.—

The preceding section punishes the receiver of a gift in consideration of compromising an offence, whereas this section punishes the offerer of the gift.

[s 214.1] Ingredients.—

This section has two essentials—

1. Offering any gratification or restoration of property to some person.
2. Such offer must have been in consideration of the person's (a) concealing an offence, or (b) of his screening any person from legal punishment for an offence, or (c) of his not proceeding against a person, for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment. The section presupposes the actual commission of an offence or the guilt of the person screened from punishment. Where the accused, an overseer who was charged with preparing false muster rolls and misappropriating Government money allegedly tried to bribe someone with a view to prevent action being taken against him and was thus prosecuted under sections 165A and 214, IPC, 1860, but was acquitted of the offence under section 165A, IPC, 1860, for want of evidence, he could not also be convicted in view of infirmities of the case of an offence under section 214, IPC, 1860.²⁹⁵

Section 320\(1\) of the Criminal Procedure Code enumerates the offences that can be lawfully compounded.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

292. Subs. by Act 42 of 1953, section 4 and Sch III, for "to restore or cause the restoration of" (w.e.f. 23 December 1953).

293. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch., for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).

294. Subs. by Act 8 of 1882, section 6, for Exception.

295. Mohd Aslam, 1981 Cr LJ 1285 : AIR 1981 SC 1735 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 215] Taking gift to help to recover stolen property, etc.

Whoever takes or agrees or consents to take ¹ any gratification under pretence or on account of helping any person to recover any movable property of which he shall have been deprived by any offence punishable under this Code, shall, unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended ² and convicted of the offence, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

Scope.—This section is intended to apply to someone who, being in league with the thief, receives some gratification on account of helping the owner to recover the stolen property, without at the same time using all the means in his power to cause the thief to be apprehended and convicted of the offence. There is nothing in this section that should exclude an actual thief from liability under it if in addition to committing theft he also tried to realise money by a promise to return the stolen article. An actual thief or a person suspected to be the thief can be convicted under this section.²⁹⁶

[s 215.1] Ingredients.—

This section has three essentials—

1. Taking or agreeing or consenting to take any gratification under pretence or on account of helping any person to recover any movable property.
2. The owner of such property must have been deprived of it by an offence punishable under the Penal Code.
3. The person taking the gratification must not have used all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence.

[s 215.2] Object.—

The primary aim of this section is to punish all trafficking by which a person, knowing that property has been obtained by crime, and knowing the criminal, makes a profit out of the crime while screening the offender from justice. The clear meaning of the section is that it is an offence to receive money for helping any person to recover property stolen or misappropriated and that there is an exception only in favour of the man who can show that he used all means in his power to cause the apprehension of the offender.^{297.}

1. 'Takes or agrees or consents to take'.—These words imply that the person taking the gratification and the person giving it have agreed not only as to the object for which the gratification is to be given, but also as to the shape or form the gratification is to take.^{298.}

2. 'Unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended'.—It is not for the prosecution to prove the negative that the accused did not use all his power to cause the offender to be apprehended. It is for the defence to establish that the accused did all in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended.^{299.}

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

296. Mukhtara, (1924) 46 All 915 ; Deo Suchit Rai, (1947) ALJ 48 (FB); overruling Muhammad Ali, (1900) 23 All 81 and Mangu, (1927) 50 All 186 .

297. Yusuf Mian v State, (1938) All 681 .

298. Hargayan v State, (1922) 45 All 159 .

299. Deo Suchit Rai, 1947 All LJ 48 (FB); DK Balai, 1959 Cr LJ 1438 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 216] Harbours offender who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered—.

Whenever any person convicted of or charged with an offence, being in lawful custody for that offence, escapes from such custody; or whenever a public servant, in the exercise of the lawful powers of such public servant, orders a certain person to be apprehended for an offence, whoever, knowing of such escape or order for apprehension, harbours or conceals that person with the intention of preventing him from being apprehended, shall be punished in the manner following that is to say,—

if a capital offence;

if the offence for which the person was in custody or is ordered to be apprehended is punishable with death, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine;

if punishable with imprisonment for life, or with imprisonment.

if the offence is punishable with ³⁰⁰[imprisonment for life], or imprisonment for ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, with or without fine;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year and not to ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for such offence, or with fine, or with both.

³⁰¹["Offence" in this section includes also any act or omission of which a person is alleged to have been guilty out of ³⁰²[India], which, if he had been guilty of it in ³⁰³[India], would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition, ³⁰⁴[] or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in ³⁰⁵[India]; and every such act or omission shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in ³⁰⁶[India].]

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the person to be apprehended.

COMMENT.—

To establish an offence under this section it must be shown, (1) that there has been an order for the apprehension of a certain person as being guilty of an offence; (2) knowledge by the accused party of that order, and (3) the harbouring or concealing by the accused of the person with the intention of preventing him from being apprehended.³⁰⁷ It would not be safe to convict the appellant for the offence punishable under section 216 IPC, 1860 in absence of evidence in this regard.³⁰⁸

This section may be compared with section 212. The latter deals with the offence of harbouring an offender who having committed an offence absconds. This section deals with harbouring an offender who has escaped from custody after being actually convicted or charged with the offence, or whose apprehension has been ordered; the latter offence is in the eye of the law more aggravated, and a heavier punishment is, therefore, awarded for it. It is thus an aggravated form of the offence punishable under section 212.

The section only takes into consideration cases where the man who is harboured is wanted for an offence for which a maximum sentence of at least one year's imprisonment is provided. No provision is made for cases where he is wanted for offences for which the maximum sentence is less than one year.³⁰⁹ Where certain persons were apprehended for gaming and they escaped from police custody, it was held by the Supreme Court that this section was not applicable because they were neither charged nor convicted of any offence and that the conviction should have been under section 224.³¹⁰

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .
300. Subs. by Act 26 of 1955, section 117 and Sch, for "transportation for life" (w.e.f. 1 January 1956).
301. Ins. by Act 10 of 1886, section 23.
302. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.
303. Ibid.
304. The words "or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881," omitted by Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1 April 1951).
305. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.
306. Ibid.
307. Easwaramurthi, (1944) 71 IA 83 , 46 Bom LR 844, (1945) Mad 237.
308. Anadharaj v State of TN, (2000) 9 SCC 45 : JT 2000 (3) SC 368 : 2000 AIR (SCW) 4957; (2000) 1 SCC (Cr) 1154.
309. Deo Baksh Singh, (1942) 18 Luck 617 .
310. Ajab v State of Maharashtra, AIR 1989 SC 827 : 1989 Cr LJ 954 : 1989 Supp (1) SCC 601 .

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

311. [s 216A] Penalty for harbouring robbers or dacoits.

Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that any persons are about to commit or have recently committed robbery or dacoity, harbours them or any of them, with the intention of facilitating the commission of such robbery or dacoity or of screening them or any of them from punishment, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section it is immaterial whether the robbery or dacoity is intended to be committed, or has been committed, within or without 312. [India].

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is by the husband or wife of the offender.]

COMMENT.—

This section enables the Court to inflict enhanced punishment, where the persons harboured are robbers or dacoits or where they intended to commit robbery or dacoity.

Where a person charged with the substantive offence of dacoity or robbery has been acquitted of that offence, another person who is said to have intended to screen him from legal punishment in respect of that offence cannot be held guilty of harbouring the alleged offender under this section.³¹³.

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : [\(2009\) 10 SCC 664 \[LNIND 2009 SC 1659\]](#) : [\(2009\) 12 SCR 1215 \[LNIND 2009 SC 1659\]](#) .

311. Ins. by Act 3 of 1894, section 8.

312. The words "British India" have successively been subs. by the A.O. 1948, the A.O. 1950 and Act 3 of 1951, section 3 and Sch (w.e.f. 1 April 1951), to read as above.

313. Subramanya Ayyar, (1947) Mad 793. See for acquittal under section 216A, acquitted on fact, State of Madhya Pradesh v Veeru Singh, 2010Cr LJ 2896 (MP)

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 216B] [Repealed]

314.*] Definition of "harbour" in sections 212, 216 and 216A. [Repealed by Indian Penal Code (Amendment) Act, 1942 (VIII of 1942), section 3].

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

314. Ins. by Act 3 of 1894, section 8.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

Under the Indian Penal Code, 1860 offences relating to false evidence and offences against public justice are contained in Chapter XI. In relation to proceeding in any Court, the offences enumerated are: giving false evidence or fabricating false evidence (sections 191–193); giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction (sections 194 and 195); threatening any person to give false evidence (section 195A); using evidence known to be false (section 196); using as true a certificate known to be false (section 198); making a false statement in a declaration which is by law receivable as evidence (section 199); using as true any declaration receivable as evidence, knowing it to be false (section 200); causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information to screen offender (section 201); intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform (section 202); giving false information in respect of an offence (section 203); destruction of document or electronic record to prevent its production as evidence (section 204); false personation (section 205); fraudulent removal/concealment of property (section 206); fraudulent claim to property (section 207); fraudulently suffering or obtaining decree for sum not due (section 208 and section 210); dishonestly making a false claim in Court (section 209); and intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceedings (section 228). Section 195 of Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Court shall take cognizance of any offence punishable under section 172–188 (dealing with the contempt of the lawful authority of public servants) or section 193–196, 199, 200, 205–211 and 228, when such offence is alleged to have been committed in, or in relation to, any proceeding in any Court, except on the complaint in writing of that Court by such officer of the Court as that Court may authorise in writing in this behalf, or of some other Court to which that Court is subordinate.¹

[s 217] Public servant disobeying direction of law with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture.

Whoever, being a public servant, knowingly disobeys any direction of the law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment, or subject him to a less punishment than that to which he is liable, or with intent to save, or knowing that he is likely thereby to save, any property from forfeiture or any charge to which it is liable by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

COMMENT.—

This section and the three following sections deal with disobedience on the part of public servants in respect of official duty.

This section punishes intentional disobedience of any direction of law on the part of a public servant to save a person from punishment. It is not necessary to show that, in point of fact, the person so intended to be saved had committed an offence, or was justly liable to legal punishment. A public servant charged under this section is equally liable to be punished, although the intention, which he had of saving any person from legal punishment, was founded upon a mistaken belief as to that person's liability to punishment.³¹⁵

[s 217.1] 'Legal punishment'

does not include departmental punishment.³¹⁶

1. S Palani Velayutham v District Collector Tirunvelveli TN, (2010) 1 SCC (Cr) 401 : (2009) 10 SCC 664 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] : (2009) 12 SCR 1215 [LNIND 2009 SC 1659] .

315. Amiruddeen v State, (1878) 3 Cal 412 , 413. See Anup Singh v State of HP, AIR 1995 SC 1941 ; 1995 Cr LJ 3223 (SC) in which conviction under the section upheld by SC

316. Jungle v State, (1873) 19 WR (Cr) 40.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

